Science students may obtain the March issue of the Mendel Bulletin, science school publication, on Friday at 1:00 P. M. in room 53, Mendel Hall.

This issue will feature five main articles in addition to its regular features. "Lightning" by J. Eugene Nelson, senior science student and editor of the magazine, will discuss the research made on this subject and the fallacy in the statement that lightning strikes only once in the same place.

Alfred Bongiovanni, a graduate of '40, will discuss "Some Effects of Centrifugation on the Eggs of Arbacia." Now studying at the University of Pennsylvania Medical School, Bongiovanni gathered material for his article last summer at the Villanova Research Laboratory at Woods' Hole, Massachusetts.

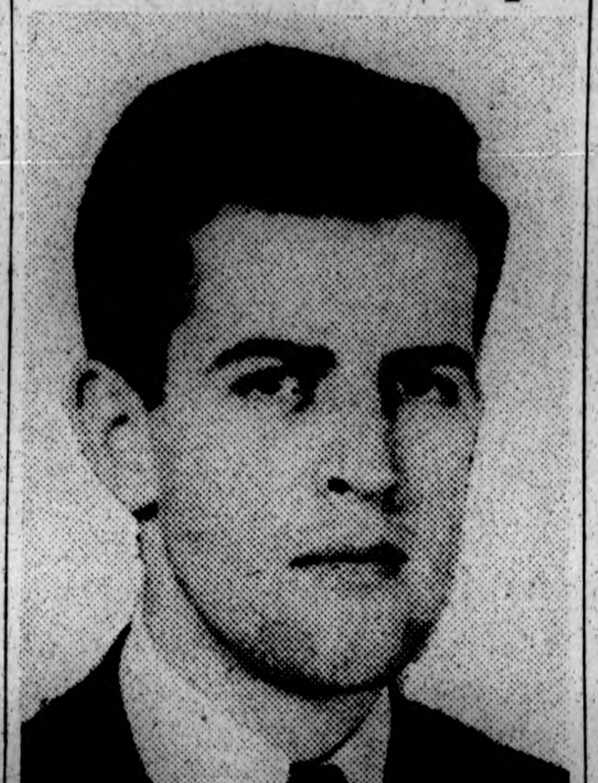
Juniors Feature War Effort In New Committees; Merion Golf Club Chosen As Site Of Dinner-Dance

Newell Heads "Victory Corsage" Group; Mahoney to Invite Ex-Members of Class in Armed Forces

Two new committees were named last week by William P. Walpole, junior class president. Following the unanimous approval by the junior class to support a "victory corsage" campaign for this year's Junior Prom, May 1, Walpole appointed John F. Newell as head of this new committee. Joseph F. Mahoney was named to head a committee to arrange for the invitation of all ex-members of the junior class now in the armed services to be guests of the class on the evening of the prom.

Newell, a commerce man, will have as assistants on the committee, Anthony DiGiovanni, science student; George Harris, artsman; Thomas Muraski, of the engineering school, and Charles Callahan of the commerce school.

Heads New Group



JOHN F. NEWELL

Realizing the importance any aid might be to the present war crisis, the junior class at a special meeting last week, voiced their approval of the new plan. Essentially, the campaign calls for all students who attend the prom to purchase at the door "victory corsages." Corsages of a victory design purchased in quantity prior to the prom will be offered at a nominal price.

The proceeds realized from their sale will be used to purchase United States Defense Bonds. The bonds, in turn, will be placed in the scholarship fund of the junior class.

In this way the class intends

Radio Club Reads Dramatic Scripts

Scripts of a short radio skit were handed out to a few of the members of the Belle Masque Radio Dramatics Club at the last meeting for the purpose of reading them and receiving criticism from both John Facenda, WIP announcer who is acting as director of the club, and from the rest of the members.

The reading of these scripts followed a discussion by Facenda on the subject of radio drama, its sequence through the years, how it is responsible for the position of radio today, and the actual preparation needed in the production of a radio play.

Plans were also made for the recording of each student's voice so that defects and various qualities could be discussed by the group.

Before the meeting closed, Facenda recommended that the members read the book, "Hand Book of Broadcasting," by Waldo Abbot, to aid them in making the radio unit a success.

Another meeting of the club will be held tomorrow in room 104, Mendel Hall, at 12:30 P. M.

Blazer Purchase

First reports of the Blazer Committee, headed by George McFadden, commerce student, were made known to juniors at a special class meeting last Tuesday.

McFadden, wearing a sample of this year's blazer coat, announced that negotiations have been completed for obtaining the coats. He explained that difficulties were encountered by the committee in obtaining the services of a company whose stock of suitable material has not been depleted.

Those juniors who intend to purchase a coat are requested to report for measurement in the Mendel Hall reception room tomorrow afternoon between the hours of 12:00 and 2:00 P. M. with a $5.00 down payment.

Coats may be obtained in either white gabardine or blue or white flannel. Plain, white gabardine is priced at $16.80; with piping, $17.90. White or blue flannel is priced at $16.05, plain, and $17.15 with piping.

Deposits For Extra Belle Air Copies Due Next Monday

Those students who wish to purchase extra copies of the Belle Air and those who have not, by the payment of the matriculation fee, already paid for copies, must signify their intention of purchase by making a down payment of $1.00 by Monday, March 30, William E. Schubert, editor of the publication, announced yesterday.

Total price of the book for those who make this payment by March 30 will be $5.00. Those who fail to do so will run the risk of not getting the book, Schubert said, since a very limited number of copies will be printed. If no down payment is made by March 30, the price of the book will be $7.50.

Students who wish a personalized copy of the year book may have their names embossed on the cover by making a payment of 50 cents by April 15.

Arrangements for extra copies and for personalized copies may be made any day at the Belle Air office, room 51, Mendel Hall, or with Frank McKay, Photography Editor, in room 6, O'Dwyer Hall.

Spacious Country Club To Be at Exclusive Disposal of Junior Class on Night of May 2

For the first time in a number of years, the annual Dinner-Dance of the junior class will be held at a country club, co-chairmen John J. Quinn and Joseph A. Hagerty disclosed yesterday when they announced that the affair, to be held on Saturday evening, May 2, would be at the Merion Golf Club in Ardmore.

Plans for the dance were completed late Saturday night after several other well-known country clubs, as well as numerous Philadelphia hotels had been considered.

Exclusive Use

The clubhouse, located just off Haverford Road on Ardmore Avenue, combines accessibility with privacy, the chairmen remarked in making the announcement. Members of the junior class and their guests will have exclusive use of the clubhouse and its facilities for the evening.

Two spacious lounges, in addition to the main dining room where the dining and dancing will take place, have been placed at the disposal of the Centennial Class. Pending good weather, outdoor facilities will also be put into use.

Arrangements have not as yet been completed for the orchestra which will provide the music for the affair. Negotiations are now under way with several popular local orchestras the chairmen said, and a definite announcement will probably be made next week.

Promptness Asked

"It is important that all members of the junior class who intend to attend the Dinner-Dance make themselves known to one of the committee members immediately in order that definite arrangements for the affair can be made," the chairmen said. "Orders for favors must be submitted soon if we hope to have an early delivery."

At a meeting of the entire class last week the juniors voted that, if necessary, they would be willing to pay an extra dollar in order to secure suitable favors.

President Stresses Maintenance Of Spiritual Values During War

"If there is a lesson on spiritual values to be learned from the first world war, it is this; now, the present, is the time to prepare a strong bulwark to keep intact our sense of moral values and to withstand the ravages of the passion of hate" was the keynote of the speech delivered by the Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O S. A., president of the college, at the 29th Annual Schoolmen's Week of the University of Pennsylvania, last Thursday.

Fr. Stanford's speech, "The Impact of War Upon the Spiritual Values in the College," was a feature of the general session held Thursday morning. Explaining that the majority of college students are conscious of the chaos resulting from the abandonment of the principle of the brotherhood of men, Fr. Stanford described their reaction—the learning of the "Fatherhood of God, in order that they may better know and practice the brotherhood of man." The revival of this religious interest on the college campus, the reawakened interest in the college chapel and in courses in religion seems to be marked, he said.

Disunity Corrected

In regard to patriotism, Fr. Stanford remarked that the catastrophe of Pearl Harbor had corrected previous disunity on college campi, and that the responsibilities of citizenship have taken on a very realistic meaning for the student.

The practical problem of the war's effect on college liberal education was given serious attention. "The exigencies of war place great emphasis on scientific subjects. It seems very likely that our students in the humanistic studies will be drained from our colleges by Selective Service while our students in the sciences will remain to complete their studies."

Gap in Humanistic Scholars

This, combined with the technical and scientific tendencies of young people coming from secondary school, and the loss of young teachers in humanistic studies to the armed services, will result in a gap in humanistic scholars that will require some time to fill when peace comes again to this troubled world, he commented.

Warning that the real danger is that colleges may make drastic changes in their curricula believing that this will be all-out aid to the war program, Fr. Stanford quoted a recent publication of the Navy Department which emphasized repeatedly the necessity of adhering to a well-rounded academic education.

"Proceed With Caution"

He asked that college administrators in shifting emphasis to subject matter necessary for the war effort, "should proceed with caution so as to interfere as little as possible with what may be called the liberal training which has been relied upon so heavily to preserve the spiritual values in our colleges."

Realizing that the fruits of such care may seem dim, Fr. Stanford closed his remarks by stating, "The seed that we sow may lie dormant for a time, but if sown, it will germinate and fructify all the more rapidly when conditions favor in a post-war period."

No Taxes For This

TWO weeks ago there appeared on this page an editorial expressing full approval of the federal government's expanding income tax policies.

We now repeat this approval but at the same time point out the other side of the question of taxation for defense.

Reports have recently been published pointing out two evils which have become so prevalent as to consitute a real danger to the successful prosecution of the war.

Widespread inefficiency of government resulting in an increasing misuse of funds derived from these hard-earned tax revenues, together with the exorbitantly high profits which industrialists are privileged to realize from war contracts, are two elements which justice demands be corrected.

If allowed to continue such practices may well develop into the Achilles' heel of the defense effort.

Recent exposure of the burning of clothing, wrecking of irreplaceable machinery, and the destruction of vital rubber supplies of the Civilian Conservation Corps in Pennsylvania is but the latest in a series of such shocking incidents to be brought to the attention of the American public.

Equally as serious are the unheard of profits being reaped by manufacturers engaged in war production. We are the first to admit that private industry is entitled to a fair return on its capital, but our patience is exhausted by corporations such as the Todd Shipbuilding Co., which, after a recent investigation, proved to be collecting over 40 per cent profit on a single contract.

The American people have willingly shouldered record-breaking taxes and have made many other sacrifices, with the faith that by doing so, the war will be won that much quicker.

Is it asking too much to expect our government to enforce equal economies in both its own agencies and in private industry?

Are the people's representatives to continue blinking their eyes at rapidly mounting non-essential expenditures, and the profiteering of private war contractors?

According to Senator Byrd, potential profits in the current war program are so high that the government should be able to recover up to three billion dollars and still leave participating firms with a fair return on their investment.

The time is ripe for a legislative proposal to impose "recapture provisions" on the earnings of these companies. These should be calculated to permit the corporations to retain as profits only a reasonable percentage on their invested capital as determined by the Treasury for tax purposes.

The government has been quick to demand all manner of sacrifices from the ordinary citizen and from the little businessman, and now these same citizens demand the elimination of private industrial profiteering and non-essential spending and waste on the part of their government.

Let's Keep It New

ALUMNI Hall, the oldest building on the Villanova campus, has just been renovated; that is to say, scraped, painted, rubbed, scrubbed and washed. On the inside it seems wonderfully like a new building. It belies its century of existence. It is needless to remark that it is the especial task of those residing in or using the hall to keep it in its present condition.

Besides housing students and a basketball court, Alumni also contains a small museum, where relics of past days at Villanova are preserved. The state into which these things have fallen does not speak well for visitors to the museum. Care is lacking somewhere.

Let us, all of us who have occasion to be near these invaluable and priceless remains of those who struggled here before us, let us bend our efforts towards preservation rather than destruction. History claims the last Vandal died long ago.

Stalin Writes A Letter

A FEW days ago it was reported in a Philadelphia paper that Stalin had addressed a communication to the Pope, explaining a few points in religion. This anomaly would be comical if it did not illustrate a development which has been gathering force since the war began.

And the development is this. Religion, or a substitute to resemble religion, is daily assuming greater proportions in a war which began purely from commercial interests.

The concept of the leader of an avowedly atheistic country explaining religion to the head of all Christendom is ridiculous; but this message represents something deeper.

In Germany religious concessions are being granted to the soldiers. Nazi paganism has been softened to a certain extent. The uprisings against the banning of chaplains from the majority of German regiments has resulted, in most cases, in their quick reappointment.

In Russia the "Pravda" mentions the name of God in a series of articles which appeal to religious sentiment. Far from the usual anti-religious propaganda, new Russian films depict a general leading his troops into battle by making the sign of the cross.

Even Japan offers a modified toleration of Christian teaching in those countries which have been conquered.

Does all this mean that dictators have relented, that the free practice of religion is once again to be tolerated? Not in the least. It does mean that dictators realize that men must have something more positive to fight for than the commercial acquisitiveness of their leaders.

FACULTY COMMENTS

A History Of The U. S. Marine Corps

By MR. DOUGHERTY

MANY people are under the impression that marines are a fighting unit common only to the United States. Every nation whose safety and security demands a naval force has a marine organization. This member of the fighting forces is a supplementary arm of the navy. This is as it should be.

When the navy attacks an objective a landing force must be available to occupy and to hold the objective sought. Hence, marine detachments are assigned to all fighting ships to land under the protection of the attacking guns of the attacking ships and the bombs of the naval and marine air force.

The sea battles of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, during the days of wooden ships and muzzle-loading cannon, witnessed marines playing an important part in all engagements. During our own Revolutionary War, the redoubtable John Paul Jones set sail for the shores of Great Britain with his "Bon Homme Richard," a ship he acquired from the French Government.

Attack at Weakest Point

Jones realized that this ship was no match for the powerful frigates of the English Navy that were blockading our seaports. Consequently he decided to attack where England was weakest — on her home front. His historic battle with the Serapis" was the result.

The strategy was to get as close to the "Serapis" as possible. Jones had more than three hundred and fifty sailors and marines on board that dilapidated vessel, and hand-to-hand fighting was his plan. Placing his continental marines in the rigging and other lofty places his marksmen soon picked off the officers and helmsmen of the "Serapis," ending up with the unleashing of the main fighting force from the waist of the ship and eventually turning the tide of battle in his favor.

"I Have Just Begun . . ."

During this battle two of the heavy firing pieces of the American ship exploded as they were being fired. Other gun crews refused to serve their pieces, producing a lull in the fighting. Mistaking the meaning of the lull, the commander of the "Serapis" queried if the American ship had surrendered. Jones responded with the immortal, "I have not yet begun to fight."

The Marine Corps of today was established by congressional action April 30, 1898. The simplicity of the Corps' organization was due to this original legislation placing it directly under the authority of the President of the United States and the Secretary of the Navy.

The chief of the Marine Corps is the Major Commandant, whose orders are instantly carried out instead of being diffused through bureaus as is often the case in the Army and the Navy. This unity of command makes for teamwork of the highest order and it is responsible in no small measure for the exact efficiency of the Corps.

First Opportunity

Not long after this arm of the Navy was created, an opportunity presented itself that gave the newly-formed combat unit a chance to earn its first laurels.

Throughout the nineteenth century piracy was rampant. On the Northern Coast of Africa were the Arab pricipalities of the Turkish Empire — Morocco, Aligers, Tunis, and Tripoli. The inhabitants of these states were fanatical Mohammedans who regarded all Christians as enemies. Each one of these states possessed a small navy of light, fast galleys rowed by Christian slaves taken from ships captured.

These Moslem barbarians preyed upon the principal routes of commerce and collected millions of dollars of tribute and captured thousands of sailors and other occupants of the captured ships and sold them into slavery.

Tribute Paid

Such strong and powerful nations as England, France, Holland, each with fighting naval units that approximated more than a hundred three-decker ships, paid tribute to these Barbary chieftains. We did likewise.

It soon became apparent to our government that paying tribute did not protect American citizens. From the end of the Revolutionary War until the War of 1812 we did not possess a ship of the line and, therefore, were in no position to threaten these pirates with force. However, this young nation was proud and possessed an abundance of fighting spirit.

In the summer of 1801, a fleet of American frigates was sent to the Mediterranean waters. It captured or destroyed all the vessels of the Barbary navies that could be found on the high seas and began a series of bombardments and blockades of the Barbary ports that lasted four years.

Decatur's Feat

It was during this campaign that the brilliant Stephen Decatur thrilled fighting men everywhere by his daring exploit in burning the captured frigate, "Philadelphia," as she

Campus Capers

By Ed Bennis

By this time the younger members of the "draft set" have a good idea how they stand with their Uncle Sam. Many of the boarders didn't know their local number on the day of the drawings, so the returns are still trickling in via the mail. The lower number lads have decided to take the summer course, while the higher ups are trying to figure out—by the Einstein theory — whether they can take the regular course and still be graduated.

The social goings on of our many men-about-town have reached a low ebb these past couple of weeks —maybe it's the war or could it be that the lads are broke? However, things are due for a sharp upturn in the next few weeks when we shall begin to feel the full impact of the Spring dances.

QUOTES:

Carton Conway has been sporting a big smile these past few days because Marie has finally returned from Florida. Jim Cashin went down to give a pint of his blood recently and changed his mind at the last minute—he saw too many pale faced people. Dan Haley was seen with a new number over the week-end . . . she answers to the name of Peggy. What's happened to Harriet, Dan??

Jack MacBain was given a Penn fraternity pin by his "blonde bomber"—guess she didn't want the pin anymore or else the lad has gone in the army. We wonder if Joe Daly has taken Betty to see that operation yet? He believes in mixing business with pleasure.

COPY:

Joe Carbine has already secured his date with Audrey for the prom —rumor has it that she has "met his family." Is it that serious, Joe? John Kirchner and Cathie are a perfect example of "Two in Love" —from the song of the same name.

Jim McWilliams, Dick Shinners and Charley Jones were among the lads seen at the West Catholic St. Patrick's dance last week.

Tony Anderson helped his queen Doie give a big party over the week-end. Poor "Elk" Murray couldn't get a date with Betty for the affair, since she was visiting Annapolis—where she promptly became the hit of the ball. Wonder if Joe Turner has found out what "10K" means on the inside of his class ring—he was in quite a dither over it for awhile.

$64 QUESTION:

What science man gets a chronic illness every time there is an exam? It couldn't be poor little "Windy" —or could it?

ZEPHYRS:

Interest in Immaculata and their lovely inhabitants was much in evidence last week with their tea-dance on Tuesday and the joint I. R. C. meeting in Simpson Hall on Wednesday. The dance was well attended by our local playboys. Seen gliding — or tripping — about the floor were Jack Farrow, Bill Devine, Ed "Hearts and Flowers" Reardon, and Hughy Burns.

Bob Canfield and Lou Esposito hardly blinked an eye when they kept about forty Immaculatans entranced with the reading of their papers at the I. R. C. meeting— such calmness should be commended. Countless wolves were present also—all of whom tried to meet as many girls as possible. Don Speese, Dick Gray, Joe McCabe, and Bill Howlett were a few of those floating around in their best bib and tucker.

Joe Mahoney caused quite a sensation during the debate with Rosemont, also on Wednesday. Seems that the poor fellow dropped all of his notes while he was talking and caused himself no end of embarrassment. John Fullam, his colleague, was having a great deal of trouble with his eyes during the debate—maybe he should see a doctor to remove those—uh—spots.

Meet The Boys:

Dan Tells of His Traveling About; John Works A Newspaper Route

By BILL SWAN

SLOWLY making progress through the milling mobs that form every noon in the best bomb-shelter on the campus, Louie's Pie Shoppe, we seemed to be hemmed in on every side very suddenly by a large and loud group of fellows. In the midst of all this activity we glimpsed Dan Haley, one of our boys for this week.

Getting him in a quiet spot was not an easy task, but finally with the help of a few of his boys we were ready to discuss the life and loves of one Dan Haley.

Member of Kings' Club

Another citizen was added to South Philadelphia on May 17, 1920, for it was on this day that Dan began his varied and interesting life. Tiring of just hanging around, Dan entered Waldron Academy in Merion to begin his schooling. From here he went to West Catholic High School, where he began to branch out and make a name for himself.

Besides doing a lot of hard studying, he found time for varsity swimming and, perhaps with foresight beyond his years, for the rifle team. (Uncle Sam, please note!) Special mention should be made that Dan was a member of the King's Club — which means a lot at West Catholic.

Marketing Major

Upon graduation in 1938 Dan entered the commerce and finance school at Villanova. In his second year he was a member of the Sophomore Cotillion Committee and the varsity swimming team; but the books took too much time to permit him to continue swimming.

For his major Dan chose marketing. Actual experience in this field was gained that summer when he was employed as warehouse manager for a local paint company.

By his junior year Dan was well on the way of being someone on the campus. History Seminar, Blazer Ball Committee and college staff of the VILLANOVAN had his name on their membership rolls.

Sees America First

The desire to see the country, meet people, see new sights are very strong in Dan's makeup. With another fellow and a battered car a grand tour was started in the summer of 1940. Over forty states and Mexico were covered in the course of the journey. To sum up the trip, and I quote, "Philly is the tops. Chestnut Street girls are to be preferred to those on the Wilshire Blvd. in Hollywood."

When quizzed about the local girls' colleges the preference was strongly Rosemont. Then someone mentioned the Canoe Carnival Queen at Medford Lakes in Jersey. Further probing uncovered the reason for returning each summer.

Not Serious

Along with duties as lifeguard Dan keeps a good eye on one Terry known since "way back when." There is nothing serious as yet for the Navy has plans for making Dan a reservist upon graduation in June.

After leaving Villanova this May, Dan can look back with pleasant memories of dayhopping from Overbrook Hills, success in being co-chairman of the Financers' Frolic of this year, bull sessions over political economy in the Pie Shoppe, and last, but not least, the never-to-be-surpassed Junior Prom specials that did so much to make a housewarming and the Prom a super evening.

FROM personal experience the words — "Record! Times! Inquirer!" — have made more of our weary college lads roll out of bed on Sunday mornings than the threats of dire action by the counsellors in the resident halls. Also they serve as an introduction to our boy about the campus, John Cerulo.

Perth Amboy, New Jersey, was the place of John's birth. The date was August 9, 1918.

Begins Selling Papers Early

The first exposure to education took place when John was enrolled at Most Holy Rosary in Perth Amboy. Following his primary education were his high school days at Perth Amboy High, where John began his career with newspapers — one which was to continue and develop until the full power was to be reached here at Villanova. Using his time wisely, John joined the Science, Spanish and the Service Clubs.

Before entering college, John worked for two years. Because of the influence of his brother, a Villanova man, he entered Villanova in the Fall of 1938. Reviewing his freshman year, John recalled the famous defeat that the Mendel ball club handed the unbeaten team of Frank Castle. In the same year he joined the Holy Name and Sanctuary Societies. This membership was to extend over a period of four years.

Participates in Intramurals

During his second year spent in Austin Hall John began to play an important part in intramural activities under the direction of Fr. McKee. The circulation staff of the VILLANOVAN received the help of John during his second year as well for his last two years.

In the commerce and finance school the course in business administration was chosen by him with a major in marketing during his sophomore year. The Belle Masque One-Act Plays were given the benefits of John's talents during his junior year. Also the History Seminar felt the power of his personality.

During the summer months John has been employed at the Barber Asphalt Company in New Jersey.

Those who attended the Belle Air Ball will recall the smart decorations that set the tone for the dance as a result of his chairmanship of the decoration committee.

Dodger Fan

When asked about affairs of the heart, the reply was, "She graduated last year from Rosemont." That closed the subject easily and quickly. However, from roommate Dick Gray the facts were gathered that socially John is always on the ball. 'Tis said that dancing is one of his hobbies.

Defense of the home town, of the system of roads in Jersey and of "dem bums," the Dodgers, are favorite subjects of the many bull sessions in his section of Fedigan Hall.

Inquiring about plans after graduation, John said that he had no plans but perhaps Uncle Sam did. The Quartermaster Corps, or defense work were next in line.

There is one ambition yet unrealized by John — to see Fr. Dunne have a successful season in all sports. Having Fr. McKee congratulating him in public is something to look forward to.

One gains the impression that no matter what the field will be, here is a boy, who by his own salesmanship and perseverance, is going to make a success in his endeavors.

. . . DAN HALEY and JOHN CERULO.

The Middle Way Is Here Advocated For Devotees Of Physical Fitness

By TOM McFARLAND

When John B. talked about physical fitness we agreed with him; when the three-training-period-a-week program was announced we saw the wisdom of the scheme; when the hikes and ball games and swims were outlined we thought the whole thing a wonderful idea; we were convinced that we would enjoy being healthy, but these blisters—well, they prove how unused to toil we really are.

Our muscular capacities and qualities have long been concentrated at a point directly under the cranial plate. We have always been susceptible to cigarette advertisements. We have been easily led by dance announcements. We have only walked when this action was absolutely inevitable. We have averaged approximately five hours sleep a night — which explains that nasty feeling on Mondays. We have exercised at the pin-ball machines. We have forgotten what fresh air smells like.

But that is all over now. We are engaged in the arduous task of getting back into condition; we are becoming All-American Boys, Supermen of the Main Line, George Atlases of Villanova. Three times a week we trot around the lanes and fields of the neighborhood, or throw a great big ball at a little basket, or splash around in weak hydrochloric acid, or stand on one leg and gyrate like the dervish who never does anything but whirl.

Some of us have overdone it. The following folly is probably well circulated by now. Repeating it may send the observer to Temple.

A group of the boys were enthused about the prospect of bulging muscles and decided to take in some air and scenery by means of a short hike. They started out with no particular destination in mind. They walked and talked and talked and walked. Across fields, through forests; yes, even through swamps they tramped and struggled.

After a seeming age, they looked about them and noted a group of strange little huts lying on strange little hills. They were at Valley Forge, and at the moment were in worse physical condition than the band of rugged little men who had made the place famous. There were more blisters in the group than there were feet, more backaches than backs, more fatigue than people.

When the tattered band of students finally returned to the campus (how they did it is a source of continual wonder) they reported to the infirmary. Four of them were put to bed and the rest were treated for exhaustion and exposure, then the entire group received a lecture on the beauties of moderation.

This should teach the rest of us to take our exercise in stages, in small doses, take it easy. Before long our pictures will appear in the magazines; we will look muscular and fierce, and we will be telling all weaklings what we can do with them in seven short days.

We will pose for "After" pictures in pill advertisements, and most important, we will not be rejected by Uncle Sam's boards.

A Columnist Sheds His Spring Lethargy To Give Some Humor And Advice

By Lou Esposito

AS the saying goes, time's a wastin'. But there's something in the atmosphere that just won't let me sit down and think straight . . . as if it matters . . . Well, blame it on Spring, 'cause it's here at last and the campus certainly shows signs of it.

It's a fairly-well established axiom that the modern college girl is well-poised at all times, and can take any happening pretty calmly. To offer further proof we have here from the Northeastern "News" a story of a young college couple driving back along the Worcester Pike after a Boston dance. He rounded a bend at close to forty, skidded on a patch of oil, and the car went off the highway into the trees by the roadside, with the student frantically spinning the wheel this way and that, dodging trees until he could apply the brakes.

He brought the car to a screaming stop, almost throwing himself and the girl through the windshield. Giving a sigh of relief at the miraculous escape he turned to the lass, and put an arm about her waist to comfort her.

"It's all very nice," she breathed. "But wouldn't it have been easier just to say you had run out of gas?"

And here's a little wish from the "Albrightian":

I wish I was a little egg,
Way up atop a tree,
A-sittin' in my little nest,
As rotten as could be.
I wish that you would come along
And stand beneath that tree.
And I would up and burst myself,
And cover thee with me.

When the Lord gave out brains,
I thought He said pains,
So I didn't take any.
When the Lord gave out heads,
I thought He said beds,
So I took a nice soft one.
When the Lord gave out looks,
I thought He said books;
I ain't got any.

Tips to Home:

From the "Niagara Index" we quote how mother can tell if son is home from college:

"Look in gas tank of car. If tank is empty, or the car is gone, son is home. Write to college offering him $50. If no reply of acceptance within an hour, son is home. Count dad's best neckties. If none are missing, son is still at college. Then last, but not least, ask your neighbor's daughter."

Can you imagine college boys like that?

Just in Fun:

Here's another rule for the conservation of paper. It may be complicated but it's sound . . .

The theory of evolution should be reversed. Therefore, we would revert to our apehood stage. Naturally, we would then live in trees. Consequently, houses would be done away with. Among other things, this would see the end of walls . . . so we could easily save on wallpaper.

McMahon Chosen

Toastmaster of A. S. M. E. Dinner at Haverford Court Hotel on April 20

Joseph P. McMahon, senior mechanical engineer, will act as toastmaster for the banquet to be held in conjunction with the A. S. M. E. convention of Eastern college chapters on April 20, Vincent J. Gordon, chairman of the local chapter, announced yesterday.

At the same time Gordon made it known that the site of the dinner will be the Haverford Court Hotel in Haverford, Pa.

McMahon, who already holds the office of co-chairman of the convention, has been an active member of the A. S. M. E. for four years. During that time he has become known as an outstanding speaker.

It is expected that 100 guests will attend the banquet. McMahon is corresponding with leading industrialists from the Philadelphia area in an effort to obtain suitable speakers for the affair.

Physical Fitness Program Planned By Engineering Frat

At a meeting of Phi Kappa Pi, engineering fraternity, last week, it was voted that the organization should sponsor its own Physical Fitness plan in conjunction with that already put into operation by college authorities.

The difficulty encountered by many engineering students in fitting the regular exercise schedules in with their class schedules made such a step advisable, Vincent J. Gordon, president of the fraternity, remarked in making the announcement.

The fraternity is now formulating a program of planned physical activity to fit in with the class schedules of engineering students.

A dinner-dance ,sponsored by the P. K. P. alumni, is scheduled for the latter part of April. All senior engineers are invited to the affair.

Corsage Committee

John F. Newell, chairman of the Corsage Committee for the Junior Prom, has called a meeting of his group for tomorrow at 1:00 P. M. in room 11, Mendel Hall. All must attend.

DR. TOLAND SPEAKS

Dr. Joseph Toland, director of the Nazareth Hospital in Philadelphia, addressed the Science Seminar last Thursday morning. He described the ideal Catholic doctor and offerend enlistment advice.

History Of The Marine Corps

lay under the guns of the fortress of Tripoli.

The success of the Marines in capturing and holding the objectives in this campaign was really the beginning of a technique that has made the Marine Corps famous. Time and time again this outfit has demonstrated its ability to place, fully equipped and fully provisioned, a battalion of fighting men aboard ship and ready to sail within twenty-four hours.

108 Landings

Since the closing of the War of 1812 and the beginning of the War in 1917, these Naval-Marine policing operations brought about landings in one hundred and eight locations on the earth's surface, some of which were revisited as many as a dozen times. During this one hundred year period there is not a single instance recorded in which a Marine detachment was surprised, ambushed, or failed to accomplish its mission.

One may ask why so much interference on our part in the affairs of other nations, especially our sister republics to the South. Why are marines sent to these nations? The Marines, while land-fighting men, are technically members of the Navy and according to international diplomatic usuage, naval personnel could be landed on foreign soil to protect lives and property in times of disorder without declaration of hostilities against the nation on whose territory they were landed and without any implication of intended war.

No Permanent Occupation

Use of Naval and Marine forces secured the best guarantee to the public at home as well as to jealous nations abroad that necessary police work could be done as quickly as possible and American forces withdrawn without a semblance of anything like permanent occupation.

One very remarkable achievement was the detachment sent to Panama during the uprising there in 1884. The great French engineer, Ferdinand de Lesseps, began the construction of a waterway to connect the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. At the height of his effort there were about fifteen thousand men working on the project. Panama attracted men from all over the world. Internal disturbances paralyzed the Colombian government.

Uprisings Dangerous

Colombia at this time was really a federation of loosely governed states. She withdrew her army from the province of Panama. Uprisings occurred everywhere. American and foreign citizens appealed to the American government. President Cleveland's Secretary of the Navy, William C. Whitney, issued orders to the Navy Department that that a transport bearing a marine battalion with full supplies and equipment should be gotten under way within twenty-four hours.

The Corps at that time had less than two thousand men and more than half of them were at sea serving as detachments aboard naval vessels. This was the first time since the Mexican War that a force as large as a battalion was assembled for foreign service.

Speed Plus

The order was received at noon, April 2. Telegraphic orders were sent out to marine detachments in a dozen seaport cities. Before noon on the following day a fully-equipped battalion was waiting on the dock at New York ready to embark on the transport, "City of Paris," designated to carry them to Colon. Four days later a second battalion was likewise assembled and under way to the same destination.

By the end of April order was restored and the marine detachment was withdrawn and back home by the end of May — leaving the Colombian army in control.

In the present war the daring and courage of the marines on Wake Island has won the admiration of the entire world. But to the Marine Corps this achievement is almost a commonplace.

War with Spain

Let us go back to the War with Spain. The newspapers and magazines of that time were filled with the exploits of these fighting leathernecks.

For a dozen years prior to 1895 the Spanish administration of Cuba was a stench in the nostrils of decent people. Cuba, along with Puerto Rico and a few small islands, was the last remaining outpost of the declining Spanish Empire. Spain had two hundred thousand troops on the island of Cuba and it still could not handle the disorder. The already fever heat of American indignation was fanned into flame with the blowing up of the battleship "Maine" in the harbor of Havana. Immediately war was declared.

The commandant of the Marine Corps was ordered to prepare a force at once for overseas duty. As a result, a battalion of six hundred and fifty men under the command of Colonel Huntington was assembled and dispatched to Key West, Florida. The fighting of this battalion was one of the most glorious in Marine Corps history.

Officers Cited

The outstanding officer of this battalion was Captain George Fielding Elliott, who later became commandant of the Corps. Other brilliant officers of this outfit were Lieutenant Neville, who later commanded the Marine Brigade in France during the World War, and Lieutenant Smedley Butler, the stormy petrel of the Marine Corps after the World War.

When Rear Admiral Sampson selected Guantanamo Bay as a base from which attack was to be made on Cervera's Spanish Fleet, which was bottled up in Santiago harbor, the Marines were ordered from Key West to proceed to Guantanamo Bay. These orders reached Colonel Huntington June 7 and he arrived at his objective June 10.

Speed and Fortune

This speed of action proved a break of good fortune which has favored the Marines on more than one occasion during their many campaigns. The transports carrying American Army forces didn't reach Guantanamo until June 22. During these intervening twelve days the attention of the American public was entirely focused on the Marines. Everything the Marines did seemed remarkable to the American public who hungered for action.

The Marines made the first landing on Cuban soil; raised the first American flag over Cuban territory; won the first victory and its members were the first to be decorated for gallantry in action. The Marines fought a small war before the Army forces arrived on Cuban soil and succeeded in driving a superior Spanish force completely out of the Guantanamo area.

Directed Firing

It was during this battle that Sergeant John Quick calmly stood in the open on a huge rock and with bright colored signal flags directed the firing of the American fleet in the harbor — for which he received the Congressional Medal of honor.

A fact that did not escape the notice of the war correspondents was that, while Army soldiers were armed with old fashioned single-shot Springfields that belched huge clouds of black smoke, the Marines used the late-model smokeless-powder magazine rifles. While army men sweated in thick blue woolen cloth, the Marines were garbed in thin light-weight brown linen. Incidentally, the Navy Medical Corps came in for its share of commendation. (Deaths due to fever and disease were 56 for the Marines and 1872 for the Army.)

IRC Plans Second Joint Conference

Club Meets at Chestnut Hill April 19 to Discuss Post-War Problems

Definite plans were completed last Thursday between Villanova's International Relations Club and a similar group at Chestnut Hill College for a joint meeting to be held Tuesday evening, April 14, at Chestnut Hill College. Arrangements for the meeting, the second joint conference to be held this year, were completed by the club's president, Gerard F. Belz.

At last Thursday's meeting with the officers of Chestnut Hill's club, it was decided that the topic to be discussed would be: "The Post War Period and Peace." Three ten-minute papers will be read on this subject, one by Villanova, which will consider the economic phase of the post war period, and two by Chestnut Hill on the political and spiritual phases of the subject.

Economics and Culture

A joint meeting with Immaculata College was held last Wednesday afternoon in Simpson Hall. Before a capacity audience, the speakers presented a formal discussion of "The Economic Relations with South America." Included in the discussion was a consideration of cultural relations and their necessity to economic relations with the Latin American countries.

Belz also disclosed that the group had been invited to attend a forum on the "Papal Peace Program" to be held before the Catholic Alumni Society at St. Joseph's College, Sunday morning, March 29.

Violin Concertos Highlight Seminar Program Tomorrow

Final movements from popular violin concertos will be played in Dr. Edward L. Haenisch's noon hour music seminar tomorrow in the Mendel Hall ampitheatre. The composers featured will include Tschaikowski, Brahms, Mendelssohn, and Beethoven.

Tomorrow night at 7:30 in Simpson Hall, Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A., will present for the resident students a recorded opera, Verdi's "Aida." Fr. Vrana urges all to attend this informal seminar.

Last Wednesday's resident seminar featured the works of Grofe, Ravel, and Schubert. The "Grand Canyon Suite" represented Grofe; "The Bolero," Ravel; and the "Unfinished Symphony," Schubert. The Villanova-Immaculata Symphonic Band will play the first movement of the latter work in their spring concert.

Whistling and tapping feet beat time to the music of the Strauss' in Wednesday's noon seminar. A large assembly was on hand to hear the "Overture to the Bat," "Artists Life," and the "Emperor Waltz" by Johann Strauss.

Graduate Aids

The Graduate Division for Training in Public Service of New York University is offering a limited number of scholarships for the academic year 1942-43, it was announced today by the University.

These awards are open to men and women graduates of accredited colleges who will have been granted the degree of Bachelor of Arts, or its equivalent, by June 30, 1942. Applicants must possess a sound background in the social sciences and may be actually employed in the Government service. Closing date for applications is May 1, 1942.

VILLANOVAN SPORTS

Sportorial

By Jacques Mauch
Sports Editor

THINGS had gone along smoothly for us until now. Yes, everything was just hunky-dory with us; we had no cause for complaint. We were at peace with the world. The Wildcat athletic future looked as bright as could be expected in these trying times.

But a huge black cloud loomed on the horizon of our complacent security and cast its ominous shadow of disappointment upon us — a disappointment that we thought would never come our way.

Last week we voiced the hope that Villanova's great mile relay team would face the starter's gun tomorrow night in the Bronx Coleseum when the attempt for a new national record is made. Our hint was dropped to stimulate interest here on the campus among both the authorities and the students, for the meet, naturally, wasn't listed on the schedule because it was planned only two weeks previous.

The fact that the Wildcat team would not receive an invitation to this meet of meets was the fartherest thing from our minds. That was our least worry. How could we be omitted from this mile relay race? Why, we had either defeated or run better times than all but one of the teams at least twice during the season. They couldn't possibly fail to invite us. But fail to invite us they did!

How in all fairness and honesty they could leave Villanova's team from that star-studded roster we do not understand. We were quite peeved when we heard it, and this little peeve has pricked our ire until now we are good and mad.

The arrangers of this Navy Relief affair have no right to neglect the Wildcat team. They say you can't deny facts. We are going to set down some facts to show that Villanova rates an invitation before several of the teams scheduled to run.

Colgate, Georgetown, Fordham, and Seton Hall have been invited and have accepted. We repeat that Villanova defeated all but one of these teams or turned in better clockings than all but one of these teams during the season. Colgate was the only foursome that beat the Wildcats every time they met. Georgetown and Fordham both suffered defeat at the hands of Jumbo Elliott's boys twice this winter and the Wildcats have been far more consistent than Fordham.

The other team, Seton Hall, hasn't been in the running all season. They did beat Villanova in Washington in the very slow time of 3:28, when Bob O'Sullivan and Dixie Dunbar loafed through sixty second quarters in order to save themselves for the two mile event. And Harry Coates, the Setonians coach, promised a 3:17 mile if his team was invited!

However, Harry Coates isn't to blame for the Wildcat's misfortunes; but the New York officials running the meet are, and it is toward them that we turn our censorius disapproval.

What is the matter? Couldn't they run the race without a New York representative? Just because the meet is being held in New York and in the very neighborhood of one of the entrants, does that mean they have to be invited? Well, we won't go so far as to say that Fordham doesn't rate an invite, but if they merit one, then Villanova doubly deserves one! And how did the Jersey combine sneak in there? Answer us that, please!

The excuse can't be that these two teams will draw better than the Wildcats. We attended several of the indoor meets and noticed that the Main Liners drew plenty of applause from the New York partisan crowd. Our boys caught the eye of the fans this winter and have got themselves quite a following. We think they will be missed tomorrow night when the announcer cries, "First call for the mile relay!"

It's too late to do anything about it now, but we still feel irked at the injustice. It is not only our disappointment but the Navy Relief's loss that Villanova will not be represented. All we can say as regards their action is, "They are more to be pitied than censured."

Ten Quints Represented On 'Cat All-Opponent Team

Ten colleges were represented on the all-opponent teams chosen by Villanova varsity basketball players. Albright, Niagara, and Lehigh, victors over Villanova gained places on the first team along with Washington and Jefferson, and Westminster who dropped contests to the 'Cats.

Dick Shollenberger, who, with 25 points, paced Albright to its win, and Bob McGuire of Niagara who was good for thirteen, were nominated as first string forwards. Huck Hartmen of W. & J. was voted the outstanding center to face the Wildcats during the season. This was the second straight year he was chosen. Bill Binder of Lehigh and Dale Dunmire of Westminster were guards on the first team. Binder single-handedly stopped Villanova with his 22 points. Dunmire was brilliant although his team lost.

Two Unanimous Choices

Johnny Rayz of Geneva and Bill Hirsch of Brooklyn College rated the forward spots on the second team. Joe Camic of Duquesne, gained the center spot. He gave Hartman, W. & J.'s towering pivotman a close battle for first team honors. The two guards Bill Agoglia of St. Francis of Brooklyn, and Joe Winitsky of Baltimore University were high in the running for the first team positions but lacked that certain something the first team men had. Agoglia was the outstanding man in the Brooklynites' overtime win against the Wildcats.

Shollenberger and Binder are the outstanding men on the all-opponent team and both were unanimous choices of the players. No other men were as dangerous against Villanova all season as these two. Shollenberger was selected last week on the All-Penna. Eastern Collegiate basketball league team for the second straight year.

No school was able to place more than one man on both teams combined. However, Washington and Jefferson's Duthie was given honorable mention along with Stan Nozka, Duquesne's high scorer.

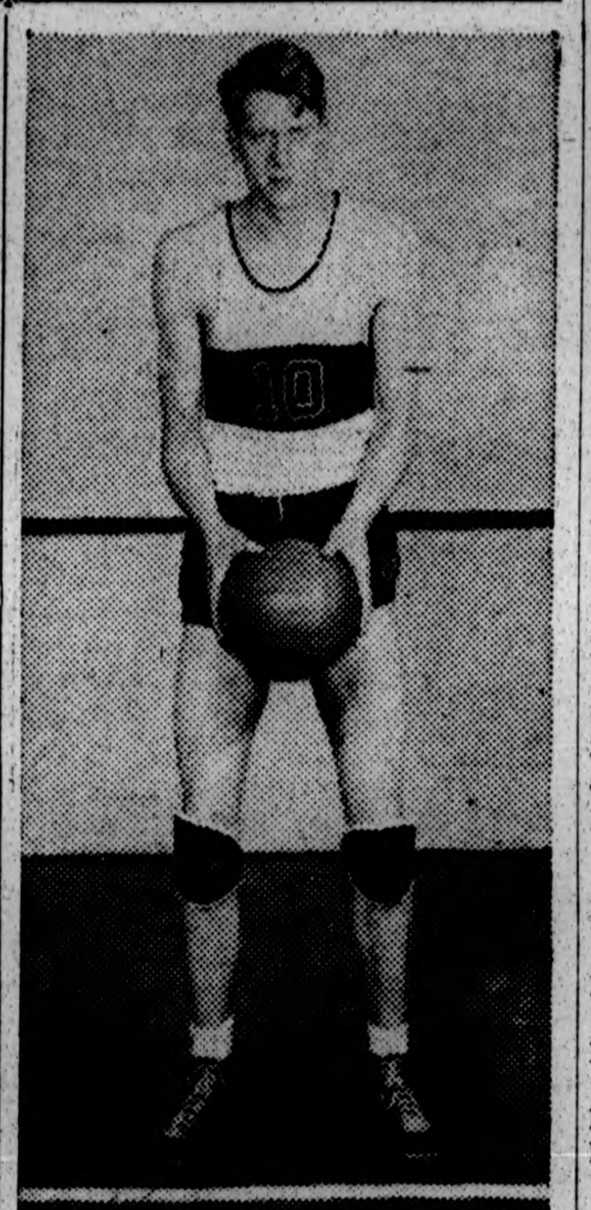
First Team

F.—Shollenberger, Albright.
F.—McGuire, Niagara.
C.—Hartman, W. & J.
G.—Binder, Lehigh.
G.—Dunmire, Westminster.

Second Team

F.—Rayz, Geneva.
F.—Hirsch, Brooklyn.
C.—Camic, Duquesne.
G.—Agoglia, St. Francis.
G.—Winitsky, Baltimore.

Honorable Mention: Duthie, W. & J.; Nozka, Duquesne.



HUCK HARTMAN,
six foot, seven inch center on Washington and Jefferson's court team who was selected center on the Villanova all-opponent team for the second straight year.

Relay Team Runs Last Indoor Race

Quartet to Run Against Notre Dame, Georgetown and Fordham in Cleveland Meet

This Saturday night in Cleveland the Blue and White thin-clads will ring down the curtain on the most successful indoor track season in Wildcat history on the boards of the Cleveland Garden.

After a lengthy season of running in the outstanding meets of the eastern circuit Jumbo Elliott's boys will take on the best that the midwest has to offer and also the eastern bigwigs. The same mile relay team that ran 3:20.3 two weeks ago in Madison Square Garden will wear the Wildcat colors again, John DiCarlo, Bob O'Sullivan, Dixie Dunbar, and Captain Bill Hooper. Hooper again replaces George Guida whose spiked ankle has not yet healed completely.

Notre Dame Favored

Villanova's weekly New York rivals, Georgetown, National A. A. U. champs, Fordham University, and Seton Hall will be there. But the team they all will have to watch is the favored South Bend foursome from Notre Dame. In their initial and only eastern appearance this year in the Garden the Irish were outclassed by Fordham when the Rams ran 3:21.4. However, the Irish were potentially better, and last Saturday night were actually better when they reeled off a 3:19.4 in the Chicago Invitation meet.

Seton Hall Won Last Year

This National Catholic Mile Relay Championship, the main feature in the Knights of Columbus meet was won last year by Seton Hall. But this year the South Orange lads should be far out of first place. The Wildcats are expected to be right in there and if they win, it would add much prestige to their already famed track name, and be crowning glory to a most successful season.

The boys will be given a week's rest upon the conclusion of Saturday's race and then they will have another week in which to prime themselves for the outdoor cinder campaign.

Klotz Gains "All" Honors

Herman "Red" Klotz, mighty mite of the Wildcat basketball team was selected as first string guard on the Geneva College all-opponent team it was learned last week in a press release from Beaver Falls, Pa. The team was picked by the Covie varsity players and their coach, Slim Ransom.

An added distinction to this honor was received by Klotz in his election as co-captain of the team along with Bill Holtzman, C. C. N. Y. star who won a forward position.

Klotz was one of the outstanding set shot artists on the Wildcat team this year and one of the most deceptive ball handlers in the district. The diminutive star is only a sophomore. He lives in Philadelphia and received his early court experience at Southern High where he was chosen on the All-Scholastic team in his senior year.

Other members of the Geneva "all" team are Leo Mogus, Youngstown College, Rudy Baric, of West Virginia University, and Stan Nozka, Duquesne center.

Golf Tryouts

All Students who expect to try out for the Golf Team next week are requested to attend an important meeting tomorrow.

It will be held in Room 111 Mendel Hall at 1:00 o'clock.

Practice Rounds For 'Cat Golfers Held Next Week

Tryouts for the golf team will be held sometime next week. Monday, March 30, is scheduled as the day of the first qualifying round, but if the weather conditions make playing impossible on that day, the first round will be postponed until Tuesday, with the final eighteen holes being played on Wednesday.

It is necessary that the team be determined before the Easter week-end, as the first match is scheduled for April 10. This match will be against St. John's of Brooklyn, and will be played at the Pennsylvania Golf Club layout in Frazer, Pa. Last year, in the opening match of the season, the Wildcat Linksmen defeated the Redmen 8-1, and hope to repeat their smashing victory on the 10th.

Not Much Practice

As yet, there have been no practice rounds at the Frazer course for the contestants ,and it is expected that these rounds will be held over until the actual team is determined. Several of the men have been driving balls on the practice course on the campus, but have not played an actual eighteen hole round.

This means that the qualifying rounds will undoubtedly be the first since last summer for many of the aspirants. This set-up is not too good for low scores in the qualifying contests, but inasmuch as everyone is at the same disadvantage, it is fair to all the contestants.

Stenn May Play

Last year the same system was employed and the scores weren't too bad, even though it was the first time for twelve out of thirteen contestants. The low thirty-six hole total was 162, and the next 164. It is expected that these figures will be equaled or even bettered next week, inasmuch as most of the contestants know the Frazer layout, and will not be playing at the Pennsylvania Club, for the first time, as they were last year. Up until last spring, the Villanova golf teams had played at the Main Line Golf Club, in St. David's.

Good news was received last week when it was learned that, Paul Stenn, huge 240 pound football lineman for the last four years will be able to tryout for the links team. He had played on the 1939 team, but the last two years was unabe to represent the Blue and White on the fairways, as he found that spring football practice took up much of his time.

Jacobs Gradually Molds 'Cat Nine Into Working Unit

Another Week Will Tell the Story; Batters Farther Advanced Than Pitchers in Practice Sessions

"Give us another week and we'll know what we have," said Doc Jacobs, as he surveyed his 1942 baseball prospects in their second week of practice.

Earlier in the week the squad was divided into two sections for practice in hitting, and some of the boys appeared disgruntled because they were placed on what they considered an inferior squad. When asked about this, Jacobs explained that the division was necessary to give everyone the required batting practice.

"No one need worry he'll be overlooked," remarked Doc. "I'll look at everyone and any promise he shows will be recognized. The boys must realize, however, that this is college ball and just because a fellow batted .900 in some church league gives him no ticket to a varsity job."

Relay Base Running

Thursday afternoon was devoted to base running technique; the whole squad ran the bases in a sort of relay race evolved by Doc. The runners would start from home and run to second base where they had to wait for the man coming the other way to hand them the ball before they could proceed home. The game resulted in some confusion and was amusing to watch but it did wonders for those unused running muscles. Some of the boys still feel stiff.

The hitters still seem to have the edge on the pitchers as shown in the two practice games held this week. Of course, the hurlers have been unable as yet to turn loose with all their "stuff" so the boys with the bats are pretty confident. In other week when such pitchers as Chick Chaplar, Major McDonnell, and Jigger Donahue, who worked this week are in prime condition, the trips to the plate will end more often with the catcher holding the ball. Joe Malone is beginning to show his fast ball who is master, and Bill Wood, sophomore sensation from last year, is rapidly rounding into top form.

Behot Is a Candidate

Among the freshmen the best bet appears to be Jimmy Burns, who has lots on the ball and a good head. With all these pitchers there should be no serious trouble getting through a twelve-game schedule.

The big surprise of the week came when Joe Behot, varsity footballer and senior, no less, reported for practice and entered the competition for an outfield position. Doc Jacobs seemed glad to see Joe and was pleased not only with his attitude but with the workman-like

Seven Man Football Unit Appears In Grid Drills

By BILL WALSH

A new feature was introduced into the spring practice sessions last Wednesday, when seven man games were held among the members of the squad. The seven man contests were waged in order to give coaches Smith and McNally a better line on the abilities of each player. Naturally this was more easily accomplished in a seven man game, with only fourteen men in action, than in a regulation contest, where twenty-two would have taken part.

These contests were also helpful in stressing deception by the backs on spinning plays.

These games were highly successful from Clipper's viewpoint, and it is certain that they will become a regular part of the practice sessions in succeeding weeks this spring, as well as next fall.

Hampered by extremely bad weather on Monday and Tuesday of last week, Wednesday was the first day of the week that the squad could venture outdoors. Thus, the workouts of the first two days of the week consisted mainly of calisthenics ,and short drills in the gym. The team also ran through a few of the new plays given them by Clipper this spring. Spinning and faking are the features of the new system, and much emphasis was given these two important offensive elements while the team was indoors, in order to get them ready for the seven man games.

Pezelski Breaks Away

The positions filled on the seven man teams include a center, two ends, and four backs. Great stress was layed upon deception on both the offensive and the defensive. The high point of the Wednesday workout was reached when Joe Pezelski, playing in the left halfback slot, broke away for a 52 yard run without a hand being laid upon him.

Another back that looked very good on the offense was Tom Siani, better known as "Subby." He is only a freshman, and great things are expected of him next fall. Steve Pritko, outstanding wingman for the past two seasons, shone on defense, as he made tackle after tackle on plays that came around his end.

On Thursday, another drill was held, stressing the new offensive style. It takes a lot of time to teach the boys the new system and

Juniors Gain On Frosh Bowlers As Pin League Nears Its Finish

The Junior Mechanical Engineer day's matches of the Phi Kappa Pi of the first place Frosh in Saturday's matches of the Pi Kappa Pi Bowling League as they swept four games from the impotent Sophomore Chemicals. Led by Don Cryor, who rolled a 527 series, they defeated the Sophs by a wide margin. Their victory insured them of a chance at the title.

The Frosh, who still maintain their narrow lead of one game had a great deal of difficulty before they managed to cop three games from the Junior Chemicals. The Junior M. E. and the Freshmen are scheduled to meet the last week of the season. The match is almost certain to decide the championship.

Senior Chems Falter

The surge started by the Senior Chemicals several weeks ago was abruptly terminated as the Junior M. E. Residents surprised and took four games from them. This loss dropped the Seniors from third place into a fifth place tie with the Faculty. The Junior M. E. Residents climbed into seventh place.

The Faculty had a rough time of it and came off with a split as a result of their match with the Sophomore Day Hop "A" Team. In the remaining match the Senior M. E. took four games by forfeit from the last place Sophomore M. E. Day Hop "B" team.

The fight for the title has resolved itself into a duel between the Freshmen and the Junior M. E. Day Hops. All season both teams have been consistently good. At this writing the Freshmen have a record of 22 victories against 6 losses while the Juniors have won 21 and only dropped 7. As the season is moving into its last two weeks the Frosh and the Juniors should decide the championship when they meet the last week of the season. The Frosh should go through next week unbeaten as they meet the often beaten Sophomore Chemicals who haven't tasted victory in over a month. The Junior M. E. may run into some trouble as they meet the unpredictable Faculty aggregation.

The other teams are strung out behind the two league leaders separated by one or two games. The Senior M. E. and the Senior Chemicals are still in the running but must come through undefeated to insure themselves even a tie.

Although Villanova did not place a man on the University of Detroit all-opponent, the Titans did vote Villanova as the outstanding "set-shots" they met during the past season according to a recent release.

Severance Attends Coaches Meeting

Coach Al Severance has been in New Orleans for the past week attending the N. C. A. A. basketball tournament and the national basketball coaches meeting held in conjunction with it.

The tournament is scheduled to go another week yet but the coaches conferences were held yesterday and Sunday. New rules and innovations for next year were naturally the topics of discussion.

A new rule change put forth was the calling of time out on a held ball and the resuming of play with a tapoff. This would shorten playing time of a game about five minutes some believe. Some also advocated the return to the old standard backboards instead of the fan shaped ones that were declared legal this year.

COLEMAN IN HOSPITAL

George "Buck" Coleman, freshman trackman, was operated on last week for appendicitis and is doing well at present. He is in the Mercy-Fitzgerald Hospital in Darby, Pa.

Coleman, a pole-vaulter, last year at West Catholic High soared 11 feet, 8 inches, for a new Catholic League record. His appendectomy will keep him out of action for about a year.

Mural Baseball Begins Tomorrow; Softball League Opens Next Monday

Continuing its policy of "Keep Physically Fit," the extensive Villanova intramural program, under the competent leadership of Fathers McKee and Dunne, reaches that part of its schedule where the baseball diamond plays the major role. Intramural baseball and softball are about to get underway. According to official reports from Father McKee, all necessary equipment has been given out to the resident students, and the season will open tomorrow at 4 P. M. with the two senior halls, Austin and Fedigan, opposing each other. The scene of battle will be Mendel Field.

Until now all activity concerned with intramurals, with the exception of tennis and touch football, has been conducted indoors. But now that spring is here and consequently a great deal of favorable weather, the sports environment definitely changes to the outdoors.

The schedule this year will be carried out the same way with games being played on Sunday mornings and afternoons at 10:30 A. M. and 1 P. M. However, due to the inauguration of the present war time, which shifts the time one hour ahead, making it still light at six o'clock, there is a strong probability for games to be played on Wednesdays. If labs permit it, this plan will be followed out.

Coming back as defending champions in baseball is Austin Hall, who, by virtue of the superb cooperation and teamwork of its players, finished the season last year with a creditable record of five wins and one loss. Their only loss was a 1-0 forfeit to Alumni. Some of the Austinites that are returning are Alex Lukacs, all intramural pitcher last year who went through the season undefeated, Bill Swan, an import from Alumni who will assist Lukacs on the mound, Charlie Molnar at shortstop, Jimmy Hobbs at third, Kempf behind the plate, and Phil Mariani and "Chick" Hefele taking outfield positions.

Fedigan Hall, who finished in second place last season, will return with a team that is expected to become the leader in the league. The Fediganites will have a lot of power both defensively and offensively with a great deal coming from the players of last year. Some of the members that will represent the Gigiloes this season will be Steve Aisenbrey, the team's outstanding pitcher, who has suffered only two losses in three years of play here; George Fitzgerald, who will take up the catching duties; Dave Daly at shortstop; Koerner, at first; John Cerulo at second; and Red McFadden in the outfield.

When it comes to analysing the Freshman halls, Alumni and Mendel, as to their team or individual playing, there arises a little difficulty. However, they do have their sluggers who, aided by their cohorts, will endeavor to set the leading pace in the league.

This year's softball schedule is both extensive and comprehensive. There will be three leagues in action, Residents, Mendel Day Hops, and C & F Day Hops. Thirty games are listed for the resident league's four teams. As yet the day hops' schedule has not been arranged because all the teams haven't been organized. The teams will not be limited in the commuters' league.

A playoff among the three winners of these three leagues will be held at the close of the season to determine the championship. Mendel Residents are the defenders.

SPRING VACATION TRIPS
COST LESS BY GREYHOUND

Spring vacation this year is BE-KIND-TO-YOUR-CAR-AND-TIRES-WEEK—in other words, go home by Greyhound. It's your chance to be kind to your pocketbook, too—you don't need a course in higher mathematics to figure out you're way ahead at Greyhound's low fares. The schedules are convenient—the deep-cushioned seats are as rest-provoking as a dull lecture—and the crowd's sure to be a lot of fun. Yes, sir, the right start for this vacation is by Greyhound!

Here and There

By Jack Dudley

Closing of the West Coast's famed Santa Anita track as a defense move is significant of the changes that will come as the war progresses. We'll be waiting to see how the Pacific Coast Baseball League will be affected. Coast fans may see less games this season. For one thing there will be less players. Another thing will be that priorities will mean less equipment, and less balls and bats. Players and umpires will be more careful about throwing a ball out of the game because it is soiled or slightly nicked. It may soon be like the old sandlot choose-up games where we used the one beatup ball throughout the whole nine innings.

All the baseball teams will have to watch the amount of balls they use this season. Also, the Dodgers claimed their club used two thousand bats last summer. Sounds mighty high. We'll bet they cut down on that figure from now on.

Baseball isn't the only victim of the priorities board, tennis and golf have been hit just as badly. They are thinking up ways to make synthetic tennis balls and recovering old golf balls. Baseball will just have to use a little bit of ingenuity too.

Army regulations limiting attendance at athletic events on the West Coast to 5000 spectators is the most obvious reason for Stanford's release of Clark Shaughnessy from the rest of his contract. With intercollegiate football on the wane out there, there was little sense in a man of Shaughnessy's ability coaching a team through a doubtful schedule and then earning the rest of his pay directing intramural activities.

At the University of Maryland he has a chance to get his full of coaching football as long as the eastern part of the country is relatively free to carry on life as usual.

As Bill Stern put it, orchids to Joe Louis for donating proceeds of his fight with Abe Simon this Friday night to the Army Emergency Fund. Moves like this on the part of the Brown Bomber will make him an idol with the boys in the service. His unsophisticated manner has already made him a popular figure in his own camp.

We'll make a note of this bout Friday night and hope it winds up in the hands of the Axis powers. These are the only kind of fights Americans want, but through them the enemy will go down for the count in a round coming up soon.

About that fight, it should be Louis' whenever he wants to finish it.

—V—

The biggest interest in the Hale America sports program seems to center about the swimming workouts. Tom More had the largest number of registrants and his work is really cut out for him. There was so much work for him that he had to draft some of his varsity men to help.

Calisthenics under the Clipper and his grid assistants also have a big following. About four-thirty every afternoon a tired, haggard looking group drag themselves into the fieldhouse, wheezing and puffing like a racehorse at the end of a mile and a half. At least they're getting in shape.

—V—

We've been wondering just how good old man Jupiter Pluvius is going to be to our athletic teams this spring. With the schedule shortened because of the early graduation, the teams will experience very short seasons.

A few days of rain would create havoc and throw the whole spring sports schedule into confusion. A rainy week-end in the middle of our twelve-game baseball schedule would knock out a couple of contests which could never be played again. Think of a college diamond team with only nine games, let alone twelve. It's hardly worth the boys' effort. The same misfortune could easily befall the golfers and the netmen.

Here's hoping for a month of sunny days!

Bowling Team Engages Penn In First Match

Villanova's newly organized varsity bowling team will inaugurate their first season of competition this Friday evening when they engage the University of Pennsylvania pinmen at the Walnut alleys. The teams are scheduled for a home and home series, the other match to be held at the Ardmore alleys.

This match will mark the opening of the Philadelphia Intercollegiate Bowling League. The league is not yet formally organized but it is hoped that the other local colleges wil cooperate. Vilanova has sent challenges to Drexel Tech, LaSalle College, and St. Joseph's Colege and is waiting to hear from them.

Seven Men Picked

The Widcats will be represented by a five-man team and will carry two spares. The probable lineup will be Angelo Rosa, freshman star and leader of the PKP league; Bob Simpson, Don Cryor, and George Gabuzda, runners up in the engineers circuit; and Austin Gavin a sophomore. Cahill and Steiert will be the spares.

The regular league schedule will be announced when it is complete.

manner in which he swings the stick and fields those long high ones. Joe is three years late in his baseball ambitions but there is still lots of time for him to get his name on the roster of bi-varsity athletes.

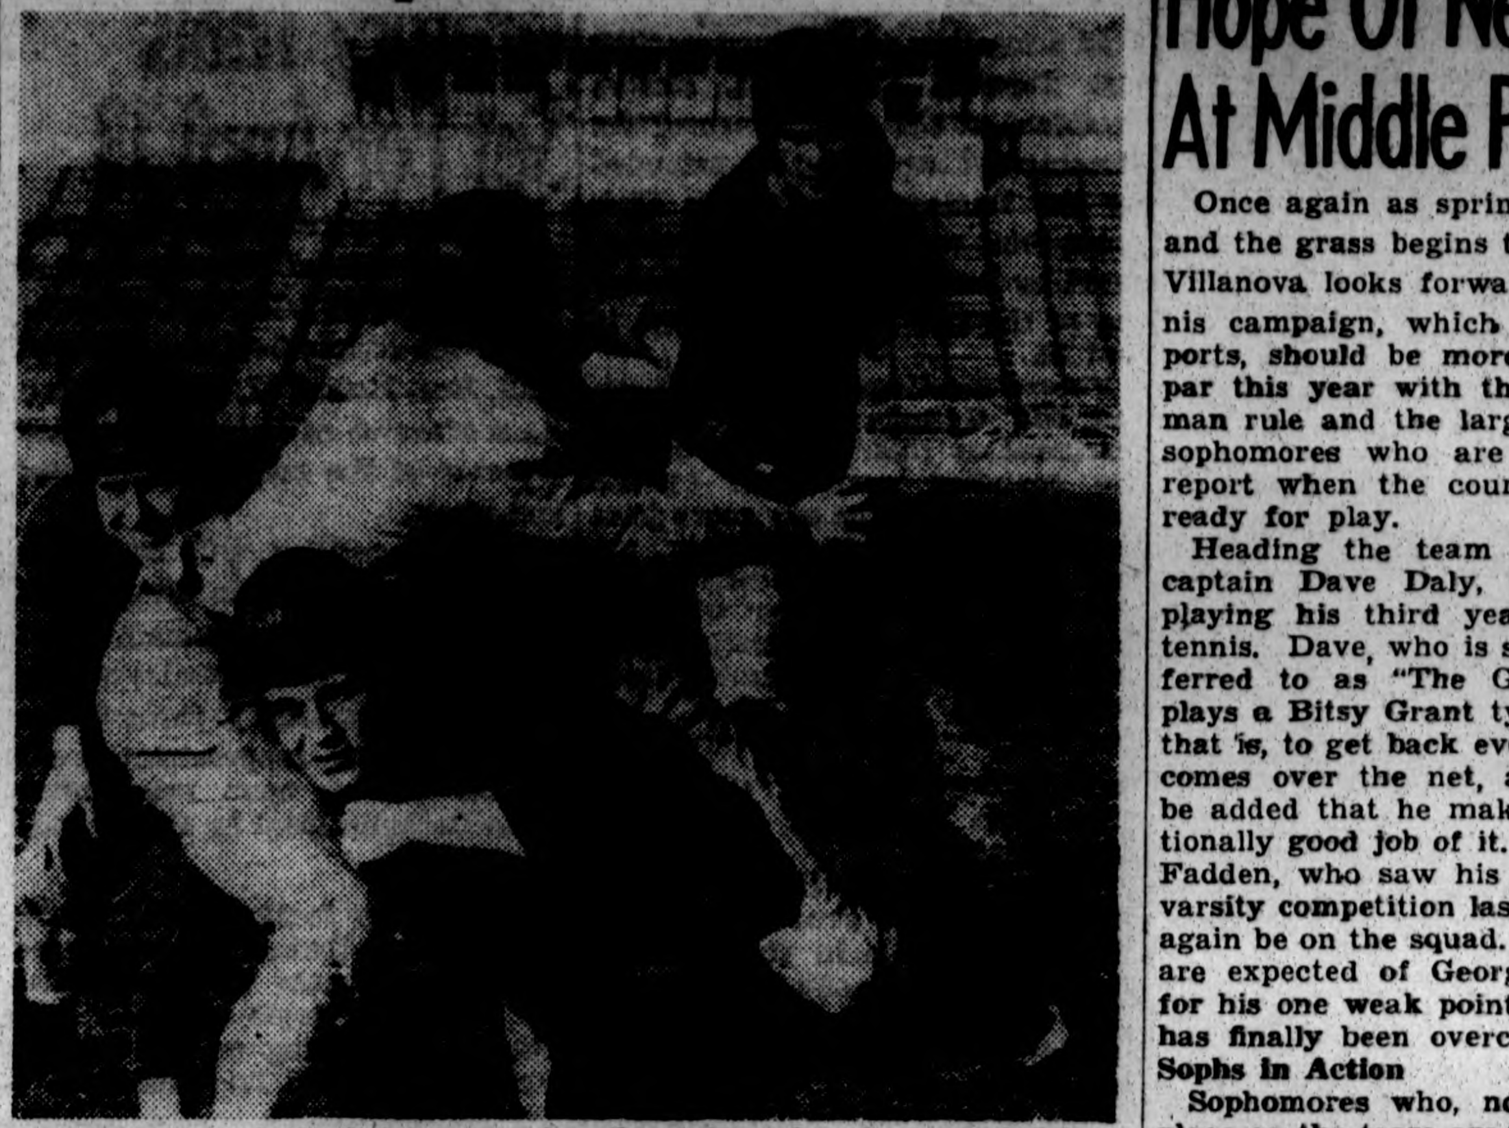
Yednock in Old Form

After a week of serious practice, Joe Yednock is in his old form, both in fielding and hitting. Joe is one of the most determined players on the squad.

The cancellations of practice because of bad weather may prove serious with the first game with Rider less than two weeks away. Rider is entering her second year of first class intercollegiate baseball but it only takes nine men to make a team and no opponent should be under-rated. Though the Wildcats should encounter no great difficulty in defeating these boys from Trenton, it is still good to start the first game with the team in good shape. With the schedule necessarily shortened, every win builds up the percentage appreciably.

Doc Jacobs always turns out a well-molded team and his job this year will not be to find good material but to pick out the best working combination from among the big herd of eligible candidates.

Open That Hole!



A seven man football team running through a play, inaugurated by Clipper Smith in his spring practice sessions. With a team like this in action Smith and McNally can get a better line on the abilities of players and their teamwork. This also aids offensive drill for the backfield men.

Seven Man Team

requires a great deal of tedious work on their part, but they're taking it in stride, and show signs of mastering it completely.

As has been the custom for the past two weeks, Friday was the scene of the big scrimmage of the week. The workout lasted for two and a half hours, and every player on the squad took part at some time or another.

The workout was easily the most successful thus far, as the new plays finally seem to be mastered by most of the backfield men. They were a very deceptive group of runners on Friday afternoon, and it is certain that in succeeding weeks rapid progress can be made toward the perfection of timing and other fine points.

Possible Spring Scrimmages

The reason for changing the offensive style this season was very succinctly given by Clipper. He said, "Last year we had a simple offense and couldn't run over them, so this year we'll have a complicated one, and try to fool them." The same defensive style of last year, however, is being stressed again this spring, the changes occurring only in the offense.

Next week Clipper will continue perfecting the new style of offense, and there will be another "all out" scrimmage on Friday. Work is at its heaviest now in order that the team may attain perfection as soon as possible, with the hope that a few spring games may be scheduled for the month of April.

Word has been received from the U. S. Naval Academy expressing their desire to engage Villanova in a spring contest in Baltimore, but no definite plans have been made as yet.

Hope Of Netmen At Middle Pitch

Once again as spring approaches and the grass begins to turn green, Villanova looks forward to its tennis campaign, which from all reports, should be more than up to par this year with the new freshman rule and the large number of sophomores who are expected to report when the courts are made ready for play.

Heading the team this year is captain Dave Daly, who will be playing his third year of varsity tennis. Dave, who is sometimes referred to as "The Giant Killer," plays a Bitsy Grant type of game; that is, to get back everything that comes over the net, and it might be added that he makes an exceptionally good job of it. George McFadden, who saw his first year of varsity competition last season, will again be on the squad. Great things are expected of George this year, for his one weak point, his service, has finally been overcome.

Sophs in Action

Sophomores who, no doubt, will place on the team are George Suchs who plays the English type of game as it should be, and Austin Gavin from California, where he did very well in a number of tournaments last summer. Another sophomore who has showed a great deal of form is Red Gagen, who hails from the metropolitan area of New York where he has played in amateur competition for the past two seasons.

Things aren't as bright as they look, however. Missing from last year's combine are ex-captain Ed Banagan, No. 1 man, and Bert Collins and Duke King who left school.

If several prospects from the intramural finals which will be held next week, can be found the team may not be too badly off.

THREE CAPTAINS

The arts school, smallest group of students in Villanova boast three varsity sport captains. Dick Gray, basketball captain, John Maher, co-captain of swimming, and Dave Daly, leader of the tennis team.

Seminar Hears Talk On Typhus Fever

If you have a rash and nervous symptoms, watch out!

According to sophomore science man Joseph Tortoreto ,speaker at last Thursday's Research Seminar meeting, you have typhus fever.

Tortoreto defined the fever as an acute, infectious disease characterized by a sudden onset of a muscular rash and marked nervous symptoms terminated by a crisis at the end of two weeks. He then gave the history, types, symptoms, causes, and methods of prevention of the disease.

Closing the meeting, the members elected Alex Infanzon, science sophomore, secretary of the organization to assist the chairman in his duties.

Joint Meeting

At a meeting of the German Club last Tuesday, Charles J. Hefele, president of the club, informed the members of an invitation extended by the Immaculata German Club for a joint meeting. The dates offered by Immaculata for the meeting of the two clubs were April 16 and 20.

Future meetings with the Chestnut Hill German Club were also discussed at this time, but due to the curtailed curriculum there probably will not be any more joint meetings with them this year, unless a date can be chosen which will not interfere either with the date selected for the meeting with Immaculata or with Junior week activities.

Committees Named

that three purposes will be served. First, all students will be helping the war effort through their indirect purchase of bonds; secondly, the scholarship fund will be increased, thereby making it possible for some future student to attend college, and thirdly the ever present problem of obtaining à suitable corsage will be eliminated.

Newell's committee will go into action early this week. He has promised that the design and flowers of the corsage will be more than suitable for the affair. During the next few weeks the corsage design will be chosen. Following this the committee will secure orders from those students and outsiders who intend going to the prom.

In speaking before the special class meeting last Tuesday, Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O. S. A., moderator of the class, explained the motive behind the "Victory Corsage" campaign. "Students who are out for an evening's entertainment such as will be afforded them at the Centennial Class' Junior Prom, need to do something which will help them remember the grave war situation.

"To accomplish this objective, and at the same time to do something worthwhile in the cause of the national war effort, the junior class is trying to have all girls attending the Junior Prom wear a 'victory corsage'."

The Service Committee likewise will begin their work this week. Included in the committee are Stanley J. Kazior, of the science school and Willard J. Raffetto, of the engineering school.

Mahoney's committee, the second of its type in college history, will make contact with those ex-members of the junior class who have entered the army, navy, or marine forces. Every effort of the committee will be expended to make their attendance at the prom, as guests of the class, possible.

Oratory Trials Set For April 13

Preliminary trials for the annual Murtaugh Medal Speech Contest will be held at 2:30 P. M. on April 13 in the amphitheatre of Mendel Hall, Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O. S. A., moderator of Beta Gamma and director of the contest, announced last week.

The competition will be, as in former years, open to all students in good scholastic standing. Participants in the preliminaries will be required to present a three to five minute speech (approximately 400 to 600 words) upon the subject, "The Catholic Ideal in Patriotism."

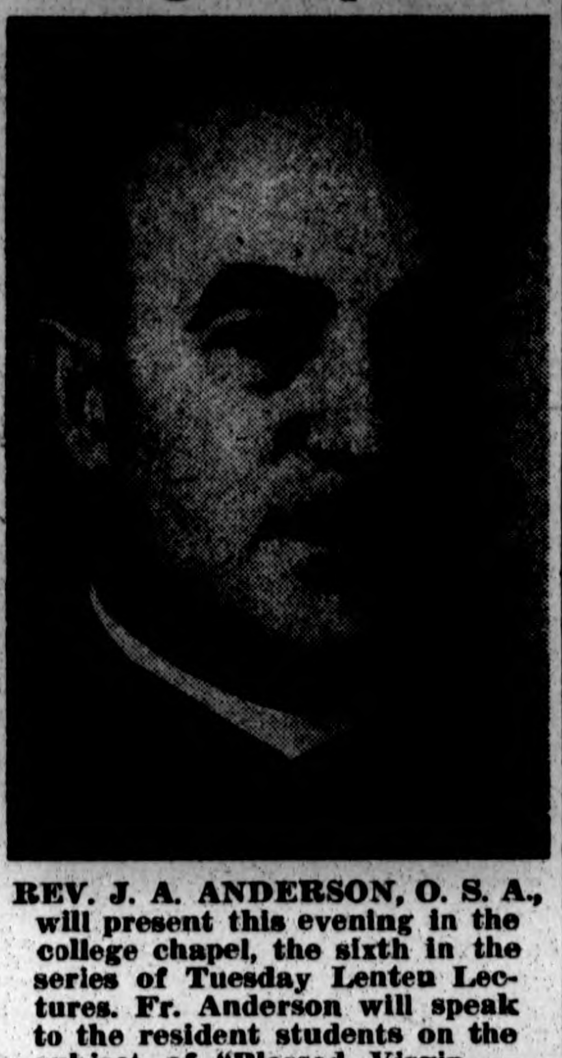
New Policy

This policy marks a distinct departure from that of previous years, when contestants were permitted to discuss a topic of their own choice. Remarking on the subject, Fr. Sullivan said he considered it particularly timely.

Speeches in the finals, the date of which has not as yet been decided upon, will be on the same topic and will be of the same length. The prize for the winner, a gold medal donated by the Very Rev. Edward J. Murtaugh, O. S. A., will be awarded at the annual graduation exercises on May 19.

The winner of the award last year was Robert J. McIntyre, then a junior in the School of Commerce and Finance, who discussed "What Has Happened to the World?"

Tonight's Speaker



REV. J. A. ANDERSON, O. S. A., will present this evening in the college chapel, the sixth in the series of Tuesday Lenten Lectures. Fr. Anderson will speak to the resident students on the subject of "Blessed Virgin — Mother of Sorrows."

Concert Date Set

The Villanova-Immaculata annual Spring symphonic band concert will be held in the Field House on Sunday evening, April 26, Rev. Ralph J. Handran, O. S. A., musical director of the group, announced yesterday. Program for the concert, announced last week, will include operatic and novelty selections in addition to several marches and a medley of Yankee tunes.

Spanish Club Plans Banquet

Plans are being formulated for the annual Spanish Club banquet on April 23. James A. Walsh, president of the organization, appointed a committee of four: William Swan, sophomore, William Walpole, junior, Robert McDonnell, sophomore, and Edward Reardon, sophomore, all commercemen, to select a suitable place to hold the affair.

In conjunction with the dinner, a literary contest is being conducted. The best composition on Cervantes written in Spanish will receive a medal and the runner-up will be awarded a diploma. Duplicate prizes will be awarded for the two best English poems on the same topic.

Fr. Lozano urged all members who are interested, to submit their entries by April 15, which is the deadline.

"De Tal Arbol," Spanish play to be presented at the University of Pennsylvania's Cultural Olympics in the latter part of April, was the main topic discussed at the Spanish Club meeting held last Thursday in the commerce and finance auditorium. The production is under way with rehearsals being held every Saturday morning at the University.

Rev. Lorenzo Lozano, O. S. A., moderator, stated that there is a possibility that a dress rehearsal may be staged on April 11 in the Field House for the members of the Spanish Club; the rehearsal would be followed by a tea-dance.

Sentner Named Ring Chairman

McQuade Announces Special Appointment Following Approval of Petition

Herbert J. Sentner, a sophomore in the School of Commerce and Finance, has been appointed chairman of a committee to purchase class rings for members of the sophomore class, Thomas D. McQuade, class president, announced today.

The new committee, usually named only in the junior year, was formed this year with the approval of Rev. Francis X. McGuire, O. S. A., vice-president of the college, and of the Student Council, in response to a petition presented by the sophomores. This arrangement will be for this year only and will establish no precedent for future sophomore classes, McQuade said in making the announcement.

To Pick Soph Rings

HERBERT J. SENTNER

Effects of the war on college life were given as reasons for the unusually early appointment. The possibility that present sophomores would be drafted before their junior year and that the already high prices for school rings might reach a prohibitive level were advanced by the sophomores in their petition.

An added reason was the possibility that ring manufacturers may soon have their plants converted for war production, thus cutting off the supply of rings entirely.

Named to aid Sentner, who is an honor student in the commerce school, were Joseph Nunan and Robert Bolger, also of the com-

Kugler's Chosen For Annual DPE Dinner

Kugler's Restaurant will be the site of the second annual dinner of Delta Pi Epsilon, commerce fraternity, to be held on April 16. This is the decision of the committee, made at the last meeting on Wednesday.

At the meeting chairman Charles Jones signified his intention of making the affair a success. He said, "We are attempting to make this the most gala affair ever held by the fraternity."

Jones announced the appointment of Joseph McEvoy, junior accounting major, to arrange for entertainment and of John F. Dudley, also a junior accounting major, for the program. Other details and arrangements were discussed.

During the past week, Edward R. Frank, a senior, treasurer of the fraternity, earnestly urged delinquent members to pay up their dues so that final arrangements could be made for the dinner and program.

Today, March 31, is the last day for ordering fraternity pins to be delivered this year. If orders are placed now, they will be filled within a month. Otherwise, delivery cannot be had before next year.

Ring Discussion

All sophomores who are interested in the purchase of their class rings should meet in room 215, Mendel Hall, at 1:00 P. M. today, Herbert J. Sentner, newly-appointed chairman of the ring committee, disclosed. Designs and prices will be discussed at this time.

ASME Convention Draws 17 Schools

Seventeen colleges and universities will be represented here when the Eastern district of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers will hold a one-day convention of its student branches, April 20.

Attending the convention will be representatives of Brooklyn Polytechnic, City College of New York, Cooper Union, Drexel, Lafayette, Pratt Institute of Brooklyn, Stevens, Swarthmore, the universities of Columbia, Delaware, Lehigh, Newark, New York, Pennsylvania, Princeton, and Rutgers, and Villanova College.

Papers to Be Read

A representative of each college and university will submit to the convention a technical paper. For the judging of these papers the society is obtaining a prominent engineer. To those submitting the papers judged to be the best will be presented monetary prizes.

Presentation of the prizes will be made at the banquet to be held at the Haverford Court Hotel as the final event on the convention program. Joseph P. McMahon, senior engineer, will act as toastmaster.

Joseph P. Gill, chairman of the entertainment committee, is securing several special features for the morning and afternoon technical sessions. Following the morning sessions, the group will adjourn for luncheon at the Connestoga Mill, Bryn Mawr.

Souvenirs of the convention are being obtained by a committee headed by Henry G. Martinez.

The group will also make a thorough tour of the engineering shops during its brief meeting.

"Engineer" Features Articles On Radio

In keeping with the times, the latest issue of the Villanova "Engineer," issued last week, featured stories on wartime poisonous gases, frequency modulation, and amateur radio. There was also a review of the Phi Kappa Pi Initiation and Banquet.

The article, "War Gases," by Charles Schaumann, senior engineer, is a study of the nature of and the antidote for each poisonous gas used in modern war.

Edward L. Manderfield, junior engineer, presents an explanation of the theory and component parts of the new variation in radio — "Frequency Modulation."

The story of amateur radio is recounted by Paul Simpson, freshman engineer. It described amateur radio from its inception with Marconi in the latter part of the last century to its adaptation to the present war.

The review of the Phi Kappa Pi Initiation and Banquet was by Joseph McNeilly, junior engineer. It, and the articles on FM, and amateur radio, were generously illustrated with a large number of pictures and sketches.

Math Society To Dine April 13 At Erskine Hall

Erskine Hall in Haverford will be the scene of the annual banquet of Mu Alpha Theta, mathematics society of the engineering school, on April 13, Joseph Conway, president of the organization, announced last week.

Conway, a junior chemical engineer, completed all arrangements for the affair last week after considering offers of several other local establishments.

Highlight of the banquet will be the presentation of keys to the senior members of the society. Plans are also under way to secure a guest speaker for the evening. No definite plans have been made, but a prominent Philadelphia mathematician is expected.

President Talks On V-1 Program

To Explain Plan to School Officials in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, and Baltimore

In a series of talks in key cities, Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, as an official representative of the Navy Department, will explain the V-1 Naval program for college freshmen and sophomores between the ages of 17 and 19 to other college authorities.

College and university officials from the District of Columbia, Delaware, and Maryland will hear the president at the Lord Baltimore Hotel in Baltimore, Md., on April 9.

To Speak in Philadelphia

In the Benjamin Franklin Hotel, Philadelphia, on April 10, Fr. Stanford will address representatives of schools from New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania; on April 11 he will speak in Pittsburgh's William Penn Hotel to officers of colleges and universities of Western Pennsylvania and Ohio.

At the meetings in Baltimore, Philadelphia, and Pittsburgh, Fr. Stanford will be assisted by Lieutenant Commander Burton Davis, U. S. N.

On last Friday night, Fr. Stanford addressed members of the Rochester Club of The Alumni Association at the University Club.

On Saturday and Sunday he attended meetings of the National Commission on Church Related Colleges, of which he is a past president, at the Hotel Stevens in Chicago.

Roberts To Address Government Students On Washington Trip

Harold F. Hartman, Ph. D., assistant professor of social sciences, announced today that Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts would address the fifth annual trip of American Government students to Washington early this April.

The trips conducted by Dr. Hartman are designed to enable students of government to observe the fundamental processes of government, namely executive, legislative and judicial. Through these trips, the students may see in operation those departments of the government about which they study.

Justice Roberts, who will speak to the group this year, received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from Villanova during last year's commencement exercises. One of the two justices to be appointed prior to the first term of President Roosevelt, he was in the nation's headlines recently for the commission he headed to investigate the Pearl Harbor incident. Following his address which will explain the intracacies of Supreme Court procedure, the group will attend a session of the high tribunal.

Other arrangements are being made by Dr. Hartman to observe independent committees including the Federal Trade Commission and Interstate Commerce Commission in session.

Science Speaker

Stresses Need for Frequent Sign of the Cross During Present World Crisis.

Commander Campbell, a veteran of forty-one years' active service on the submarines of the United States Navy, was the featured speaker at the science seminar last Thursday.

Commenting on the war, Commander Campbell recalled the talk on the Sign of the Cross which he gave last year, before America had been thrown into the present world-wide conflict. At that time, he stressed its need in public as well as in the churches.

The commander stated that in view of the present crisis the devotion is needed more today than ever before.

He also read a paper written by his son, a cadet at West Point. The paper, which was printed in a national magazine, was entitled "Past, Present, and Future."

Thornhill Out For Prom; April 24 Is New Date!

Chairman Walsh Announces Leader's Breach of Contract; Lack of Suitable Bands Forces Date Change; Dinner-Dance Site Remains the Same

By WARD C. GUNCHEON

Chairman James J. Walsh of the Junior Prom committee officially announced last night that Claude Thornhill will not play for the Junior Prom. The chairman also stated that the prom date had been changed from May 1 to April 24.

In conjunction with this announcement, John J. Quinn and Joseph A. Hagerty, co-chairmen of the junior dinner-dance, also released a statement that the dinner-dance has likewise been moved up a week to April 25, the site of the dance to remain the Merion Golf Club. Although all arrangements had been made for May 2, the committee was able to make the necessary changes.

In commenting on the announcement, Walsh stated, "We regret to say that Thornhill has breached his contract and it will be impossible for him to play for the prom on April 24. No orchestras are available for the originally scheduled date of the prom, May 1."

At the present time, the prom committee is making arrangements for a suitable orchestra for the new date. Hampered by the brief time remaining, the committee is sparing no effort in obtaining a band. No definite statement can be made at this time but the name of the new orchestra will be released early next week.

Hindered By War Conditions

Shortly after the announcement of the signing of Thornhill for the prom in the VILLANOVAN, Walsh was notified that Thornhill had refused to fulfill the contract because of another engagement. Immediately other bands were contacted. Due to the present "war emergency," orchestra bookings have been extremely curtailed. Usually able to obtain buses for their road trips, band leaders now find that government restrictions have eliminated this means of transportation.

For this reason, bookings are grouped in one section of the country. Bids submitted are not acted upon until a sufficient number have been received for "road dates". After they are received, the bands' agents select those which demand the least amount of travelling expense. Consequently, those submitting bids which are not accepted are found without a band. Such has been the case with committee.

James P. Nunemaker, chairman of the sponsors and patrons committee, has requested students to obtain patron and sponsor fees during the Easter holiday and to make returns to his committee immediately following their return.

Morehouse Lists Five New Courses

To Teach Elementary Engineering in High Schools and Defense Plants

J. Stanley Morehouse, Dean of the engineering school, today announced a proposed plan to teach Elements of Engineering to students of West Catholic Girls' High School and Hallahan Girls' High School. Right Rev. John J. Bonner, Superintendent of Diocesan Schools in Philadelphia, is investigating the desirability of such a plan.

The General Electric Company has requested the Villanova College Engineering Department to teach engineering to their women employees. Plans for this course have not yet been formulated.

Await U. S. Approval

Dean Morehouse is awaiting approval from the United States Department of Education in Washington of his plan to open courses in Elementary Engineering on July 7, 8, and 9, at Villanova College, Northeast Catholic High School and West Catholic High School.

If registration warrants, these courses will also be taught at Norristown High School and West Chester High School.

A course in Elementary Surveying has been added to the already announced lecture courses: Junior Engineering 1-B, Mechanisms and Elementary Machine Design, and Metallurgy. Classes are scheduled to begin April 13, at Villanova College, and at West Catholic and Northeast Catholic High Schools.

New Classes on March 19

Plans for teaching Marine Heating and Air Conditioning at Cramp Shipbuilding and Drydock Corporation have been realized with commencement of classes at the shipyard on March 19.

During the past two weeks, two engineering professors spoke to students in Philadelphia Catholic high schools.

Dean Morehouse spoke at the Annual Career Day Exercises of West Catholic High School for Boys. His topic was "Mechanical Engineering As a Career."

John Gallen, a member of the engineering faculty, spoke on "Engineering As a Career," before the students of Roman Catholic High School.

Son Of Erin

Sure an' the luck of the Irish is hard to believe! But if you're in doubt ask Joseph Patrick McEvoy.

McEvoy, a junior accounting major in the commerce school, had his troubles with the recent draft lottery. He was born on Dec. 28, 1921; just three days too late to avoid the draft regulations.

With St. Patrick's Day set as the date of the lottery, McEvoy was supremely confident but the following day he turned red as his hair upon finding his serial number thirty-fifth in the nation and ninth in his local district.

But with the persistence of an Irishman, McEvoy entered the Marine Reserves and will probably finish college anyway.

Dinner Planned By Honorary Fraternity

On April 9, Chi Epsilon Mu, honorary engineering fraternity, will hold its annual dinner in the Haverford Court Hotel, the society's president, Vincent J. Gordon announced today.

It was also announced by John J. Madison, secretary, that eighteen junior and senior engineers have been admitted as new members. They include the following seniors: Charles Dengler, George Gabuzda, Edmund Hagan, Bernard Kelley, Arthur Koerner, Henry Martinez, Charles Schaumann, and Thomas Shallow.

Members of the junior class who have been admitted are: George Baird, Herman Behnke, Malachy Boyle, Joseph Conway, James Donnelly, Robert Koob, Edward Manderfield, W. J. Myers, W. Rodgers, and James Shelley.

The above candidates, who were selected on the basis of their scholastic standing and extra-curricular activities, are invited to the dinner as are the members of the engineering faculty.

Arrangements are being made to obtain a guest speaker for the dinner, at which fraternity keys will be distributed to the members.

Student Prayer—1942

LORD, Who bore the weight of our sins along the stony way to Calvary; Who suffered lashes and thorns for our great crimes; Who hung bleeding on a gibbet in payment for our faults; Who thirsted, prayed, and died for our wrongs; Who, under an arm of an aggressor state and at the hands of hard-hearted peoples, was insulted and spat upon; Lord, save us or we perish.

The evils which now encompass us are our own. We have hated even as our fathers have hated. We have nurtured Mars, have granted license to the sinful man, have closed our eyes to the works of Satan, ridiculing the while all attempts of the virtuous to do Thy Will. But "If Thou, O Lord, wilt mark iniquities, Lord who shall stand it?"

During the past year Thou hast seen fit to send Thy Angel of Death into our own Nation, our own School. In the year to come it is plausible that more of us will die. And if we are to die, Lord, to whom can we fly to safety, save Thou? Take our spirits into Thy house, where strength is not right, where justice is born, where purity is respected.

In Thee, then, we fear not death. What do we ask of Thee, this fear being gone? Lord, we ask strength, so that the weakness of our faith may turn to steel. We ask Hope, in Thy promises, in Thy justice, in Thy love. And, Lord, what we lack sorely, we ask Charity; Charity, that we may pray for the souls and the spiritual welfare of our enemies, thus reiterating Thy dying prayer, "Forgive them, Father, for they know not what they do." We ask it so that we may have love for our brethren at home and in other lands. We ask it that, the war being done, we may speak of peace only while considering Thy great love for all men.

Finally, we make pleas for the spiritual and physical safety of our men in arms, all who defend us, we ask Thee to bless our friends and our foes. Let the radiance of Thy unbounded love be felt over the whole world. Let us suffer, Lord, in expiation of our crimes, but even as Thou arose on the first glorious Easter, let us finally lift ourselves from the chaotic whirlpool in which we now labor.

The Flying Wedge

THE busiest place on the Campus is undoubtedly the Cafeteria. Three times a day and seven days a week the resident students file along the counters for their meals.

At 11:30 and again at 4:30 the students gather in front of the Cafeteria door waiting for the time to open. There is a session of loud talking and "fooling around." When the door is opened there is a rush something like the old flying wedge play. Everybody tries to get silverware and a tray at the same time. Once they get everything they dash on.

The general procedure is that found in most cafeterias, but the special emphasis the Villanova students put on it makes it unbecoming. This is unnecessary and unwanted.

When you go to a football or baseball game and have to line up to buy your ticket you don't rush up to the front of the line and elbow your way into the line. No, you wait your turn by starting at the end of the line, because you know that if you did the former the officer in charge would soon set you right.

Waiting in line to eat is no different. When you get into the line get in at the end as you are supposed to do. Treat others as you would have them treat you, and act the gentleman here as you would any place else. If you think it doesn't make any difference just as long as you act like a gentleman outside of school, you are wrong!

Wrong for a number of reasons but it will suffice to say what every coach tells his team. "Do it right in practice because what you do in practice you will do in the game."

Wake Up!

THAT the United States has never lost a war is a fact which is perhaps responsible for the false confidence which has infected the American people. The invincibility of the Army, Navy, and Marines is taken for granted with no thought given to the enemy's power and strength. Americans are taking this war as just another event in the daily newspapers.

Regardless of our dislike for our enemies we cannot disregard their methods of war. Complete cooperation—although forced—is perhaps their secret of success.

Take a look at yourself Mr. American! Do you cooperate? Or are you continually saying "Let George do it"? Are you one of those who continually disregard and continually damn every act of the government?

George can conserve sugar — but you've got enough hoarded for years. George can save his tires but you know where you can buy bootleg tires. George can buy bonds but you have to satisfy your selfish interests with those high wages you're making. War or no war you will live your life as you want to, thinking of your rights, never of your duties.

Wake up Mr. American! This is no time for petty arguments or selfishness. Now is the time to prove the worth of that democracy which heretofore was only mentioned on Washington's birthday!

Here's your chance to prove your boast that "democracy will not perish from this earth." Hitler has boasted that democracy was unworkable and would cause its own defeat!

That's a challenge not to the Army, Navy, or Marines, but to you. George can't do it alone and you can't ride along as excess baggage.

Wake up Mr. American! You've got a job!

FACULTY COMMENTS

A History Of The U. S. Marine Corps

IN World War I, the first Marine organization to leave the United States was the Fifth Regiment. This Regiment and the Sixth Regiment that followed immediately afterward landed in France in early July, 1917. In September of that year the Second Division was formed as a tactical unit. The Fifth and Sixth Regiments of Marines formed the Marine Brigade of this division. The First Division, known as Pershing's division, and the Second Division were the only two divisions of the A. E. F. made up of men of the regular service — officers and men who were veteran fighters.

The Second Division, of which the Marine Brigade was a part, was commanded by Brigadier General James J. Harbord. This unit went through a period of intensive training on French soil during the winter of 1917-18. As many will recall, General Ludendorff's drive started in the middle of March, 1918, and drove the Allies back until the Germany Army was virtually on the outskirts of Paris. The Allied position gave way all the way from the border of Switzerland to the North Sea, causing General Sir Douglas Haig, British commander, to write his historic plea, "Our back is to the wall."

Germans Launch Drive

On May 27 the Germans launched a final drive intended to reach Paris, which city was already evacuated by the French Government. Day after day the drive progressed. The Germans crossed the Vesle River and were closing in on Chateau-Thierry, just an even score miles from Paris. French and British reserves were exhausted. The only remaining fresh troops were several American divisions considered too inexperienced for front-line work. However, the emergency demanded that they be thrown into the breach.

One of these was the Second Division, whose infantry units were made up of the Ninth and Twenty-third Regular Army Regiments and the Fifth and Sixth Marines. On May 30 this division was ordered to proceed by truck and train to Meaux, on the Paris-Metz highway about halfway between Chateau-Thierry and the French Capital, to assist the French in forming a new line.

Belleau Wood

When this line was completed, the Fifth and Sixth Marines were deployed to the south over a woody and rocky area known as Belleau Wood — a name that was to occupy newspaper space of that day as did the name of Wake Island recently. This particular woody and stone-covered terrain was a vital point desired very much by the Germans if further advance along the road to Paris was to be successful.

Advance units of German troops that pursued the retreating French reported back that this area was occupied by a green American division untried in battle. The German High Command expected little or no trouble from this inexperienced force of American soldiers. As a matter of record, officers of the retreating French made no effort to conceal their opinion that American plans for last-ditch resistance were foolhardy.

A Classic Remark

Suggestions were made to the American forces to join in the retreat. To one of these suggestions was brought another classic remark for which Americans are famous. This one was uttered by Captain Lloyd Williams of the U. S. Marine Corps: "Retreat hell! We just got here!"

When the advancing German units came in contact with the marine lines, they encountered something new in Europe's wars — the marine and his rifle. The armies of Europe did not put much stress on individual marksmanship with the rifle. The soldier over there was trained to fire at an aiming point. Beyond two or three hundred yards one was safer than he would be riding along the average American highway.

Systematic Training

But the marine by systematic rifle practice would feel disgraced if he couldn't hit a target as large as a man three-out-of-three at a distance up to three hundred yards, while at a distance of five to six hundred years he knows he can hit a similar target three-times-out-of-five.

This is a part of his training and he knows that if he doesn't hit what he is aiming at and hit it effectively, he is not going to get a second shot until perhaps it is too late.

Then again, each marine is given one hundred and twenty rounds of ammunition when the attack begins and he is taught to realize that every shot counts. There are no caddies trailing along with an extra supply once your allotment runs out. Hence, he tries to make every shot ring the bell.

Shock for Germans

When the Germans learned that they could not effect exposed movements of troops within a six hundred yard distance, they experienced a great and disagreeable shock. It was this effective rifle fire on the part of the Marines that earned for them the name "devil dogs." But the greatest surprise of all was the fact that the Marines had no intention of just defending

Campus Capers

By Ed Bennis

THAT dreamy part of the year — Spring — made a perfect three-point landing on the campus last week and was welcomed with open arms. The more ambitious lads are again taking up the national pastime of baseball, while the "spring fever boys" are lying about the campus wishing they had a low-slung convertible — with tires — and a cute damsel to go with it.

Jumbo should find his hikes becoming more popular now that the warm weather is here. Of course, he'll have to contend with those who will go as far as Rosemont and then want to spend the rest of the afternoon chatting with the girls.

"Panama" Bradley is still looking for a girl after being here for two years — he swears he won't give up looking. "Wild Bill" Prohovich has been sporting about these parts with a cute lassie named Mary Ford, although since spring practice she has been a little lonely. At certain times Frank "Long" Bagot has the rather peculiar habit of throwing glass objects — he'll make a good hand-grenade man in the army.

Engineer Phil Celluci forgets his calculus and math long enough each morning to try to make the acquaintance of Valerie, a Bell Telephone belle, who rides the bus with him. Poor lad, his intentions with Nancy were frustrated upon finding a "sparkler" on her third finger, left hand. Wonder what Buzzy Powers and Jack Coleman have in common — could it be a liking for Jo?

CAPSULES:

Mike O'Connor and Joe McCarthy are giving two fair damsels from Ardmore a good deal of attention. Bill Cabrera, Enrico Pias, and Harv Satenstein were noticed at a local rendezvous with the star and two of her Chestnut Hill colleagues after a recent Spanish play rehearsal. Art Sheehan is taking the merchant marine in a serious vein — he journeyed to N. Y. the other week-end to take a medical exam for it.

Bob White is proudly displaying a pair of blue knitted socks which Dale made for him with her own little hands. At first the lads thought that Frank Reese was worried about the draft. However, it can now be revealed that Dot's appendectomy was the cause of his great anxiety — he was getting gray from worry.

MOONGLOW:

Jim "Birdlegs" Halpin has been taking his own private hikes with his little lassie from Rosemont — that's his idea of helping the "Hale America" program. Now that baseball is back, Art Koerner is afraid to hit a homer because of what happened last season — ask him, he'll relate the amusing details. There is a certain Temple doll who has been sending Angelo Macchia cute little dolls — and it isn't his sister.

Ed Kasky was spotted wearing a marine's coat around Fedigan the other night. The big boy is getting in practice for his stay at Quantico and he certainly looked smooth in it. Bill Schubert dropped over to Rosemont recently and made a special request for "two beautiful girls" — maybe he can afford to be particular in these times.

George Finley has been busy every other Wednesday lately — he spends the time helping his "one-and-only" play nursemaid in Drexel Hill. "Lover" Rampo has been taking a great interest in the symphonic band rehearsals — a pretty young thing has caught his eye and won't let it go.

TIPS:

Paul Hinski has been looking for tea kettles in a steam table — if nobody else understands that statement, the engineers will interpret it. Wonder if Tom Doyle found what he was looking for in Conshohocken the other Friday. Rumor has it that she was nice — we only hope that she was small. Ted Bicky went home last week to make a last ditch stand with his draft board.

Meet The Boys: For Jim McElligot the Navy's Next; Walt Fox Copy Edits the Belle Air Text

By JIM McWILLIAMS

OUR two introducees of today appear to have a great deal in common. Both are commerce and finance seniors, both are third floor residents of Fedigan Hall, both are listed on the honor rolls of their class, and both will be looked for by Uncle Sam come graduation time.

The first, James P. McElligott, known as Jim, hereabouts, came into this world amid all the hustle and bustle of a thriving up-state Pennsylvania coal-mining town — Ashley, by name — on the third of August, 1920.

After a period of recuperation lasting about six years spent in this town (which is always described as being near some other village), young Jim armed himself with a brand new copybook, a sharply-pointed pencil, and a six-inch ruler, and headed off to St. Leo's Parochial School. Here he soon filled his book, not only with knowledge, but also a number of noteworthy distinctions, chief among which was his remarkably high average at graduation.

Contest Winner

From grammar school, Jim moved over to the other room of the educational edifice which housed St. Leo's High School. He soon adjusted himself to this newly-found environment, and grabbed off more honors by maintaining another exceptionally high average through his four years. In his junior year, he was awarded first prize in a state-wide "Constitutional Essay," contest, and the following year he was offered a scholarship to Penn State College, to which he just smiled and said, "No, thanks."

In September of 1938, Jim went over the border to study engineering at St. Michael's College of the University of Toronto, Canada. But a year later when the smouldering international situation exploded into a new war, Mac returned home, and on the advice of a few Wildcat alumni members, he decided to enroll in Villanova's commerce and finance school. Continuing his scholastic record of previous years, Jim has always been listed among the top honor men of his class since maltriculation.

In "Who's Who"

In September of this year, Jim was accorded a rare privilege. He was classed as an outstanding college man, and his name went into the 1941-1942 edition of "Who's Who Among College Students." For this honor, he received a gold key with his name inscribed.

Last year, Jim served on the Junior Prom Committee and this year he is the business school's fraternity representative on Student Council. Jim, whose athletic endeavors have been equally as successful as his scholastic attempts, is now warming up for what he expects to be his best baseball season with the "firemen" of Fedigan. To show that he is not a one sport man, Jim points with slight pride to his shining record as a rugby player while at Toronto U.

Destined for Navy

When Mac enrolled in the C. & F. school, he had the very best intentions of attending either Dickinson or the University of Pennsylvania Law School after graduation, but during the intervening years a few obstacles have arisen, namely, the war, and an up-and-coming draft number. So after carefully weighing all the facts, Jim decided upon a compromise — in favor of the Navy.

He has enlisted in the Navy's V-7 program, and expects to be commissioned as a deck officer sometime after June. Although he took a course in Citizen's Military Training and spent a summer at Fort Meade, Md., he has concluded that he would rather "enjoy" travelling over the deep blue.

He Loves Them All

Speaking of his ramblings among society, Jim states, "I am no more a lover than anyone else around here," which is a pretty broad statement no matter how you look at it. After a few attempts by his roommate to give a complete expose of the "Loves of McElligott," Jim shouted him down and summarized his feelings, "I wouldn't care to state my preference of one girl over another. They're all a nice bunch."

ABOUT the best phrase to use in describing the second victim of our biographical atrocities would be, "Soldier of Fortune." Walt Fox has crossed the Atlantic Ocean sixteen times, has cruised down to the Canal Zone, and is now completing a C. A. A. flying course.

Villanova's edition of "Captain Easy," Walter J. Fox, began his adventuresome life on November 2, 1918, in the very lair of adventure — Brooklyn. After eleven years during which Walt led a rather normal life (an outstanding rarity among Brooklynites), he changed his residence to a slightly less thriving city in Long Island, Farmingdale.

Here he completed his grammar school education which he had started in Our Lady of Angels, Brooklyn, and then entered Farmingdale High. Walt was a regular member of his high school's honor roll. He also served on the yearbook staff and played on the school baseball and tennis team.

Golf Titlist

After his graduation, Walt started to look around for a business school. He turned to Villanova where he enrolled in the C. & F. school, taking a major in finance.

For three summers, when not defending his title as the top amateur golfer of Farmingdale, Walt served as cabin boy on an ocean liner to Europe. During this time he made eight round trips between this country and England.

In the summer of 1940, Walt changed directions and headed south on a cruise to California via the Panama Canal. This trip, he confesses, was better than all the European voyages together, especially when he reached California.

It seems strange that a person from Brooklyn would have a flair for travel, insofar as those inhabitants usually prefer to remain on their native street, but Walt explains this by saying that he left the borough too early to appreciate its true merits. But Walt's wrath will rise and he will immediately look disdainfully on any person who does not share his views that the Dodgers are the best team in either league, regardless of who wins.

Copy Edits Belle Air

Since coming to Villanova, Walt has followed up his high school yearbook training and has served four years on the copy staff of the Belle Air, this year being appointed Copy Editor of the annual senior publication.

Because of the war, Walt has had to forego his former plans of entering the steamship business, and he is now finishing a Civil Aeronautics Authority course in order to receive a commission in the Army Air Corps after graduation.

Walt, like his Fediganite cohort, was very vague in his description of any extra-extra-curricular activities. He thought it sufficient to say that he doesn't know very much about the inhabitants of the surrounding campi, because a certain party in National Park College, Washington, D. C., has a priority on a great deal of his time.

A Scientist Who Gathers Fame Is Oft Unworthy Of The Name

By THOMAS P. McFARLAND

Men there are, whom, charmed I ween,
The satirists' pens have ever missed,
But never free from scorn has been
An erring scientist.

Left well alone with weights and scales
And blood and bugs and bones —
If right; but, erring, never free
From cynics' sticks and stones.

The, men who see quite readily,
In any of life's vocations
Respected are, and never scarred
By caustic explications.

So scientists, like "golden lads and girls
And chimney-sweepers" get
The error bird, a minor third
From Bronx, or far worse yet,
A snigger or a loud guffaw,
The leather medal of the fool,
The casual dig by the columnist,
Or the dunce's cap and stool.

Needless to remark, some scientists
Are often very wrong;
But why the—(horrid, horrid word)
The long and loud sing-song?

Now take a man like — no, it's best
Not to mention names;
But there's a chap's in Wisdom's lap,
Unscorched by error's flames.

He studied for a generation,
(As all good savants must),
And learned where atoms go and why,
And learned it well, I trust.

And what did knowledge get him, pal,
The wolf from's door to beat?
Fifteen soiled bucks a month
And all that he can eat.

Another, who is quite unschooled,
Unskilled, unknowing, dumb,
Five thousand per, not year, but week;
For what? — He's just a bum.

He measures liquids all day long
By photographed moniscus;
But his field of vision lies behind
His rose-red probiscus.

"All stuff is stuff and merely stuff,"
He protests earnestly,
"And never the stuff shall meet," he shouts,
"And that's how it MUST be."

Such sounding chaps the public fool,
And defamate the men
Whose knowledge does not deify
This flimsy world of ken.

The noble sort of scientist
Teaches man to pray;
Teaches the blind-man how to read,
The dreamer to count his pay.

The other sort has baser work;
He teaches the higher greed,
And the lower, to him a worthless hulk
He teaches how to need.

Critics, you must not note the latter;
He isn't science; he doesn't matter.

The Trading Post

By Lou Esposito

IT'S not what it used to be, is what the students are saying when speaking of Easter vacation. In the past, the Easter holidays were something to look forward to, but now with the accelerated program and what not, it's nothing more than a prolonged week-end; which provides for most students about enough time to get home, kiss the folks, take a bath, shave and keep a heavy date. Well, what more do they want?

Fair Exchange:

From the "St. Bona Venture" we quote a little story about a judge and "thug." Evidently the judge was a collegian himself once upon a time.

Judge: "So they caught you with this bundle of silverware. Whom did you rob?"

Thug: "Two fraternity houses."

Judge: "Call up the downtown hotels, Sergeant, and distribute this stuff."

Fooled You:

And from the Moravian College "Comedian" . . .

He: "Come on."
She: "No."
He: "Why not?"
She: "Just because."
He: "You don't love me anymore."
She: "It isn't that."
He: "Please, just this once."
She: "No."
He: "Aw, shucks, Maw, all the boys are going barefooted."

Sharp Card Game:

"Ah wins."
"What yuh got?"
"Three Aces."
"No yuh don't. Ah does."
"What yuh got?"
"Two eights and a razor."
"Yuh sho do. How cum yuh so lucky?"

—Michigan Tech "Lode."

We give credit to the "Cadet" for this bit of literature . . .

Breathes there a man with soul so dead
Who never climbed into a short sheeted bed,
Had his shirt tied up by a stump-headed cuss
And went softly to bed with nary a fuss.
If there breathes such a man, he is surely a nut
His heart all aflutter and his brains in a rut,
He takes all these jokes with a good-natured grin
And floors the darn prankster with a right to the chin.

Information, Please:

Don't blame me . . . it's from the Dakota "Scientist" and sounds too fishy . . .

Teacher: Who can tell me what the former ruler of Russia was called?

Class: Czar.

Teacher: Correct, and what was his wife called?

Class: Czarina.

Teacher: Correct, and what were the Czar's children called?

A pause, and a timid voice piped up: Czardines!

Etiquette Aid:

A helpful hint from the Duquesne "Duke" . . .

I eat my peas with honey;
I've done it all my life.
They do taste kind of funny,
But it keeps them on the knife.

To whom it pertains . . . it's purely coincidental.

You've all heard of the sailor who takes a boat ride on his leave, the mailman who takes a walk on his day off, and of course, you've heard of the college student who spends his summer loafing.

Hard to Find:

Two little urchins stood with their noses pressed against a barber shop window watching the white coated attendants perform their mysterious rites.

"Gee, Mickey, look at 'im," said one, pointing to a barber wielding a singeing taper. "He's looking for 'em with a light."

Learning Announcing Technique

Members of the Radio Club are shown recording their voices on the portable recording unit of the newly formed organization. Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A., is operating the instrument. Following the recording, the records were played back and faults in presentation were criticized.

Recording Replays None Too Suave, But Radio Group Hopes For Best

John Facenda smiled suavely and handed the boys their scripts, suavely.

"Put something into it," he said, suavely. "Don't just read words."

The boys just read words.

"Not so good," he said, suavely. "Put something into it."

The boys put something into it that is unprintable.

"No good" — suavely — "Try it again."

The boys handled it a trifle better this time until Frank Buckley put a "fluff" on the punch line of the commercial. John Facenda very nearly died, suavely, of course.

Again Suavely

"No, no! Again! (impatiently) — please." — (suavely). Buckley said "mea culpa" and then he and the boys did justice to the script.

"Fine work," J. F. said, more than suavely, "the best you've done yet. We'll cut this play Wednesday so that both you and I can get a rough idea how you sound. Is that all right?" (to Fr. Vrana). "All right, then, Wednesday it is."

On Wednesday, long and arduously did Fr. Vrana coax the recording equipment to function and the actors to perform. The resulting records were good.

Chris Kiefer, acting the part of a scared passenger of an airliner whose fright leads him to think of life insurance (which, in turn, reminds you to buy some), was terrific!

Hamlet, No Less!

Joe McCabe read the pilot's part as if he were playing Hamlet. "Fasten your safety straps, please," took a new tone, a new meaning — "ham-my," but new.

One lad had a frog in his throat and his agony was terrible. We watched him squirm in his hopeless attempt to cough inaudibly. The recording augmented the tonal distortion and ruined an otherwise good performance. He is the only one with an alibi, however.

The last line of the sketch, when the frightened passenger has determined to build up his insurance so that he will not be prone to worry, ended, ". . . no matter where I am or what happens." You've guessed it. The line came out, ". . . . no matter what I am, etc."

Aside from the necessary errors, the beginnings of the new Radio Club have been ,and are, good. The technical staff is engaged in the purchase of the necessary materials to construct the transmitter; the script-writers have been given matter to work on; the sound effect men are breaking stuff, slamming doors, and rattling chains; the rest are watching and waiting for developments.

NFCCS Meeting Here April 11, 12

Philadelphia has been chosen as the site of this year's annual National Council Meeting of the National Federation of Catholic College Students to be held Saturday and Sunday, April 11 and 12. This was announced Sunday afternoon by Thomas Muraski, junior chemical engineer and president of the Philadelphia Region.

The National Council, composed of the National Officers and Chaplain, and two delegates from each Region, meets every year to plan the program for the following year and to iron out the present difficulties. The National Officers for the coming year are also elected at this meeting.

Although final plans have not been made, the different sessions will be held either at Rosemont or at Villanova. The delegates, who will come for the most part from Eastern and Mid-Western schools, will be a mixed group of men and women. The women will be housed overnight at Rosemont while the men will be housed at Villanova.

Marine Corps

their position and immediately attacked the Germans and drove them back steadily for a period of twenty days.

The victory at Belleau Wood, coming after weeks of retreat by the Allied Armies, created a sensation throughout the capitals of the world. Renewed hope was immediately produced and the great unanswered question up to this time was answered. The Americans proved that as fighters they were as good as the world produced. General Pershing called the battle of Belleau Wood "The Gettysburg of the World War."

New Rifle System

The U. S. Marine Corps was the first fighting unit of the world to assign a rifle to each man and make him responsible for its every moment until he leaves the service. The custom in other fighting forces was to keep the rifle in a rack or an armory section of the encampment. When they were needed for drill, parade, review, or actual firing, it made no difference which rifle one took as one equipped oneself for the task at hand. All rifles were supposed to be interchangeable and unchanging in their capacity to shoot.

This, however, is not true. A rifle must be studied and handled with precision on the rifle range to determine its ability to shoot at various distances. For instance, to shoot a mark at 300 yards requires the sight leaf to be elevated, everything else being equal, to the 300-yard mark on the gauge.

Individual Differences

However, after testing it out, one may learn for a 300 yard distance an elevation of only 260 yards is required on the gauge. This knowledge one enters in a note-book until it becomes second nature. And so it is for other distances — the proper elevation must be memorized until that rifle's use is absolutely automatic.

The Marine organization, while it has become stream-lined in all branches at the present time, nevertheless insists that every marine, including clerks, bakers, garage mechanics, and aviation personnel, be required to shoot the established rifle course. This includes slow and rapid fire at targets from two up to six hundred yards.

Because of its emphasis on individual shooting and the large proportion of long term soldiers in its ranks, the Marine Corps has been able to attain standards of uniform excellence in marksmanship and to establish records for rifle competition equaled by few military organizations in the world.

I. R. C. To Be Guest Of Chestnut Hill April 14

Discussion leaders of the International Relations Club, William E. Shubert, John P. Fullam and Gerard F. Belz, are preparing ten minute papers for the joint meeting with Chestnut Hill College Thursday evening, April 14.

Officers of both clubs have agreed upon "The Post War Period and Peace" as the topic of the discussion. Villanova representatives will devote their papers to the spiritual, political and economic phases of the topic.

Upon completion of the papers, they will be forwarded to Chestnut Hill in order that students there may coordinate their papers for a more complete discussion of the topic.

Beta Gamma Debates Penn In Radio Forum

Harry J. Binder and Wilfred Gagen, sophomore commercemen, represented Villanova's varsity debating society in a radio debate with the University of Pennsylvania over Station KYW last Saturday afternoon.

Upholding the affirmative of the question: "Should the government place a ceiling on all wages, prices, and rents?" the two men also took part in a general discussion following the formal debate.

On a trip to Dallas, Pa., on Friday evening Robert Young, sophomore commerceman, and Thomas J. McKimmey, senior education student, debated the negative of the question: "Resolved, That the federal government should regulate by law all labor unions," with a team from Misericordiae College.

Last Monday a team from Mt. St. Mary's College of Emmitsburg, Md., traveled to Villanova in a debate on the same topic.

The members of Beta Gamma are making arrangements to meet a team from Drexel Institute and also to attend the annual dinner sponsored by the Philadelphia Forensic League.

Folder Explains New Program

Changes planned by college authorities to meet the exigencies of war are listed in a pamphlet now being distributed entitled, "Wartime Changes at Villanova College."

Explaining primarily the accelerated program which will begin on June 8, the folder stresses the fact that the plan is entirely optional, and explains how a student may take either the three or four year course and still accomplish the same amount of work.

Under the heading of "Who Should Take the Accelerated Program," the plan is recommended to those who feel competent to do intensive work within a shorter period of time, in order to complete their college program before entering the armed forces.

The regular four-year plan is advised for those who feel that the intensive work would be too much of a strain or who rely upon summer employment to meet scholastic expenses.

The calendar for the terms under the new plan is listed, as are a statement of the manner of paying fees and expenses. The folder also includes a brief resume of the pre-military and physical fitness plans.

Management Group Told Of War Effect On Ship Production

Frank C. Pavelik, a representative of the Sun Shipbuilding Company, addressed the industrial management class, composed mainly of senior engineers, last Thursday in Simpson Hall, on the effect the war is having on the policy of Sun's shipyards.

Since the beginning of the present emergency, according to Mr. Pavelik, the number of men on the payroll of the company has expanded from 7,000 to 30,000, and the number of ways has been increased from 11 to 28. He also stated that the quota for the Sun Company alone is 50 ships a year.

Because of the youth and inexperience of the English seamen who ultimately will man the ships, he said, efficiency in their construction has been sacrificed for simplicity. To further this end, Scotch boilers and reciprocating engines are now being installed instead of complex turbines, electrogenerators, and Diesels. which are more difficult to operate.

Pavelik, a graduate of the Drexel Institute of Technology, also received his master's degree there. He has served fifteen years as an engineer at the Sun Shipbuilding company.

PKP Elections April 13

Election of officers for the next scholastic year for the Phi Kappa Pi, engineering fraternity, will be held Monday, April 13, Vincent J. Gordon, president of the organization, announced yesterday.

If all officers do not return for the summer semester, a president pro tempore will be elected.

At the nominations held yesterday, a total of thirty-four men were nominated for the six offices open. These men must be approved by college authorities before the actual voting.

Belz To Conduct EPT Frat Dinner

Senior Heads Appointments for Annual Affair; Nominations of Officers Made

Gerard F. Belz, senior artsman, has been chosen chairman of the committee in charge of the annual dinner of the Epsilon Phi Theta, arts and education fraternity, which will be held on April 16.

Belz' various campus activities include the presidency of the International Relations Club, and membership in Beta Gamma, debating society. A member of the Choral Society for three years, he was elected secretary treasurer in his junior year. Belz was also on the staff of the VILLANOVAN for four years and is at present a member of the staff of the Belle Air, yearbook.

E. P. T. Appointee

GERARD F. BELZ

The site for the dinner is still under consideration by the committee which includes the following four artsmen: Howard Mc Call, a senior; Thomas Devine, a junior, and John Deery and Joseph Carbine, sophomores.

Two education students, Thomas McKimmey, a senior and chairman of the Student Council, and Alexander Lukacs, a junior, complete the committee.

Nominations of officers for the next school year were made at a meeting of the fraternity on Wednesday. The names of the nominees have been submitted to the dean of the arts school, the chaplain, and the vice-president for approval.

Election of officers will take place at a meeting tomorrow at 1:00 P. M. in room 110, Mendel Hall.

merce school, and Peter Mattioli and William Theodosia, engineers.

Although no definite arrangements have been made as yet with the company which will supply the rings, negotiations are being made in an effort to secure the best possible contract.

A meeting of all sophomores interested in purchasing class rings will be held this afternoon in room 215 Mendel Hall, Sentner said. Final arrangements with the manufacturer will probably be made next week, he revealed, and orders for rings will be taken during the week after Easter.

At a meeting of the entire class last week, the sophomores voted to place the proceeds of the Sophomore Cotillion, held in October, into the Class Scholarship Fund. All money accruing to the class during their stay at Villanova will be placed in a fund to aid worthy students through college.

Essay Contest

Rev. John J. McShea, O. S. A., assistant professor of English, announced to all students last week, the opening of the annual competition for the Mercier-Newman Medal. The medal is awarded at graduation for the best essay on either an English or American Catholic author.

Regulations of the competition require that essays be 1000 words, typed, double-spaced, on plain white paper, with all references clearly noted. Essays must be finished and submitted to Fr. McShea by May 5, the final date for entries. All students are eligible for this contest.

Baseball Team Opens 73rd Season Saturday

I-M Softball Card Starts This Week

C. & F. Day Hop and Resident Leagues Fully Organized

By JACK KOVAL

Softball, the largest sport of the intramurals, will get under way this week with the four resident halls initiating the campaign. Last year the resident halls had a separate league and playoff of their own aside from the C. and F. and Mendel day hops. However, there is an added feature to the program this year.

This feature will be the interaction between the resident halls, C. and F. students, and Mendel day hops. That is, each team will have a league and schedule of their own, and at the termination of the season, the winners of the respective leagues will engage in a playoff. An intramural committee will work out a point system which shall be utilized in determining the playoff winner. The organization of a schedule for the C. & F. league is being done by Dave Reardon and Jack Dudley. The Mendel Day Students' league is being worked out by Vince Gordon and Bob Simpson. The respective schedules of each league will be soon released by these men.

Mendel Won Last Year

One particular point that is stressed in the softball program is that all C. & F. students are eligible for their teams, which will consist of five clubs; two from the freshman class and one from each of the upper classes, and that all Mendel day students are likewise eligible for their teams.

Last year the freshman halls controlled the leadership of the league. Mendel Hall, defending champs, beat Alumni in the playoffs. Both teams had good players and as a result of the importation of these freshmen to Austin hall, all indications seem to point to a powerful Austin aggregation. In the Firemen's lineup this year will be seen such men as Ken Breitzke, Tony Scallzetti, Bull Molnar and Tom McQuade.

Fedigan Strong

Wearing the maroon colors of the Fediganites this year will be a number of players who are likewise representing their hall in the hardball league. Among some of them will be Stan Kazior, John Cerulo, Mark Fitzgerald, Art Koerner, Dave Daly and Huck Matthews.

As usual the freshman halls are unknown qualities, and nothing can be said as to the potentialities of the individual teams. As far as the C. and F. and Mendal day hops leagues are concerned, the power seems to be predominant in the upuer classes, however, the sophmore and freshman classes will be superior to those of last year.

Following is the C. and F. schedule for the first week of April:

April

2—Soph. vs Frosh "B" . .1:00 P.M.
3—Juniors vs Frosh "A" 1:00 P.M.
6—Frosh "A" vs Frosh "B" 1 P..M
7—Seniors vs Juniors . .3:10 P.M.
8—Seniors vs Soph. . . . .2:30 P.M.

In all probability the games of the three leagues will be played on Mendel field. Four games wil be played at the same time. The rest of the schedule of the games will be released during the next week.

Navy Gets Alex Belli Ex-Wildcat Grid End

Alex Belli, end on the undefeated Wildcat grid team of 1937 joined the Navy last week to enter the physical training department under the direction of Lieut. Gene Tunney.

Belli had been varsity line coach for the past year-and-a-half at Loyola University at Los Angeles, Calif. He was also head baseball coach and chief scout for football coach Marty Brill.

The former Wildcat was well-liked at Loyola and his absence will be missed. While at Villanova he was looked upon as the most rugged wingman on the squad. His fine play was overshadowed only by the brilliance of Johnny Wysocki, All-American end.

SPORTORIAL

By JACQUES MAUCH, Sports Editor

Saturday afternoon Doc Jacobs lifts the curtain on his 1942 edition of the Villanova Wildcats baseballers. And the fans are in for a few big surprises.

Things looked black for the Doc at the beginning of the season. Everyone knows how both the draft and graduation luffed up the sails of Wildcat diamond hopes, but Doc didn't complain. The easy-going dutchman never says much. Even when he was given only a few weeks to whip his boys into shape for a quick but tough season his ruddy features didn't seem to darken the least bit.

Maybe he had something up his sleeve all the time. But we don't think so. There will be plenty of new names in the batting order, names that most of us never heard before. Don't let that fool you. the Doc is a great developer and he is developing this year like he never had to do in previous years.

Take the case of Jim Traitze for example. For two seasons Jim was out working hard as a first baseman. But having an initial sacker like Johnny Donohue in line ahead of you doesn't give you a chance to see much action. But Donohue and that long line of Wildcat first base stars Mahan, Etten, Bond, has declined, and Jim Traitze puts on the leather mitt and takes over the corner. Maybe he too, will leave his name up there with the rest of them.

Another surprise is the rise of slim, dark haired Bill Smith. Last year Bill was on the frosh pitching roster and this year reported in the same capacity. But Coach Jacobs had different ideas. Smith looked good at the plate so he soon found himself chasing fly balls. Saturday will find him holding down a regular outfield position.

Joe Coffee, freshman shortstop, by earning a starting berth has the distinction of being the first frosh athlete to compete on a varsity team since the first year rule was rescinded six weeks ago. We feel that Joe will receive other, more singular distinctions before the last ball is thrown in there this season. He's a smart ball player and has more than the Villanova infield in front of him.

There is a pair of first year pitchers who are expected to do heavy mound duty in the next month, Jim Burns and Gene Wienert. And another dependable pair of frosh, are the catchers Joe Mahalic and Frank Hughes, both strong backstoppers. They and Wienert hail from the same high school which doesn't even boast a baseball team. They received all their experience on the sandlots.

These boys along with a galaxy of sophomore diamond artists and several juniors makes class companionship for the senior members quite lonesome. The fourth year men Traitze, Joe Malone, and Chief Yednock may find themselves playing with a bunch of youngsters, but youngsters with plenty of fight and lots of hustle.

Doc will have his hands ful lmoulding this heterogeneous combine into a smooth working unit to pit against the oppositon, but he's done a grand job thus far and we think he will continue the fine work. He and his young bloods will make things tough for everyone they meet and we want them to know that we'll be in back of them all the way.

Guards, Tackles Hard Workers In Daily Scrimmages

With a change in weather this past week, spring practice sessions have been more extensive than in the past. In addition to the new system of seven-man football, coaches Smith and McNally have been stressing a great deal the work of the guards and tackles. The ends and backfield have also been going through a strenuous workout.

The seven-man games have brought out a great deal to the eyes of the coaches and will be continued throughout the coming season. This type of practice has enabled the coaches to better determine the ability of the players, which is not stressed in regular practice.

Last Friday the squad entered into another "all out" scrimmage and a number of good plays were brought out in the scrimmage. The elusive halfback, Joe Pezelski, playing in the left halfback slot, came through with a number of beautiful runs.

Two O'Connors Look Good

Strangely enough, two of the boys that have shown up well in the daily scrimmages are two tackles with the same name, O'Connor. They are no relation. Bob, a junior who saw quite a bit of action last fall, stood out all week through his fine offensive and defensive play. Mike O'Connor, sophomore, surprised with his sturdy defensive work. Friday, he broke up play after play that came through the side of the line.

Besides the possibility of a spring scrimmage with the U. S. Naval Academy, there is probability of a contest with Lehigh University.

Relay Team Third In Cleveland Run

The Villanova college mile relay team journeyed out to Cleveland, Ohio, last Friday night to display their wares before ten thousand fans who jammed the West Side Arena to witness the second annual running of the Knights of Columbus indoor games.

The blue and white baton carriers ran in the following order: John DiCarlo, Captain Bill Hooper, Bob O'Sullivan and Dixie Dunbar, as they placed a very good third to Ohio State and Notre Dame. Fordham University, the only other team in the race, was a poor fourth in the battle of champions.

Very Close Race

Ohio State led from the crack of the gun right up to the tape as her boys went all out to win in the new meet record time of 3:22 flat. Their time clipped five seconds off the old record which was held by Seton Hall College.

At the finish of the race, the judges had to bring the anchor men back to their positions in order to judge the winner. A blanket would have covered Hammond of Ohio, Roy of Notre Dame and the Wildcat anchor man, Dixie Dunbar, when they crossed the finish line.

Dodds Upset

This meet produced its share of upsets as was expected. One of the biggest upsets was the victory of Earl Mitchell of Indiana University over Gil Dodds in the mile run in the new meet record time of 4:10. Some of the more thrilling races were: Greg Rice's 8:55 in the two-mile run, John Boracan's 2:12 in the thousand-yard run, Seton Hall's 7:49 in the two-mile relay and big Al Blozis' fifty-five feet, seven inch, heave with the sixteen-pound shot.

The times turned in, while not fast in comparison with the clockings on the eastern tracks during the season, were very good in consideration of the West Arena boards. The track itself was fair but the turns were slow.

Blue Nine Faces Rider; Vermont, Penn Next Week

Newcomers Fill Lineup Containing Only One Senior — Will Be Severely Tested; Coach Jacobs Uncertain of Battery

By BILL WALSH

The long-awaited moment, when the spring athletic teams representing Villanova go into action, has finally arrived. Baseball, the most important of the spring sports, comes into its own this Saturday, as the Blue and White diamond forces face the first of three opponents which will be met in the space of five days. Opening with Rider College, of Trenton on Saturday, the Wildcats will follow by engaging the Vermont and the University of Pennsylvania nines on Monday and Wednesday, respectively.

Invading Villanova territory on April 4, Rider will be the first opponent on the Wildcat schedule, in this, their seventy-third season of collegiate baseball. Not too much is known concerning the abilities of the Rider club, but it is expected that this opening contest will be a close one. Last spring, Rider had an excellent team, and most of last year's lettermen are on hand for the present campaign.

Vermont, Villanova's opening opponent last spring, will again journey to the Main Line for a game with the Wildcats, on Monday. The Tigers were defeated in last year's engagement, as Connie Nicholas, ex-'42, limited the New Englanders to three hits while the Blue and White put the game on ice with a five run barrage in the fifth inning. The final score was 8-3 in favor of Villanova.

Penn Is Big Game

Hoping to turn the tables on Doc Jacobs' forces next Monday, Vermont comes down from the mountains with a strong aggregation. After their defeat in the opening contest last spring, they lost only two more games, and are out to avenge their opening defeat with a smashing victory over the 'Cats on the sixth. Losing only three of last year's nine by graduation, the Tigers will place an experienced team on the diamond to test Doc's neophytes.

Undoubtedly the most important of the three engagements is the one to be staged at Franklin Field, against Penn, on Wednesday, April 8, only two days after the Vermont tussle. The Wildcats trounced the Quakers last spring to the tune of 6-3, for their sixth consecutive win over the Red and Blue.

Hain, Powerful Hitter

Penn is weak in the catching department this spring; the Quakers lost the brilliant services of Frank Reagan. Reagan, whose fame was still greater as a halfback on the football eleven, hit .383 in the Eastern Intercollegiate League last season. He led in most hits with 18, in stolen bases with 16, and in total bases with 26.

The Herculean task of picking up where Reagan left off, falls on the broad shoulders of Gene Davis, captain of the '41 football eleven. He relieved Reagan behind the bat last season, and with a few games under his belt, should fill Frank's shoes well.

The outstanding member of the Penn aggregation this season is captain George Hain, who last year led the Eastern Intercollegiate League in batting, with a mark of .419. His timely hitting and bril-

'Cat Golfers Open With St. John's U.

Qualifying Rounds for Team Positions Postponed Until Two Days Before Match

Villanova opens its golf season Friday, April 10, in a match with St. John's of Brooklyn at the Pennsylvania Golf Club in Frazer, Pa. Last spring the Redmen were also the first opponents met by the Wildcats, and the Blue and White inaugurated what proved to be a very successful season, with a smashing 8-1 victory over the Brooklynites.

Although St. John's offered little opposition in both meetings last season, they are expected to be a lot tougher in this campaign, as they lost only one member of last spring's team by graduation, whereas Villanova was severely hit by the loss of four aces.

Two Returning Lettermen

The number one and two men of St. John's sextet will be Captain Joe Somolofski and Gene Frasca, respectively. The former played in the number two slot, last season, and, inasmuch as the number one man of last year has been graduated, he will move up a notch in the playing order. Gene Frasca won the only match against the Wildcats last season at Frazer, when he defeated Dave Morse, 4-3. Regardless of last minute changes, however, it is quite certain that Somolofski and Frasca will be the men met by Bill Walsh and Bob Casey.

There is little possibility that Walsh and Casey will not hold their respective one and two positions of last season. They are the only two returning varsity men, and unless their games completely collapse, the qualifying round should find them coming home in front of the field.

18-Hole Qualifying Round

These qualifying rounds which were originally scheduled for this week, have been postponed until after Easter, and instead of the usual two rounds, there will only be one. The postponement was necessary in view of the fact that the authorities at the Frazer course delayed the opening of the club by a week, because of the heavy rains this spring. Their request for a week's postponement was accepted and the new date scheduled is Wednesday, April 8.

Because this is only two days before the St. John's match, it was necessary to limit the qualifying to eighteen holes instead of the usual thirty-six. The team chosen Wednesday night will then play a practice round on Thursday in preparation for the match on Friday.

Change Of Coaches At High School Regular Villanova Alumni Gathering

Jordan Olivari, one of the outstanding tackles in Villanova football history, and member of the crack Wildcat grid teams of 1935, '36 and '37, was named the new head football coach at Roman Catholic High School last week.

Olivari succeeds Tommy Casper, another Wildcat star who is now in the Navy. The new mentor started his coaching career as assistant to Jules Prevost at Radnor the year after his graduation and the following season went to Paulsboro, N. J., high school. He was assistant for two years, and last season as head coach he led his team through an undefeated ten-game schedule.

Called Plays as Lineman

The remarkable thing about Olivari was that he was as brilliant a student as he was a tackle. He was a class leader for three years and barely missed winning the coveted Philosophy Medal. During his senior year he called the plays from his tackle position.

He will be assisted by Art Raimo, a former teammate who will tutor the backfield. Raimo, one of the lightest fullbacks to play in college ranks assumes the post left by Lindy Kolenda, another Clipper Smith protege of the 1940 grid season, who has entered the armed forces.

Raimo assisted Heinie Miller at St. Joseph's College before they abandoned football and since that time has been assistant at Ridley Township High.

Fedigan Beaten 11-1 By Austinites In Mural Opener

By JOE DALY

The intramural baseball schedule officially got under way last Wednesday with Austin and Fedigan providing the fireworks. It was a good close battle until the big bats of Austin began to boom, breaking a one to one deadlock and giving the Firemen an 11-1 victory.

Fedigan was the first to draw blood, when in the last half of the first stanza Tom Sheehy drew a walk, Dave Daly sacrificed him to second, and Stan Kazlor drove a hot liner down the third base line for a single, allowing the first tally to come in. Although George Fitzgerald followed with a walk, Al Lukacs, the winning hurler, stopped the rally by striking out Moore and forcing Cerulo to ground out to retire the side.

Austin came right back in the first half of the second to score twice when Bull Molnar worked Steve Aisenbray, Fedigan pitcher, for a walk and Big Tom Mcuade stepped into a three and two pitch to drive out the first home run of the year into left center driving in two runs.

Fourteen Strikeouts

As far as the Fedigan hopefuls were concerned the slants from the dependable arm of Al Lukacs were good enough for any league. His straight ball was coming in with a fast zip and he seemed to possess a curve that broke like a shooting star.

The Red Men were set down in order for four straight innings. Besides this feat Lukacs sent fourteen Fediganites walking back to the bench via the strikeout route while allowing only four hits, two of which were secured by Stan Kazior who is one of the best third sackers seen in intramural ball in quite some time. Stan is not only better than the average with the stick but is quite a fancy dan in his own way around the hot corner.

Jim Hobbs Gets Homer

In the meantime the Firemen were slowly but surely pushing themselves into a tremendous lead aided no little by the number of walks, thirteen in number, given up by Fedigan's moundsmen. After scoring twice in the second, they tallied once in the fourth and fifth, three times in the sixth and aided by Jim Hobbs' homer, the second for Austin, they were able to push across four more runs in the seventh frame. This brought their total up to eleven. The boys in blue did this on only nine hits.

The highlights of the game were the two homers which paved the way for an easy win for the Firemen along with the perfect day in the field for both clubs which is quite rare so early in the season when the boys are still tight.

The brilliant performance shown by Lukacs means that if he can keep up the good work Austin must be considered one of the outstanding contenders for the intramural flag this year.

If the boys can steal some of Florida's radiant sunshine this week the schedule will continue to get under way with Alumni and Mendel making their first appearance of the campaign on All Fools day. The following Wednesday Austin will again take the limelight when they meet the Greenies of Alumni.

Action in the opening game of the intramural baseball league between the arch rival upperclass dormitories Austin and Fedigan Halls. Seen in the picture are Whitey Kempf, Austin catcher, running to first after dribbling a slow grounder to short. Waiting to make the putout is Bob Moore, Fedigans first sacker, with George Fitzgerald, last year's all-league catcher coming up in the background.

liant fielding at shortstop, are one of the outstanding features of the Penn club.

Starting Battery Unnamed

As far as the pitching assignments are concerned in this contest, both are still question marks. Hugh Niklason is the only letterman among the hurlers to return for the Red and Blue, but Dr. Cariss, baseball mentor, has not said definitely who will handle the pitching assignment against Villanova.

His failure to name a starting pitcher was matched by Doc Jacobs, the reason being that the capabilities of the pitchers under fire can't be determined until a few games have been played. Doc failed to name a battery for the opening game with Rider, as he is still undecided which unit is the best choice for the initial contest.

He did, however, give the rest of the lineup for the Rider game, and five new faces will be seen on the field this year. The two remaining lettermen, Joe Yednock, captain elect this season and Roy Simonsen, a junior, are holding down the third base and left field assignments respectively.

Freshmen at Shortstop

Varsity Bowlers Lose First Match

Turning in a brilliant performance, the University of Pennsylvania bowling team defeated the Villanova keglers last Friday night in a contest staged at the Walnut Alleys in Philadelphia. This contest, between the two college outfits, was the first of several that are to be played by the Wildcats with other schools in the district. The reorganized bowling league, dropped last year after five years of competition, is composed of Villanova, Pennsylvania, Temple, La Salle, Drexel, Swarthmore, St. Joseph's and Haverford.

Representing the Blue and White on Friday night were: Bob Simpson, Bill McGrath, Bill Walsh, Angelo Rosa, Don Cryor, Joe Cahill and Bill Steiert. The highest individual score attained by a Wildcat was made by Angelo Rosa, who toppled the pins for a 191 score. Close behind him was his comrade, Bob Simpson, turning in a score of 190. Both men made these good tallies in their second game.

Leading in the Quakers' scoring column was "Ben" Frankel, who made the finest scores of both his squad and the Villanovans. They were 210, 192 and 190 for a sensational 197 average. Kolka was next to him with a creditable tally of 201 for a single high game.

The Wildcats will again oppose the Red and Blue, this time on their home alleys the week after Easter. This match will be held in Ardmore.

Junior M. E. And Frosh Deadlocked For Phi Kappa Pi Bowling Crown

Saturday afternoon, at the Ardmore Bowling Alleys, the Junior Mechanical Engineers tied up the Freshmen at twenty-two wins against ten losses for the P. K. P. bowling league. Previous to Saturday, neither of these teams had lost more than two games in any one match. This week, the Frosh lost four games to the Sophomore Chemicals who finally hit the comeback trail. The Juniors lost three and copped only one from the faculty to tie everything up.

The faculty, led by Father O'Donnell and Professor Le Tarte ,blasted the Junior Mechanicals' hope of taking undisputed possession of first place, while Jim Cahill led the Sophomore Chemicals to an overwhelming victory over the Freshmen.

The Junior Chemicals blasted the Senior Chemicals out of the running as they took four games, to move themselves up into undisputed possession of third place. The Senior Chemicals, until a week ago, were figured as contendors for the crown. By their loss they dropped into a four-way tie for sixth place.

Climax Match, the 11th

The final matches of the season will be rolled April eleventh. The Junior Mechanicals and the Freshmen will be battling for the crown. They are the only two teams in the picture. The Juniors will be paced by Bob Simpson and Don Cryor. The Frosh pinmen will be led by Angelo Rosa and Bill Steiert. They are four of the best bowlers in the school.

These two teams have been consistently powerful throughout the season. Comparative scores show next to nothing as both teams have mowed down their opponents with clock-like regularity. For the first three weeks of the season these two teams held down second and third place. The fourth week the Sophomore Chemicals began to fade and since then it has been a nip-and-tuck battle for first place.

Rosa Frosh Hope

Rosa, the hope of the Frosh, at this point has the top average in the league with 162. Simpson and Cryor of the Junior Mechanicals, hold down second and third place, respectively.

The Junior Chemicals will be endeavoring to hold onto their third-place spot, while the faculty and the Junior Mechanical Residents are fighting it out for fourth place. In sixth place there is a four-way tie with the Sophomore Day-Hops "A," Sophomore Chemicals, Senior Chemicals and Senior Mechanicals knotted np at sixteen wins against an equal number of losses. The Sophomore Day-Hops "B" are in the depths of last without a chance of coming out.

The winner of the match between the Freshmen and the Junior Mechanicals will be the recipient of the Charles Butera Trophy that was donated by the owner of the Ardmore Alleys. The trophy stands two feet high and will have the winners name engraved on it.

Klotz. Wood Selected To All-State Positions

A poll of Associated Press writers, basketball coaches, and officials placed Bill Wood, Villanova junior, at a forward spot on the All-State Basketball team. Reds Klotz, Wildcat guard, was named on the fourth team.

The Philadelphia area was well represented on the first three teams, St. Joseph's, Swarthmore, and Temple players also being mentioned.

I-M Track Entrants Urged To Report

All students who expect to participate in the intramural track meet are requested to report to coach Jim Elliott sometime this week at the fieldhouse. He can be found either in his office or in the training room.

The moderators urge the boys to report immediately, and begin practice. As was previously stated, no one will be allowed to enter unless he has practiced at least the required number of times.

A definite date has not been set for the meet but it is expected to be held around the middle of the month.

Any desired information will be given by the moderators. Coaching will be given by Mr. Elliott. But cooperation must be shown on the part of the student, and he must practice faithfully or he will not be allowed to compete. This is a strenuous sport and time must be given to get into proper shape.

Three Relay Teams May Be Entered In Junior Nationals

With the advent of the spring cinder track campaign, the indoor season has been growing more intense and has built up to several anti-climaxes. The opening of the outdoor season is only some two weeks away, but coach Jumbo Elliott has decided to take another fling.

Having just returned from the Cleveland Knights' of Columbus Games, Elliott will attempt to enter his Wildcats in the Junior National Meet to be held at the Philadelphia Arena this Saturday night. The affair is being sponsored by the Middle Atlantic A. A. U. Association.

Three Relays in Action

Entries have been closed but it is expected that the Wildcat mentor will be able to enter his men. If he can, he will send three relay teams into action, his crack mile quartet, the two mile unit and a sprint medley.

The spacing of the events will determine who Jumbo will run and whether he will allow all three teams to compete for many of the men will have to double up.

The strength of the field will guide his selection of the mile team but in the event that the competition is keen, he will enter the speedy quartet of George Guida, Dixie Dunbar, Bob O'Sullivan, and John DiCarlo. Guida and DiCarlo will probably run on the sprint medley with Captain Bill Hooper, and either Dunbar or O'Sullivan.

Will Have to Double Up

Villanova's two mile club will be practically the same one that has competed in several of the big indoor meets this winter — Harry Keefrider, distance man of the past two seasons; Dutch McCarthy, Captain Hooper, and again, either Dunbar or O'Sullivan. These two sophomore middle distance stars will split the sprint medley and two mile duties.

Following this meet, the Wildcats will definitely close their indoor campaign. They will have about ten days in which to prepare for their first engagement outdoors. This will give the thinclads a very short time in which to get used to the cinders. However, they are in the peak of condition and should not find it too difficult.

WOOD PICKED

Bill Wood, stellar guard on the Wildcat basketball team this past season, was selected by the Philadelphia Daily News as one of the first team guards on their All-Philadelphia Team.

The other members were Angelo Musi, Temple set shot artist, Mendy Snyder, Musi's running mate on the Owl five, and the St. Joseph couple, George Senesky and Norm Butz, who made all the Philadelphia teams this season.

HERE AND THERE

By JACK DUDLEY

Those who know can tell you that there isn't a finer group of men than those who comprise the coaching body at Villanova. Besides being successful at their given trades, they have also been able to bridge the gap that so often exists between player and coach.

Step into the Pie Shop some day about one o'clock in the afternoon. Jumbo Elliott can usually be found there in conversation with a few of the boys telling them how to limber up that afternoon or what the Physical Fitness Program will take in the next day. Not long removed from the ranks of the players, Elliott is one of the most popular figures on the campus.

Al Severance will usually take his lunch there while he carries on a good argument with Paul, the college painter, or Tony, the custodian of the Field House. The fast talking court mentor is a good match at verbal gymnastics for any of the fellows that gather near the juke-box everyday. Always good for a statement for the press, Al is the joy of VILLANOVAN reporters. His record doesn't jive with the conservative predictions he makes.

Another frequenter of Louie's establishment is Doc Jacobs. Doc wouldn't enjoy his lunch unless he was surrounded by some lads with whom he could swap yarns.

Closer yet to the student body is young Tom Moore, most recent addition to the coaching staff. Graduating only last year, Tom now coaches the swimmers. Moore has not lost touch with those with whom he associated last year as a student. Lunch time means that Tom can be found at one of the livlier gatherings in the Pie Shop.

Every day you can observe the wholesome relationship that has grown up among students and coaches. And although in the past it was impossible for some of the fellows to ever come in contact with these men, they can do it now. Clipper Smith and Vince McNally, the nature of whose work kept them out of reach of most students in the past, are now actively engaged in helping to build the bodies of everyone on the campus.

The boys know they've been through a workout when the Clipper is through with them, but they like it. A lot of the fellows are wondering how Jim Elliott can look so fresh after those five-mile hikes.

The fellows formerly knew who their coaches were, and that's about all some of them did know about them. Now they're getting to know each other better than ever, and everybody is better off for it.

—V—

We recall two interesting yarns from here and there dealing with freak accidents in baseball. The first, from there, has to do with the amiable screwball of the New York Yankees, Vernon Lefty Gomez. Recognized as the least-feared hitter in baseball, Lefty, nevertheless, pictures himself as a potentially great slugger.

This ambition dates back to his days in the bush leagues. Always willing to pick up pointers from better hitters than himself, Lefty noticed most batters approaching the plate would knock the dirt from their cleats with the bat. That was good enough for Senor Gomez. Waiting for his next turn at the dish Lefty took a hefty cut at his shoes, and missed. Gomez was out for the rest of the season with a broken ankle.

Last year's practice session here provided a freak play that had the boys laughing a long time after. During an intra-squad game one of the players came through with a line drive hit, good enough for a single. The left fielder, playing deep, came over to his left to field the ball, but sprawled suddenly, the ball coming to rest inches away from his outstretched form. As though paralyzed he lay there while the center fielder came over to retrieve the ball and the batter raced around to third base.

Fearing the worst, Doc Jacobs and the rest of the squad hurried to the stricken fielder. All that ailed him was that he had put his foot through the fence and couldn't get it out.

DID YOU KNOW . . .

That Paul Stenn is not the biggest athlete in Villanova? Freshman tackle Bill Lillienthal scales 265 pounds in the off-season, while "The Bronc" goes a mere 255. Both men are noted for their agility despite their hugeness.

Radio Club Hears First Broadcast Recordings

Test recordings were made last Monday in Simpson Hall, of all the members of the Radio Club to determine those most suitable for positions as announcers, actors, etc. The recordings were then played back and were constructively criticised. Insufficient dramatic emphasis on words was the most apparent defect.

Last Wednesday the club met in room 104, Mendel Hall, at 12:30. The coach, John Facenda, spoke on the technique of radio announcing. He explained that every announcer has a moment of nervousness before each broadcast but that good announcers put this nervousness to good use by creating a dramatic atmosphere.

Facenda advised that when a mistake is made in pronunciation or in a sentence it is best to continue with the script and not go back and correct the mistake.

Township Disposal Plant Inspected By Engineers

Twelve members of the American Society of Civil Engineers visited the recently completed sewage disposal plant operating for Radnor and Haverford townships last Thursday as part of their industrial trip program.

The group was conducted through the plant by George Cedarlund, an employee of the company, who explained to them the new type settling tanks which resemble greenhouses in appearance.

According to Cedarlund, the plant is only working at sixty percent capacity, but within the next five years they expect to be providing sewage disposal for five counties. He also stated that the water which comes out of the plant after having been processed is fit for human consumption.

Cedarlund commented that due to the absence of hills in the vicinity, pumps are used throughout the entire system instead of the utilization of gravity accomplished at most disposal plants. He added that the by-product of the process is a high grade sludge fertilizer.

MARQUETTE UNIVERSITY

DENTISTRY IS NOT OVERCROWDED

Dentistry is the only profession that is decreasing in personnel.

More dentists are presently needed for the Army and Navy. More dentists are likewise needed for civilian service, since a greater proportion of the public is rapidly being educated to the importance of dental services.

Two years of pre-dental college studies are required for admission including: inorganic chemistry (8 sem. hrs.), organic chemistry (4 sem. hrs.), physics (8 sem. hrs.), and biology or zoology (8 sem. hrs.). No conditions on admission are allowed.

Pre-dental students who will qualify by June or by September are advised to apply for admission immediately. Freshmen will begin their dental studies in an accelerated program on September 25, 1942.

Seminar To Feature All Request Music

An all-request program, based on suggestions made at the last meeting, will be presented by Dr. Edward L. Haenisch tomorrow in the day hop music seminar to be held in the amphitheatre at 12:45 P. M.

Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A., announced that "Aida" would be presented tomorrow evening at 7:30 in Simpson Hall if he has the libretto slides prepared; otherwise, the program will feature operatic selections.

Last Wednesday's noon seminar featured recorded examples of final movements from the most popular violin concertos. On the program were Brahms', Beethoven's, Mendelssohn's, and Tschaikowski's. Dr. Haenisch chose Mendelssohn's as his favorite; the audience, however, seemed to prefer Tschaikowski's and they forced the moderator to play the first movement from it.

The resident seminar last week, after "Aida" was postponed, proceeded to conduct a concert by playing the more-popular classic records. "Dance Macabre," "Rhapsody in Blue," and others of the same caliber comprised the program.

Grad In Training

Gerard E. Holland, a member of the class of 1939, has just reported for Naval Aviation Flight Training at the U. S. Naval Aviation Reserve Base, Floyd Bennet Field, Brooklyn, N. Y., according to a release from the Cadet Selection Board of the third Naval District.

Upon completion of a two months' training course, he will be sent to a southern station.

Student Council Hits Negligence

Plans for the intensification of the already-functioning conservation program, for the maintenance of the natural beauty of the college grounds, and for the election of class officers for the next scholastic year were discussed by the Student Council at its last meeting on Tuesday, March 24.

In reference to student cooperation with the conservation of existing facilities, the Council debated the feasibility of placing posters in the various resident and class halls. These signs, to be painted by the students, would point out the various points of interest on the campus, with the purpose of preserving them.

Plea By McKimmey

"If the students would only know and truly appreciate the beauty of their campus, they would not be so negligent in its preservation," Thomas J. McKimmey, chairman of the Council, remarked.

McKimmey also observed that it would be well if students would heed the various conservation warnings placed around the campus, lest drastic measures be taken to insure their enforcement. This warning referred especially to the practice of ignoring the signs placed at various spots to preserve the grass.

Plans for the nomination and election of officers for the various underclass groups were also discussed. Dates for these functions will be announced later.

Building New Welding Unit

One of the ten engineering students now aiding in the construction of the four new welding units being installed in the college laboratories is shown above. Located in the present foundry, the equipment is supported by a flooring of structural steel and concrete and will supplement the five acetylene units already in use.

Placement Office Lists Summer Job Openings

Opportunities for summer employment for students were released last week from two summer resorts.

The director of the beach patrol of Wildwood-by-the-Sea. N. J., in a letter to Villanova's Placement Director, requested applicants for the position of lifeguard at the Jersey resort. Pay ranges from $90 to $100 per month, with all uniforms supplied.

Camp Sagamore, in Milford, Pa., has positions for college students nineteen years of age or over. Openings include those for: social director, assistant social director, clerks, cooks, waiters, athletic director, lifeguards, porters, bookkeepers, and room clerks.

Although some of the positions will be available earlier than others, all will begin by at least July 3 and will continue until Labor Day. All positions include maintenance.

Funk To Address ASME Convention

Students to Compete for Prizes for Best Speeches at Meeting April 20

Nevin E. Funk, vice-president of the Philadelphia Electric Co., will be the principal speaker at the banquet which closes the convention of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers at Haverford Court on April 20. James W. Parker, president of the society, will also speak.

Representatives from the second division of the A. S. M. E. will meet at Villanova for their one-day convention with a member from each college represented giving a fifteen-minute technical talk. Five minutes will be devoted at the close of each speech to the directing of questions by the audience to the speaker.

Prizes Awarded

At the close of the banquet, a hundred dollars in prizes will be distributed by Parker and Alton C. Chick, a member of the National Committee on Relations with Colleges, to the students presenting the best speeches.

After the registration at 9:00 A. M., the morning technical session will commence. The speakers will include Albert J. Magee, Universiay of Pennsylvania, speaking on "Power Absorption of Needle Bearings"; Thomas A. Shallow, Villanova College, on "Remote Indicating Aircraft Instruments"; Robert E. Ryan, Drexel Institute of Technology, on "Gear Generation."

"Synthetic Rubber"

John W. Cantwell, Rutgers University, will discuss "Synthetic Rubber"; R. L. Van de Mark, Swarthmore College, "The Design of an Automatic Record Changer"; Jack R. Dunn, Lafayette College, "Opposed Piston Internal Combustion Engines," and John H. Dudley, Lehigh University, "Statistical Methods for Quality and Control."

After luncheon at the Conestoga Mill and the inspection of the Villanova laboratories, the afternoon technical session will begin. The chairman will be Alvin Green of Delaware U. The speakers include George R. Fusner, Newark College of Engineering, speaking on "The High Velocity Thermocouple"; K. D. Miller, Princeton U., on "Design of a Fluid Flow Analyzer"; Mortimer Mandle, Cooper Union Day School, on "Molding of Synthetic Resins," and John C. Washington, Pratt Institute, on "Plywood Testing."

Movies will conclude the technical part of the convention.

PKP Elections Require New Balloting Friday

Nominees for the offices of vice-president and sergeant-at-arms were the only students receiving a majority vote in the balloting held yesterday by Phi Kappa Pi, engineering fraternity, it was announced by Vincent J. Gordon, president.

Since the by-laws of the fraternity require that a nominee must receive a majority of votes in order to be elected, a final balloting will be conducted this Friday in room 214 from 11:30 to 1:30 for the four undecided offices of president, secretary, treasurer, and Student Council representative.

Alumni Office Seeks Names Of Service Men

Students who know the whereabouts of ex-members of any class who are now in the armed forces are requested to submit the names and addresses of such men to the Alumni Office, room 120, Mendel Hall, as soon as possible.

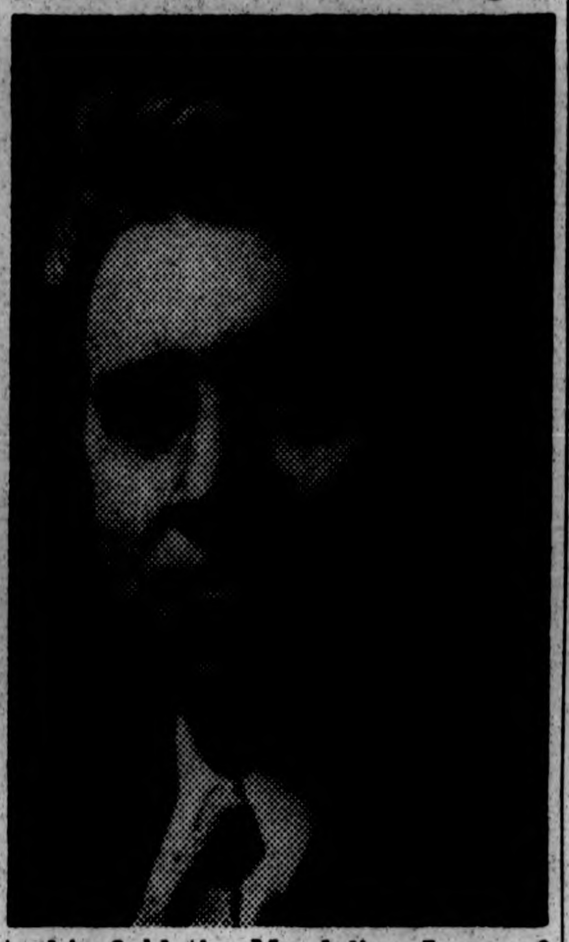
The information will be used to complete the service men's files and also for publication in the May issue of the Villanova "Alumnus," quarterly alumni publication, which will go to press very shortly.

The magazine features an "Honor Roll" in each issue, giving pertinent information of Villanova men in the services.

Dr. Becker To Receive Mendel Medal

Dr. Joseph A. Becker, research physicist of the Bell Telephone Laboratories, will receive this year's Mendel Medal at the annual dinner on May 3, Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college and chairman of the executive committee, announced last week.

Awarded annually by Villanova College in recognition of outstanding achievement by a Catholic scientist, the Mendel Medal was founded by the college in 1928 in honor of Gregor Mendel. Mendel, the Abbot of the Augustinian Monastery in Brunn, Austria, through extensive scientific research gave to his field the Mendelian Laws of Heredity.



The 1942 recipient is a resident of Mountain Lakes, N. J. Previous to his joining the Bell Telephone Laboratories in 1924, Dr. Becker was a member of the faculties of Cornell University, California Institute of Technology, and Stanford University.

His extensive research has carried him into the fields of magnetism, X-rays, and electron conduction in solids, variable resistors, and thermistors. Brought into use by his research was the electron microscope. He made use of this instrument especially in his study of thoriated tungsten and he has also proved its advantages in other fields.

Dr. Becker's son, Joseph J. Becker, enrolled with the present junior class in 1939. After completing his first year towards obtaining his degree in physics, he left college to join the Army Air Corps.

Belle Air Pix

Miss McCarthy, a representative of the Zamsky Studios, will be in the reception room of Mendel Hall next Tuesday and Wednesday to display all pictures which will appear in this years' Belle Air. As in the past, orders for pictures may be placed by students with Miss McCarthy.

Arts Frat Elects Devine President

Carbine, Hagerty, Deery and Mahoney Also Chosen as Officers of E. P. T.

Thomas F. Devine, junior artsman, has been elected to the presidency of Epsilon Phi Theta, fraternity of the arts school, for the next scholastic year, it was announced yesterday by David F. Daly, retiring president.

In the same election, Joseph Carbine, sophomore artsman, was chosen vice-president. Joseph Hagerty, junior, and John Deery, sophomore, were named secretary and treasurer, respectively. Joseph Mahoney, a junior, will represent the fraternity in the Student Council.

Devine, a consistent scholastic leader since his freshman year, occupies the position of Editor-in-Chief of the VILLANOVAN. Previous to his present appointment, he served as College Editor of the publication.

Officers Active

The other new officers have all been active around the campus. Hagerty is at present serving as co-chairman of the Junior Dinner Dance Committee, and Mahoney is chairman of a committee to invite ex-members of the Centennial Class now in the armed forces to the Junior Prom.

Gerald F. Belz, senior artsman and chairman of the banquet committee, announced that Kugler's Restaurant at 15th and Chestnut Streets in Philadelphia has been chosen as the site of the annual fraternity dinner to be held this Thursday evening.

Moore Toastmaster

Thomas J. Moore, '41, chairman of last year's dinner, will act as toastmaster.

Rev. John F. Burns, O. S. A., Dean of the Arts School, and Alexander G. Severance, varsity basketball coach, will be the principal speakers of the evening. In addition to Fr. Burns and Rev. Edward P. Dwyer, O. S. A., moderator of the fraternity, Rev. John E. Bresnehan, O. S. A., and Rev. Thomas Kiley, O. S. A., have been invited to attend the dinner.

Washington Trip Gives Students Chance To See Government Work

By JOHN M. QUINN

A group from the government classes of Villanova, consisting of nineteen freshman, sophomore, and junior students made their fifth annual trip to Washington, D. C., on Wednesday, April 8, to get a close-up view of the structure and functions of the United States Government. They were accompanied by Harold F. Hartman, Ph. D., and Rev. John R. Dunne, O. S. A., assistant professors of social sciences.

It was only a one day visit. Because of wartime restrictions on bus companies, Dr. Hartman's plans for a three day trip via chartered bus failed to materialize.

The expense of a three-day or even a two-day trip, Dr. Hartman explained, would have been too high to attract enough interested students.

One Almost Missed

The resident members of the group, after breakfasting in the college dining hall, boarded a Pennsylvania Railroad local and joined the remainder of the group at Broad Street Station. Only one student, a day-hop, failed to make the 5:45 train which the others took to Washington. He later rejoined the group, however.

In Washington the group first visited a conclave of the House's powerful Ways and Means Committee. Here a representative of the Cigar Manufacturers' Association argued before the committee for a substitution of a sales tax on the five cent cigar in place of a contemplated tax on the companies themselves.

Within the next hour and a half the two events most meaningful and appealing to the students took place in the Supreme Court building. There was an informal address by Pennsylvania's Associate Justice Owens, second ranking member of the Court. They then witnessed a session of the Supreme Court.

Justice Roberts Speaks

Justice Roberts was the "honnete homme": authoritative, unassuming friendly, sincere. He spoke cogently on the Court's more complex processes and more especially on its procedure in sifting for review the most important cases that appeared before it.

After answering questions put to him by Dr. Hartman and the students, Justice Roberts discussed several personalities; John W. Davis, the Court's outstanding barrister, and Princeton's Professor Corwin among them. However, he declined to comment on the Supreme Court's probable decision on the constitutionality of the proposed Child Labor amendment, should it be ratified by the requisite number of states.

The session of the Supreme Court was impressive. The black-robed judges came into the chamber ac-

Les Brown, Arranger And Leader, Heads Versatile And Showy Group To Field House For Junior Prom

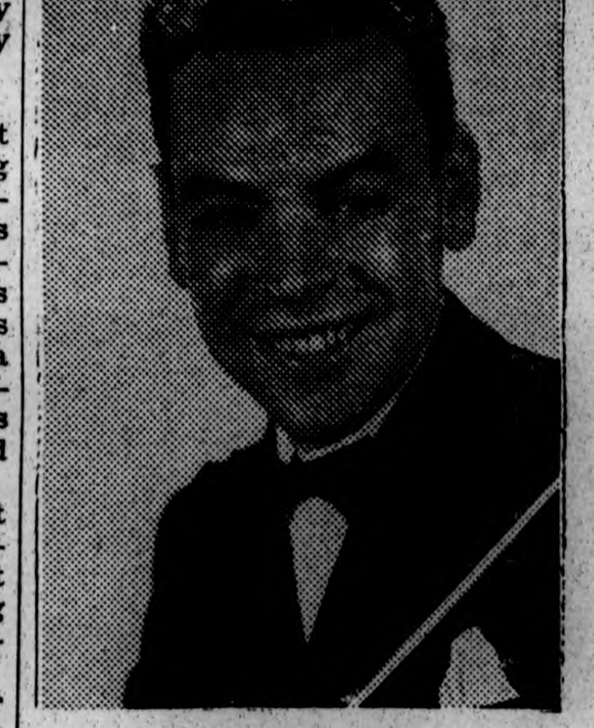
By WARD C. GUNCHEON

Les Brown, who will bring his sixteen-piece orchestra and two vocalists to the Field House on April 24 for the Centennial Class' Junior Prom, has really come up the hard way to the enviable position which he now holds in the field of popular music. Beginning as a pianist in his own band, he switched to the saxophone, then gave up leading to study arranging, and finally formed his present outfit.

Tickets for the annual dance, which will be from 10:00 P. M. until 2:00 A. M., are now on sale for $5.50, tax included. Juniors who have paid their assessments will be given their tickets at a later date.

During the past two months, the Brown combination, with vocalists Betty Bonney and Ralph Young, has been touring the Eastern theatre circuit.

Recently in the Paramount Theater in New York, Brown brought down the praises of New York's critics. He will present to dancing couples a week from this Friday, a well rounded orchestra which places emphasis on "danceable" music for the many and occasional "solid" numbers for the few.



LES BROWN

Evidence of his appeal to popular band lovers is the applause he received from "Metronome." Commenting on his show at the Paramount, the magazine rated his band as "one of the best paced band

Soph Exams In V-1 Plan Postponed

Sophomores who have signified their intentions of entering the V-1 Naval program will not have to undergo the comprehensive examinations scheduled for May 1, Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college and one of the coordinators of the program, revealed last week.

The Navy Department will accept 15,000 sophomores upon the recommendation of their colleges, Fr. Stanford said. These students will take the general comprehensive examinations on March 1, 1943. Under an accelerated program they would thus be about half-way through their senior year.

New Plan Devised

The president also disclosed that arrangements are rapidly nearing completion to care for those sophomores who are over twenty years of age. The students were ineligible for the V-5 and V-7 programs because of their class standings (enlistees must have attained a junior status), and for the V-1 program because of age (enlistees must be betwen the ages of 17 and 20).

"While no definite announcement can be made at this time, such students can be given assurance that very serious consideration is being given to their problem," Fr. Stanford stated.

These sophomores were further disturbed by the announcement that unless they had attained a junior status by April 15 they could not enlist in the V-7 program. The president revealed, however, that he has been assured by the Navy Department that consideration is being given such students and that a definite announcement concerning them will be made next week.

Fr. Stanford reminded those sophomores in the V-1 program that an exceptional opportunity is being offered them, an opportunity which will not be available to future classes, since restrictions will be more rigid.

Interested students, especially those sophomores over twenty, are requested to submit their names to the president's office if they have not already done so.

Juniors Start Campaign For "Victory Corsages"

Orders are now being taken for "Victory Corsages" for the Junior Prom. Priced at $1.50, the corsages are an innovation in prom history. Through mass buying, the committee was able to obtain a low price on the corsages. The proceeds from the sale will be used to buy United States Defense Bonds which, in turn, will be put into the Centennial Class Scholarship Fund.

The corsages selected by the committee, if purchased individualy, would exceed the price for which they are offered. The corsage will be in the shape of a "V," both for "Victory" and Villanova. White gardenias surrounded by blue bachelor buttons will be used. The corsage will be tied with a blue and white bow, the colors of the college. Each corsage will be packaged in a cellophane box.

For the men will be included boutonnieres. Juniors will receive deep red while others attending will receive white.

Both corsages and boutonnieres will be distributed from a booth in the lobby of the Field House on the evening of the prom. Orders may be placed with any of the committee members in the various schools.

LKD To Present Frolic On Friday

Lambda Kappa Delta Fraternity of the School of Science presents its Spring Frolic this Friday night from 9:00 P. M. till 1:00 A. M. in the Villanova Field House.

Elaborate plans for the decorations of the gym have been completed and work is to begin tomorrow afternoon. The committee, headed by Albert S. Freed, science senior, announced that something new in decorations and surprises will be featured.

The dance, which was postponed from October 31 because of a number of conflicting activities is expected by officers to be a success since it is the first social activity to be held here since the beginning of Lent. It has been suggested by the committee that this frolic may serve as a substitute for the Blazer Ball, excluded from Junior Week activities because of the accelerated program.

The music will be supplied by the Villanovans and the price for admission has been set at $1.65, tax included.

No definite arrangements have been made to secure any blind dates for the Villanova students from the neighboring colleges, but, if anyone might wish one, arrangements can be made by contacting Joseph Daly, science sophomore.

An Internal Reform

NEWS that Congress is considering legislation to suspend the forty-hour week for the duration discloses a problem that is of the highest importance to every American wage-earner.

Beginning only recently to enjoy the fruits of a century of struggle for improved working conditions, labor is now faced with the possibility of allowing the most precious of these hard-earned gains to be permanently signed away.

With characteristic foresight, President Roosevelt has already announced his outright disapproval of enacting wartime labor legislation. Nevertheless, a sizeable bloc of senators are planning a vigorous stand on the proposal.

Supporters of the bill argue that the introduction of a forty-eight hour week would bring about a substantial saving in the cost of the war by reducing overtime paychecks. With this objective we are in full accord. But we question the wisdom of the method by which Congress intends to attain this end.

We ask Congress not to fall into that time-honored American custom of "just passing a law" to remedy any and all problems. The situation demands every ounce of tact and moderation.

We remind our representatives that the pages of history are profusely illustrated with the unfortunate fact that once a law becomes indelibly engraved on the federal statute books, a truly Herculean effort is required to repeal it.

Current attempts of union leaders to quiet strike-angered public opinion by seizing every opportunity of reaffirming labor's unity behind the war program would be much more desirable than the Congressional solution.

We suggest that union leaders replace their usual speechmaking tactics with some constructive program, originating from inside their own ranks, voluntarily establishing the forty-eight hour week for the duration of the war.

Here is a golden opportunity for labor's representatives not only to redeem themselves in the eyes of the public by making a valuable contribution toward economizing on war production, but also to protect their own advances.

How about it, Mr. Green?

How about it, Mr. Murray?

JUST four weeks from today you will be in the midst of your final exams. That's a not-too-distant future.

At this time of the year one finds it hard to get down to work and to study because of "spring fever." At other times spring fever may not have been harmful to you, but now because of the shorter term it may greatly affect the outcome of your finals.

As the warm days bring spring fever so do the pleasant nights bring the tendency to "get away from it all." It just seems criminal to stay in and study when a breeze brings the scent of blossoming trees and flowers into the room.

Activities, both athletic and social, tend in a measure to take your mind off your work. After exercising, either in the afternoon or evening you tend to rest-up and consequently little or no work is done. Our Junior Prom and the Junior Proms of surrounding schools are a cause of great concern and in the less serious person may be a source of wasting time.

These activities are good in themselves and participation in them is encouraged, but it must be remembered that they are scheduled so as not to interfere directly with your school work. It is left up to you, the individual, to plan and schedule your work so that it can be done without "cramming."

You have the responsibility of your athletic, social, and scholastic life. Adjusting these in their right proportion is a tough job, but in order to succeed it must be done.

Who's To Blame?

WE were morally certain that Bataan would fall; still, when the news confirming our belief was broadcast from the embattled peninsula, we were shocked and saddened. Thirty-six thousand American and Philippine fighting men were killed, maimed, or captured. This defeat is the greatest in our military history. Conversely, it is Japan's greatest victory. But Japan alone could not have conquered the heroes who fought the battle of the Philippines. She had help to do it.

We, who indulge in petty quibbles about pay for overtime; we, whose city's wage-tax proponents are at odds with the labor leaders; we, whose state capitol is a chaos of indecision and lack of co-operation; we, whose planes and tanks bear each an added price, the lobbyist's commission; we, who waste valuable time flinging condemnations at pre-war political enemies; we, who bootleg tires by the thousands and steal the nation's sugar by the ton; we, who rush about in a fever of importance in tin-horn uniforms doing unnecessary and tin horn things; we, who actually and in fact, seize the opportunity presented by war conditions to exploit our partner Americans; we, who fret at slight privations and know nothing of the hardships of military service; we, who are greedy, and wasteful, self-centered and dishonest; we, who forget duty and the old axiom, "charity begins at home"; we, who keep quarrels alive, breed hate, and cast doubts in the minds of loyal people; we, who ignore the red influence in our government as much as we may; we who are less interested in the war or its outcome, than in the success of our speculations with the people's money; we who love not God and love not our neighbor; we, in the smallness of which we are capable, defeated the nation's fighting forces on the Bataan Peninsula.

We had better pray for the grace to avoid such actions and ideas in the battles to come. Then, after praying, we had better get off our knees and hustle.

FACULTY COMMENTS

The War And The College Student

By MR. BANMILLER

IT can truly be said that America is girding and mobilizing for a "Rendezvous with Destiny." The recent fall of Bataan, the greatest single loss in our history, should put an end to the passivity with which many people are viewing and contributing to the war effort.

How we fare in this world conflagration will be determined by our resourcefulness, our willingness to make genuine sacrifices, and our ability to plan for the future. Manpower and the implements of war alone will not decide the real issues nor the outcome of our struggle for existence.

If our "Four Freedoms" are to be preserved, we must not only destroy the forces of evil, but we must also build the foundation for a just and enduring peace.

However and whenever the present conflict may end, there will be no sudden lifting of the clouds when peace is declared.

The next one hundred years will demand of us and our children every ounce of stamina, every quality of leadership and every virtue of courage of which we are capable.

With these things in mind, the college student must educate himself to serve his country in total war, and also prepare himself for the period of peace which will follow. On arriving at a decision regarding his most effective course of action, the student comes face-to-face with the question, "Shall I continue my education or enlist?" Every college man throughout the country feels the urgency of this question today.

Choice of Action

It is extremely difficult for anyone to give a simple, conclusive answer to this all-important question. Each student must study his own problem and seek its best solution by evaluating the alternative answers to another question, "In what capacity can I render the most effective service to the nation in this critical period?"

The college student has available three courses of action: enlistment now in the armed forces; employment now in a civilian occupation; or continuation of training or preparation for later service, military or otherwise.

Enlistment

Many branches of the service are recruiting college trained men. Opportunities are offered for volunteers to take officer courses, some of which provide for continuation in college until the student completes the requirements for his degree.

Other opportunities are on a competitive basis, and those volunteers who fail to meet the required mental and physical requirements will be called for military duty as enlisted men. As such, they are still provided further opportunities to advance within the service. Most of these service opportunities include a stipulation that the student can continue with his education unless the exigencies of war necessitate his being called to active duty before graduation.

The volunteer may select the branch of service which he desires—the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, or any of several units within them, such as, the Coast Guard, etc.

Employment

Available statistics show that there is an acute shortage of trained personnel in industry and in the various government agencies associated with the war effort. The unprecedented high salaries and the ever-increasing rate of production will tempt many students.

The acceptance of any "defense job" should be viewed by the student in terms of its ultimate and not its immediate value to the individual and to the nation. He must decide whether he can render greater and more effective service to his country now, or a more important service later.

Remaining in College

Much has been said and written about the necessity of maintaining a "continuous supply of highly trained men in all fields necessary to the National Health, Safety and Interest, and to War Production."

The Selective Service Act provides for occupational deferment of potentially necessary men in training or preparation for an essential or critical occupation. Since December 7, 1941, occupational deferment has been even more essential.

Naturally, there is a certain amount of "pressure" placed on able-bodied college students who have not enlisted. But it is most important for properly qualified students to remember that occupational deferment granted to a student is an indication that he has been selected for deferment by his government.

In being allowed to continue his training, he is rendering, in the best judgment of his local board, a more effective and patriotic service. By continuing with his college work he is increasing his ultimate effectiveness to serve the national effort.

Under the present law, a man registers during his twentieth year. Since it takes about three months to prepare the induction lists and assuming quotas remain approximately the same, the majority of college students taking the accelerated program should be able to

Meet The Boys:

"Stretch" Is Bob's Familiar Name; The Belle Air Brought Bill Fame

By STAN ZEEMAN

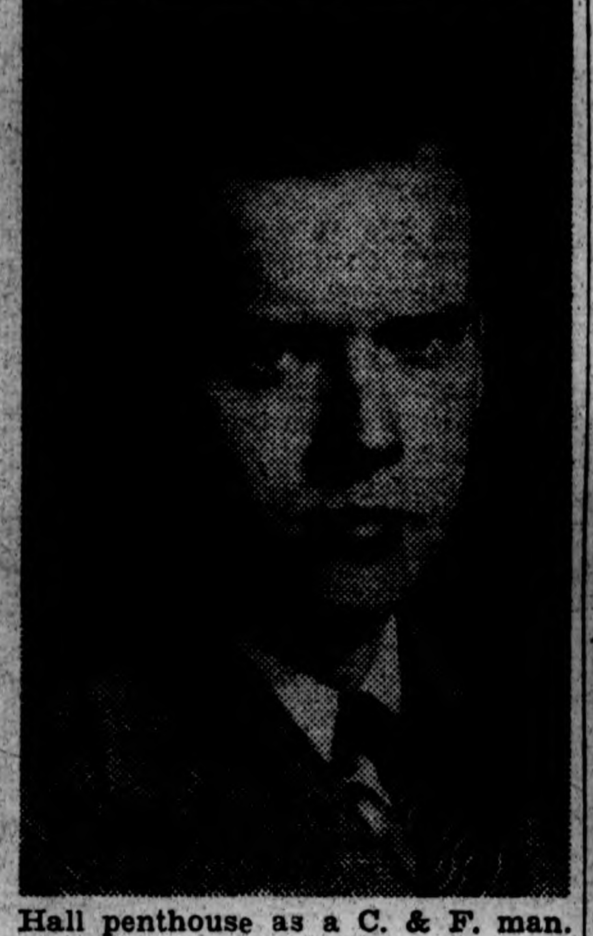
THIS week's presentation of Villanova seniors offers a remarkable contrast of type and personality. On the one hand, we have happy-go-lucky Bob Donovan; and on the other, Bill Schubert, calm, serious, and business-like.

Robert Foristel Donovan weighed seven pounds and was eighteen inches long when he was born in Auburn, N. Y., on September 20, 1920. Just to show what can happen to a fellow in the course of 21 years, he now has his 155 pounds distributed over a six-foot, two and one-half inch frame. This unproportional elongation has won him the nickname of "Stretch." "Although," he sadly relates, "I've been answering to any number of names these last four years."

Leader of High School Debating

In his youth, he attended the Holy Family secondary and high schools in Auburn. While he was in high school, besides being an honor student, he was a member of the dramatic society, played varsity baseball, and was president of the debating club for two years.

Ironically enough, he first considered Villanova as his college when he met the popular Dr. Hartman at a weekend party at Cornell. This illustrious gentleman extolled the praises of Villanova so well that the next year "Stretch" took up a temporary residence in the Mendel Hall penthouse as a C. & F. man.



Heads Circulation Staff

While a freshman, he joined the circulation staff of the VILLANOVAN, and he became such a proficient paper-putter-outer that he was made circulation manager in 1940. Also during his first year, he was secretary and treasurer of the Catholic Press Apostolate. He is a four-year member of the intra-mural committee, and has been rated by some as one of the best scorekeepers ever to keep count of the points scored at those inter-hall basketbawl games in Alumni Hall.

A Chorus Girl

Bob is a great exponent of the Hale America program, and quite often may be found down at the Field House splashing about in the pool. Also a participant in intra-mural sports, he entered the 1940 intra-mural golf tournament, and finished that same year.

"Stretch" moved into Fedigan Hall in his senior year where he worked hard on the pre-Temple game decorations with Father Ludwig. In the amateur night program, he surprised many with his performance as one of those beautiful chorus girls. It was here in Fedigan that he earned his portfolio as Ambassador of Blind Dates to Immaculata.

Blonde Attraction

While he has taken care of quite a few of his friends as far as dates are concerned, his own love life has by no means been untroubled. He has switched affections many times during the course of his college career, but, according to close associates, ever since he was a junior it has been more or less of a hit-and-run affair with a certain blonde at Immaculata.

Upon graduation, "Stretch" had planned to be a banker, but it seems now that Uncle Sam is banking on him. When asked which branch of the armed forces he will enter, he replied, "I ought to be a good man in the submarine service after those two years in Austin Hall!"

OUTWARDLY, Bill Schubert is every bit as quiet and meditative as "Stretch" is carefree, and yet, he has produced the same effect — being accepted as a regular fellow. In fact, there are very few men on the campus who can boast the popularity he enjoys. His unassuming character and calm intelligence have placed him in a position of respect before the eyes of both his fellow students and professors.

Born a little over twenty years ago, William Edward Schubert, known more commonly as just plain Bill, lived in the Mt. Airy section of Philadelphia until last year, when his family moved to Overbrook. He attended Holy Cross Grammar School and from there went into St. Joe's Prep. Here, in his modest way, he took part in debating, worked on the year book, and, of course, graduated with honors.

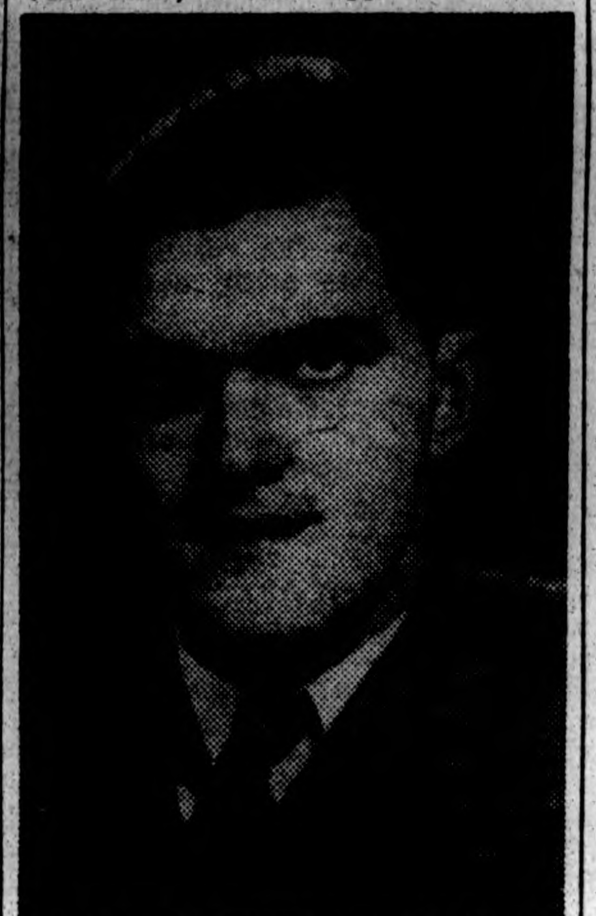
Early A Villanovan

During these pre-college days, Bill was a close follower of Villanova athletics so that the fame and traditions of the school were familiar to him at an early age. Consequently, when the time came to pick his alma mater, the choosing was not difficult at all.

Although it did require all of an hour-and-a-half to day-hop it from Villanova to his Mt. Airy home, he still found time to enter a host of activities. He joined the German Club, debated with the freshman team, became a member of Epsilon Phi Theta, arts fraternity, of which he was vice-president in his junior year, served on the Sophomore Cotillion and Junior Dinner Dance committees, and has been in the International Relations Club since his sophomore year.

"Slave-Driving" Editor

As a member of the VILLANOVAN staff, he was copy editor when a junior and managing editor in his last year. As a matter of fact, it is rumored that Bill taught Tom Doyle all he knows about journalism, but this being only hearsay, it is left to the discretion of the reader.



Bill has been on the Belle Air staff since he was a sophomore, and this year, being editor, has assumed the main burden for putting out that publication. Once he gets into that little office of his on the second floor of Mendel Hall, he casts off his genial, complacent nature and assumes the role of a tyrant.

The casual passerby may often hear him, above the din of furiously pounded typewriters, loudly threatening some unfortunate member who failed to get his assignment in on time. He is especially cruel with photography editors who do not take their pictures exactly the way he wants them to, and has on occasion brandished heavy iron objects over them as a means of persuasion.

Philosopher

Really, though, Bill is perfectly harmless, as Paul Waters, his friend and companion, will testify, and he has worked hard on his job. If his past performances are any indication of his ability and resourcefulness, this year's Belle Air should be one of the best in the history of the school.

Philosophy is his favorite subject, and when asked what he thought about life, he answered after a moment's deliberation, "Life is one big farce with everybody trying to kid the other fellow along."

Seminar Features Music Quiz Show, Operas Tomorrow

Dr. Edward L. Haenisch will engage himself as a "Professor Quiz" in the third guessing contest of the school year at the noon music seminar tomorrow in the Amphitheatre. The winner again will be given a dollar's worth of records of his own choice.

In the evening at 7:30 in Simpson Hall, Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A., will conduct the resident music seminar. Operatic selections from the more-popular operas will be featured along with an overture and other instrumental numbers.

The noon seminar last Wednesday played the controversial Rodzinski transcription of selections from Kern's "Showboat." Many popular melodies were developed in a classical fashion with "Old Man River" acting as the principal theme. The seminar closed with Bizet's "L'Arlessien Suite," number two.

Belz To Give Talk Before IRC Group

Gerald F. Belz, President of the International Relations Club, will present a ten-minute paper for discussion on the topic, "Economic Problems of the Post-War Period," at the joint meeting of the club with Chestnut Hill College tonight at 8 P. M.

John P. Fullam and William E. Shubert, senior education and arts students, respectively, will be discussion leaders on papers prepared by two Chestnut Hill students on the topics of political and spiritual aspects of the post-war period. Under their direction all discussions, questions and problems will be presented to the group.

With the help and aid of Rev. William J. Lunney, O. S. A., and Rev. Edward J. McCarthy, O. S. A., these students have been helped in the problems of conducting successfully such a meeting.

Gagen, Connelly Meet Hughes Society In Friday's Debate

Wilfred Gagen, commerce school sophomore, and James Connelly, sophomore arts student, will engage sophomore members of the Hughes Debating Society this Friday at 3:30 P. M. in Simpson Hall.

Last Friday afternoon before a general assembly of Upper Merion High School students, Beta Gamma presented an intra-society debate on the topic: "Resolved: That the Federal Government should control by law all labor unions in the U. S."

On the affirmative side were George Harris, junior from the arts school and Robert McIntyre, senior in the commerce school. Louis DeSimone and Joseph Mahoney, sophomore and junior arts students, respectively, argued the negative.

Next on the society's schedule is a debate with Drexel Institute. Both date and topic of this debate are as yet tentative.

Under the Navy's newest plan, you can enlist now and continue in college. If you make a good record, you may qualify within two years to become a Naval Officer—on the sea or in the air.

Who may qualify

80,000 men per year will be accepted under this new plan. If you are between the ages of 17 and 19 inclusive and can meet Navy physical standards, you can enlist now as an Apprentice Seaman in the Naval Reserve. You will be in the Navy. But until you have finished two calendar years, you will remain in college, taking regular college courses under your own professors. Your studies will emphasize mathematics, physics and physical training.

After you have successfully completed 1½ calendar years of work, you will be given a written examination prepared by the Navy. This examination is competitive. It is designed to select the best men for training as Naval Officers.

How to become an Officer

If you rank sufficiently high in the examination and can meet the physical standards, you will have your choice of two courses —each leading to an officer's commission:

1. You may volunteer for training as an Aviation Officer. In this case you will be permitted to finish at least the second calendar year of your college work, after which you will be ordered to active duty for training to become an officer-pilot. Approximately 20,000 men a year will be accepted for Naval Aviation.

2. Or you will be selected for training as a Deck or Engineering Officer. In this case you will be allowed to continue your college work until you have received your degree. After graduation you will be ordered to active duty for training to become a Deck or Engineering Officer. Approximately 15,000 men a year will be accepted.

If you do not qualify for special officer's training, you will be allowed to finish the second calendar year of college, after which you will be ordered to active duty at a Naval Training Station as Apprentice Seaman.

Those who fail to pass their college work at any time may be ordered to active duty at once as Apprentice Seamen.

Your pay starts with active duty.

Here's a real opportunity. A chance to enlist in your country's service now without giving up your college training . . . a chance to prove by that same training that you are qualified to be an officer in the Navy.

An Internal Reform

NEWS that Congress is considering legislation to suspend the forty-hour week for the duration discloses a problem that is of the highest importance to every American wage-earner.

Beginning only recently to enjoy the fruits of a century of struggle for improved working conditions, labor is now faced with the possibility of allowing the most precious of these hard-earned gains to be permanently signed away.

With characteristic foresight, President Roosevelt has already announced his outright disapproval of enacting wartime labor legislation. Nevertheless, a sizeable bloc of senators are planning a vigorous stand on the proposal.

Supporters of the bill argue that the introduction of a forty-eight hour week would bring about a substantial saving in the cost of the war by reducing overtime paychecks. With this objective we are in full accord. But we question the wisdom of the method by which Congress intends to attain this end.

We ask Congress not to fall into that time-honored American custom of "just passing a law" to remedy any and all problems. The situation demands every ounce of tact and moderation.

We remind our representatives that the pages of history are profusely illustrated with the unfortunate fact that once a law becomes indelibly engraved on the federal statute books, a truly Herculean effort is required to repeal it.

Current attempts of union leaders to quiet strike-angered public opinion by seizing every opportunity of reaffirming labor's unity behind the war program would be much more desirable than the Congressional solution.

We suggest that union leaders replace their usual speechmaking tactics with some constructive program, originating from inside their own ranks, voluntarily establishing the forty-eight hour week for the duration of the war.

Here is a golden opportunity for labor's representatives not only to redeem themselves in the eyes of the public by making a valuable contribution toward economizing on war production, but also to protect their own advances.

How about it, Mr. Green?
How about it, Mr. Murray?

JUST four weeks from today you will be in the midst of your final exams. That's a not-too-distant future.

At this time of the year one finds it hard to get down to work and to study because of "spring fever." At other times spring fever may not have been harmful to you, but now because of the shorter term it may greatly affect the outcome of your finals.

As the warm days bring spring fever so do the pleasant nights bring the tendency to "get away from it all." It just seems criminal to stay in and study when a breeze brings the scent of blossoming trees and flowers into the room.

Activities, both athletic and social, tend in a measure to take your mind off your work. After exercising, either in the afternoon or evening you tend to rest-up and consequently little or no work is done. Our Junior Prom and the Junior Proms of surrounding schools are a cause of great concern and in the less serious person may be a source of wasting time.

These activities are good in themselves and participation in them is encouraged, but it must be remembered that they are scheduled so as not to interfere directly with your school work. It is left up to you, the individual, to plan and schedule your work so that it can be done without "cramming."

You have the responsibility of your athletic, social, and scholastic life. Adjusting these in their right proportion is a tough job, but in order to succeed it must be done.

Who's To Blame?

WE were morally certain that Bataan would fall; still, when the news confirming our belief was broadcast from the embattled peninsula, we were shocked and saddened. Thirty-six thousand American and Philippine fighting men were killed, maimed, or captured. This defeat is the greatest in our military history. Conversely, it is Japan's greatest victory. But Japan alone could not have conquered the heroes who fought the battle of the Philippines. She had help to do it.

We, who indulge in petty quibbles about pay for overtime; we, whose city's wage-tax proponents are at odds with the labor leaders; we, whose state capitol is a chaos of indecision and lack of co-operation; we, whose planes and tanks bear each an added price, the lobbyist's commission; we, who waste valuable time flinging condemnations at pre-war political enemies; we, who bootleg tires by the thousands and steal the nation's sugar by the ton; we, who rush about in a fever of importance in tin-horn uniforms doing unnecessary and tin horn things; we, who actually and in fact, seize the opportunity presented by war conditions to exploit our partner Americans; we, who fret at slight privations and know nothing of the hardships of military service; we, who are greedy, and wasteful, self-centered and dishonest; we, who forget duty and the old axiom, "charity begins at home"; we, who keep quarrels alive, breed hate, and cast doubts in the minds of loyal people; we, who ignore the red influence in our government as much as we may; we who are less interested in the war or its outcome, than in the success of our speculations with the people's money; we who love not God and love not our neighbor; we, in the smallness of which we are capable, defeated the nation's fighting forces on the Bataan Peninsula.

We had better pray for the grace to avoid such actions and ideas in the battles to come. Then, after praying, we had better get off our knees and hustle.

FACULTY COMMENTS

The War And The College Student

By MR. BANMILLER

IT can truly be said that America is girding and mobilizing for a "Rendezvous with Destiny." The recent fall of Bataan, the greatest single loss in our history, should put an end to the passivity with which many people are viewing and contributing to the war effort.

How we fare in this world conflagration will be determined by our resourcefulness, our willingness to make genuine sacrifices, and our ability to plan for the future. Manpower and the implements of war alone will not decide the real issues nor the outcome of our struggle for existence.

If our "Four Freedoms" are to be preserved, we must not only destroy the forces of evil, but we must also build the foundation for a just and enduring peace.

However and whenever the present conflict may end, there will be no sudden lifting of the clouds when peace is declared.

The next one hundred years will demand of us and our children every ounce of stamina, every quality of leadership and every virtue of courage of which we are capable.

With these things in mind, the college student must educate himself to serve his country in total war, and also prepare himself for the period of peace which will follow. On arriving at a decision regarding his most effective course of action, the student comes face-to-face with the question, "Shall I continue my education or enlist?" Every college man throughout the country feels the urgency of this question today.

Choice of Action

It is extremely difficult for anyone to give a simple, conclusive answer to this all-important question. Each student must study his own problem and seek its best solution by evaluating the alternative answers to another question, "In what capacity can I render the most effective service to the nation in this critical period?"

The college student has available three courses of action: enlistment now in the armed forces; employment now in a civilian occupation; or continuation of training or preparation for later service, military or otherwise.

Enlistment

Many branches of the service are recruiting college trained men. Opportunities are offered for volunteers to take officer courses, some of which provide for continuation in college until the student completes the requirements for his degree.

Other opportunities are on a competitive basis, and those volunteers who fail to meet the required mental and physical requirements will be called for military duty as enlisted men. As such, they are still provided further opportunities to advance within the service. Most of these service opportunities include a stipulation that the student can continue with his education unless the exigencies of war necessitate his being called to active duty before graduation.

The volunteer may select the branch of service which he desires—the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, or any of several units within them, such as, the Coast Guard, etc.

Employment

Available statistics show that there is an acute shortage of trained personnel in industry and in the various government agencies associated with the war effort. The unprecedented high salaries and the ever-increasing rate of production will tempt many students.

The acceptance of any "defense job" should be viewed by the student in terms of its ultimate and not its immediate value to the individual and to the nation. He must decide whether he can render greater and more effective service to his country now, or a more important service later.

Remaining in College

Much has been said and written about the necessity of maintaining a "continuous supply of highly trained men in all fields necessary to the National Health, Safety and Interest, and to War Production."

The Selective Service Act provides for occupational deferment of potentially necessary men in training or preparation for an essential or critical occupation. Since December 7, 1941, occupational deferment has been even more essential.

Naturally, there is a certain amount of "pressure" placed on able-bodied college students who have not enlisted. But it is most important for properly qualified students to remember that occupational deferment granted to a student is an indication that he has been selected for deferment by his government.

In being allowed to continue his training, he is rendering, in the best judgment of his local board, a more effective and patriotic service. By continuing with his college work he is increasing his ultimate effectiveness to serve the national effort.

Under the present law, a man registers during his twentieth year. Since it takes about three months to prepare the induction lists and assuming quotas remain approximately the same, the majority of college students taking the accelerated program should be able to

Meet The Boys:

"Stretch" Is Bob's Familiar Name; The Belle Air Brought Bill Fame

By STAN ZEEMAN

THIS week's presentation of Villanova seniors offers a remarkable contrast of type and personality. On the one hand, we have happy-go-lucky Bob Donovan; and on the other, Bill Schubert, calm, serious, and business-like.

Robert Foristel Donovan weighed seven pounds and was eighteen inches long when he was born in Auburn, N. Y., on September 20, 1920. Just to show what can happen to a fellow in the course of 21 years, he now has his 155 pounds distributed over a six-foot, two and one-half inch frame. This unproportional elongation has won him the nickname of "Stretch." "Although," he sadly relates, "I've been answering to any number of names these last four years."

Leader of High School Debating

In his youth, he attended the Holy Family secondary and high schools in Auburn. While he was in high school, besides being an honor student, he was a member of the dramatic society, played varsity baseball, and was president of the debating club for two years.

Ironically enough, he first considered Villanova as his college when he met the popular Dr. Hartman at a weekend party at Cornell. This illustrious gentleman extolled the praises of Villanova so well that the next year "Stretch" took up a temporary residence in the Mendel Hall penthouse as a C. & F. man.

Heads Circulation Staff

While a freshman, he joined the circulation staff of the VILLANOVAN, and he became such a proficient paper-putter-outer that he was made circulation manager in 1940. Also during his first year, he was secretary and treasurer of the Catholic Press Apostolate. He is a four-year member of the intramural committee, and has been rated by some as one of the best scorekeepers ever to keep count of the points scored at those inter-hall basketbawl games in Alumni Hall.

A Chorus Girl

Bob is a great exponent of the Hale America program, and quite often may be found down at the Field House splashing about in the pool. Also a participant in intramural sports, he entered the 1940 intra-mural golf tournament, and finished that same year.

"Stretch" moved into Fedigan Hall in his senior year where he worked hard on the pre-Temple game decorations with Father Ludwig. In the amateur night program, he surprised many with his performance as one of those beautiful chorus girls. It was here in Fedigan that he earned his portfolio as Ambassador of Blind Dates to Immaculata.

Blonde Attraction

While he has taken care of quite a few of his friends as far as dates are concerned, his own love life has by no means been untroubled. He has switched affections many times during the course of his college career, but, according to close associates, ever since he was a junior it has been more or less of a hit-and-run affair with a certain blonde at Immaculata.

Upon graduation, "Stretch" had planned to be a banker, but it seems now that Uncle Sam is banking on him. When asked which branch of the armed forces he will enter, he replied, "I ought to be a good man in the submarine service after those two years in Austin Hall!"

OUTWARDLY, Bill Schubert is every bit as quiet and meditative as "Stretch" is carefree, and yet, he has produced the same effect — being accepted as a regular fellow. In fact, there are very few men on the campus who can boast the popularity he enjoys. His unassuming character and calm intelligence have placed him in a position of respect before the eyes of both his fellow students and professors.

Born a little over twenty years ago, William Edward Schubert, known more commonly as just plain Bill, lived in the Mt. Airy section of Philadelphia until last year, when his family moved to Overbrook. He attended Holy Cross Grammar School and from there went into St. Joe's Prep. Here, in his modest way, he took part in debating, worked on the year book, and, of course, graduated with honors.

Early A Villanovan

During these pre-college days, Bill was a close follower of Villanova athletics so that the fame and traditions of the school were familiar to him at an early age. Consequently, when the time came to pick his alma mater, the choosing was not difficult at all.

Although it did require all of an hour-and-a-half to day-hop it from Villanova to his Mt. Airy home, he still found time to enter a host of activities. He joined the German Club, debated with the freshman team, became a member of Epsilon Phi Theta, arts fraternity, of which he was vice-president in his junior year, served on the Sophomore Cotillion and Junior Dinner Dance committees, and has been in the International Relations Club since his sophomore year.

"Slave-Driving" Editor

As a member of the VILLANOVAN staff, he was copy editor when a junior and managing editor in his last year. As a matter of fact, it is rumored that Bill taught Tom Doyle all he knows about journalism, but this being only hearsay, it is left to the discretion of the reader.

Bill has been on the Belle Air staff since he was a sophomore, and this year, being editor, has assumed the main burden for putting out that publication. Once he gets into that little office of his on the second floor of Mendel Hall, he casts off his genial, complacent nature and assumes the role of a tyrant.

The casual passerby may often hear him, above the din of furiously pounded typewriters, loudly threatening some unfortunate member who failed to get his assignment in on time. He is especially cruel with photography editors who do not take their pictures exactly the way he wants them to, and has on occasion brandished heavy iron objects over them as a means of persuasion.

Philosopher

Really, though, Bill is perfectly harmless, as Paul Waters, his friend and companion, will testify, and he has worked hard on his job. If his past performances are any indication of his ability and resourcefulness, this year's Belle Air should be one of the best in the history of the school.

Philosophy is his favorite subject, and when asked what he thought about life, he answered after a moment's deliberation, "Life is one big farce with everybody trying to kid the other fellow along."

Seminar Features Music Quiz Show, Operas Tomorrow

Dr. Edward L. Haenisch will engage himself as a "Professor Quiz" in the third guessing contest of the school year at the noon music seminar tomorrow in the Amphitheatre. The winner again will be given a dollar's worth of records of his own choice.

In the evening at 7:30 in Simpson Hall, Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A., will conduct the resident music seminar. Operatic selections from the more-popular operas will be featured along with an overture and other instrumental numbers.

The noon seminar last Wednesday played the controversial Rodzinski transcription of selections from Kern's "Showboat." Many popular melodies were developed in a classical fashion with "Old Man River" acting as the principal theme. The seminar closed with Bizet's "L'Arlessien Suite," number two.

Belz To Give Talk Before IRC Group

Gerald F. Belz, President of the International Relations Club, will present a ten-minute paper for discussion on the topic, "Economic Problems of the Post-War Period," at the joint meeting of the club with Chestnut Hill College tonight at 8 P. M.

John P. Fullam and William E. Shubert, senior education and arts students, respectively, will be discussion leaders on papers prepared by two Chestnut Hill students on the topics of political and spiritual aspects of the post-war period. Under their direction all discussions, questions and problems will be presented to the group.

With the help and aid of Rev. William J. Lunney, O. S. A., and Rev. Edward J. McCarthy, O. S. A., these students have been helped in the problems of conducting successfully such a meeting.

Gagen, Connelly Meet Hughes Society In Friday's Debate

Wilfred Gagen, commerce school sophomore, and James Connelly, sophomore arts student, will engage sophomore members of the Hughes Debating Society this Friday at 3:30 P. M. in Simpson Hall.

Last Friday afternoon before a general assembly of Upper Merion High School students, Beta Gamma presented an intra-society debate on the topic: "Resolved: That the Federal Government should control by law all labor unions in the U. S."

On the affirmative side were George Harris, junior from the arts school and Robert McIntyre, senior in the commerce school. Louis DeSimone and Joseph Mahoney, sophomore and junior arts students, respectively, argued the negative.

Next on the society's schedule is a debate with Drexel Institute. Both date and topic of this debate are as yet tentative.

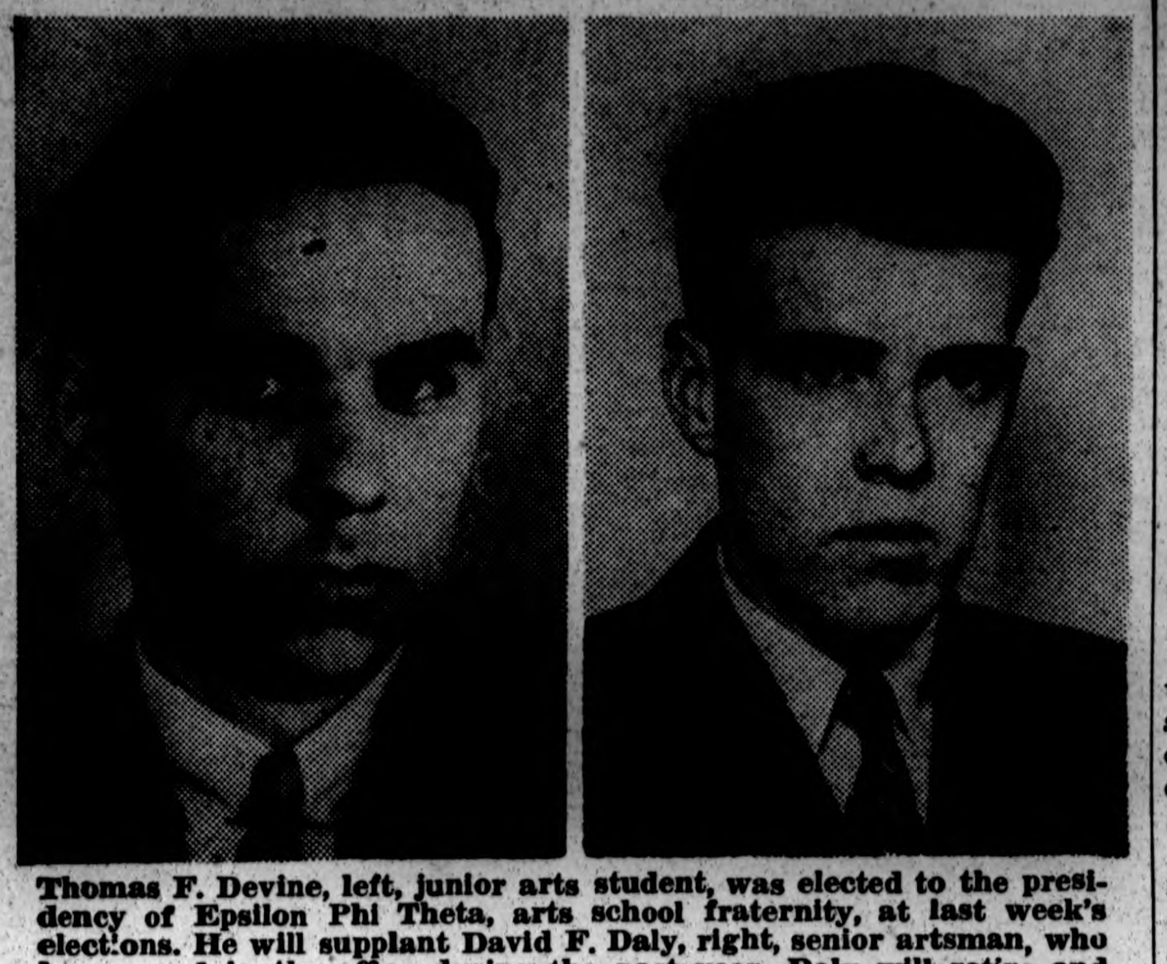
New And Old E. P. T. Presidents



Thomas F. Devine, left, junior arts student, was elected to the presidency of Epsilon Phi Theta, arts school fraternity, at last week's elections. He will supplant David F. Daly, right, senior artsman, who has served in the office during the past year. Daly will retire and Devine will assume office at the annual fratenity banquet, to be held Thursday evening at Kugler's Restaurant.

DPE Frat To Hear Dean At Banquet This Week; Nominations Thursday

Rev. Joseph C. Bartley, O. S. A., dean of the School of Commerce and Finance, will be the principal speaker at the second annual Delta Pi Epsilon fraternity dinner this Thursday evening at Kugler's Restaurant on Chestnut Street, east of Broad Street. Joseph P. McEvoy, junior accounting major, will act as toastmaster.

Following speeches by Maurice J. Doyle, '31, and Patrick J. Dougherty, fraternity moderator, keys will be presented to twenty-eight senior members.

David N. Reardon, president of the fraternity, has called a special meeting for this Thursday at 11:45 A. M. in the commerce auditorium to receive nominations for officers to be elected. Questions regarding the dinner will also be answered.

President Host To Naval Officers

A group of naval officers were the guests of the Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, at a dinner in his rooms on Friday evening.

Included in the party were Commander Burton Davis, U. S. N.; Lieutenant Commander Paul B. Hartenstein, U. S. N. R.; Lieutenant Commander Joseph T. Lockwood, U. S. N. R., and Lieutenant Douglas J. McFarlane, U. S. N. R.

These Naval officers are assisting Fr. Stanford in his tour of eastern cities to explain the Navy's V-1 program to college and university officials. The group came directly from the Benjamin Franklin Hotel in Philadelphia, where the president spoke on Friday afternoon, and left the same evening for Pittsburgh, where Fr. Stanford spoke on Saturday.

Campus Capers

A Few Remarks on Military Affairs Are Spiced With The Latest College Gossip

By ED BENNIS

THE lads are back in full swing after the rather short Easter vacation. Some of them claimed that the vacation was so short that they no sooner got home than they had to turn around and come right back again.

The long army convoys that passed the campus last week gave many of the boys a good idea of what an army in motion looks like. Many of our future "generals" were seen talking to the boys in khaki when the convoys halted for a rest period. Some of the students tried to obtain a little military information, but they soon found out that the army is very mum when it comes to telling things like that. So, we'll have to be satisfied to guess where they are going, although many of our "arm-chair generals" think that particular division of the army will soon be seeing the famous white cliffs.

NFCCS Re-Elects Loyola Student

Frank E. Horka, of Loyola of Baltimore, was re-elected national president of the National Federation of Catholic College Students at the Sunday session of the National Council Meeting held here at Villanova. Thomas C. Muraski, a junior in Villanova's chemical engineering department, was elected first vice-president of the organization.

Muraski is also president of the Philadelphia Region of the N. F. C. C. S. and will assume his new duties early in May.

Other national officers elected were: Louis Kurtz, of Notre Dame, second vice-president; John Simons ,of Seton Hall, third vice-president; and Betty Navarre of Nazareth College, treasurer.

At the first session of the meeting held at Rosemont College on Saturday, reports from the National Commissions on Catholic Action, Church Liturgy, Press, International Relations, and others were read and approved.

A new Commission on Inter-American Action was also formed and the chairmanship awarded to Immaculata College.

Four eastern and one western region of the federation were represented at the two day meeting. The Baltimore-Washington, Philadelphia, Scranton, and New York Regions were the Eastern representatives while the Fort Wayne Region represented the western districts.

Ex-Students Pass Naval Air Tests

Navy officials announced last week that three ex-members of the sophomore and senior classes have passed their first steps toward becoming full-fledged Navy pilots.

George W. Kaseman, ex-'42, of New York City, has successfully completed two months' preliminary flight training at the Squantum, Mass., Naval Air Station and has been ordered to an intermediate base in the South.

Paul C. Verbitsky, ex-member of '41 class, is now serving at Pensacola Naval Training Station. Verbitsky, who was enrolled in the commerce and finance school, is a cadet in the naval air force and has completed his preliminary training in aviation.

Arthur F. Tozer, ex-'44, of Springfield, Pa., was sworn in recently as an aviation cadet at the Naval Aviation base, Grosse Ile, Michigan.

Kaseman, while attending college, was a student in the commerce and finance school. Following his training at the intermediate base, he will be sent either to Pensacola, Jacksonville, or Corpus Christi for a seven months advanced training course. After the completion of this training, he will be ordered to active duty as a pilot in the aviation branch of the Navy.

Tozer, a former mechanical engineer, after completing his freshman year, took up the C. A. A. course given at the college. This was completed in June, 1941. Prior to his enlistment in the aviation branch of the Navy, he completed two years of aerodynamic engineering. At present, he is undergoing the preliminary course of aviation instruction. Upon completion of this course he will be commissioned an Ensign.

The diversified training given to Naval Aviation Cadets prepares them not only for careers in the Navy, but also for commercial aviation after the war. To accomplish this, training in all types of aircraft is included in the course. All flight instruction is given by flying officers in the Navy or Marine Corps and no instructor is assigned more than five cadets.

Navy Secretary Praises College For V-1 Program

The following telegram was received by Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, last week:

"The Navy is proud that your college has undertaken our V-1 plan for training Freshmen and Sophomores as officer material. Please tell your young men who apply for enlisting and training under this plan that they will be serving their nation if they continue their college courses, no less than those of your alumni who are already in active service. The Navy knows your institution and your V-1 students will do their part.

(Signed) Frank Knox, Secretary."

Featuring A Poem Upon First Aid, A Variety Of College Humor Is Presented

By LOU ESPOSITO

RECENT reports have shown that almost all the undergraduate schools in the country have adopted some system of first-aid practice for home use and defense, and in a greater percentage of the schools for girls it has become a required subject. But upon reading the following bit of POEtry from the Trinity "Times," it appears that the Trinity students think very little of these woman first-aiders. Well, I can't say I blame them.

Lady, if you see me lying
On the ground and maybe dying,
Let my gore run, bright and free;
Don't attempt to bandage me.

While there's life there's hope; so, pet,
Don't apply a tourniquet;
Do not give, for my salvation,
"Artificial respiration."

Do not stretch my bones or joints,
Do not press my "pressure points."
If "queer symtoms" you should see,
Don't experiment on me.

If I'm suffering from a "shock,"
Take a walk around the block.
If you must keep busy, pray,
Help to "keep the crowds away."

So, whatever my condition,
Phone at once for a physician.
Let me lie; I'll take a chance,
Waiting for the ambulance.

From "First Aid" I beg release—
Lady, Let Me Die in Peace.

Taking no chances:

As Smith and Jones were waiting at the bus stop, a passer-by stopped and asked Jones the time. Jones did not reply.

After the stranger had passed on Smith asked: "Why didn't you answer him?"

"Well, it's this way," Jones replied. "If I'd told him the time, he might have got chatting, then we might have had a drink together, and in the end I might have asked him home to supper. There he might have met my daughter—and she's a very pretty girl, and they might have fallen in love. Finally they might have got married.

New practitioners were admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court. Oregon's Charles McNary, the 1940 Republican vice-presidential candidate, introduced one such lawyer to the Court.

The case before the Court concerned the appeal for justice under the 14th Amendment, of a convicted forger who believed that his efforts to appeal in his home state had been unlawfully burdened by prison authorities.

In the afternoon, Mr. Bartell, the secretary to one of the commissioners of the Interstate Commerce Commission, informally lectured the students on the categories into which this quasi-judicial body's jurisdiction is addressed and on the divisions of the Commission itself.

Next, Mr. Freer, a member of the Federal Trade Commission, analyzed the scope of this bureau's power, and described its duties. He pointed out particularly that the Congressional statute enacted in 1938 had made potent what had previously been ineffectual in F. T. C. hands—the function to prosecute unfair practices.

Unfortunately, Dr. Hartman had to abandon a projected visit to the Congressional Library that evening. The library had, for some unusual reason, closed early that day.

1942 Gridiron Card Lists Two New Opponents

Baseballers Meet Rider, Manhattan, Temple Away

'Cats Oppose Jaspers in New York Saturday; Hope to Avenge Last Year's Two Setbacks by North Philadelphians

By BILL WALSH

Determined to regain some of the prestige which they lost in their two defeats last week, Villanova's diamond forces meet three more opponents this week. Once again, the three foes will be met in the space of five days. Tomorrow they encounter Rider College in a return engagement, and then meet Manhattan and Temple on Monday and Friday, respectively.

Journeying to Trenton to meet the "Roughriders," the Wildcats are primed for another win over the Jerseyites. They defeated Rider, 9-3, in the opening contest of the season as Chaplar and Malone hurled the Blue and White to a one-sided victory over the Trentonians. Rider, of course, will have improved since their first meeting with Doc Jacobs' forces, but if the Wildcat pitchers have any hitting support at all, Villanova should emerge from this tussle with another victory under their belts.

The Jaspers of Manhattan will be hosts to the Wildcats on Saturday afternoon, as these two Catholic schools continue their athletic rivalry on the baseball diamond. Remembering the upset of the football team last ball, an ulterior motive of the Blue and White is to avenge that gridiron defeat.

Batted .483

Not too much is known with regard to the abilities of the Green and White, but in Dick Jackette, their left fielder, they have one of the best cleanup hitters in New York City. A demon on defense is Charlie McNulty, their veteran shortstop, who is playing his third year of varsity ball. McNulty, incidently, is the man who scored the winning touchdown against the Wildcats last fall.

He is not the only football man on the Jasper team. Quinlan, the right fielder, Ulrich, the catcher, Finkowski, the center fielder, and Schickenreicher, the first baseman, all play dual roles in Manhattan athletics. Quinlan is another member of the Green and White who

Tennis Team Has Six Engagements

The Blue and White netmen are in for a short but solid little season this spring on the clay courts. Because of the accelerated scholastic program they have but three weeks of racquet swinging. Yet, in that time they engage six foes who have formidable net teams.

The Wildcats open Thursday with LaSalle College, their perennial rivals, on the home courts. They will meet LaSalle two weeks later in a return match of their home and home series. Last year they split with the Olney Heights boys.

Pajolek Number One

Between these two matches the 'Cats engage the Seton Hall and University of Delaware netmen on the Main Line courts. Their last two matches are also home, giving them only one battle on foreign clay. They will play host to Rider College of Trenton and Upsala College of East Orange, N. J. Upsala is the only new team on the schedule.

Prospects are fair for Captain Dave Daly and his men. Both Chet Pajolek and George McFadden, who will carry most of the burden this spring, are returning lettermen along with Daly. Pajolek, lanky racquetman will probably play in the number one spot. Other prospects include George Suchs, who also played last season, Austin Gavin, Red Gagen, and Hugh Wells.

The team has not practiced yet because weather conditions have

Wildcats Second To Navy In Triangle Track Meet

Sweeping first places in ten of fourteen events the Naval Academy track team piled up 97½ points to beat Villanova and Catholic University in a triangular meet Saturday at Annapolis. The Wildcats, opening their outdoor season, finished with 46½ markers and the D. C. boys scored 10.

Jack Tingle was Navy's only double winner. He took the 100 and 220 yard dashes. But it might have been a different story if the Wildcat Ace, John DiCarlo, had not been absent from the Villanova lineup because of a strep infection. DiCarlo runs the sprints, the hurdles and broadjumps.

Wildcat captain, Bill Hooper, also scored twin victories, taking the mile in 4.33 and the two mile grind in 10.21.2 for easy wins.

Lillenthall Wins Discus

Dixie Dunbar and Bob O'Sullivan, Villanova middle distance stars, placed first and second in the 440. Dunbar clipped off the distance in a fast 50 seconds flat. He also placed second in the 220 while O'Sullivan ran second to Navy's Hayen in the half mile.

Freshman Bill Lillenthal was the only other 'Cat victor. Bill hurled the discus 126 feet to take that event and also placed third in the shotput. Another first year man, Bill LaFrance, placed second in the javelin throw. Besch of Navy was three inches better with a heave of 174 feet, 11½ inches.

One-mile run—1, Hooper, Villanova; 2, Goode, Navy; 3, Johnston, Navy; 4, Keefride, Villanova. Time, 4.33.

CAPTAIN BILL HOOPER

Sportorial

By Jacques Mauch
Sports Editor

THE baseball team went under their first fire of the season the week before last and came through with their blue colors flying high. But their toughest bit of orientation came last week in the Vermont and Penn bombardments, and the boys found that they are going to be in for a hard season.

Nine errors in two games may be some kind of a record; we don't know. It is something that will add a few more gray hairs to Doc Jacobs' head. Six of these errors came in the Penn fracas, and made the boys look pretty bad despite the fact that Penn had five misplays chalked against them. However, in all this disappointment, two potential stars were discovered . . . two bright lights that made the Doc's heart glow.

The first find was pitcher Joe Malone. Joe, a former intramural star, tried for two years to make the team, but each time ended up back on the mound for his intramural club where he was quite a hurler. This year his chance came in the very first game of the season. He was sent in to relieve Frank Chapler in the fourth inning of the Rider contest. Joe not only held the Trentonites to one hit during his six inning sojourn on the mound, but fanned ten of the men that faced him! More power added to Doc's lengthy twirling staff.

The other starlet of the Wildcat nine is sophomore Bill Smith. Bill was a pitcher until Doc liked his style at the plate and gave him an outfield berth in order to take full advantage of his slugging abilities. He first started out as a fielder at Haverford High School, then, during the summers, took a liking to the pitching business. He hurled for Ardmore in the Main Line League and did pretty well for the local club. Last season he won si xand lost six. But his hitting . . . ah! He turned in a solid .354 for his work at the plate.

If he keeps up this year he will hit much better than .354. In the first three games he has connected safely seven times in thirteen trips to the plate. Out of the seven, two were doubles, one a triple, and the other a lusty wallop against Rider for a home run.

The boy really likes the sport, too. He eats it up. He still favors mound work though, thinks pitching is the best job on a team. "But," says our young Mr. Smith, "I'd play any position, just to be in the ball game."

—V—

What has happened to Hale America? What has become of all the potential athletic giants? Many of the fellows are slipping, lagging behind in their exercises that they promised so dutifully to perform.

With the exception of the varsity athletes, the intramural players, and those few fellows that play basketball down at the gym or swim everyday, the rest of the student body seems to have lost interest in the program. This means that at least half of the student body are guilty of the neglect. Even by exaggerating the number of those engaged in the various sports (so we won't be accused of underestimating students' ambition), we find the total does not exceed five hundred. That leaves another five hundred not actively engaged.

What's the story, fellows? Has the psychological lethargy, usually induced by the advent of spring conquered you already? Wake up!

Auburn and Detroit Are Only Contests Away From Home; Annual Temple Classic Final Clash of the Season

Villanova will encounter eight foes on the gridiron next fall. This announcement was made with the release of the 1942 football schedule yesterday by the athletic board. Two of the opponents, the service team from Ft. Monmouth and Iowa State University appear for the first time on a Wildcat grid roster.

Coach Clipper Smith's charges will open the season with the Ft. Monmouth eleven at Shibe Park on October 10. The service eleven located at Monmouth, N. J., was organized last year and played a full schedule. They met several college elevens including Rutgers University.

Iowa State, member of the Big Six Conference, will also be met at home on Friday night, November 6. The Middle Westerners are coached by Ray Donels who played for them back in 1927-'28.

Two Away Games

In accordance with the celebration of Villanova's Centennial Anniversary all but two of the contests, Auburn and Detroit, will be player at home. Auburn will probably be met at Birmingham, Ala., and the Titans game will be held in Detroit.

The other old foes that reappear on the schedule are Florida U., second game of the season, a Friday night affair, Manhattan, Duquesne, and the neighborhood rivals, the Temple Owls. Temple is the last game of the season and will be played on either November 28 or December 5. The authorities of both schools are waiting to hear from Army-Navy game officials, so that their date will not conflict with the service game. It will, of course, be held at Temple Stadium.

The Schedule:

Blue Runners Win National Crown

Jumbo Elliott's Wildcat tracksters ran to their first Junior National A. A. U. indoor title Easter Saturday night on the boards of the Philadelphia Arena. In their last indoor appearance of the year, the Blue and White racked up 33 points by placing in all the running events, but the 600 yard run which they did not enter.

Harry Keefrider and Bob O'Sullivan got the 'Cats off to an early lead by finishing one-two in the 1000 yard event, both far ahead of the field. O'Sullivan, who was leading slowed at the tape for a dead heat but the officials ruled Keefrider the winner.

Hooper Wins Mile

Captain Bill Hooper won the Junior National mile crown driving past Windy Emlet, Franklin & Marshall Academy ace, with three laps to go. His time was 4 minutes and 41 seconds, which was good considering the condition and size of the track, a fourteen lap, flat turn affair that made things very uncomfortable for the runners and slowed down the times considerably.

Villanova cleaned up in the relay events taking the sprint medley and two mile and finishing second in the mile to West Chester Teachers after George Guida took a terrific spill on the first turn, then dazedly picked himself up and finished his leg.

Numerous Errors Cost 'Cat Nine Two Victories

By JACK KOVAL

Inaugurating their 73rd baseball campaign on Saturday, the fourth of April, the Villanova Wildcats defeated Rider College of Trenton on the Main Line field 9-3. Further contests were staged with the Vermont University and University of Pennsylvania nines which were lost by numerous errors 2-1 and 11-9 respectively.

Starting pitcher for the Wildcats in the Rider game was Frank Chaplar who carried the mound duties for the first three innings. Coming in to replace him was Joe Malone, who went the rest of the route against the Trentonians. He allowed but one hit and struck out ten men.

The new men on the diamond for the Wildcats looked very good in spite of their lack of experience. Bill Smith, sophomore, was one of those new members and really kept himself busy in whacking out a homer, triple, and a double. Jim Traitz first sacker, played heads up ball in the field besides contributing two hits, a double and a single.

No-Hitter Wasted

The Villanovans were defeated by the Tigers of Vermont University in a tight struggle which finally ended in a 2-1 score in favor of Vermont. Jigger Donahue pitched a sensational game and held the Vermont team hitless throughout the entire contest. He was assisted in this noble feat by Major McDonnell. Austin Registers Third Win In Row In Mural League

Austin Hall's baseball team increased their lead over the Fedigan Hall nine in last week's intramural battles by scoring two overwhelming victories. One was a smashing 16-3 win over the inexperienced Alumni frosh and the other was an 11-7 victory over the Mendel Resident team.

Alumni Hall holds down third place in the league over Mendel by virtue of their victory against the same Mendel the week before last. This was a bitter struggle between the two frosh clubs and was decided in the last inning when Bob Barrett, Greenie flash, slapped a sharp single with two down to push across the winning tally for a 9-8 victory.

Austin on Wednesday grabbed four runs in the first inning against Alumni and never had to worry. Helis walked, Tony Paruta singled, then both scored when Mariani's short fly was misjudged by the Greenie right fielder. Tom McQuade, who was injured later in the game walked. Art Martin, next man up grounded out but Jim Hobbs slapped a double and Red Cahill poled a long one for a three bagger to score two more runs.

The afternoon was a regular merry-go-round for the Austin batters as they scored one in the second, seven in the big third, and two each in the sixth and seventh frames. Mustachioed Alex Lukacs blanked Alumni until the last inning when they scored three runs on three hits, one a double by Bob Barrett.

Sunday the blue nine continued their slugging ways, but not until the Mendel baseballers had thrown quite a scare into them by scoring four runs in the very first frame. Austin got two in both the first and second but it was not until the fourth that they took the lead with a four run barrage. The bats of Pete Hin, Bull Molnar and Art Martin were prominent in this rally. The final outcome was 11-7 in Austin's favor.

Fedigan's Gigilos drubbed Alumni in the other half of Sunday's entertainment 15-4. Several bad errors by the frosh coupled with ten hits gave the Gigilos their large total.

Panetti started the Fedigan fireworks with a single. After Daly grounded out, second baseman "Jarring John" Cerulo hit a mighty triple that pushed across the first tally, then runs began to pour across the plate so fast it looked like a marathon. Panetti led both teams at bat with three hits, one a three base blast.

This Wednesday Fedigan will tackle Mendel. On Sunday morning they have a return engagement while Austin and Alumni battle it out in the afternoon contest on Mendel Field.

is noted for his hitting ability, and will have to be pitched to with caution by the Wildcat hurlers. Last season he attained the remarkable batting average of .483, to lead the rest of the Jaspers by a wide margin.

Although it is not definite as yet, the probable moundsman selected to oppose the Wildcats will be Bill Howell, veteran southpaw hurler, who was very impressive in his many starts last season.

On Monday, April 20, the Main Liners meet Temple at the Broad Street stadium in a game that promises to be one of the feature contests of the present campaign. Last year the Owls defeated the Wildcats twice, 5-4 in a tenth inning affair, and 11-3 in a regular nine-inning game. So the 'Cats will seek revenge in Monday's engagement.

Andy Tomasic was the winning pitcher in both of last spring's contests and he or George Munro will undoubtedly be selected to start on the mound for the Cherry and White. A senior this year, Tomasic had the remarkable record of eleven victories and no defeats last season. He is without a doubt, the outstanding hurler in the Philadelphia area, and will be a tough nut for the Villanova batters to crack if he starts.

His ability, however, is not confined merely to his duties on the mound, as it was Tomasic who knocked in the winning run for Temple in last season's ten inning struggle, when he doubled along the left field foul line with a teammate on second base, to make the score 5-4, thereby winning his own ball game.

sophomores the Green and White succeeded in pushing across two unearned runs as a result of two costly errors.

After working like a big leaguer for eight innings, striking out eight men, "Jigger" injured his arm with one out in the ninth. He was relieved on the mound by small but mighty "Major" McDonnell, who struck out the remaining two batters on eight pitched balls.

Score Both Runs On Errors

Both teams opened up very impressively. Vermont drew first blood when, with two outs in the third frame, they tallied one run as a result of second baseman Joe Lord's error. In the fourth, they added another run on a walk, a sacrifice followed with an error which advanced the runner to third, and a long fly to Joe Koproski.

After going scoreless for seven innings, the charges of Doc Jacobs finally succeeded in tallying one run in the eight. Joe Coffee sent a fast grounder to the Vermont short stop, who fumbled the ball. A smashing double by Bill Smith into left field and then a long fly into center by Jim Traitz scored Coffee from third.

Seeking their eighth consecutive win over the University of Pennsylvania aggregation, the Wildcats traveled to River Field Wednesday but the Red and Blue gained their revenge by handing the Villanovans their second straight loss 11-9 by virtue of a mighty home run clout with the bases full by Art McQuillen.

Smith Doubles

Bill Woods assumed the mound duties for the Blue with Ted Bicky in the backstop post. Wood beat Penn last year 6-3 allowing but three hits. Opposing him on the hill was Hugh Niklason, the only letterman among the Red and Blue hurlers to return this year.

In the opening frame, lead-off man Joe Coffee, followed by Bill Smith, immediately got their eyes on Veteran Hugh Niklason's pitches for a single and double, respectively. Jim Traitz then bounced out to second scoring Coffee on the play for the first run of the game.

However, Penn came back in their half of the first and took the lead 2-1. Costly errors by Coffee and Lord and a triple by Weismiller accounted for the two runs. Weismiller, clean-up man for the Penn nine, was a thorn in the side of the Wildcats all afternoon. In five trips to the plate he had two triples and two singles.

Koproski Hits Homer

The Penn aggregation then tightened their defense, holding the Blue and White to three scoreless innings, but in the top half of the sixth, the fireworks started. Three successive singles by Koproski, Yednock and Bicky filled the bases. Joe Lord grounded out to third scoring Koproski, and then Wood came through with a bingle to center bringing home Yednock and Bicky. This put Villanova ahead again 6-4, but in the same inning Penn still continued in their stubborn ways and sent three more runs home on hits by Stackhouse, Weismiller and Hain.

Joe Koproski's homer down the right field chalk line in the seventh with two men on accounted for three runs. This sent Villanova ahead again 9-7.

The climax of this slugfest came in the eighth inning when McQuillen clouted his homer.

'Cat Keglers Lose To Quakers Again

Despite a great improvement in their scoring on the Ardmore Recreation Alleys on Sunday night, the Villanova keglers were again defeated by the University of Pennsylvania, this time by the narrow margin of forty-one pins. It was a close match all the way, with the Penn bowlers winning out in the final two frames of the third game.

Bob Simpson was the leader for the Wildcats, as he put together games of 183, 199, and 135, for a total of 517, which gave him an average of 172. Angelo Rosa had a 173 average, but his 349 total was compiled in two games.

Also deserving a great deal of credit for his efforts is Jack McGrath. After a poor 138 in the opener, he added a 203, which enabled him to tie Broderick of Penn for the high game of the night, and a 171, to give him a 512 series, and a 170 average.

Resplendent in their white shirts bearing the blue "Wildcat" emblem, the Villanova pinmen were a greatly improved group of keglers on Sunday night, and should add to their abilities in each forthcoming match. Their 881 in the second game is an excellent total in any bowling circle, and their 2459 three game total gave them an 820 average for the evening, a great improvement over their previous showing.

With new hopes, the Wildcats now look forward to the coming matches with Drexel, LaSalle, St. Joseph's, Temple, Swarthmore, and Haverford. As yet, however, no definite dates have been set for these contests.

Junior M. E.'s Beat Frosh; Undisputed PKP Leaders

Saturday afternoon saw the Junior Mechanical Engineers move into undisputed first place as the Phi Kappa Pi league swung into its last week of scheduled competition.

The Junior Mechanicals and the Freshmen were previously tied at 22 wins each. The Juniors took the first game but the Frosh came back and took the second. From then on the Juniors pulled away as they took the third game and added an extra point for total pins. This gave them a margin of two games. Next week these two teams will battle it out for the title. The frosh will have to take three games to cop the title.

The Junior Chems lost their only chance at the title as they dropped one game to the last place Sophomore Day Hops B. This dropped them into third place, two games ahead of the rejuvenated Sophomore Chemicals.

Knockdown Matches

The Sophomore Chemicals jolted the faculty as they took four games. They won twelve in a row the first three weeks, dropped the next sixteen and the last two weeks they won eight straight.

Saturday's matches were the last ones of the season. Next Saturday finds the teams involved in a modification of the Shaughnessy Playoff System as the first and second place teams play for the title, the third and fourth for third and so forth. The week's matches will be called knockdown matches. In order to take the title from the Junior Mechanicals the Freshmen will have to take four points.

Simpson moved into first place in the averages division as Angelo Rosa lost the magic touch. There is only one tenth of a point difference in their averages. Cryor, McGrath and Cahill make up the balance in the first five. Simpson's average is 159.3.

.383 AVERAGE

Captain Joe Yednock, Villanova third baseman, led the Wildcats in batting last year. He hit a good .383 average. Joe landed on the bases safely 31 times out of 81 trips to the plate.

YOU CAN HELP SPEED THIS VITAL WAR-TIME SERVICE!

Every telephone user can help to keep lines open and speed the service by following a few simple rules:

1 Be sure you have the right number before you make a call.

2 Don't ask "Information" for numbers that are listed in the directory.

3 Answer all calls as quickly as possible.

4 Be sure to "hang up" after each call. Don't let a book or anything else hold the telephone "off the hook."

5 If you can conveniently call at other times, try to avoid making Long Distance calls during the peak periods of telephone traffic—9:30 to 11:30 A. M., 2 to 4 P. M., 7 to 8 P. M.

Thank You!

HERE AND THERE

By JACK DUDLEY

Half of the fun in life for sports columnists is picking winners of future battles. We're going to help ourselves to some of that rightful pleasure and give our predictions of the major league campaigns this summer.

Our first choice will be the easiest. The Yankees will leave the field far behind in the American League.

The Boston Red Sox, the Chicago White Sox, and the Cleveland Indians will fill out the first division in that order. All three teams may range betwen second and fifth places depending on their own fortunes and the fortunes of the others. The Red Sox need additional pitching and replacements for fading veterans to stay up there. Jimmy Dykes' White Sox, comprising the greatest number of castoffs in baseball, will take third place if their pitching holds up, but the danger of a complete collapse in midseason is greater in this case than in any other. Cleveland's pitching staff holds the key to their welfare.

Tigers May Take Third

The Detroit Tigers may rise as high as third place and may drop as low as sixth, depending on their aging pitchers. The loss of Pat Mullin to the Air Corps leaves the Bengals with a weak outfield.

The St. Louis Browns, usually the most disappointing team in the circuit each year, will continue to let the fans down by winding up in the sixth slot. Because on paper they never appear as bad as their average indicates, we figure they have a chance to finish in fourth place. Yet again the Brownies are just as apt to sink into the cellar. The best bet for them is sixth place.

A's in the Cellar

The Washington Senators may take fifth place if they find replacements for Travis and Lewis. They may sink as far as seventh but we think Leonard and Newsom will keep them ahead of the Athletics.

The Philadelphia Athletics may be pushed as far as sixth place if Washington and St. Louis outdistance them in the dash for the American League cellar, but the A's will probably get the jump on them and refuse to be dislodged from their accustomed haunts.

In the National League, where the fans see a pennant race as well as a ball game, advance indictions are as follows:

Brooklyn

On paper the Dodgers are better than last year. If veterans Camilli, Herman and Vaughan come through, the Bums are in.

St. Louis

The best pitching staff in the league will bring the Cards in second unless they can improve the punch in their batting order.

Cincinnati

Pitching will be good, as usual. Reds can cop any spot in first division depending on hitting and all-around spirit of team.

Pittsburgh

Best Pirate team in four years. With good pitching they may take third place. Fifth place is a possibility if the Giants rally.

New York

Giants will show improvement under Ott and with Mize in there. It will be a three way fight with the Reds and Pirates for third place.

Boston

The Braves should finish sixth because the Cubs and Phillies are in the National League.

Chicago

If the Cubs put some fight and fire in their play they can lead the second division. They'll be the best seventh place team in baseball.

Phillies

Because they're the Phils they'll finish in the cellar. There will be no difficulty showing an improvement over 1941.

If Doc Jacobs wants a labor-saving lineup to put on the field for the next game, we have one here. With these boys playing, he should have no trouble getting their attention:

Pitcher	Joe Malone
Catcher	Joe Noonan
First Base	Joe Creelan
Second Base	Joe Lord
Third Base	Joe Yednock
Shortstop	Joe Coffey
Center Field	Joe Koproski
Right Field	Joe Dervin

220, and 300 in that order beat out a speedy quartet from Wayne University of Detroit in the fast time of 2:09.6.

McCarthy and Kiley joined Keefrider and Hooper in the two mile to beat St. Joseph's College in 8:35.1. Villanova was trailing St. Joseph's until the final leg when Hooper took over. He ran a fine anchor and scorched past Frank Earley with three laps remaining and kept his lead until the finish.

Sprinter John DiCarlo finished second to Sergeant Tom Carey, Negro star of the 369th Coast Artillery in the 50 yard dash and freshman Jim Rooney placed third in the 50 yard high hurdles to add to the Wildcats' crown winning total.

CONTACT LENSES

Freshman Joe Coffey, shortstop on the Wildcat baseball team wears contact lenses on the diamond.

Walsh, Casey Lead Qualifiers

Displaying the same form which enabled him to hold down the number one position last season, Bill Walsh, one of the two hold-overs from last year's squad, shot a 78 at the Pennsylvania Golf Club, last Wednesday, to lead his nearest rival by six strokes, in the first of two qualifying rounds for the six berths on this spring's golf team. Bob Casey, the other returning veteran, who held down the number two spot last season, was second with an 84, followed very closely at 86, by Paul Stenn, varsity member of the '40 team, but who was unable to play during the last campaign, because of his spring football duties.

After a rather sloppy 41 on the outgoing nine, Walsh found his short game, which was sadly lacking up to that point, and shot an incoming 37, for his total of 78. Casey put together two 42s, while Stenn had nines of 42 and 44.

St. John's Match Postponed

Bunched together between 93 and 96, were the next three candidates. Hugh Matthews and Bill Powers, both newcomers, had 93 and 94, respectively, while Ernie Klappenbach, alternate last season, and manager during the present campaign, was in sixth position, with 96.

Because the match with St. John's of Brooklyn, which was originally scheduled for last Friday, was postponed until the 17th, it will be possible to play another qualifying round tomorrow. Upon the completion of tomorrow's final test, the six man aggregation will be determined. The second round scores will be added to those of last week, and the men with the six lowest thirty-six hole totals will be members of the team, with the seventh man being classed as alternate.

Captain To Be Elected

It is expected that the scores of the first round will more or less serve as an illustration of the potential abilities of each candidate, but tomorrow's round will have a lot to do in determining the positions that each man will hold in the lineup. It is unlikely that the first three men will be dislodged from their respective first round positions, but in the battle for the 4, 5, and 6 spots, there may be a few changes. Also to be considered is Bill Helmig, a freshman, who was in seventh place last Wednesday with a 97.

Another item which must be attended to after the qualifying rounds have been completed, is the election of a captain for this year's team. This vacancy was left open as a result of Cliff Randolph's graduation and as yet, has not been filled.

JACOBS' RECORD

Doc Jacobs has a record that few college diamonds mentors can match. Two of his former pupils, Nick Etten of the Phils and Mickey Vernon with the Washington Senators, are major league first sackers, and a former shortstop of the Wildcats, Len Merullo, is battling for that position with the Chicago Cubs.

"Forgotten Man" Traitz Now Star First Sacker

By FRANK BAGOT

A cloud of mystery seems to surround this week's Sportlight hero. He appeared from practically nowhere to answer Doc Jacob's prayer for a competent first sacker. The man is Jim Traitz and his story smacks a little of the miraculous.

Jim graduated from Northeast public high where he excelled in his studies but never played baseball. After graduating from Northeast, Jim worked for two years before entering college and made enough in this time to pay his way through Villanova. All this time, however, Jim still was no baseball player.

During the summer prior to his entrance here, he became interested in the game and in his usually thorough way began to play ball. First base seemed like a good position as there was always lots of action, so Jim centered all his effort there. During this first season he broke his ankle. Although this slowed him down it did not stop his progress on the diamond.

Bats in Third Position

In his sophomore year Jim first went out for the varsity at Villanova. He displayed lots of class and was readily recognized, but experience won out and Jim did not make the first nine.

The next year was devoted to studies, but when his senior year rolled around and the call went out for the first practice. Jim was the first to report and it was not long before everyone knew that here was a varsity ball player.

Doc's faith in Jim has been well-answered. He is a good clean fielder, covering lots of ground around the first sack and he can really stretch that frame of his to make the close ones count. Four hits in the first three games are credited to him. Batting in the number three position he can usually be counted on for some action and he has developed quite a skill as a bunter which is a big asset to any hitter.

Played in Summer

Summer experience in the Philadelphia League has greatly sharpened Jim's game. Though working in the Exide Battery plant he always found time to work out and play with the team from the Thirtieth Ward.

Around school Jim is known as a scholar. Naturally conscientious, his name has appetred almost constantly on the Science School Honor roll. Accepted at both Jefferson and Temple Med Schools he chose Temple for his training and is planning to join the Army Medical Reserve Corps. This will make it possible for him to complete his studies.

Caught Napping

An amusing incident happened to Jim this year in the Penn game. With a runner on first, both Jim's and the runner's attention was momentarily distracted. At this moment, Woods, the pitcher, threw to first, the ball passing over Traitz's head without either he or the runner noticing it. There was a great pause in the game with everyone watching the activity at first base and it was only at the insistance of the coach thae the runner would advance to second still puzzled as to what had happened. Outside of a little embarrassment no harm resulted from the play, but from now on it's going to take a good man to sneak anything past Jim — at least when he is on first base.

Jim Traitz fits perfectly the Villanova standards of Scholar Athlete and Gentleman. No more need be said in his accord. Just meet him, you'll like him. I did.

DENTISTRY IS NOT OVERCROWDED

Dentistry is the only profession that is decreasing in personnel.

More dentists are presently needed for the Army and Navy. More dentists are likewise needed for civilian service, since a greater proportion of the public is rapidly being educated to the importance of dental services.

Two years of pre-dental college studies are required for admission including: inorganic chemistry (8 sem. hrs.), organic chemistry (4 sem. hrs.), physics (8 sem. hrs.), and biology or zoology (8 sem. hrs.). No conditions on admission are allowed.

Pre-dental students who will qualify by June or by September are advised to apply for admission immediately. Freshmen will begin their dental studies in an accelerated program on September 25, 1942.

Write for particulars to The Secretary of the Dental School.

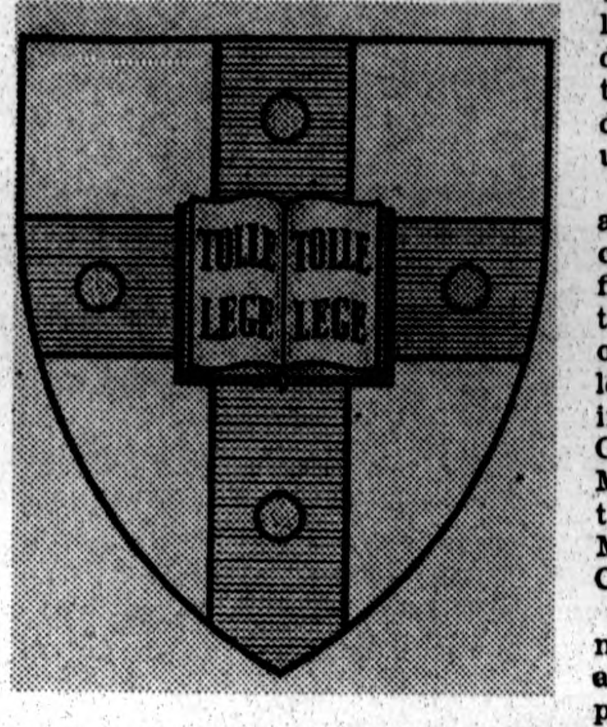
New Shield Adopted By College; Designed In White, Gold And Blue

Designed by the Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A., with the advice and assistance of the Rev. Dr. George B. Stratemier, O. P., an expert in Heraldry of Catholic U., a new college coat-of-arms was recently approved by the Board of Trustees.

The new shield will not replace the present seal of the college. The seal will be used for official business while the shield will be used on letter-heads, correspondence, catalogs, and by college organizations.

The new shield was first used on the greeting cards sent last Christmas by college authorities. The coat-of-arms as designed by Fr. Vrana employs white, gold, and blue in its color scheme. Against a fiield of white is placed a cross of blue with four gold discs. Between these lies an open book inscribed with the words, "Tolle Lege, Tolle Lege."



This design was used to indicate the complete title of the college in heraldry: "The Augustinian College of Villanova in the State of Pennsylvania, an educational institution under the patronage of St. Thomas of Villanova and under the direction of the Order of St. Augustine."

The tincture azure (blue) cross on the field of white is the heraldic color of the college representing the colors of Our Blessed Mother under the title of Mother of Good Counsel.

The Cross signifies the Faith and is most prominent on the shield. The four bezants or gold discs are representative of St. Thomas of Villanova and indicates his charity.

The open book and inscribed words mark Villanova as an institution of learning under the Augustinian Order.

Brown New Band

showings presented on a New York stage in some time." Good humor combined with good music is the key-note of his success.

Started at Duke

Brown's first contact with popular band music came while attending Duke University. There he led the "Blue Devils'" band through a successful tour of the North. Leaving college he began building his band and learning the "secret of popular success."

He gave up his first band to learn about arranging. Ruby Newman, Isham Jones, Larry Clinton, and others were among the leaders for whom he arranged. From this experience he has devised a style of his own, tailor-made to fit the capabilities of his band members.

In February of 1941 Brown began his steady rise to the top. He was booked at the Theatre-Cafe in Chicago. He was originally scheduled for four weeks but his fans kept him on the band stand for four months.

New Additions

Brown's band features four "sax" men, with three on the trumpet, the same number on the trombone. Four other men provide rhythm from the traps, piano, guitar, and bass. In the brass and rhythym sections are two men recently added. Billy Butterfield on the trumpet brings new surety to the brass while the new drummer, Bunny Shawker, supplies a beat for which Brown has been hunting since he organized his present band.

The vocalists, Betty Bonney and Ralph Young, team together for several vocal duets. Brunette Betty Bonney first sang with Colonel Manny Praeger and has only one complaint, "Ralph Young always trips over my feet when he steps to the microphone for his numbers." Young has a voice similar to the late Russ Columbo. He formerly sang with Teddy Powell and Tommy Reynolds.

Magazine Award

Last October Brown's orchestra received a coveted award from the "Music and Rhythm" magazine. Picking the group as the band of the month, the magazine commented on Brown's alertness and capability for leadership. His orchestra was said to combine the qualities for all-around success in the dance band field; a high degree of musicianship and the ability to attain commercial box-office appeal without cheapening the musicianship.

With the announcement of the band, all of the prom sub-committees immediately swung into action. The decorations committee, not especially hindered by the delay, has procured the necessary materials for beautifying the Field House. Although the present "war emergency" has removed from the market many of the materials needed, a supply was purchased and is being made ready for the gala occasion.

Francis Brady, Prominent Alumnus, Dies; Seminary Choir Gives Recital

Word was received last week by the Alumni office of the death of Francis C. Brady, '13. Brady received a B. S. degree from Villanova. He was engaged in business in New York.

A great exponent of Catholic Action, he carried on extensive work for the Catholic Evidence Guilds of New York and Baltimore. He was the founder of the latter. For the past five years he has served on the Board of Governors of the Alumni Association.

In response to student requests, the Seminary Choir, under the direction of Rev. Ralph J. Handran, O. S. A., presented last night a recital for the resident students following the regular evening Chapel services.

At a meeting held last Wednesday in Simpson Hall, the members of the Belle Masque Radio Club witnessed the dramatization of a short fantasy written by Thomas McFarland and produced by six of the members. Constructive criticism followed and the most outstanding flaw seemed to be the lack of coherence.

Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A., advisor of the club, revealed that at the next meeting members will be appointed to the different departments affiliated with radio broadcasting.

War And The Student

graduate before being called for induction.

Also, it is well to keep in mind that the college student inducted into the Army has an opportunity to procure officer status. The Army plans to send 75,000 men to Officers Candidate Schools next year. Only three months of military experience is required for admission to such schools.

Hence, the college training which a student possesses when inducted should enable him to advance more readily from the ranks. This opportunity to advance from the ranks is about the same as in the competitive plans offered as an inducement to volunteering.

In educating himself to serve his country in war, and also to prepare himself for the period of peace and readjustment which will follow, the student must make intelligent use of the advantages offered in the college curriculum.

The college has done and will continue to do everything possible to meet the educational needs of the armed forces, the war agencies and the war industries. Every effort will be made to acquaint students with war service opportunities as they continue to develop.

Jr. Reservations

Reservations for seating arrangements at the junior Dinner-Dance may now be made, co-chairmen John Quinn and Joseph Hagerty announced last week.

Parties of six and eight will be seated at tables, the co-chairmen revealed. Juniors who wish to keep their party intact may do so by contacting either of the chairmen on or before Friday, April 17.

The Dinner-Dance will begin at 8:00 P. M.

Spanish Club

Conestoga Mill will be the scene of the annual banquet of the Spanish Club to be held Thursday, April 23, in honor of Cervantes, it was announced last week by Rev. Lorenzo Lozano, O. S. A., moderator of the organization.

At the banquet two students will be awarded prizes for the best essay and poem on Cervantes' life.

Quinn Elected To NFCCS Post

Engineer Chosen Regional President at Meeting Sunday; Succeeds Muraski

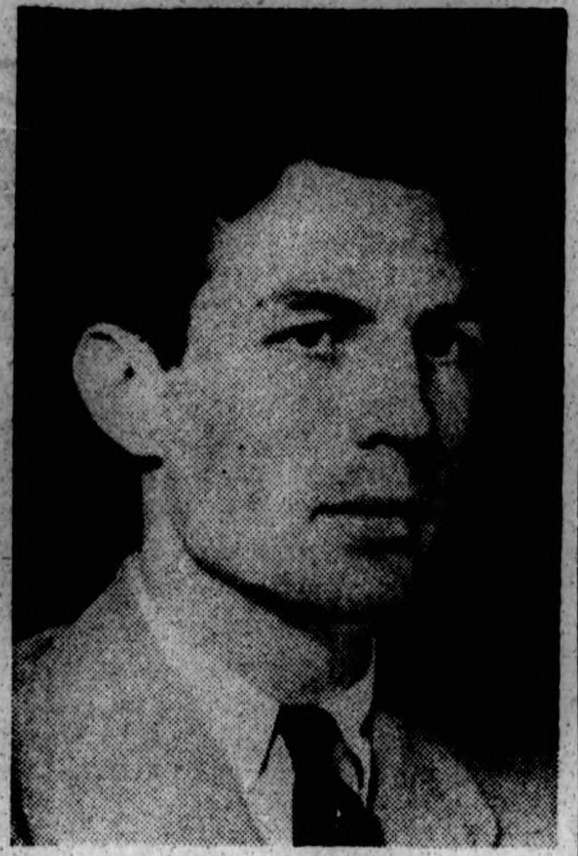
John J. Quinn, junior chemical engineering student and co-chairman of the Junior Class Dinner-Dance, was elected President of the Philadelphia Council of the National Federation of Catholic College Students at a meeting of the Regional Council held Sunday afternoon at St. Joseph's College.

Dr. Furey, President of Immaculata College and new Regional Chaplain, was then introduced and gave a short address.

Other officers elected were Anne Mehan, of Immaculata College, vice-president; Helen Tansey, of the College of Chestnut Hill, treasurer; Mary Mingey, of Rosemont, recording secretary.

Commissions Voted

Following the election of officers, the Regional Council voted to extend commissions to four of the participating schools. Villanova was named by the delegates as Chairman of the International Relations Commissions, Chestnut Hill was given that of the Student Government Commission; Rosemont, the Victory Commission; and St. Joseph's, the Interracial Commission.



JOHN J. QUINN

Because of the already active part which they are playing in Pan-American affairs, Immaculata was also awarded a National Chairmanship of the Inter-American Commission.

Delegates Accept

These Commissions were accepted by the individual delegates pending formal acceptance by their respective colleges.

The N. F. C. C. S. functions on all local campi through local commissions and the Regional Commissions act as authority for the latter.

Retiring officers of the Philadelphia Council are Thomas C. Muraski, president; Helen Tansey, vice-president, and Alma Gruber, secretary-treasurer. The newly-elected president was given the authority by the Council to select a corresponding secretary from his own school to facilitate with the work of the Commission.

Salzmann Gives Speech On "Physics Of The Eye"

George E. Salzmann, sophomore science student, addressing members of the Science Seminar last Thursday in Simpson Hall, discussed "The Physics of the Eye."

Illustrating his talk with charts and photographs made by himself, he explained the mechanical functioning of the eye and how images received on the retina are transformed into sight in the brain.

Salzmann concluded his speech with a description of several eye defects and explained how they are corrected by means of lenses. The talk supplemented an address made the previous week by Louis Carfagno on the topic, "Physiology and Common Defects of the Eye."

The next seminar will be held this Thursday at 4:30 P. M. in Simpson Hall when Lester Mann, chairman, will speak on "Infantile Paralysis."

Today Deadline For Corsage Orders

Urging all prospective promgoers to place early orders for the "Victory" corsages which will be featured at the Centennial Class dance on Friday, members of the corsage committee revealed that it would be impossible to purchase the special flowers at the door on the night of the dance.

"Orders for the corsages must be placed by 6:00 P. M. today for delivery on the night of the Prom," a committtee member stated today. "The price of $1.50 still prevails. Every student, and especially every member of the junior class, who is going to the dance should provide his date with such a corsage."

Orders will be taken by George A. Harris, education; Charles J. Callahan, commerce; Thamas C. Muraski, engineering, and Anthony P. DiGiovanni.

Madison Victor In Oratory Final

John J. Madison, senior chemistry major, was adjudged the victor in the finals of the annual Murtaugh Medal oratory contest held yesterday afternoon in the Mendel Amphitheatre, Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, moderator of the contest, announced this morning.

Runners up "ex aequo" were the other two finalists, Thomas DeSipin, senior mechanical engineer, and Frank McKay, senior commerce student.

The finalists survived a preliminary contest held last Monday in the Amphitheatre. Madison will be awarded the gold medal at the graduation exercises on May 19.

Speeches in the final were from eight to ten minutes on the subject, "The Catholic Ideal of Patriotism," the topic which has been employed throughout the entire composition. Judges were members of the faculty.

Madison, who is studying for a degree of B. S. in Chemistry, is president of Chi Epsilon Mu, honor society of the engineering school. A consistent scholastic leader since his freshman year, he is at present serving as an assistant intructor in the frehman laboratories. He is also a member of the Villanova Chemical Society.

DeSipin, a member of Phi Kappa Pi, engineering fraternity, also serves on the staffs of the "Engineer" and Belle Air. McKay is photography editor of the latter publication.

Fr. Sullivan stressed the fact that the Murtaugh Medal contest plays no part in the selection of the valedictorian for graduation exercises. Competition for that honor begins next week.

Noon Music Seminar To Hear Recorded Version Of 'Mikado'

Tomorrow's day hop music seminar will feature a recorded version of the Mikado. Since these are the pre-war discs, Dr. Edward L. Haenisch, moderator, informed, the Mikado and his hatchet men will not be referred to as "gangsters of Japan," as they are in the latest record release.

In the evening at 7:30, the Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A., will conduct the resident seminar in Simpson Hall. All are invited to attend.

Last Wednesday evening's seminar featured operatic selections from the German and Romantic schools. The "Grand March" from "Aida," the "Toreador Song" from "Carmen," and a Wagnerian Prelude were the more popular compositions played.

The noon hour seminar last week was the third guessing contest conducted this year. Fifteen works were played while the contestants attempted to name them and their composers. The winner will receive a record of his own choice.

John Deery, sophomore arts student, was the winner of the two previous contests, which Dr. Haenisch characterizes as one of the most popular aspects of the weekly meetings.

New Plane Model Bought For C.A.A.

Flyers Receive Airplane and Five Cylinder Radial Engine From Physics Dept.

(Illustrated on Page Four)

To supplement ground work connected with the C. A. A. course by actual demonstration, a model airplane and a model engine were recently purchased by the physics department.

The airplane is an exact replica of the plane most employed in primary training of pilots and service crews.

William G. Driscoll, C. A. A. instructor, explained that it was constructed with the greatest care by expert engineers connected with the Pennsylvania W. P. A. Over 500 actual size airplane blueprints, supplied by the Piper Aircraft Corporation, were redrawn to one-fifth scale to construct the small model.

A Maze of Wires

To the uninitiated, it presents a hopeless maze of wires, struts, and wings, but Driscoll insists that before the end of the course every student will know exactly what purpose each part serves, what stress and what strain every bit of metal must be able to bear, how the whole is coordinated by a system of wires, and how the pilot controls them all from his cockpit.

Methods of assembly used in the Piper Plant were adopted in building the small craft, and overall dimensions are an accurate copy from the plane which it resembles. Only occasionally where it was required to preserve the strength of a stress member or to permit manipulation of mobile parts was any degree of exaggeration beyond the scale made. Materials used in building it were standard airplane stock.

Seven Foot Wingspread

Wingspread of the model is seven feet. The whole machine weighs only 138 pounds. The wings are demountable to provide convenient transfer. The government is offering the plane to any school or college for use in Defense Training courses.

Driscoll believes that it will prove of value in demonstrating at first hand many aerodynamical and structural engineering principles. All the moving parts of the wings and tail assembly respond to the "stick" or rudder foot pedal. An approximation of the manner in which a plane responds to actual flight conditions can be demonstrated.

New Model Engine

The other recent addition to the course is a model radial airplane engine. Designed by the National Defense Division of the State Department of Public Instruction, it is intended expressly for classroom, ground school, and civilian pilot training use.

Pistons, inlet and outlet valves, and the ignition system function exactly in the manner of a five-cylinder, radial, gasoline airplane engine. Connecting rods and crankshaft assembly are three-quarter size replicas of actual engine parts. The model is operated by a hand crank.

Spanish Club Dinner To Be Held Thursday

At the regular meeting of the Spanish Club last Thursday final plans were made for the annual banquet to be held this Thursday evening at the Conestoga Mill. As a vote of thanks to the girls of Chestnut Hill who are in the cast of the play to be presented at Penn, an invitation was extended to them to be present at the banquet. Nearly a hundred members of Villanova's club are expected to attend this affair.

With girls and faculty members from Immaculata, Chestnut Hill and Rosemont Colleges as guests the organization presented a dress rehearsal of the play, "De Tal Arbol," which is to be given in the Cultural Olympics at the University of Pennsylvania. Directed and produced by Rev. Lorenzo Lazano, O. S. A., club moderator, the performance in the Field House was followed by the serving of refreshments and a short period of dancing.

Spring Scene Prom Heads Curtailed Junior Week

Les Brown's Band To Be Featured In Vernal Atmosphere; Dancing In Field House Climaxes War-Shortened Centennial Class Celebration

By WARD C. GUNCHEON

Centennial Class Juniors begin a "war shortened" junior week program this Friday evening, dancing to the music of Les Brown's orchestra. With dancing from 10:00 P. M. to 2:00 A. M. the juniors will present a Junior Prom which they believe will surpass those of past years. Tickets for the annual affair have been placed on sale at $5.50 a couple, tax included.

The present committee headed by James A. Walsh has encountered obstacles which at times threatened the cancellation of the prom. But despite these the various committees have planned a prom to be "the best ever." With all arrangements with Les Brown definitely settled the committees are in the final stage of their preparations.

Revolutionary Decorations

As they enter the Field House, couples will gaze upon something revolutionary in decorations. Keeping to a modern theme, the decorations committee is constructing an atmosphere of a spring scene. Suspended from the ceiling and concealing from view the tan draperies will be a honeycomb of multi-colored spring flowers of a novel design.

The floral design will focus attention on a huge chandelier in the center of the floor. Designed in a "V"-shape and covered with glittering crystals, the chandelier will provide the illumination for the dancing couples. Erected atop the huge chandelier will be four "100's" for the Centennial Class. From the four corners of the floor, spotlights will cast colored rays of light upon the ornament.

In the past years the prom decorations have centered about the sides of the dance floor. This year the committee has revised this idea so that the atmosphere may not be lessened when the floor becomes crowded.

Dinner- Dance Saturday Completes Junior Week; Bill Davies Will Play

Bill Davies and his orchestra have been signed to play for the Junior Dinner-Dance which will climax Junior Week, according to an announcement made by John Quinn and Joseph Hagerty, co-chairmen of the committee in charge. The affair, which closes the social season, will be held at the Merion Golf Club this Saturday evening.

In selecting the orchestra, the committee expressed a preference for a band whose music would be more adaptable to dancing rather than one more widely known; although, the chairmen reported, several name bands were under consideration. Davies is also the pianist and does all the arranging.

Popular With Colleges

The orchestra is well known in the Philadelphia area, having played for numerous local affairs. They are especially popular with college students, according to the chairmen, due to the smoothness of their music.

Dinner will be served in the dining room promptly at 8:00 P. M. The tables, on which favors will be placed, will be set for groups of six and eight. However, if the weather permits, some of the tables will be placed outside on the terrace, which is separated from the dining room by French doors and several large windows.

Immediately following dinner, the tables will be removed leaving the room free for dancing. It will also be possible to dance on the terrace, depending on the weather. The ballroom itself is "L" shaped with the band stand at one end a large fireplace at the other. "The brown curtains are blended with the green walls and venetian blinds to create a subdued atmosphere particularly favorable for an affair such as this," said the chairmen.

All the facilities of the club will be available for juniors and their guests, and this includes the two spacious lounges connecting with the ballroom. The club lies just off Haverford Avenue on Ardmore Avenue. Ample parking space will be available, the chairmen stated.

Students Invited To Tri-County Concert At Radnor Tuesday

For the first time since its organization this past winter the Tri-County Concert Association will present a concert on Tuesday, April 28, in the auditorium of the Radnor High School, Wayne, beginning at 8:30 P. M. Admission will be free.

Included on the program will be selections by such composers as Bach, Debussy, Marcello, Rameau, and Mozart. Soloists in the persons of famous musicians from the Philadelphia Orchestra will also take part in the program.

The association was formed to give an opportunity to individuals who are fascinated by the best of symphonic music but to whom because of lack of funds or modesty, the regular concerts of Philadelphia's great musical organizations have been denied. It is hoped by the group, for example, that all the schools and colleges which are near enough to Wayne will send their students.

The Tri-County Concerts will welcome listeners of every race and creed, regardless of financial or social standing. A silver collection will be taken at the concerts to help defray the expenses.

Marymount Opens Essay Competition

Villanova students have been invited to participate in the third annual essay contest upon the topic, "Conservative Versus 'Progressive' Education in the Development of a Truly Patriotic Citizenry" under the auspices of the New York Regional Chapter of the National Federation of Catholic College Students at Marymount College, Tarrytown, N. Y.

It will be sponsored by a prominent magazine and is open to participation by all Catholic college students. All entries must be in on or before midnight, Thursday, April 30. Three prizes of $25, $10, and $5 will be awarded by the Federation.

The essays must be typed on one side of the paper only, not exceeding 1000 words in length, and must be mailed to Miss Marjorie Jones, Marymount College.

Further information and rules for entrance can be obtained in the VILLANOVAN office, Room 119, Mendel Hall.

"... With A Smile"

NORMALLY at this time, the week of the Junior Prom, we would be in the midst of Junior Week. Now, with the exception of the Junior Prom and Junior Dinner-Dance, this week will be just like any other school week.

The class of '43, from its freshman year, has been looking forward to its Junior Week. It was to be a week of great ceremony, big dances, the best orchestras, flashing white Blazers, visiting friends and Mothers, and many other enjoyments that the social mind can concoct.

Out of this fantasy come only two dances — the Prom and the Dinner-Dance. The planting of the Ivy and the Flag Raising, starting symbols of Junior Week, have had to be dropped. Mother's Day, the day of pride for every junior and the day of joy for every Mother, has been cancelled. Open House, the chance for every student to show the workings of his school to his friends, has been eliminated. The Blazer Ball — Juniors in white coats and Seniors with complimentary tickets —has been called off.

Yes! All of these have been called off. In fact all Junior Week has been called off. Called off because we are at war and on an accelerated schedule.

We have sacrificed all. But, we still have the Junior Prom and Dinner-Dance left, and for these we are all thankful because even these two dances might have been called off also.

Even though so much has been sacrificed no one is going to be discontented or shed tears about it. More and more each day everyone is getting used to the idea that we have a war to win and that everything we do must have some place in the war program. As the soldier goes to dances for recreation when he is on leave from his duties, so should the worker or the others who stay at home go to dances or some form of diversion when they are on leave of their duties.

The Junior Prom and Dinner-Dance may be considered as having a place in the war program, but to the juniors they will be more than that. They will contain the equivalent of a whole Junior Week. They will be foremost in their annual Spring reveries. They will live with their class even more closely than other Junior Proms have lived with their class.

No Bliss Here

A RECENT nation-wide survey reveals: "One-half of the Nation's voters are unable to name the Congressman who represents their district in Washington"—When all its implications are realized, this statement is truly startling.

We shudder to think of the results should a similar poll be conducted on the Villanova campus.

At a time when the United States is spending billions of dollars and sending thousands of her soldiers all over the world in the defense of representative government, the fact is suddenly revealed that 50 per cent of our lethargic citizenry lack the slightest knowledge of or appreciation for the democratic privileges for which they profess to be fighting.

We cannot hope to preserve something which we ourselves refuse to practice.

Theoretically, the democratic process is founded on the assumption that the decisions made by representatives in Congress will be based on the wishes and opinions held by their local constituents.

But how can these wishes be acted upon unless the voters make them known to their respective Congressmen — men whose very names are a mystery to them?

This shameful picture of a nation of over one hundred million people fighting a war for democratic government, while half of them are too self-satisfied, lazy and indifferent to help preserve democracy at home, is a disgrace to the history of American freedom.

The time has come for every American to realize that democratic freedom is not an eternal right, but is merely a temporary privilege. A privilege which can be preserved only through constant use at home and vigorous defense abroad.

—R. T. C.

Let's Get Together

IT would seem that uncomfortable and dissatisfied Americans ever choose a time of national emergency to peddle their woes to the public. The most notable thing about the invasion of the Philippines was the unity it brought to the nation. For a few weeks everyone spoke of unity and acted it. Soon, however, the hate-mongers and the political prototypes of the torch singer began to shout anew.

Time is taken in this phase of the game where every second is valued in the thousands, to hurl some good old mud at bad old political enemies of pre-war times. Every "anti-this and anti-that" is hard at work. The need of "pro-somethings" is pressing.

Can we not find a man who will write and speak of America from an honest point of view? Can we not locate some obscure writer who is not affiliated with some political party or some movement, but whose sole interest is the betterment of the United States of America? Appearances would say no. American hearts say yes.

At any time religious intolerance, political dishonesty, and all the other common vices are out of order; but war time demands the greatest amount of "state" virtue. All the energy we expend while fighting each other could well be used to good advantage on the common enemy.

Let us not fear to notice or mark error and corruption, but let our criticism be constructive. Let us have an eye to the curing of the ill, rather than the mere mention of it for political or public effect. Let us mean what we say, and say what is right. Let us subvert our own interests for the good of the nation.

FACULTY COMMENTS

The Seven Evils Of Print

By FR. McSHEA

ABOUT a month ago a prominent book reviewer wrote this sentence: "No thoughtful citizen should avert his eyes from what 'Defense Will Not Win the War' has to say." After the reader's first shock at the false grandeur of this expression, not to mention the curious physical difficulties presented, he may be inclined to a kind of literary wrath.

Rather perhaps he should forgive. Book reviewing is, beyond much doubt, the most prolific source of cliches in the English language, and our writer is clearly trying to avoid the repetition of still one more. What is really pitiable is his choice of a confused sentence to replace a hackneyed one.

Grammatical Pitfalls

Grammarians from the rhetoricians of Chaucer's day to H. W. Fowler have completely analyzed most of the pitfalls in the use of words. They have helped us differentiate between "feeling bad" and "feeling badly," between "courage" and "bravery," between "translucent" and "transparent." They have, in short, taught us that in the selection of words, as in morality, the two most annoying offenses are ignorance and malice.

Now possibly the second item requires some explanation. Can one be malicious in the matter of word usage? One can indeed. Words may be inanimate symbols, but who can deny injustice in the covering of a helpless commonplace statement with a gaudy pomp that embarrasses inoffensive words which in turn cannot retaliate? And is it not unkind to devitalize even words of energy by putting them to uses far beyond their strength?

Primary Vices

Two very instructive guides in this thorny business of selecting the precise word are Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch and Barrett Wendell. In his essay "On Jargon" the former disposes effectively and permanently of the root causes of word abuse. He specifies the two primary vices as circumlocution and the preference for "vague, wooly abstract nouns rather than concrete ones." Wendell offers an equally thorough study of the happy and of the unfortunate uses to which words are subjected. His best advice, however, is epitomized in the rules, "Be brief" and "Be specific."

The theory that propriety in the use of words be respected scarcely needs elaborate defense today. Yet what writers do is at least as interesting as what they ought to do. And seven modern attitudes towards words call for vigorous if hopeless denunciation. Surely one may ask that the sensibilities of innocent words, if not the feelings of the reader, be spared with charity.

Seven Evils of Print

The seven evils of print may be classified thus: Protective Understatement, Painful Cliche, Desk-job Pomposity, The Great Man's Formal Informality, Aloof or Interested Respect, Dangerous Simplicity and Naive Arrogance. They may be considered singly.

Protective Understatement

This is the kind of sin which violates precision of statement in order to escape libel and to avoid hurting the important. Basically it is cowardly; the greater fault is that it is inaccurate. It reports that the people in the capitol of a large republic were "amused" when a Cabinet member delivered eggs from his farm for his own profit to store dealers. The car he used was, of course, supplied by the taxpayers. No comment needed.

Painful Cliche

This is a peculiar species of the genus cliche which invariably makes the intelligent reader unhappy. It wrinkles its brows seriously and talks ponderously of "events in our time." Having talked once with a garrulous lawyer, it repeats that "time is of the essence." But the climax of pain is reached with that distressing remark "at long last."

Desk-job Pomposity. This vice is also frequently identified as "Ten Thousand Per Year Self-importance." It restricts itself to public directions usually and creates such masterpieces as "Illumination is required to be extinguished before these premises are closed to business." It has remarkable flexibility of expression, however, and can vary its diction remarkably. It makes recommendations "so as to obscure buildings" and suggests that this be done "by blackout constructions or by terminating the illumination."

Boring Pose

The Great Man's Formal Informality. Few specimens are necessary to illustrate this strange and boring pose. The ingredients are simple; a successful author, a book by another that must be sold, and a generous but casual spirit of benevolence. The result is invariably uniform. So-and-so's book is "grand job," an extraordinarily good job," or " a smart job."

Aloof or Interested Respect. This evil manifests itself by making every Catholic a "devout" one. Now, it is very encouraging to think that many Catholics merit this qualification. But seldom it seems, is the word intended as a genuine tribute. More often the Catholic — be he nominal, real, or actually aggressive—is "devout" because the writer is citing him to heighten a contrast with another Catholic who presumably is "indevout."

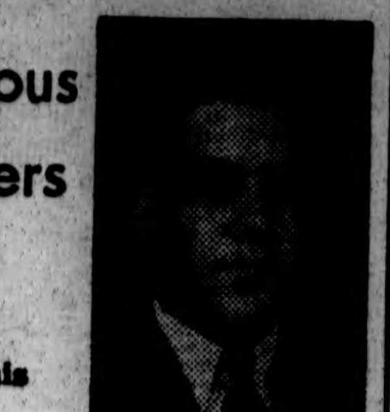
Campus Capers

By Ed Bennis



ALTHOUGH there is no official Junior week this year because of the accelerated program, the third year lads are holding many a celebration of their own. Here it is only Tuesday and some of them are already beginning to feel the effects of the "unofficial celebration."

Money appears to be plentiful—at least, the way it is going to be spent this week-end it has to be. Les Brown should keep the boys happy Friday night with his versatile band and the juniors promise to keep themselves happy at their dinner dance Saturday night. Many of the home town girls will be on view for the first time and the lads are waiting in gleeful anticipation.

There is one sour note in the Prom preparations — the "Victory Corsages" are rather slow in catching on. Come on, fellows, let's get behind the idea—after all, it's to help our country. Order yours today.

JELLY BEAN:

Bill Cabrera and John O'Brien are among the first on the campus to sport the new cuffless trousers—they claim that the only difference is that your ankles feel a little cooler. Dan Kolmer and Bill McNealy have found a cute little number in the Suburban Square Record Shop—she has the prettiest eyes and answers to the name of Mary.

Fred Clark, former sports columnist, is doing his part for the army at Camp Croft, S. C. Charlie "Bull" Molnar has some sort of record for seeing movies—he goes almost every night. At that rate, he should soon be in line for a medal. Bill "Precious" Swan recently received a letter addressed "My most precious Willie Boy"—she must be one girl who really puts her heart and soul in a letter.

LOCAL CONFAB:

The fraternities went all-out last week, with the D. P. E. and E. P. T. giving their annual dinners Thursday at Kugler's and the L. K. D. holding its dance on Friday night. Prexy Dave Reardon of the commerce frat, found it difficult to keep his eyes on the D. P. E. lads once the dinner was over—seems they wanted to wander all over the city. An enjoyable time was had by all at the L. K. D. dance—Lou Farres was in quite a predicament up until the time of the dance. He had two dates, but managed to maneuver out of one at the last minute—a situation like that could lead to bloodshed.

The I. R. C. meeting at Chestnut Hill attracted a great many of our local romeos, Howie McCall, Johnny Maher, Roger Logan and Tom Schubert,—to mention a few—were seen turning on their charm among the fair damsels. Some of the lads were disappointed, as many of the girls spent their time knitting—maybe the boys are slipping.

The Augustinian Guild meeting of last Tuesday night had our boys out in droves—each trying to outdo the other. Bob Moore, Tom Muraski, Tom McKimmey and Jim Stack were noted among the crowd. Poor Herb Sentner made a valiant attempt to get to the affair but, after getting dressed for it, he was locked in his room by a few of the more playful lads and by the time he got out it was too late to go.

SPRING FEVER:

Immaculata Gals held another tea dance yesterday afternoon and many of our dance goers were all set for the affair—Jim Harkins will give you any needed information. Neil Deighan, former C. & F. soph, was married a week ago last Saturday to Veronica Magrann of Philadelphia, and is now in Florida on his honeymoon—best of luck, Neil. Bill Brickmann seems to exert a great deal of influence over Gloria, one of our prettier high school lassies — wonder what it could be?

The lads are all set with their Prom dates, but the following should be worthy of note. Jack Enright will be seen in the company of Dotty, his blonde bundle of heaven—after two years, this affair is beginning to look serious. Johnny Sutton is taking bets that he'll have the loveliest girl at the dance—better be careful, Johnny, you might lose some money. By the day, has Harry Weber gotten permission to go to the Prom?

Meet The Boys:

Funabashi Commits No Torts In Handling VILLANOVAN Sports

By JIM McWILLIAMS

DEAR UNCLE SAM,

In a few weeks you will probably have the esteemed privilege of welcoming another Villanova man into the ranks of your armed forces. This new chap, Bob Funabashi, is well known here at Villanova, but is probably unknown, except for a low draft number, to you. Therefore we'll let you in on some of the high- and lowlights of his career, and ask you to give him a bit of special consideration when he sets up housekeeping in one of your camps.

Robert F. comes to us from Lyndhurst, a small town of northern New Jersey, which, except for 209 Fedigan, has been his home since his birth, March 10, 1921. At the age of six, he, as did his small companions of Lyndhurst, set out to begin his scholastic career at the Franklin Grammar School. Nothing much happened here, Uncle, although he was distinguished somewhat as a slight rarity by not being awarded an American Legion Medal. (Almost an unheard of feat around here.)

High School Journalist

Following his graduation he entered Lyndhurst High School, where he started "extra-curricularing." There he spent four years on the high school student council and newspaper, and two years on the year book, serving as sports editor of each publication in his senior year. Just to prove that he could do more than write about sports, Bob was also a standout member of the varsity basketball and track teams. In the background of all this Bob admits he was just a "fair student."

In 1938, when notified that he had completed the course at Lyndhurst High, Bob started investigation in order to find a suitable college for his further academic enlightenment. On the advice of an alumnus, "Scoop," as he was later to be known, selected Villanova, and has never thought he made a wrong choice.

Marketing Major

Moving out here in the fall, Bob enrolled in the commerce and finance school, choosing marketing as his major. Immediately upon matriculating, he continued with his high school journalistic tendencies by joining the VILLANOVAN staff as a sports reporter. In his junior year, in recognition of his outstanding ability as a writer and his profound interest in his work, he was awarded the position of Sports Editor—a position that he filled so faithfully and capably that he was acclaimed to be one of the finest writers of sporting news the VILLANOVAN ever had.

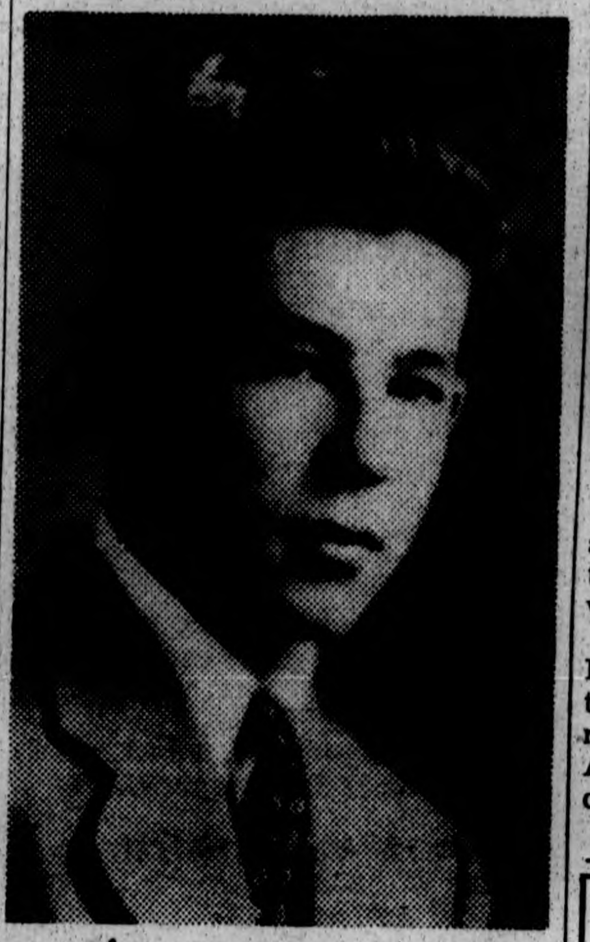
Last year Bob also served on the junior Dinner-Dance committee. As in high school, Bob played basketball, only instead of being a varsity member he is a battle-scarred veteran on the Fedigan Firemen five. "Fun" was formerly a member in good standing of the C. & F. fraternity, Delta Pi Epsilon, but last year due to an oversight of the frat rule concerning dues, he was quietly and forcefully asked to desist further participation with the organization.

Honor Man, Too

Now don't get us wrong, Uncle, Bob really isn't that kind of a fellow. He explains it as being purely a mental slip because of his various other duties. Even amid such happenings, "Scoop" has maintained an honor average in the business school mark book.

During the past football season Bob worked as the Villanova spotter at all the radio broadcasts of the "Wildcat" games. It was while he was doing this that one of the greatest thrills of his college career came. He graciously condescended to speak a few words to his radio public between halves of the Temple-Villanova tussle.

Before the present international struggle reached its height, your future young man-with-a-gun had a lot of things in mind to do after graduation. He was undecided as to whether (1) to continue with his writing—not necessarily sports—and some day have a non-fiction book published; or (2) to follow up his marketing education; or (3) to go into business with his brother in Lyndhurst. But you, Uncle, have boiled all these muddled thoughts down to a decision; to wit, he will now follow your directions, and forego his other plans—for the duration, anyway. He may come to you through the Air Corps or the Bureau of Navigation before you decide you have his new khaki suit ready.



Lover of Finer Things

Bob confesses to have a deep love for philosophy, and is an avid reader of philosophical treatises, although he has only studied one or two branches of the subject. When Bob joins your happy little group, prepare your boys to hear a great deal of the longhair type of music. because he is an ardent follower of the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra, and speels off the works of such composers as Rachmaninoff, Dvorak, etc., as though they were the five leading hitters in the American League. His musical love doesn't stop there, for Bob enjoys equally well tunes in the lighter vein of Tommy Dorsey and Freddie Martin.

In his whole four years here, Bob has visited the Immaculata campus only once, and the Rosemont environs but a few times. This coming from a Villanovan of Bob's ability is an outstanding accomplishment deserving of your finest respect. For it has long been the fad here to place "campus-hopping" on the roster together with other required subjects.

Well, there you have Robert F. Funabashi, '42. When you see him, provide him with a little extra attention in remembrance of what he has done for Villanova—see that he gets a hat that fits him.

Words

mallet against an opponent—never with reverence or with intelligent understanding—quoted a "devout" Catholic who had criticized another. It sounded quite objectively pious. But the very next day the same "devout" Catholic married a divorcee before a Judge.

Dangerous Simplicity. Pessimism and prophecy are the elements of this odd and wicked practice. "It would take seven or eight centuries for civilization to recover from this or that setback." The very innocence and smugness of this form of expression bring hideous shudders to the reader who even occasionally thinks.

Crime of Connotation

Naive Arrogance. This is a crime of connotation. It consists of a glib and self-assured manner whereby writers and painters—first, second or third class—identify themselves with the approved air of superiority as "literati" or members of the "intelligentsia." One is forcibly reminded of St. Philip Neri and "the Saint." Another sin is added when the writer calls himself an "Artiste." Perhaps there is a point in reminding offenders of this group that modesty is still an acceptable virtue and that the truest tribute to one's merit comes from other people.

But what, it may be asked, of "liberal" and "fascist"? Perhaps, the best answer is silence. These words have very generally lost all specific meaning and have become mere epithets, one for an admired friend, the other for any enemy indiscriminately. Yet in a way they illustrate the thesis of these observations. Nothing hastens the loss of respectability in a word more effectively than shabby misuse by fanatics, by sophisticates, and by the semi-literate who insist on being heard.

STAFF MEETING

There will be an important meeting of the entire VILLANOVAN staff this afternoon at 1:00 P. M. in room 119 Mendel Hall.

Graduate Of '39 Tells Of Travels As Pilot In Indian, African Jungles

By JOSEPH J. CARBINE

An eye witness account of the deep mysteries surrounding darkest Africa has been brought back to the United States by a recent graduate of Villanova, Lieutenant Thomas J. Carbine of the United State Army Air Corps.

From September to March Lt. Carbine travelled from the jungles of the Belgian Congo to the shiny blue waters of the Nile, and was able to view much of the panorama that surrounds these outposts of world civilization.

Flying the giant transports of Pan-American Airways, his flights took him as far as Rangoon, Burma, at a time when the Japanese Army was preparing for its siege of that city.

It was here that he had the opportunity to see Kipling's immortal Burmese women with their "whacking white cheroots." One of the most unusual experiences on this trip was Toms' encounter in Rangoon with a graduate of the class of '38 of Villanova.

Before leaving, he made it a point to take a ride on the "Road to Mandalay" which was also immortalized by Kipling.

. . . Lt. Thomas J. Carbine at controls.

During the short period that Tom was flying back and forth between Calcutta and Delhi, India, he was able to view the famous Taj Mahal at Agra on three different occasions.

At the present time its beautiful

A Poem For The Promenade Closes Another Column In Honor Of The Junior Class

By LOU ESPOSITO

THE Villanova Junior Prom, which in the past few years has been the outstanding social event of the season in the Philadelphia area, has finally arrived. So the Trading Post this week is dedicated to the prom-trotting juniors, who for three years have been looking forward to this coming gaiety-filled weekend. . . Friday evening, the Junior Prom, featuring the versatile music of Les Brown and his orchestra, at the Field House. . . Saturday evening, the Junior Dinner-Dance at the Merion Golf Club. . . and Sunday evening, the Junior hangovers at the "Greek's". Ye Gods, what a weekend. It looks like we juniors will have to sleep through all next week's classes.

To the Point:

Speaking of dances 'n stuff, this pome from the "Gamecock" might be appropriate. Betty Coed says:

Although this strap-less gown is new,
I ask no heavy boon of you. . .
I ask of you no flowers to wear
At my waist—or in my hair. . .
And though 'twill touch the pavement slab
I ask of you: No taxicab. . .
ONE thing I ask. . . it's not appalling. . .
Just tell me if you see it falling.

A medical paper advances the theory that the "man is slightly taller in the morning than he is in the evening." We have never tested this, but we have certainly noticed a tendency to become "short" towards the end of the week.

Tough Feller:

A little man dashed into a public-house and said to the landlord, "A large gingerale."

He looked a little shaken, so the landlord asked him what was wrong.

"I just got home to find a strange man kissing my wife."

"And what did you do?" asked the landlord.

"I picked up his umbrella, smashed it across my knee, and said, 'There, I hope it rains'."

How well I do remember,
'Twas in that chill November,
I was walking down the street in manly pride;
When my knees began to flutter,

As we lay there in that gutter,
With our heartstrings all a-flutter,
A lady passing by was heard to say:
"You can tell the one who boozes

And the pig got up and quickly walked away.

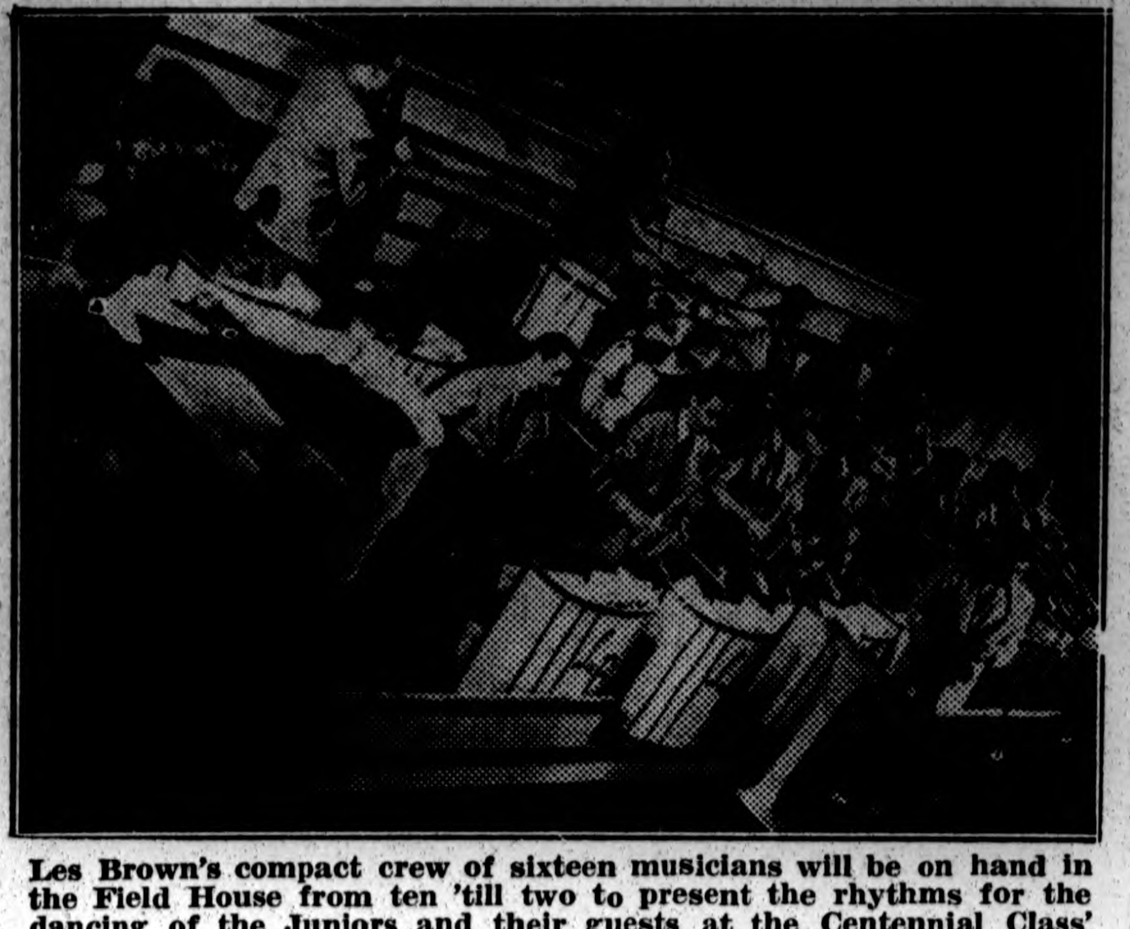
Now there's no cause for alarm
But remember the Prom,
Where Les Brown and orch will play;
And the juniors will dance
And joke and romance
And laugh the whole night away.

Provide Music For Prom



Les Brown's compact crew of sixteen musicians will be on hand in the Field House from ten 'till two to present the rhythms for the dancing of the Juniors and their guests at the Centennial Class' Prom. Just completing a tour of the Eastern theatres, Brown's group comes on the crest of a wave of popularity.

tra will be placed upon the stage. Originally he was planned to play from the side of the dance floor, but revision was made when the committee was notified of the various novelty skits which Brown's band intends to present. The band will not be placed far back on the stage floor but will be partially on a platform elevated above the dance floor and part on the forepart of the stage. This provides a solution to a problem of past years of doing away with the remoteness of the band and yet placing it in a position that can be seen by all.

New Shield Featured

Placed behind the band on a rich, black velour curtain will be a large replica of the new college shield, above which will be emblazoned the name of the present junior class. The band will be spotlighted from the stage while the shield and letters will be illuminated by the footlights.

Around the walls of the dance floor and beneath the balcony will be placed placques inscribed with the names of juniors, according to their various schools. The entrance from the balcony to the dance floor will be faced with large red, white, and blue shields. The main entrance this year will be decorated in a new manner not yet revealed by the committee.

The color scheme of the decorations will continually change throughout the dance. Spotlights on the chandelier will change in colors to blend with the glittering flowers of the ceiling. Between the medleys of the band, the lights will be brightened in order that the couples may add to the decoration and to eliminate the dullness which often engulfs a dance constantly in dimmed light.

Doubly Lovely

BETTY BONNEY

The theme of the prom has been kept to a "spring atmosphere of a modern design," but lingering in the background will be the shade of the present "war emergency." Augmenting the four patriotic shields will be the "Victory Corsages" worn by the girls at the dance.

These corsages, as approved by the junior class, have been on sale during the past week. Orders may be placed this week for them. Consisting of a large gardenia surrounded by a "V"-shaped design of blue bachelor buttons, the corsages will be distributed on the evening of the prom. They may be obtained in either all white, all blue, or blue and white combinations. Included with the corsage will be a boutonniere, red for the juniors and white for others.

With the proceeds of the corsage sale, the junior class will purchase Defense Bonds to be placed in the scholarship fund.

For refreshment, the committee has secured the services of a caterer. They will be served either in the blue room or at tables which will line the dance floor.

During the past week, the music of Les Brown's aggregation has been featured over several of the local radio stations. Those who will attend the dance Friday evening have been able to hear the style and personality which is responsible for his up and coming position in field of popular music.

Few Solos

Although his orchestra has in its complement men well known in orchestra ranks, they have not been featured as individuals but instead have been blended into a compact group that provides music complete in every detail.

Even Brown himself, a master of the saxophone, hesitates to solo before his band, believing that such work destroys the harmony of the band and is not consistent with an orchestra's purpose—that of playing good dance music.

His experience in arranging music for many of the country's famous orchestras has provided him with a score of styles from which he has adapted his own and which he believes to be best suited to dancing. "Solid numbers" assume a low position in his repertoire as he believes that they are written to be heard and not danced.

ASCE Delegates Hear Talvacchia

Ten Members of Local Chapter Attend Annual Meeting at Bucknell

Ten members of the local student chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers represented the group at the 8th annual Student Chapter Convention. The meeting, held at Bucknell University on Sunday and Monday, was sponsored jointly by the Philadelphia and Lehigh Valley Sections of the A.S.C.E.

Bruno J. Talvacchia, senior and chairman of the local student branch, presented a paper in the annual prize essay contest for student chapters yesterday afternoon. His paper, dealing with construction as a protection against bombs, was entitled "Protective Construction and Air Raid Shelters."

Villanova Delegates

Accompanying Talvacchia were: Philip Malarkey, John Muench, James Spinelli, and Albert D'Alonzo, seniors; Norbert Knapp, Paul Hinski, Willard Rafetto, and Paul Gallagher, juniors, and John McManus, a sophomore.

Leaving the college Sunday afternoon, they registered at Bucknell in the evening and attended a smoker and entertainment.

James W. Diffenderfer, secretary of the Bucknell University Chapter of the A.S.C.E., presided over the Monday morning session. Dr. Romeyn H. Rivenburg, vice-president and dean of Bucknell University, delivered the welcoming address.

Preston Speaks

Professor Howard K. Preston, chairman of the Committee on Student Chapters of the Philadelphia Section of the A.S.C.E., also spoke at the morning session.

Following the luncheon, the afternoon technical sessions got under way. Featured at these sessions was an address by Commander J. R. Perry, of the Civil Engineering Corps of the United States Navy.

Ode to a Borgia

My love, Lucretia,
Is always sweet t' ya.
(You all know her, I ween; She's the "Poison Queen")
She putters all day
In a laboratorAY
And mixes and stirs and mutters slurs
About men who bother her,
Who brother or father her.

Her ionic capers
With old flypapers
And used toad-hides
And cyanides
Are famous,
Ignoramus.

She will not love
One not above,
In strength and vigor,
(And somewhat bigger)
Hercules.
He must gulp all day
Her drinks, and say
Never, "Enough";
He must be tough.

If her "Mickies" don't faze ya
She casually says ya
May come up some eve
To "Spot-on-the-Sleeve,"
Where she and her daughters
Have their quarters.

When you get to her place
She flatters your face.
The Misses Borgia
Are civil towards ya.
Lucretia is charming
And disarming.
With food she does gorge ya
And never bores ya.

A potion she pours ya;
It floors ya.

She steps o'er your body
And says you look shoddy
Lying down there.
With never a care
She kicks you into a corner
And phones for her mourner.

She takes out her ledger,
(The gilt-edger)
And scores ya.

Then sweetly,
But completely,
She ignores ya.

German Club

"How to Improve One's Mind," a short play written in German, was presented by the members of Immaculata's German club at a meeting with Villanova's Language Club held last Thursday evening. This was the first joint meeting of the two groups to be held on Immaculata's campus.

A quiz program in which the members of both clubs participated followed the presentation of the play. This novelty concluded with neither club being able to eke out a decision. Refreshments and dancing which concluded the evening's entertainment then followed.

This was the last of the joint meetings for Villanova's German club this year. Due to the success of this meeting and the previous one held at Villanova it was decided to hold them more frequently in the future.

Frosh Debaters

Upholding the affirmative side of the topic, "Resolved: That as a permanent policy every able-bodied male American citizen should be given a year of military training before reaching the age of twenty," the freshman forensic group will meet St. Joseph's College in a debate today at the Philadelphia school at 3:15 P. M.

James Burns, science student, and Edward Gregory, of the commerce school, will give the constructive speeches for Villanova while Thomas Quigley, artsman, will deliver the rebutal.

SOPH RINGS

Thursday, April 23, between 12:30 P. M. and 1:30 P. M. in the reception room of Mendel Hall, will be the last time that a representative of Loren-Murchison will be available with sample rings to take orders from the sophomores.

Elliott Prepares Two Foursomes For Penn Relays

Mile and Sprint Medley Teams Entered; DiCarlo's Illness Handicaps 'Cats, Drops Him From Hurdles

Four men making up two relay teams will represent Villanova in the Forty-sixth Annual Penn Relay Races to be held at Franklin Field this Friday and Saturday.

The absence of John DiCarlo, Wildcat sprint and hurdle ace limits the Villanova entries considerably. The mile relay team will compete in a Class "B" event instead of the Class "A" race as coach Jim Elliott had intended until DiCarlo's streptococcus infection disabled the young star. The event will still be a lot faster than last year's classified race which Villanova won without much trouble. The Class "B" field will be tough and several formidable combinations will oppose the Elliottmen.

Hooper Anchors Sprint Medley

DiCarlo was a favorite in the gruelling 400-meter hurdle race, one of the features on the huge two-day program. Last year he was beaten out by six inches by the Negro star timberman, Gilbert Farrow of Xavier University, who has graduated. DiCarlo had practiced the hurdles last year only one week previous to the relays .

Besides the mile team of George Guida, Dixie Dunbar, Bob O'Sullivan ,and Captain Bill Hooper, Elliott has entered this same quartet in the sprint medley relay. O'Sullivan will run the opening half-mile leg, Dunbar will gallop the 440, Guida will sprint the 220, and Hooper will anchor with the mile, his specialty.

Fast Relay

This sprint medley team of the Wildcats is one of the strongest and best balanced aggregations to ever represent the Blue and White. Nevertheless, they will brush up against some of the best clubs this side of the Rockies including the favorites, Indiana, and N. Y. U., anchored by their respective stars, Campbell Kane and Les MacMitchell, and Maryland, and they will have rough going all the way.

It is possible that Dutch McCarthy, sophomore half-miler, may run in one of the events. If DiCarlo could run, then a two-mile team would be entered with McCarthy and Harry Keefrider filling in with Dunbar and O'Sullivan.

Net Men Open With Delaware On Saturday

Villanova's netmen headed by Captain Dave Daly will open their belated tennis campaign Saturday when the University of Delaware racquet swingers invade the Main Line courts. They will be shooting for their second straight triumph over the Wildcats in as many years. Last season they walked off the courts with an eight to one win. Villanova's lone marker was registered by George McFadden's brilliant three set victory. McFadden is back and playing in the number two spot this year.

Four Veterans

The outlook this year seems a bit brighter as a result of both the return of so many veterans and the abilities of the newcomers. Besides McFadden, there is Chet Pajolek, who will most likely play number one man, Captain Daly, and George Szucs, all returning.

A definite starting lineup has not been released yet because of the limited practice sessions. The last two weeks the boys made use of Rosemont College's generous offer and worked out on their asphalt courts while Villanova's were being put in shape.

LaSalle Match Postponed

The 1942 season was to have formally opened last Thursday with the Wildcats playing host to LaSalle College, but because of priorities on shipment, the athletic office was unable to secure balls for the match. The meet was postponed until later in the season, by playing manager Austin Gavin, who has not yet set a date.

Candidates are still requested to report for the team if they are interested. Another doubles combination needs to be made up to complete the team.

Getting Ready For Penn Relays

Coach Jumbo Elliott imparts a few words of track wisdom to his boys in preparation for the Annual Relay Carnival at Franklin Field this week-end. As Captain Bill Hooper gets ready to demonstrate, George Guida, Bob O'Sullivan, and Dutch McCarthy look on interestedly. The boys will run in the mile and sprint medley relays.

Wildcat Nine Plays Three Games On Three Day Tour Of Maryland

Jacobsmen Seek to Boost Win Column Against Loyola, Western Maryland, and George Washington on Annual Southern Trip; Blue Tossers Favored in All Contests

With a record of four victories and two defeats thus far, the Villanova diamond forces enter the second half of their schedule this week, when they tackle Loyola, of Baltimore, Western Maryland, and George Washington U., on the 23rd, 24th, and 25th respectively. This trip through Maryland and Washington, D. C., is the only major one of the present campaign—the accelerated program having caused the cancellation of the scheduled New England jaunt.

Last season, the Loyola Greyhounds succumbed very easily to the Wildcats by the overwhelming margins of 16-5, and 16-1. This year the Baltimore aggregation hopes to avenge those two losses of the last campaign, and will have the advantage, inasmuch as the game will be played on their diamond. There are six returning letterment on the Greyhound nine, and so far this season, the team has performed exceptionally well, having compiled a better record than that possessed by the Wildcats.

Although the Main Liners rule supreme favorites in this contest as a result of their two smashing victories last season, they may be in for a surprise when they tackle the Greyhounds. However, if the Wildcat batters give the same support to the hurlers as was shown against Rider last week, in their 12-0 win, they should have little trouble in winning the seventh encounter on their schedule.

Terrors are Tough

Journeying to Westminster, Maryland, on Friday, the Jacobsmen engage the Green Terrors of Western Maryland College, another foe which fell at the hands of the Wildcats last spring by the score of 8-3. This is another contest in which the Blue and White rules the odds-on favorite, but here also, is a team comprised of seasoned veterans. The Terrors exhibited a sample of their improvement over last year, when they held the powerful Orangemen of Syracuse to a 6-6 tie in a fifteen inning tussle two weeks ago. Syracuse, always one of the most powerful teams in the east, was limited to six scattered hits by Lee Lodge, the star hurler of the Westminster club, and it was only the result of numerous errors by his teammates, that he didn't gain a well-deserved victory over the New Yorkers.

Pitched 15 Innings

Lodge, who will undoubtedly hurl against Villanova on Friday, pitched the full fifteen innings, showing that he is in mid-season form. He is also a hitter in his own right, besides being the star hurler on the team, as he garnered four hits in the Syracuse tussle to lead his team in bingles. Because of his tremendous hitting power he bats in the cleanup spot for the Terrors, even when he is hurling, and frequently takes over a post in the

THIS column votes track mentor Jumbo Elliott the hard luck coach of the year at Villanova. The draft at first seemed to raise high the standard of Doc Jacobs as Dame Fortune's big victim, but the Doc has found replacements. Maybe they're not as good as those lost but he did get a few nice surprise packages.

It was a different case with Jumbo. Uncle Sam did not bother him and the track future looked bright, early in January. But then the bane of any coach's happiness found vulnerable spots on the Wildcat squad . . . the injury jinx.

The jinx caught Jumbo's team right before the I. C. 4-A. indoor championships. John DiCarlo, anchorman on the fleet mile relay team took sick but nevertheless he ran. Villanova lost the championship to Colgate on that particular occasion, but worst of all, in the same race leadoff man George Guida was severely spiked.

This queered the Wildcat team for the next two races. Then things brightened as the National Junior A. A. U. crown was won and Villanova looked forward to the outdoor season. But DiCarlo's illness affected a run down condition that has finally developed into a strep infection and Guida's spike wound injured the achilles tendon and it is still painful for him to run.

This wasnt' all. Jumbo had long been looking for a good pole vaulter. Last season nine points had to be forfeited every meet because of the absence of a vaulter. This year he had the man in the person of Buck Coleman, a diligent, able, and interested boy. Buck hauled himself to a new Catholic League record of 11 feet, 8½ inches last spring while at West Catholic High and he was expected to better twelve feet this season.

But six weeks ago he was stricken with appendicitis and had to be operated on. This will keep him out of action for a year, especially

Villanova Nine Blitzes Owls With 18-12 Beating

Andy Tomasic Knocked From Box in Third Inning by Wildcat Batsmen; Yednock Paces Sixteen Hit Barrage With Two Homers

Villanova's baseball nine invaded Temple Stadium yesterday afternoon with bats booming threateningly, avenged last year's twin defeats at the hands of Mr. Tomasic and Co., drove the same Mr. Tomasic from the mound in the third inning, and swamped the Owls in an 18-12 slugfest.

Four hurlers toed the rubber against the 'Cats and none could check the slugging Main Liners. When Handy-Andy left the box he took over the first base duties but fared no better. In five trips to the plate he drew two walks and was fanned three times by freshmen Jim Burns, starting Wildcat hurler, and Frenchy DeBlois who relieved him in the fifth.

The Blue and White wasted little time in getting to work. After tabbing one marker in the first frame they really found the Temple hurler. Jim Lattanza walked, Burns pushed one into right field for a single and Joe Coffee doubled scoring both. Slugging Bill Smith then poled a four bagger into deep left-center to bring the total to four.

Six Runs Unearned

Four homers were accounted for by the Wildcats. Ted Bickey hit one in the fifth with Joe Yednock aboard and Yednock himself blasted two beauties in the third and in the ninth innings. Joe also added two singles in his five times up to lead both sides with an almost perfect day at bat.

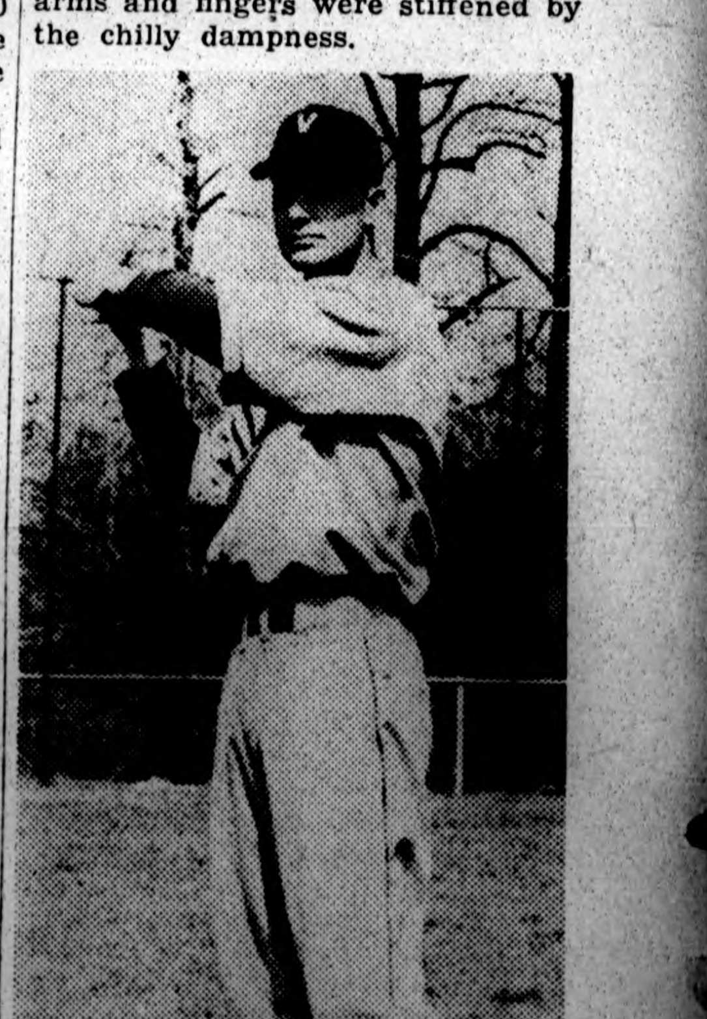
Most of the Owl runs came in the second, fourth and fifth frames. With bases loaded in the second Burns successively forced Andy Hritz, Pete Lorenc, and Johnny Pasquella across the plate with three walks.

The next seven runs in this dual slugfest were unearned by the Owls with the exception of one scored on Earl Gotwals' long fly. Three came over on two wild pitches by Burns and one on Joe Lord's error. Then DeBlois took over and allowed two more on two straight wild throws.

But the Trenton sophomore who had tossed a one-hitter last week against Rider, bore down, allowed two more markers in the seventh and eight while working slowly and methodically, and fanned eight in his four and one-third innings.

The 'Cats sewed up the ball game in the big fifth inning. Coffey got a single, his second hit of the afternoon and Smith scored him with a double, his second wallop also. Yednock drove in Smith with a clout through short and Bicky's homer cleared the bases.

It was a bad day for the pitchers not only in runs scored against them, but because the cold wind, that caused the dozen fans to shiver despite topcoats, did not allow them to get warmed up, and their arms and fingers were stiffened by the chilly dampness.



BILL SMITH
This newcomer switched from pitcher to outfielder, has been a consistent performer at the plate since the beginning of the season and has added strength to the Wildcat batting order.

Rider, Manhattan Nines Blasted By Slugging Wildcats

Deblois Shuts Out Trentonians 12-0 Allowing One Hit; Jaspers Beaten 13-12 in Eleven Innings

Emerging victorious in two contests last week, before meeting the Owl squad from Temple, the Wildcat nine boosted their winning ration to three wins against two losses; both Rider and Manhattan went down before the Wildcat batsmen 12-0 and 13-12 respectively.

Journeying to Trenton on Wednesday the Cats set the air to ringing around Wetzel Field with the crack of their bats. Encouraged by this fine hitting, sophomore Al Deblois, a native Trentonian and former Trenton Catholic star, pitched a one-hit shutout against his fellow townsmen.

It was a tight game for four innings then the 'Cats cut loose in the fifth scoring four runs and driving Bitters, Rider pitcher, from the box. Again in the sixth the Blue and White nine rode roughshod over the Rough Riders making their total eleven runs. Though the Trenton team used three pitchers they were unable to stem the tide.

Koproski Hits Homer

Joe Koproski added another circuit clout to his record while Ted Bicky, Jim Traitz, and Joe Yednock connected for two base hits. Five Villanova singles and nine Rider errors accounted for the rest of the grand tally.

Deblois missed a pitcher's dream game by allowing one hit through the box in the seventh inning. It was the second victory for the Villanova men over the Rider team. The Main Liners opened their season by defeating the Cowboys 9-3.

Two teams laid an artillery barrage on Manhattan Field Saturday afternoon in an eleven inning hitter's battle when the Villanova nine climbed to a 13-12 victory over the Jaspers from Manhattan .

Five Bingles For Yednock

The teams shared equally 30 hits, the Jaspers getting the edge in errors by making nine to the 'Cat's three.

Doc Jacobs started Bill Wood but after he gave up eleven hits in six innings he turned the mound over to Joe Malone, the Greenwich twilight star. The Jaspers gained a home run and three additional hits in two innings which brought Major McDonnell from the Wildcat bench to pitch three hitless innings and receive credit for the win.

Villanova teed off against two Manhattan pitchers and went into the eleventh inning with a 12-12 tie score. Yednock crossed the plate after he had doubled and Latanza singled to bring in the winning run. Yednock boosted his average by hitting safely five times out of six trips to the plate.

Ted Bicky, catcher, and Jim Traitz, first baseman, collected one home run apiece and Tratz got credit for four runs batted in.

The 'Cats just managed to eke out revenge against the Jaspers for their football victory in the fall. many of the Green and White football stars playing on the defeated nine including Charlies McNulty Captain-elect of the Manhattan eleven.

Three Homers

Three home runs were clouted last Saturday in the Wildcat-Manhattan Baseball game. Two Villanovans, Ted Bicky and Jim Traitz, connected as did one Manhattan player. Traitz's circuit blow drove in four runs.

Fedigan Wins Two In Mural Loop As Aisenbrey Pitches One-Hitter

Beat Mendel 7-6 and 16-2; Austin Whips Alumni to Keep League Lead

By JACK KOVAL

Last week's intramural baseball games found Fedigan and Austin Halls holding the upper hand with the Yellow nine of Mendel being the victim of 7-6 and 16-2 defeats at the hands of the Fediganites. In the afternoon contest of Sunday's games, the Firemen of Austin defeated Alumni Hall in a slugfest affair 16-9. All three games were strictly offensive, although many of the runs made by the teams were due to unpolished defensive work on the part of both the senior and freshmen halls.

Playing spirited ball on Wednesday was the Mendel nine, which gave the Fedigan players a real run for their money. They were leading Fedigan 6-1 by virtue of two offensive splurges made in the first and third innings. However, the Maroon and White gradually caught up with them, pushing two runs across in the fourth inning, three in the fifth, and the winning run in the seventh. The majority of Fedigan's runs were scored on errors, for Shahood, Mendel pitcher, allowed only three hits and pitched a fine game.

Lemire Triples

Successive singles by Ramirez, Lemire, and Shahood in the opening frame accounted for two runs. But the Mendelites really poured it on in the third inning. Lemire tripled and was followed by Kane who hit a double scoring Lemire from third. Shahood then singled and Simmons also singled advancing Shahood to third. A triple by McEntee scored the two men on base, and then he scored himself, on a bad throw from the outfield.

Fedigan had two big innings in the fourth and fifth when they made five runs to tie the score at six all. The Mendelites were unable to duplicate the sudden offensive power which they displayed in the third inning, and failed to make any more runs. Fedigan finally won out when they scored the winning run in the last frame and took the game 7-6.

One-Hitter for Aisenbrey

Mendel Hall, seeking revenge for the tough game that they lost to Fedigan on Wednesday, was defeated again by the same Maroon and White club on Sunday morning. Steve Aisenbrey, outstanding pitcher for the Fediganites, pitched a sensational one-hit game, thus allowing his cohorts to put the Mendel nine into submission very handily 16-2.

The lone hit given by Aisenbrey was made in the fifth inning when Dave Simmons of Mendel hit a Texas league single into center field. In seven innings of pitching only twenty-five men batted against Aisenbrey. Both runs of the Mendel nine were scored on errors.

Largely responsible for the sixteen runs of the Fediganites were Stan Kazior, Art Connor, and Steve Aisenbrey, who had eight of their total twelve hits.

In Sunday's afternoon contest, the Firemen of Austin set back the Green Wave of Alumni Hall in a high scoring game 16-9. This was the fourth consecutive win for the Blue and White. They have had no losses and hold the leadership of the league with Fedigan close behind with three wins and one loss.

Alumni Leads at Start

Alumni got off to an early 2-1 lead at the end of the first inning, but in the top half of the second the Austin nine tallied seven runs to take a lead that was never relinquished. They added three more runs in the fourth, one in the fifth, two in the sixth, and another two in the seventh, boosting their total score to sixteen.

For the first three frames, Alex Lukacs, outstanding Austin moundsman, pitched hitless ball, but in the fourth Bob Barrett ended the spell that Lukacs seemingly had over the Alumni nine and hit a single to the outfield. In the fifth, the big inning for the Greenies, five runs were made on three successive hits by Cotte, Barrett, and Kennedy followed by two walks. In the next inning they managed to get two more runs on two hits bringing their sum to nine.

Austin Nips Fedigan For Softball Lead

By JOE DALY

Austin Hall's Firemen pushed ahead of Fedigan last week in the Intramural softball league, when the third place Mendies nosed out the Gigolos 11-7 Thursday night. The victory although considered an upset was very decisive, with Mendel gaining an early lead which they held through the contest.

The same evening Austin and Alumni began a ball game which didn't get past the first inning because of a disputed decision over the ground rules. On a pitched ball Crotti stole second when Don Bradburn, Alumni catcher, dropped the pellet. All the Greenies swamped the field protesting the decision, arguing that the runner is unable to steal on a pitch and that he should be sent back to first. But Father McKee's boys insisted that stealing was perfectly legal, and so the argument went until dark. One might have imagined that he was at Ebbets Field witnessing a Giant-Dodger feud.

Austin Beats Fedigan

The final outcome was that the game will be played at some future date, which has not been announced. On Monday night Mendel won their first game of the year by defeating Alumni 8-6, which along with their other victory over Fedigan on Thursday allowed them to slip into third place over the Greenies.

The same night the Fediganites left the field after being shut out by Joe Barry who was able to hang on to a four run lead that Austin gave him when a timely hit by Jim Cahill with two on netted enough runs to put the game on ice. Ken Breitski singled in the fourth, Barry walked and Kempf drove both men around with a long single.

Second for Kirchner

Tuesday was an off day, but all the clubs were back on the firing line Wednesday night when Austin outslugged Mendel to win 10-9. Base hits were flowing like water, for neither pitcher seemed to have anything on the ball but the cover. The winning tally came with two out and Hefele on second when Paruta drove a sharp liner toward third which was fielded but the throw was high at first allowing Hefele to score.

Fedigan had little trouble with Alumni, winning 8-2 behind the five hit pitching of John Kirchner who hung up his second victory of the campaign.

This week will begin the closing stretch of the league and the fight for first place will be a good one, for both Austin and Fedigan have two of the best entries that ever played in the Intramural league. Both Mendel and Alumni aren't too far behind to be counted out. They both could sneak into the pay off spot by getting a few breaks.

TWO SOPHOMORES

Bill Walsh and Bob Casey, the number one and two men on the varsity golf team are only sophomores. They played in the same positions last season as freshmen.

Wildcat Linksmen Bow To St. John's

Redmen Avenge Twin Defeats of Last Season in Close Match 4-3

Despite the efforts of Bill Walsh and Ernie Klappenback, the Villanova golf team lost their first match last Friday afternoon, at the Pennsylvania Golf Club to St. John's of Brooklyn, 4-3.

Walsh, playing in the number one position for the Wildcats, earned one point by winning his individual match from Tom Flannigan, 5 and 4, and helped in winning another, when he and Bob Casey combined to win the best ball match from Flannigan and Joe Somelofske, 2 up. Somelofske beat Casey in their individual match, 3 and 2. Walsh also had the low medal for the day, getting 43-37 for an even 80.

Playing in the number five spot, Ernie Klappenback overwhelmed Joe Hartney of St. John's with a seven up score at the end of twelve holes, thereby winning the third point for the Blue and White.

Powers Moves to Fourth

Having beaten the Redmen twice last year, this defeat came as a stunning surprise to the Wildcat linksmen. The Villanovans now await the return engagement with St. John's at the Hillcrest Golf Club in Long Island on Monday, April 27.

In the final round of the qualifying trials, held on Wednesday of last week, there were no changes in the first round lineup, except that Bill Powers, by virtue of a second round 87, moved up into the number four spot, thereby displacing Hugh Matthews, who is at present in the number five position. Increasing his lead to thirteen strokes, Bill Walsh spread-eagled the field with a total of 161, while Bob Casey was second with 174. Paul Stenn, Bill Powers, Hugh Matthews, and Ernie Klappenback followed in that order. Bill Kelly won the alternate position, winning out over Bill Helmig for the seventh place.

St. Joe Matches Cancelled

A disappointing note was struck last week when word was received from St. Joseph's of Philadelphia, that they would be unable to play their two scheduled matches with Villanova this season. Greatly affected by the draft, the Hawks could not find men enough for a six man team. This reduces the Wildcat schedule to five matches, plus two practice contests with Swarthmore recently scheduled.

Tomorrow the linksmen meet Haverford on the west course of the Merion Cricket Club, while Monday they play the return engagement with St. John's. Last season the Wildcats defeated Haverford, 6-3, on the Frazer course, and will be gunning for their second consecutive victory over their Main Line neighbors.

Results of the St. John's match:

Bill Walsh defeated Tom Flannigan, 5 and 4.

Joe Somelofske defeated Bob Casey, 3 and 2.

Best Ball—Walsh and Casey, 2 up.

Tom Heyer defeated Paul Stenn, 1 up.

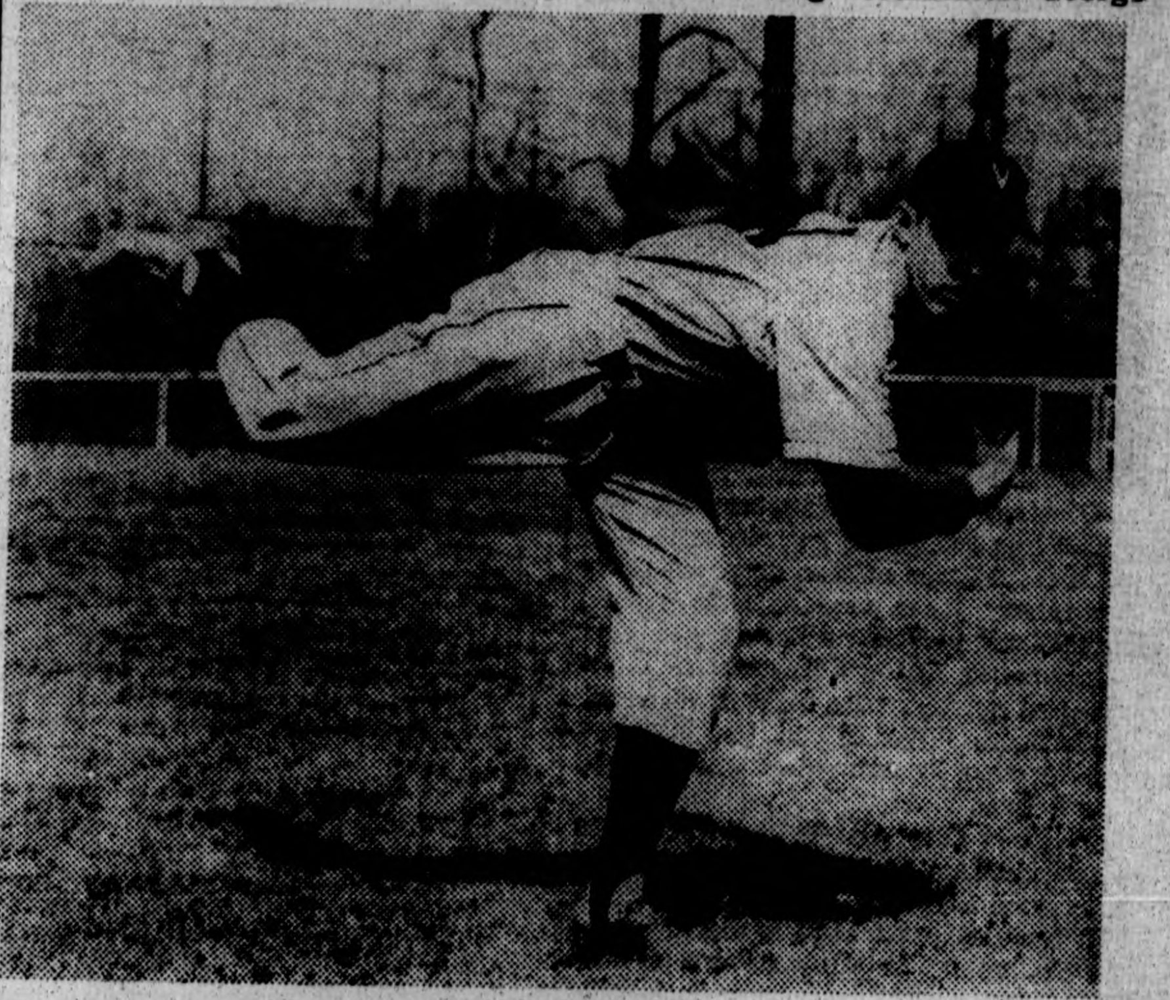
Gene Frasca defeated Bill Powers, 5 and 4.

Best Ball—Heyer and Frasca, 2 and 1.

Ernie Klappenback defeated Joe Hartney, 7 and 6.

Intramural Star Makes Grade As Varsity Hurler

There wasn't much sense running the starting pitcher right through this game. It was the opening day of the season, the April winds were chilling, and besides, Villanova was having things their own way. The best bet for Doc Jacobs would be to give three of his hurlers three inning stretches. When Frank Chaplar retired after his turn, Joe Malone trudged to the mound to start the fourth inning. Putting his six feet and a hundred and eighty-five pounds behind every pitch, Joe went through a trio of innings setting down five on strikes and giving up but one hit.



JOE MALONE

Hearing no order to the contrary, Joe climbed the hill for the seventh inning. He finished the game with a record of ten strikeouts and only one hit given in six innings. This afternoon two weeks ago was the high-point in Malone's career, a fitting climax to the story of a fellow who came up the hard way.

Hurled in High School

Joe pitched three years for Chaminade High located in Mineola, Long Island. In his senior year Malone hurled this Nassau County school to a stunning victory over the New York City champions.

Joe came to Villanova in 1938 without the benefit of a scholarship. Regardless of the apparant lack of recognition, he went out for freshman baseball. It might be considered that Joe was farmed out for more experience as he spent his first year pitching for Alumni Hall in the intramural league.

As a sophomore Malone hurled for Mendel Hall in the same league. That year Joe was recognized as one of the outstanding moundsmen in intramural ranks.

Only Senior Pitcher

When the 1941 baseball season opened at Villanova, Joe was a full fledged varsity performer. He was able to pick up lots of valuable tips from the two veterans, Connie O'Leary and Connie Nicholas. The former, in Joe's opinion, was the most promising college diamond star of the year.

As the lone senior member of the pitching staff, Joe comes close to being an ace hurler of the Wildcats. He is compiling a favorable record in the games he has worked.

Off the diamond, Joseph W. Malone is an astute student of Mr. Savage's Marketing class. His scholastic standing in the Commerce School is steady if not outstanding.

Had Seven Roommates

Joe has been setting some sort of a record when it comes to getting and discarding roommates. George McElwee, soph commerceman, is the seventh one to share a shelter with our hero in his four years on the campus. Joe can't explain it, and George isn't thinking of leaving, not unless the same fate that happened to three other "roomies" visits him. These three former mates are now in the army.

Joe was a reliable performer on Fedigan Hall's basketball team this past season. With his size, his aggressive spirit, and his brainy play, he was a hard man to stop. He was the only player left over from the team that took league honors the year before last.

The Air Corps is Joe's ambition when he gets out of school this June. He wants to go along with his pals Bill DeGrace and Walt Mason. That's just like Joe. He's big, good-natured, and easy going, but when the going gets tough for his side, he's ready to get in there and pitch. Joe came through at Villanova; he'll come through in life.

MARQUETTE UNIVERSITY

Dentistry is the only profession that is decreasing in personnel.

More dentists are presently needed for the Army and Navy. More dentists are likewise needed for civilian service, since a greater proportion of the public is rapidly being educated to the importance of dental services.

Two years of pre-dental college studies are required for admission including: inorganic chemistry (8 sem. hrs.), organic chemistry (4 sem. hrs.), physics (8 sem. hrs.), and biology or zoology (8 sem. hrs.). No conditions on admission are allowed.

Pre-dental students who will qualify by June or by September are advised to apply for admission immediately. Freshmen will begin their dental studies in an accelerated program on September 25, 1942.

Write for particulars to The Secretary of the Dental School.

Here and There

By Jack Dudley

LAST Saturday, Hank Borowy, youthful Yankee rookie, took over the pitching duties in the fourth inning after the Red Sox had mauled his predecessor for a five-run lead. New York wasn't able to overcome the lead of the Sox, but that wasn't the fault of Hank, who gave up no hits and struck out five during his five-inning term on the mound. It looks like the beginning of a long and brilliant career for the former Fordham star.

We can remember when Borowy was acclaimed as the greatest college pitcher in the country. Maybe the scribes were right. He had gone through two years of intercollegiate competition without suffering a defeat. He was going through his final season as a college star still undefeated, but that was before he had to face Villanova.

We had a few good names in our lineup; for instance, there were Mike Lazorchak, Lloyd Rice, Lou Wannemacher, and Jack Donaghue. Then there was Joe Desmond, our mound ace, who drew the starting assignment against the Rams. To make a long story short, Joe was brilliant that day, and the rest of the Wildcats pounded Borowy for eleven hits and seven runs to win handily.

That was no reflection on Hank Borowy. He's a great pitcher, and we're rooting for him to win many games for New York in the future. But we can't help wondering what has happened to our star of that game, Joe Desmond. Two years ago Joe put in a good season with Baltimore of the International League, which is strictly fast-time. We feel certain that you'll be seeing Joe up there soon, possibly tangling with Hank in another pitching battle.

—V—

So you think you know your major league baseball, do you? See if you can "bat" a thousand on the following set of questions. We'll give you the answers at the end so you won't be worrying about these puzzlers till next week. But don't look at them until you've answered the questions yourselves.

1. Name the different major league teams that each of the following stars have played for:
   a. Dick Siebert.
   b. Bucky Walters.
   c. Dutch Leonard.
   d. Joe Cronin.
2. Is the following statement correct or wrong?
   Dolf Camilli spent only two years in the minor leagues before being sold to the Phillies.
3. When did the Phillies last finish in the first division of the National League?
4. Billy Knickerbocker, latest addition to the Athletic's infield, was never a member of two of the following teams. Which ones are they?
   a. Cleveland Indians.
   b. Detroit Tigers.
   c. St. Louis Browns.
   d. New York Yankees.
   e. Boston Red Sox.
5. How many National League outfielders batted in over one hundred runs last year?

Answers:

1. a. Dick Siebert spent two years apiece with the Brooklyn Dodgers and the St. Louis Cardinals before become the Athletic's regular first baseman.
   b. Bucky Walters had tryouts with the Boston Braves and the Boston Red Sox as a third-baseman before being sold to the Phillies, who eventually sold him to Cincinnati for a fancy price.
   c. Dutch Leonard was one of the leading hurlers for Brooklyn for four years before his arrival in Washington.
   d. Joe Cronin tried for three years to make the Pittsburgh Pirates before he made good with Washington and the Red Sox.
2. Sad to say, Dolf Camilli didn't crash the majors until his ninth year in organized ball. Dolf starred for eight seasons on the Pacific Coast, and was then sold to the Chicago Cubs, not the Phils.
3. The Phils' last taste of glory was in '32 when they took fourth.
4. The Detroit Tigers and the Boston Red Sox.
5. Only one, Vince Dimaggio of the Pirates.

Spring Practice Ends Next Week

The gridiron forces of coaches Clipper Smith and Vince McNally have been going at it hammer and tongs for the past seven weeks now and with just one more week left the mentors are going into the final stages of the spring practice sessions with a cheerfulness that denotes progress made and plenty of work accomplished.

Blocking and tackling have been stressed to a maximum with particular emphasis being placed on the team blocking that was so faulty last fall on many occasions. The seven man football games have been continued in order to give the Clipper and Vince a better idea of the abilities of the backs.

Smith Looks Good

The ball carriers looked pretty good. Joe Pezelski is running well, some of the frosh have improved tremendously. George Smith, a consistently good ball player, has looked even better the last two weeks. George has been shifted to the fullback position and it is here that the Clipper can take full advantage of his rugged blocking and line backing abilities.

In the line guards, Tommy Gildea and freshman Ed Konopka, former Roxborough High, Phila. star, stand out, and big Bill Lillenthal seems to be a worthy successor to Paul Stenn. Steve Pritko also deserves recommendation for his fine play on the wing.

This next week's work will determine a lot in the eyes of the coaches and it will add the finishing touches to the lengthy spring program.

for vaulting where one utilizes the stomach muscles to the greatest degree and is always pulling and stretching.

Another freshman, Tom Kiely, pulled up lame while running in the Penn A. C. meet in February and the muscles in his thigh still bother him.

With DiCarlo and Coleman out of the lineup in the triangular meet with Navy and Catholic U. last week defeat was inevitable. With them in there it would have been a different story.

DiCarlo will be absent for the Penn Relays, and Jumbo who has looked forward to this year and this meet with pride in his heart is to be thwarted again by Lady Luck. His entries will be limited and all the men will have to double up. There will be no 400 meter hurdle championship at Villanova that the fleet junior might have won and the young mentor's pride and joy, the streaky mile relay team, will be weakened by his absence and Guida's unhealed ankle.

Jumbo therefore deserves our sympathy. He has built and planned for several years now to bring back the fame to his alma mater on the cinders that he once established by his running feats. And the fates turned angry faces upon him.

FIVE OUT OF SIX

Captain Joe Yednock had five bingles in six trips to the plate as he finally found his old form of last season that made him the leading hitter on the team.

outfield when he is not assuming the pitching chores.

Another strong hitter on the Green and White aggregation is second baseman Elmer Davis. Leading off for the Terrors it is very seldom that he does not get on base, and last year he scored the most runs for the team, as well as compiling a .362 batting average.

Defeated Prexies Last Year

The final game of the trip takes place on Saturday afternoon, when Villanova encounters George Washington U. in the nation's capital. Last spring the Wildcats defeated the Prexies 7-1, Connie Nicholas allowing only three hits, while the Wildcat batters garnered thirteen.

Naturally they hope to turn the table on the favored Wildcats, and if their inexperienced forces produce in this contest, they will have an excellent chance to upset the Blue and White.

Doc Jacobs did not disclose Villanova's starting pitchers for these three contests but it is expected that "Jigger" Donahue, Bill Wood, and "French" De Bloise will be called upon at some time or another during the trip, to repeat the three victories scored by the Main Liners last season.

Junior M. E.'s Win Bowling Crown Defeating Frosh In PKP League

Bob Simpson and Don Cryor Lead Team to Championship; Junior Chems Second

By JIM BONNER

Saturday afternoon saw the Phi Kappa Pi Bowling League end this year's competition in a blaze of glory for the Junior Mechanical Engineers. Led by Bob Simpson and Don Cryor they crashed their way into the winners circle. They took three out of four games from the runner-up Freshmen to close their season with twenty-eight wins against twelve losses for an average of .700. The Freshmen ended up sporting a .650 average.

While the Freshmen and the Junior Mechanicals were fighting it out for first place the Junior Chemicals surprised and took over second place two games ahead of the Freshmen. The rest of the teams performed as was expected.

Angelo Rosa, who consistently led the Freshmen throughout the season came out on top in the high averages division. In twenty-seven games he piled up an impressive average of 160. This led last year's top by five pins. In second and third place respectively were found Bob Simpson and Don Cryor who came through with averages of 159 and 158. Also in the first five were McGrath and Jim Cahill.

Win Butera Trophy

McGrath and Tom Hushen carried off the honors for high three and high single respectively. They will be awarded medals for their efforts.

The Junior Mechanicals will be awarded the Charles Butera Trophy presented by Charles Butera, the owner of the Ardmore Bowling Academy. The individual members of the team, Don Cryor, Bob Simpson, Ed Gallagher, Joe O'Donnell, Mal Boyle, and Tom Golden will be awarded jeweled pins.

The final match between the Freshmen and the Junior Mechanical showed plenty of fight and color. All the way through it was neck and neck. The Juniors managed to garner three points, but at the end there was only a difference of sixteen pins, 2337 to 2321. Both teams smashed the previous league record for total score by a goodly number of pins.

Next year will see many of the same teams returning to competition. If this year is any criterion, we should see a bigger and better Engineers bowling league and possibly a championship varsity.

Walt Kelley Gets Navy Commission

Walter Kelley, '41, the greatest swimmer to ever wear the Blue and White has entered the Navy and will become an Ensign. He will be assigned to duty as an instructor of swimming in the new coaches' training program for Naval Air Cadets. He is one of some twenty swimmers and coaches from the whole country who will be placed at various training stations throughout the nation to instruct the men. He and the other coaches will undergo a three-month toughening-up program before getting their commissions.

Kelley captained the tank squad last year and is the holder of three college pool records in the 50, 100, and 220 yard freestyle events. He holds numerous other swimming records and was one of the best sprinters in college ranks last season.

ALL-AROUND MAN

Bill LaFrance, freshman football end, is an all-around athlete. He played frosh basketball and last week hurled the javelin in the meet with Navy.

dome is supported by scaffolding due to the fact that a recent earthquake left it with many large cracks.

Tom's home base was located at Accra, a small coastal town of the Gold coast. The life at Accra was generally of the primitive type, luxuries being very rare.

The usual tropical diseases were prevalent, fresh drinking water was impossible to find—so that these pioneering pilots were forced to fit in with the native pattern of living.

However, Tom describes the Middle East as a fine place in which to live. Here one can find many Europeans and enough Americans to make it seem like home. He visited the many native bazaars, the large mosques, the Sphinx and the pyramids.

During these land travels, Tom had that rare experience of riding a camel. He describes the sensation as being similar to that which one gets on horseback, the real experience of camel-riding as being aboard when he rises from his knees the first time and also when he kneels for the descent. The feeling is very much like being in a small boat on a rough sea.

Most of the coast around Accra is not favorable for any type of bathing, but Tom describes one place, Teshi Beach, which was only a few miles from this camp, as being far better than anything along the coast of New Jersey that he has seen. Cocoanut palm trees grow along the beach so that a refreshing drink is always close at hand.

Many of the natives receive their higher education at Achimota College in Accra. Those that are educated hold responsible government positions and help in the administration of the colony. Tom's house boy, Clement, was not considered as highly educated—and yet he was able to speak eight languages.

On the other hand, many of the tribes of Africa still revert to their primitive instincts and customs. For instance, there is definitely one tribe in Africa that provides a human heart for its chief once each new moon. Another tribe buries alive with a deceased chief several of his slaves and a few of his wives.

Lt. Thomas J. Carbine, graduate of the school of Arts in 1939, was an unusually active student during his four year stay at Villanova.

During his senior year, Lt. Carbine was elected vice-chairman of the Student Council and College Editor of the '39 Belle Air.

Now an officer in the U. S. Army Air Corps, Lt. Carbine has just returned from a six month tour of duty through Africa, India and the Persian States. During this time, he served with Pan American Airways as a reserve officer of the Air Corps. He will now return to active duty as a captain, and will be stationed at Jackson, Miss.

Urgent Need For New War Weapons Brings Suggestions From Campus

By TOM McFARLAND

During the first World War many brilliant plans and inventions for the better waging of war were submitted to the United States and the British governments. A recent British publication brought out the fact that these plans were discarded or neglected, and the result was that we fell behind the times.

The publication reminded Allied commands that a man once handed in a wonderful set of plans for one of our most effective weapons of today, only to have an inspector scrawl across the drawings the man made, "The man is mad."

Keep Our Eyes Open

American and British chiefs have recently expressed a desire and an actual need of every plan, idea, or what-have-you available, no matter how outlandish or reminiscent of Flash Gordon it may be. It is, therefore, our duty to keep open our eyes that we may notice how improvements may be made, how more enemies may bite the dust, how the boys in the fox-holes may have an easier existence. The solution to many pressing military problems may be directly under our collective nose.

It may be our collective mustache. For example, if a group of men with four-foot long mustaches were to march through Germany, they would scour the countryside. This is also a very good plan for post-war street cleaning.

Toxic Gas Substitute

The demand for toxic gases will soon be great. Villanova could help the national effort by submitting to the high command a sample of Louie's coffee. A fine spray of this potent potion would devastate a greater part of enemy territory.

Another plan, a great favorite around the campus, is to send a group of intra-mural referees to Hitler with the intention of talking him to death. But even Hitler deserves better treatment than this.

Biology Guerillas

Then, too, we could outfit a troop of guerillas made up of biology students, with rusty scalpels and burning needles. Knowing what these boys do to a frog or a cat, the enemy would quail and retreat with haste.

But an even ghastlier sight can be conceived of. Imagine a crack division of engineers bearing down upon the hapless enemy. Bloodshot eyes, bleary from long hours of study in stuffy rooms, glare beneath a batch of mussed hair, while a ragged and unkempt beard intensifies the general aspect of terror.

Wildly brandishing their slide rules, they will overcome the enemy with fear and then bore him to death with speculations as to stress and strain involved in bridge building, for instance.

Engineers Close One-Day Meeting

Three hundred and twenty-five students representing nineteen colleges attended the tenth annual Eastern Student Conference of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers which opened with registration in Mendel Hall yesterday morning and closed with a banquet last night at Haverford Court.

Yesterday morning's technical sessions in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium included presentation of a number of papers by students representing the different schools.

After the morning sessions, the delegates had luncheon at the Conestoga Mill.

Labs Inspected

Following luncheon the representatives inspected the Villanova laboratories and were shown movies, both technical and on the lighter side. After the movies they returned to the auditorium to hear the remaining technical papers.

The conference reached its climax last night with over one hundred and sixty students attending the closing banquet. After the dinner, Nevin E. Funk, vice-president of the Philadelphia Electric Company, gave the principal address.

Following Funk's talk, the prizes for the best papers delivered at the Conference were presented by James W. Parker, national president of the society, and Alton C. Chick, a national committeeman.

Seniors Offered Government Posts

War demands have created unusual opportunities in Federal employment for technically trained college graduates and senior students, a United States Civil Service Commission release stated last week in announcing examinations for Junior Professional assistants in the following fields: business analysis, public administration, economics, library science, home economics, and mathematics through calculus.

No experience is required for any of these positions which pay salaries of $2000, $1800, $1620, and $1440 per year.

Applicants must have completed a four-year college course, or must be enrolled in the last semester or last quarter of the senior year. Those who meet these and other entrance requirements will be given a written test to measure their knowledge and aptitudes.

Tests in May

The Commission plans to give this test in the early part of May, hoping to establish the eligible lists the first week in June so that appointments can be begun as soon as possible.

The proper application forms may be obtained at any first or second class post office or by writing to the Civil Service Commission in Washington. Applications must be forwarded so as to be received not later than April 27.

The Commission also announced that positions requiring no written examination are open in the fields of architecture, astronomy, chemistry, engineering, metallurgy, meteorology, physics, technology and veterinary.

Interested students may obtain further information on all of these openings in the VILLANOVAN office.

MERIT AWARDS

Presentation of Merit Awards, annual recognition of student participation in extra-curricular activity, will be made on Thursday, May 7, in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium, Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, announced last week.

Certificates of merit are awarded to those students in good scholastic standing who have taken part in a recognized activity.

Aviation Cadet

WILLIAM F. DOBBINS, arts graduate of 1939, who was recently appointed Naval Aviation Cadet. He was transferred to the Naval Air Station at Pensacola, Fla., for flight training of seven months which will entitle him to a commission in the Naval Reserve as an aviator.

Navy Pilot

William Francis Dobbins, 1939 graduate of the School of Arts, recently was appointed Naval Aviation Cadet and transferred to the Naval Air Station at Penacola, Fla., for flight training, according to an announcement from that station.

While at Villanova, Dobbins was active as cartoonist for the VILLANOVAN and took leading roles in several of the productions of the Belle Masque Dramatic Society.

Scholarship Exams

One hundred fifty-two examinees, the largest group ever to participate, took the competitive examinations in the Amphitheatre of Mendel Hall last Saturday beginning at 9:30 A. M.

A number of different states were represented; in addition to the usual students from Pennsylvania, New York, Delaware, Maryland, and New Jersey, Florida and Connecticut were also represented. Examinations were given in English, science, mathematics, and social studies.

Villanova-Immaculata Joint Band To Present Spring Concert May 3

Varied Program Will Include Popular Works of Tschaikowski and Romberg

The combined symphonic bands of Villanova and Immaculta will present their second annual Spring concert on Sunday evening, May 3, at 8:30 P. M., in the Field House. Their moderator, Rev. Ralph J Handran, O. S. A., will conduct a varied program of universally popular works.

No admission will be charged. All are invited to attend, including friends of the students. A representative gathering from the student body of Immaculata will be transported by bus to Villanova.

The program will include the "Light Cavalry Overture," well known selections from Romberg's operetta "Student Prince," a trombone novelty "Teddy Trombone," the "love theme" from Tschaikowski's Romeo and Juliet Overture (known popularly as "Our Love"), a medley of Yankee tunes, the first movement from Schubert's Unfinished Symphony (also recognized as "You Are My Song Of Love") and three marches — "Alouette," "The Thunderer," and "The Commander." The concert will open with the National Anthem.

Woodwinds Replace Strings

The group have spent considerable time in practicing for the concert because of several trying difficulties that have arisen. Development passages and fully orchestrated sections in the heavier compositions have been the band's chief concern in their last two practices.

It must be understood that there are no stringed instruments in the band; therefore the woodwinds, a less agile instrument, have taken the stringed assignments.

The compositions themselves are tried concert war horses. "The Light Cavalry" achieved its popularity as background music for Saturday matinee films; Schubert's melody in the "Unfinished Symphony" has been whistled ever since Sigmund Romberg incorporated it into his operetta "Blossom Time;" the name of Tschaikowski speaks for itself; "Yankee Doodle" and several Irish jigs will provide contrasting novelty.

DPE Voting Lists Meehan As Frat Head

After a closely-contested election held last Thursday in the auditorium of the commerce and finance school, James A. Meehan, junior pre-law major, was named president of the Delta Pi Epsilon, the school's fraternity.

The new president, who is succeeding David N. Reardon, senior accounting major, in that office, is a day student and a star member of the intramural basketball team in his three years here. For the past two years he has been a member of the intramural All-Star team in this same sport.

Also numbered among his activities are membership in the Spanish Club, the sophomore cotillion committee of last year and a committee chairman of the Junior Prom.

Voted into office with Meehan in one of the frat's most closely contested elections were Gene Pinto, day student and junior accounting major, as treasurer; Joseph Coll, the only sophomore to attain an office and an accounting major, as secretary; Joseph McEvoy, junior day student majoring in accounting, as sergeant-at-arms; and William Menseck, a junior finance major and day student, as fraternity representative in the Student Council.

Besides Reardon, the other officers who are retiring are William C. Hayes, accounting major, as vice-president; John Jakovic, who is majoring in accounting, as secretary; Leo F. Hin, major in marketing, as sgt.-at-arms; Edward R. Frank, accounting major, as treasurer; and Robert J. Koness, finance major, as Student Council representative. All the officers who relinquished their positions are seniors except Hin ,a junior resident student.

It has also been announced that the fraternity pins which the members ordered April 1 are expected to arrive the latter part of this week and will be given out at the meeting to be held a week from this Thursday.

Canfield Named To IRC Position

Robert T. Canfield, a junior marketing major in the School of Commerce and Finance, was elected last Monday to the presidency of the International Relations Club, it was announced today by Gerard F. Belz, retiring president of the society.

Canfield, a member of Delta Pi Epsilon, commerce school fraternity, has been on the staff of the VILLANOVAN for three years. He was recently appointed Copy Editor of the publication. He is president of the Catholic Press Club and a member of the History Seminar.

Belz, a senior artsman, is a member of Epsilon Phi Theta, arts school organization, and retired from the VILLANOVAN staff in February after three and one-half years of service.

New Office Created

To handle the increased activity of the club because of its recent selection as chairman of the Regional Commission on International Relations by the National Federation of Catholic College Students, Thomas Quigley, a freshman in the arts school, was named secretary of the organization.

By acting as chairman of this Philadelphia Region, the entire club will attempt to coordinate all activities involving international relations as they are conducted by the individual colleges located in Philadelphia and the surrounding area.

The club is closing what officers term a most active year, having attended five conferences held on the campuses of various local colleges, in addition to their regular weekly meetings. Delegates were sent to conventions at Lehigh University, Swarthmore College, and the College of New Rochelle, and to joint conferences at Chestnut Hill and Immaculata.

Asks Payment

All seniors who have failed to return their proofs and all who have ordered pictures and have failed to pay for them are requested to settle their accounts at once, William E. Schubert, Jr., editor of the Belle Air, announced today. If settlement is not made in the near future, the accounts will be turned over to the Business Office for collection, Schubert said.

Boyle Elected PKP President

McManus, Simpson, Quinn, Barry, and Allen to Fill Other Offices

At this year's annual elections of Phi Kappa Pi, engineering school fraternity, held last week Malachy Boyle, junior electrical engineer, was named president of the society to succeed Vincent J Gordon, senior mechanical engineer.

Also elected to new positions were John McManus, sophomore civil engineer, as vice-president; Robert Simpson as secretary, Francis Quinn as treasurer, Eugene Barry as Student Council representative, and John Allen as sergeant-at-arms. The last four students are all junior mechanical engineers.

Headed Prom Publicity

Boyle, going into the presidency for the next scholastic year, is a member of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, Chi Epsilon Mu, honorary engineering fraternity, and the Villanova Math Club. He was also on committees for this year's Junior Prom and the Owl Hop, serving as Publicity Chairman for the Prom. In his sophomore year he was Student Council representative for his class.

Retiring officers in addition to Gordon are Dennis A. Boyle, vice-president; John T. Sweeney, treasurer; Nicholas Aceto, secretary; John J. Quinn, sergeant-at-arms, and Robert S. Ayerle, as Student Council representative.

Elections for the office of president were held three times in the last two weeks before Boyle could finally be decided upon. The first casting of ballots resulted in a draw between Joseph Conway, Boyle, and Herman Behnke; the second election brought a tie between Boyle and Behnke; and the third and final balloting succeeded in putting Boyle into the presidency.

Army Air Corps Offers Positions; Navy Opens Three New Programs

It is expected that 150 major institutions of higher education will be visited between April 15 and May 15 of this year by teams of two Army Air Corps officers who will remain a few days to make clear the requirements for Air Corps Cadets.

These visits are expected to be followed by visits by Aviation Cadet Examining Boards to conduct examinations and effect enlistments of qualified members of the senior class for appointment as Aviation Cadets to be called to active service in June or soon thereafter.

Announcements are also imminent regarding a plan now in preparation, whereby underclassmen in college who can qualify for appointment as Aviation Cadets will be permitted to join the Enlisted Reserve of the Air Corps, which will exempt them from any call by Selective Service, and allow them to continue their studies in college, before being called to active service training.

New Navy Programs

Several other programs have been inaugurated by the Navy recently which provide openings for enlistment in the Naval Reserve besides the already established plans of V-1, V-5, and V-7. These new Reserve classes are V-3, V-4, and V-6.

The V-3 program will take enlistments as apprentice seamen for radiomen, signalmen and yeomen. Qualified seamen will be sent to specialists' schools upon completion of recruit training and men qualified by experience in telegraphy may be enlisted as telegraphers. Persons experienced in ultra-high-frequency radio installations will be enlisted and sent to a special school for further training.

Office Work Listed

V-4 enables men to enlist as yeomen for the performance of office work requiring training and experience in specialized subject matter, in some instances including ability to read, write, and speak foreign languages. (Enlistments are taken only on request of the Commandant of the Naval District for the enlistment of a particular individual.)

V-6 offers opportunities for nearly all ratings, covering a wide range of types of duty. Of special interest to some college men is enlistment as hospital apprentice, hospital corpsman, or pharmacist's mate. This program also is a varied class to which enlisted men in Class V-3 who do not qualify in the specialists' schools may be transferred.

Commerce School Openings

Of special interest to students in the School of Commerce and Finance is the announcement concerning the limited number of qualified students well advanced in college courses in business administration, accounting, or related subjects, may be commossioned as Probationary Ensigns, Naval Reserve, Class SC-V(P), with prospects of being kept in an inactive status until the completion of the college work.

Information as to detailed requirements of this plan should be applied for by addressing the Director of Naval Officer Procurement at the nearest Naval District Headquarters.

Farley Will Receive Honorary Degree At Commencement May 19

By THOMAS M. SCHUBERT

James A. Farley, former Postmaster General of the United States, will be given the honorary degree of Doctor of the Laws at the 99th commencement exercises of Villanova College to be held in the Field House on the afternoon of May 19.

Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, will preside over the exercises, which will include the usual Baccalaureate Mass. As is customary, Farley will also be the principal speaker of the occasion.

Farley, who has been a prominent Catholic statesman for many years, was born in Grassy Point, New York, on May 30, 1888. He graduated from the Packard Commercial School in New York City in 1906.

Rise In Business

Since that time, his consistent rise in the business world has paralleled his success in politics. His first position was that of bookkeeper with the Merlin, Keilholtz Paper Co., in New York.

In 1926 he became sales manager of the Universal Gypsum Co., and in the same year organized a company in his own name. Three years later he merged this company with five other firms to form the General Building Supply Corporation, of which he was president until March of 1933. During this time he was also president of another firm known as the James A. Farley Holding Corporation.

Began As Town Clerk

The Former Postmast General began his political career in 1912 as Town Clerk of Stony Point, New York. He held this position for seven years until he became supervisor of Rockland County. During the last two years of his clerkship, he was also Port Warden for the City of New York.

In 1923 he was elected to the New York State Assembly, and a year later was made a member of the New York State Athletic Commission. He served as chairman of the latter group from 1925 to 1933.

Heads Democratic Party

About this time, recognition in the Democratic party began to come his way. He was chairman of the Rockland County Committee from 1919 to 1929 and secretary of the New York State Commission from 1928 to 1930.

In addition to his most important appointment as Postmaster General, his recent honors include Chairmanship of both the New York State and the National Democratic Committees for several years.

Numerous clubs and organizations number Farley among their enrollment. These include the Knights of Columbus, the Elks, the Eagles, and the New York State Historical Association.

The University of the South, Canisius College, Manhattan College, John Marshall College, Niagara University, Lincoln Memorial University, and Hendrix College have bestowed degrees on Farley at various times.

Students Must Register In May

In compliance with a request from the National Headquarters of the Selective Service System, that all colleges and universities officially enroll students for the third academic year at or near the end of the sophomore year, registration for students at Villanova will be held on or about May 11, Paetrus F. Banmiller, Registrar, announced last week.

It was also announced by the National Headquarters that "students of draft age will not be given consideration for deferment on the grounds of being in training or preparation until, at or near the end of the second academic year and then only if he can show evidence of continuing his training or preparation for fields necessary to the war production or war effort. The student must also be enrolled in a recognized college or university for the continuance of his pre-professional or professional training or for further specialized study."

College students who are in training for a necessary occupation may be deferred even though they are not attending summer session, provided the registrant is employed in an activity during such period which is considered as further training and preparation for the activity with respect to which the registrant is in training or preparation as a student. Further, the registrant must be actually enrolled in the fall term for the continuance of training and preparation.

Fr. Stanford Elected To NCEA Executive Board

Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, was elected to the General Executive Board of the National Catholic Educational Association at the group's annual meeting held in Chicago on April 9.

It was also announced by the Most Rev. John T. McNicholas, Episcopal Chairman of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, that Fr. Stanford was recently appointed a member of the Advisory Commission in the Department of Education of the N. C. W. C.

While serving in the latter capacity, Fr. Stanford will aid in expanding and coordinating the work of the conference to meet the demands of the war emergency.

Soph Opportunities For Navy Enlistment Explained In Letter

Sophomores who are ineligible for enlistment in Class V-1 of the Naval Reserve by reason of being over 20 years of age will be permitted to enlist in Class V-7 when they attain a junior status, according to an announcement received yesterday from the Bureau of Navigation by Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O. S. A., liason officer between the college and the Navy Department.

Sophomores who are eligible for enlistment in Class V-1 have until the completion of their sophomore year to enlist. Opportunities to enlist for those who are eligible for enlistment in Class V-1 will be closed at the end of this academic year.

Sophomores who are eligible for enlistment in Class V-1 will not be allowed to enlist in V-7 upon attaining a junior status.

Unity For Unions

MANPOWER, Transportation, and Production. These are the three key words involved in America's war effort today.

Of the three, Production is the most pressing, for on this essential hinges the final success of both Manpower and Transportation.

The questions all Americans are asking are: "Has our program reached its peak efficiency? Are there still some bottlenecks hindering defense production?"

The distressing answers are all too obvious to anyone reading the front-page newspaper reports of unauthorized strikes and internal quarrels among the rival unions.

In the midst of repeated pleas from both the public and the government for labor peace and war unity, the C. I. O. announces a new drive to "organize" the dairy farmers. Since these farmers are already satisfied with their well-managed and economical cooperatives, more labor disturbances may well be expected.

Coincident with this news was the paradoxical statement made on Thursday by Philip Murray, C.I.O. president, proclaiming that all is well with labor, that labor is one behind the war effort.

These, then, are indications of the carelessness and selfishness evidenced by labor's so-called "representatives."

It is easy to realize why the President, the Congress, and the public are all growing impatient with labor leaders' enthusiastic speeches on the one hand and their production slow-ups on the other.

We sincerely believe that the individual workers are eager to do their part. The problem is, can they and will they persuade their leaders to do the same?

Strikes and inter-union disputes were troublesome enough, even though justified, during the "business as usual" regime. But America agreed at the outset that this regime and all that it implied had no place in a war economy.

We're not for the cancellation of all the gains labor has made at the cost of so many sacrifices through the years, but we do feel that labor should go on a war time footing, too.

Unity, the theme of every labor leader's speeches, must become a reality.

A Part Of Villanova

TO the Seniors. To the Class of '42. For four years the VILLANOVAN has been serving you, and in this issue, the last one in your college career, we, the staff, desire to bid you a reluctant farewell and to extend to you our best wishes for future success.

On May 19 you will be graduating. You will receive that long awaited degree. Then you will separate and go in all directions. Some will go on to graduate work. Others will go into business and industry. Those who have enlisted in some branch of the Army, Navy, or Marines will go into their particular training. Some will rise to great heights of success. Some will be average. And even some may not fare too well.

You will be going out into a world cloaked in turmoil. You will be standing on your own two feet. You will have to make all decisions yourself with no one to help you. It will be much different than going to college, but not as different as the change from high school to college.

Four years ago you came here into a sphere of influence never before known to you. Ever since then you have been gaining in knowledge and wisdom so that, upon graduation, you should be able to go out and take your place in this world. Graduation time has come. You have been prepared. From now on it's up to you.

During your stay here you have had many experiences and you have formed many bonds of friendship. These may seem small things but you will remember them for a long, long time because they are Villanova. Villanova is a part of you and you are a part of Villanova, so that wherever you may go and whatever you may do, Villanova will be with you.

—T. C. M.

One Minute A Day

IN the center of our campus stands a gray, gaunt building which, perhaps, should be introduced to some of the day-students. It is the college chapel.

During retreats and on the mornings of semester examinations it is refreshing and inspiring to note the number of day-students who crowd into the chapel for morning prayers. On examination days particularly, is the traffic heavy. Then we have something to ask for.

But it seems that we are forgetting the other purposes of prayer; namely, thanksgiving and praise. Grasping creatures that we are, we are all too willing to ask and to receive, but are rather remiss when it comes to acknowledging our dependence upon our generous God.

Even if we are, however, to confine our prayers to those of petition, why the painful avoidance of the chapel these sunny Spring mornings? Now, if ever, we have things to ask for, things to pray for.

Faced as we are with life in its most earnest aspect, we should devote a portion of every day to public worship and outward petition of God. It requires no great sacrifice on our part to stop in the chapel for one minute each day on our way to class.

We practically trip over the chapel steps on the way to class. Most of us pass the chapel at least twice more every day. Is it asking too much that we give one minute out of that day to a God who is imprisoned in our altars for over fourteen hundred minutes each day?

And remember, if we get down on our knees to God during the war, we won't have to get down on our knees to a dictator after the war.

Since there will be this close bond between you and your school, it is your duty to bring nothing but credit on the school, since you are Villanova.

The Trading Post

With A Word Of Good Luck To Our Seniors We Bid You Au Revoir Till This Summer

By LOU ESPOSITO

WELL, another Junior Week has become history. A week-end of super successes and greater enjoyment than any previous. As the juniors look back to a week of gala events, the entire student body looks forward to a week of misty events. . .Exams. But that's beside the point for the seniors who are thinking of graduation and possible induction into various branches of the armed forces.

I won't guarantee the truth of this statement, but there's a rumor about that a temporary draft board and induction centre will be erected at the Field House on graduation day for the convenience of the graduates. This sounds like another conservation plan to save time. It may even turn out to be a new fad to be inducted into the army in your cap and gown. Anyway, to the class of '42 we extend our heartiest farewells and happy landings.

What Price Health?:

Speaking of induction here's a bit of "virtue is its own rebound" literature from the "Griffin". . .

He slept full eight hours every night,
Brushed teeth and hair each day,
Drank milk, ate meat in ghastly loads,
A-1, he goes in May.

Bleary eyed and slopey spined,
At fresh air he went weak,
A snap 4-F (and plant work at 100 bucks a week).

Social Error:

Here's a "scorcher" from the "Targe" . .

Arriving home from the party, the doctor's wife confronted her husband:

"I'll never take you to another party as long as I live," she fumed.

"Why?" he asked in amazement.

"You asked Mrs. Jones how her husband was standing the heat."

"Well?"

"Why, her husband has been dead for two months."

And an exciting bit of poetry from the "Prospector"

Cannons to the right of them,
Cannons to the left of them,
. .Cannons in front of them,
Boy, what a towel factory.

An undertaker handling his funeral introduced a cheering note, when he said to the mourners: "Now we'll pass around the bier."

Domestic Bliss:

Wife: "The new maid has burnt the bacon and eggs, darling. Wouldn't you be satisfied with a couple of kisses for breakfast?"

Husband: "Sure, bring her in."

Just Careful:

For years a story has been circulating through the various college papers which makes its appearance every so often in one paper or another, and since it has not yet been printed in the VILLANOVAN, it is herewith handed along to you.

Three turtles ambled into a tavern one day and ordered some beer. After they sat down to a table they discovered that they had left their money at home. They finally elected the smallest turtle to shuttle home and bring some back. He was afraid that they would drink his beer, but after exacting a promise from his two comrades that they wouldn't he left. He was gone two years.

This made the other two turtles restless and so one looked to the other and said, "I don't think he is coming back. Do you think we should drink his beer?"

He had no more than completed these words when the smallest turtle popped his head around the corner and whimpered, "If you drink one drop I won't go."

No Reply Needed:

Oh yes, lest I forget. . .I was told to convey this notice to the students:

The Administration and Faculty of
Villanova College
Request the pleasure of the company of
The Student Body
at the final examinations to be held in the respective school halls between the 11th and 16th of May

Literary Art:

No comment is required for this bit of verse from the "Marquette Journal":

The vanquished poet sat and stared
Upon his cherished rhyme.
A great, melodic masterpiece
Which needed one more line.

He turned at last onto his friend,
And, with artistic curse,
Inquired how in Christendom
He was to end his verse.

"Your query," came the answer,
"What would I do, my friend?
I'd write some classic gibberish
And tack it on the end."

The poet thought a minute
And uttered "God forbid!"
Then thought another moment
And that is what he did.

And in the next one hundred years
Five hundred books were spent
By critics, each interpreting
Just what the last line meant.

Thus we come to the end of a perfect day and the end of an imperfect column; however, if you acquired at least one laugh out of it during the past term, the writer feels as though he has done his part to amuse (or confuse) the student body.

So. . .until we meet again.

Meet The Boys:

Tom Doyle, Ex-Editor And A Real Newspaperman, May Write Great Novel

By TOM SCHUBERT

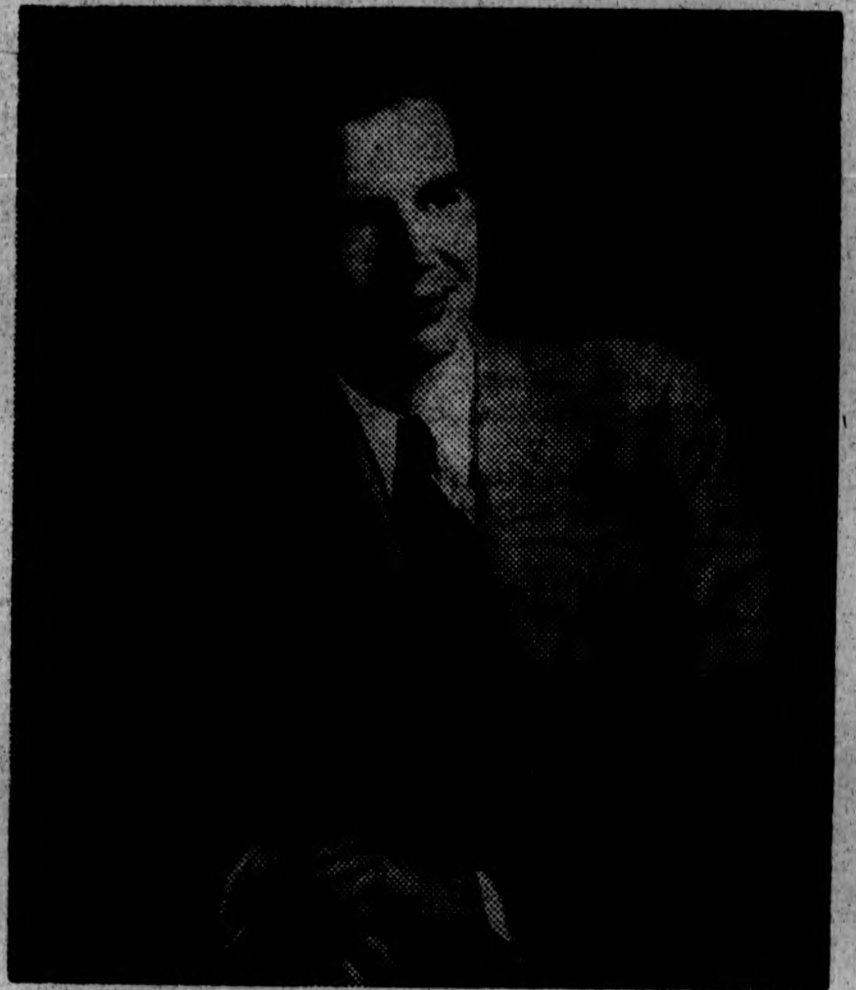
THE task of writing Thomas H. Doyle Jr.'s chronicles would indeed be an easy one, if Mr. Doyle had his way. When approached with questions about his eventful career, he immediately resumed the dictatorial attitude which had marked his year as No. 1 man in room 119 Mendel.

Definite instructions were given as to how this delicate matter of biography should be handled. Any present deviation from the rigid form laid down must be excused as a slip of the typewriter. With best intentions, then, we proceed.

A man of many distinctions, Tom at present holds the unique position of being 20 years old and still not registered for Selective Service. Because his birthday falls on January 12, he is just 12 days too young to be a selectee. Forsaking the place of this timely birth — Overbrook—after only a year, he moved to his present home—Germantown.

Typewriter Slips

Cecilian Academy, where Tom began his grammar school career, is (I think the typewriter is slipping) a girl's school which accepts a few boys up to the eighth grade. Benilde Academy, from which he graduated, passed out of existence a few years after Mr. Doyle's withdrawal.



If you find him in a reminiscent mood, Tom will tell you some hair-raising anecdotes from the later life of his grammar school classmates.

All indications to the contrary notwithstanding, Tom's elmentary education must have been an excellent one, for on the strength of it he won a scholarship to La Salle High School. He admits that he is "justly proud" of having attended such an institution.

While there "he snubbed the newspaper," but gave indication of his future journalistic greatness by becoming Literary Editor of the yearbook, "The Blue and Gold." His main interest, however, was in studies. His marks over a four year period were the second highest in his class. This was mainly due to "a great comback in senior year," when he took first place.

The only sport to which Tom turned his hand was tennis. He managed the varsity team one year, and in his senior year went to the finals of an intramural tournament.

When time came to choose a college, he picked Villanova over all others—despite the facts of a full scholarship to La Salle and only a partial one here. He had finished fourth in the competitive exams.

At Villanova he has completed a long list of service to various campus organizations. With it all, he has managed to appear on the honor roll more often than he has been absent from it.

Edits Paper

His first and greatest accomplishment is his work on the VILLANOVAN. Humble as all freshman reporters are, he started out in his first year as a cub. In the middle of his sophomore year he became College Editor. After a year of this, he was appointed Editor-in-Chief of the publication.

Delta Pi Epsilon, the commerce fraternity, also found him a willing worker. Last year he was both secretary of the fraternity and chairman of the committee on membership. The Red Cross too employed him in securing new members; he was chairman of the recent drive.

Amateur Performer

Because limited space will permit no more, we must be content with merely listing the rest of his activities. He has at various times been a member of the Belle Air staff, Orchestra Committee for the Junior Prom, History Seminar, Book Club, Orientation Committee, and Student Council. He has also participated in the Amateur Night entertainment for three years.

Although he always intended to give them more serious attention, Tom never engaged in any athletics except intramural softball and tennis. However, he has announced his intention of taking first place in the 160-yd. low hurdles if intramural track competition is held this year.

Social Life Quiet

When we questioned him about his social life, Tom replied, "Nothing. Really nothing to say." Remarks of his associates seem to indicate the opposite. Perhaps he is just playing safe, or maybe all that should be said would not fit in this column.

Tom has made several trips south, likes the country. Last year he "thumbed" his way to the Army post in Alabama where his father was stationed. He spent a night at the University of Tennessee on the same trip. It was while motoring through the South to the Villanova-Florida game last fall that his remarkable driving technique wrung from the lips of his fellow-travellers the endearing sobriquet, "Demon" Doyle. Apt though the description seemed to be, it soon fell into disuse.

Serious Tribute

It seems only fitting that we should end this rather rambling biographical sketch (we fear that the typewriter has slipped quite often) with a serious tribute to a really capable fellow.

Despotic he was indeed during his time as Editor, but it was ever a benevolent despotism. He realized that someone had to give orders if the VILLANOVAN was to appear on schedule each Tuesday morning. So he held the fort, giving orders in his high-pitched, decided tones; chasing reporters here and there; poring over yellow copy; in short, doing all that was necessary to keep the VILLANOVAN "on the street."

Indefatigable Nature

Add to this his unflagging efforts on behalf of his school, his class, and his fraternity, and you have some partial picture of his indefatigable nature. A real follower of Villanova athletics, as is indicated by his journey to Florida to see the Wildcats trip the 'Gators, he is justly proud of his record for court frays here. In his four years as a student here he has never missed a home basketball game.

But his loyalty to his newspaper is perhaps his greatest attribute. One week after he had officially retired from his journalistic activities he came from a sick-bed to put out an issue when the new editor took sick. And two weeks later he was again drafted into action to supervise the publication of the special "Victory Issue" which portrayed the part Villanova is playing in the war effort.

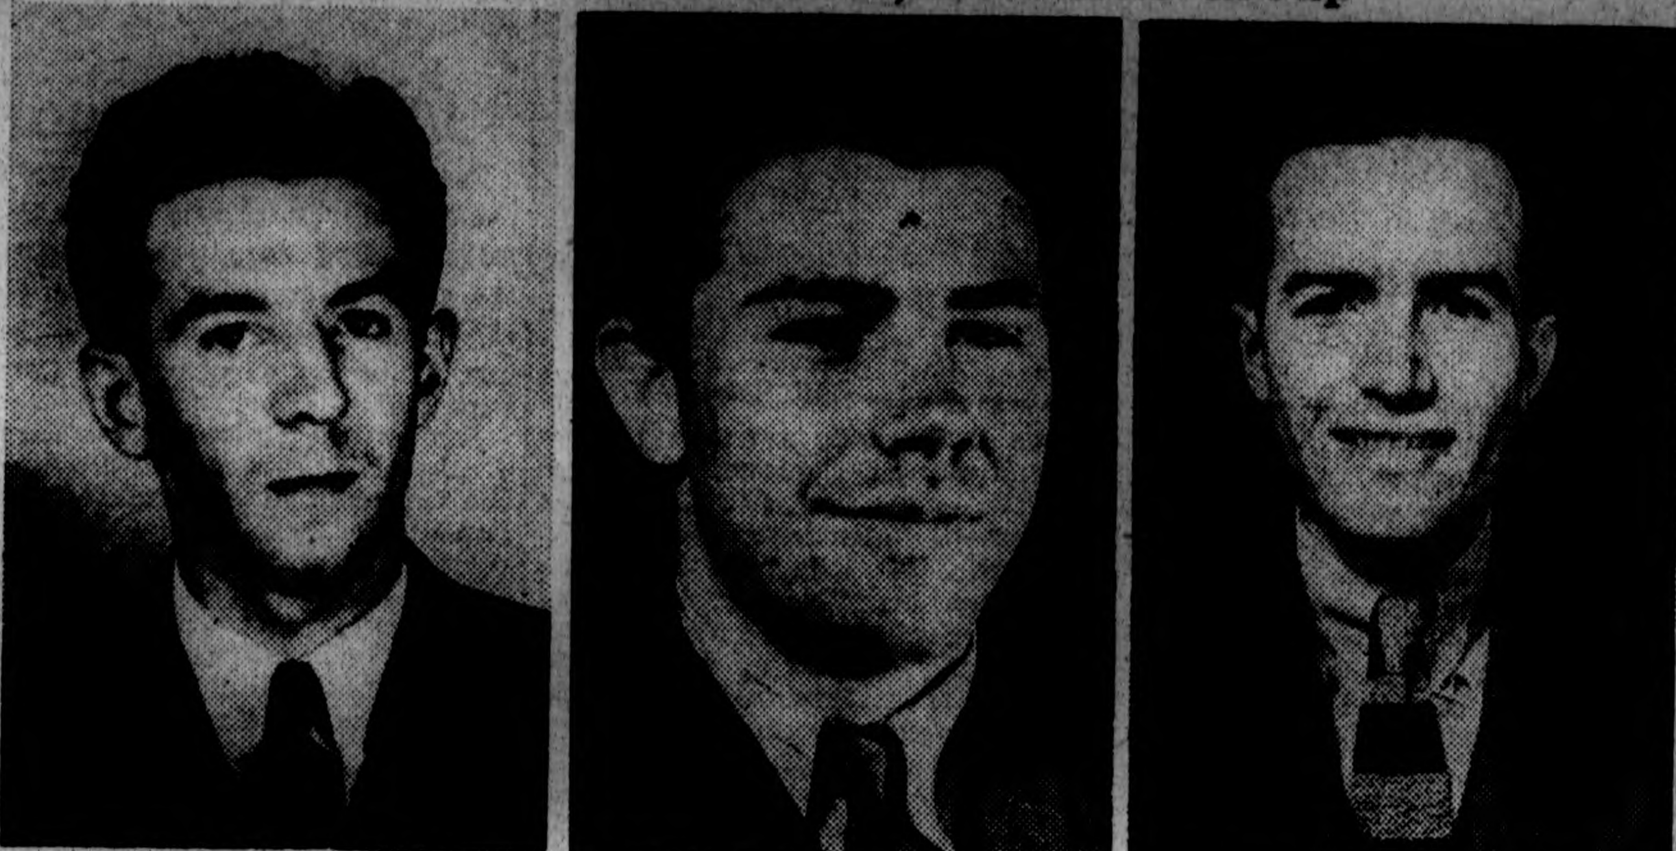
When the world has resumed its normal course and Tom is free to follow his natural bent, the journalistic world will be so much the better off for a hard-working and capable newspaperman, who laughingly suggests that perhaps some day he will write the great American novel.

Not Too Laughable

Such a suggestion is not entirely laughable to those who are acquainted with his ready and fluent prose and his dogged determination to get a thing done once he has started.

Indicative of his characteristic thoroughness is his intention to go to Washington upon graduation as a Civil Service employe. He has already passed the exam with flying colors and awaits only his appointment.

To Head Fraternities, Relations Group



James J. Meehan, left; Malachy V. Boyle, center; and Robert T. Canfield, right, are three recently elected presidents of campus organizations who will assume their new duties at the start of next year. Meehan will head Delta Pi Epsilon, commerce school fraternity, Boyle will manage the activities of Phi Kappa Pi, engineering fraternity, and Canfield will direct the International Relations Club.

You can serve your country best by acting on this new Navy Plan now!

YOU WANT to fight for your country! Are you willing to work for it? To toughen yourself physically? To train yourself mentally for a real job in the United States Navy? If you are, the Navy wants you to enlist now. You don't have to quit college. You can stay in college, continue your studies to prepare for active duty in the air or on the sea.

And your college will help you do it! In cooperation with the Navy, it offers all freshmen and sophomores who are seventeen and not yet twenty, special training that may win for you the coveted Wings of Gold of a Naval Aviation Officer or a commission as a Deck or Engineering Officer.

How to Become an Officer

To get this special Navy training, you enlist now as an Apprentice Seaman. Then you may continue in college, but you will include special courses stressing physical development, mathematics and physics. After you successfully complete 1½ calendar years in college, you will be given a classification test.

Aviation Officers

If you qualify by this test, you may volunteer to become a Naval Aviation Officer. In this case, you will be permitted to finish the second calendar year of college work before you start your training to become a Flying Officer.

However, at any time during this two-year period, you may have the option to take immediately the prescribed examination for Aviation Officer... and, if successful, be assigned for Aviation training. Students who fail in their college courses or who withdraw from college will also have the privilege of taking the Aviation examination. Applicants who fail to qualify in this test will be ordered to active duty as Apprentice Seamen.

Deck or Engineering Officers

Those who qualify in the classification test and do not volunteer for Aviation will be selected for training to be Deck or Engineering Officers. In that case, you will continue your college program until you receive your bachelor's degree, provided you maintain the established university standards.

Those whose grades are not high enough to qualify them for Deck or Engineering Officer training will be permitted to finish their second calendar year of college. After this, they will be ordered to duty as Apprentice Seamen, but because of their college training, they will have a better chance for rapid advancement. At any time, if a student should fail in his college courses, he may be ordered to active duty as an Apprentice Seaman.

Pay starts with active duty.

It's a real challenge! It's a real opportunity! Make every minute count by doing something about this new Navy plan today.

Junior Prom Memories And General Observations On All Campus Activities

By ED BENNIS

NOW that the Junior Prom and Dinner-Dance are over with, the campus is returning to normal life again. But, unlike the campus, the Junior Class will take fully a week or two to recover from the wonderful effects of last week-end. Some of the lads are still on an aspirin diet, with no hope of getting off it in the near future.

Chairman Jim Walsh is still being congratulated for the wonderful prom on Friday — a good time was definitely had by all who attended. And the juniors are still "reeling" from their Dinner-Dance Saturday at Merion. Co-chairmen John Quinn and Joe Hagerty left nothing undone to keep the boys happy.

Now, my laddies, we can all look forward to the final exams in two weeks. Some of us are coming face to face with stark reality — either start studying right away or flunk. So, we might as well stop daydreaming and do a little studying for the next two weeks — or else!

PROM JOTTINGS:

To help the celebration of the week-end along, some of our lads went party-crazy on Friday and Saturday. Chairman Jim Walsh and Co. had a time for themselves at the Walnut Park Plaza, while Bob Hursh led a merry crew at the Hotel Philadelphian. In addition to these, there were many other parties scattered about our fair city.

Jack MacBain showed up with Phyllis on Friday — after Ray Hill had tried so hard to get her to go with him. In spite of this, Ray still claims to have the Number 1 spot in her heart. But rumor has it that the Number 1 spot is very crowded at the present time. "Elk" Murray was beaming all over the place, because he was in the company of his one and only Betty, who came all the way from N. J. just to be with him. Junior Prexy "Wally Walpole had the distinction of escorting the girl who traveled the greatest distance for the prom — she came all the way from Oak Park, Ill.

The local girls' colleges were well-represented over the week-end. Dave Daly made a happy picture with Betty "Yes, please" Rice, one of the more popular Rosemont freshmen. "Meathead" Philips was seen with his Rita, who took time off from her "Magpie" duties to lend her charm to the evening. Dan Haley showed up with a new number from Immaculata — wonder if she was the cause of his star-gazing all evening?

ANGORA:

"Swifty" Nunemaker wasn't taking any chances on spending his money before the dances last week —he gave it to Lou Block and told him to keep it until Friday. Lou held on to that money as if his very life depended upon it. Larry McStravog dressed himself all up Friday, even though he didn't have any intention of going to the prom — he said he'd see all the fellows at one of our more popular rendezvous without going to the dance.

TRACK 29:

Jim Lattanza had two lovely inspirations in a Cadillac at the Temple game last week. They were urging him to great heights with "Come on, No. 8" throughout the game. Gerry Belz, Don Speese and Paul McBrian are keeping a watchful eye out for the lovely creature they saw getting off the bus recently — though they have looked every day since, they haven't seen her again and, as a result, are a very disappointed trio.

Bill Fenton is sporting a ring given to him by DeeDee of Rosemont—after hearing of her other intense romance, we wonder if the ring isn't a consolation prize. How about it Bill?

THIRTY:

With this issue, your columnist, along with the VILLANOVAN, closes shop for the present. We have tried to give you a slight idea of the goings on about the campus and have had a lot of fun doing it. To the seniors we want to wish the best of luck and to the rest — well, we hope to be back again soon, unless Uncle Sam claims us for the duration.

Juniors Returning To Normal After Prom, Dinner-Dance Fun

Those fellows you've been watching with wonder for the last two days — you know the ones, with the soporific stare and uncertain gait — are merely members of the Junior Class, recovering from a Junior Prom and Dinner-Dance entirely in keeping with the standing of Villanova's Centennial Class.

Pushed up a week and pared to essentials by the accelerated program, pushed up another week by orchestral booking difficulties, and threatened by poor weather because of an early Prom date, Junior Week this year promised to be a mere shadow of its former robust self.

Added Difficulties

Priorities on tires, rationing of gas, shortage of needed decorations material, added war classes — all were contributing their nefarious bit to wreak havoc with the climax of the school's social season.

Through it all the Juniors moved — albeit at times nervously, yet in the final reckoning rather gloriously — to what has been generally acknowledged as the finest Junior week-end in history.

Through the cool clearness of Friday night they and their guests made their way to the Field House for four hours of dancing to the music of Les Brown. Greeted by genial Chairman Jim Walsh at the door, they entered a Field House that few recognized.

Patriotic Motif

The glittering centerpiece, descending it seemed from the sky, bathed in vari-colored lights, attracted immediate attention. To complement the patriotic motif of the victory corsages there were red, white, and blue shields lining the wall. As a backdrop for Les Brown's grand band was a huge curtain to which were attached the new college seal and a Centennial Class memorial.

Even the weather conspired to enhance the magic of the night. The college walks were crowded with couples who "just stepped out for a breath of air." Added attractions to the air were a crescent moon and a deep blue sky liberally sprinkled with stars.

Couples returning from the Prom were unstinting in their praise for Jim Walsh and his committee — particularly the decorations committee — for a great dance.

Private Party

At the Merion Golf Club the following night the Juniors staged their private party in the form of the annual Dinner-Dance. As a huge red sun sank in the west, the first arrivals gathered on the veranda of the club house to exchange pleasantries. Co-chairmen Jack Quinn and Joe Hagerty were on hand to supervise the distribution of favors — and this time the boys were remembered.

Bill Davies' orchestra provided the softer rhythms for the dinner and really warmed up to their work after the tables had been cleared for dancing. Meanwhile, the Centennial Class members and dates were relaxing in the club's spacious lounges or strolling across the lawns to "get a breath . . ." or was that Friday night?

Informal Spirit

A spirit of camaraderie and informality keynoted the affair. Most of the 120 couples gathered in the ballroom to chant the Marine Hymn, "College Days," "Deep in the Heart of Texas," and similar group songs. The singing was enthusiastic if nothing else.

Hit of the evening, however, was the surpassing piano work of Ed Cubler, honorary chairman of the Dinner-Dance.

And so ended the curtailed Junior Week for Villanova's Class of '43. It's a trite observation, but a true one, to remark that what it lacked in quantity it made up for in sheer enjoyment. At least they haven't rationed fun yet.

Dr. Sa Addresses Spanish Banquet

Dr. Traveres Sa, a professor at the Catholic University of San Palo, Brazil, acted as guest speaker at the annual Cervantes' Day Banquet of Villanova's Spanish Club held last Thursday evening at Conestoga Mill.

Here in the United States for educational purposes pertaining to the interchange of students with South America, Dr. Sa spoke on the subject of Pan Americanism at work. He discussed the shortcomings of the present Pan American policies on the part of both the United States and the twenty nations of the southern continent, and explained that correction of these defects of the policy can be brought about by cultural and educational relations which must be furthered and deepened.

Winners of the literary contest for the best poem and original composition in spanish were William Golden, commerce school freshman, and Juan Ramirez, science freshman. They were presented with a medal and scroll respectively, donated by the University of Columbia Federation of Spanish Clubs.

Also among the one hundred and twenty-five members and guests present were three girls from the College of Chestnut Hill who were in the cast of the Spanish play, "De Tal Arbol" which was presented by the Villanova club last Saturday at the University of Pennsylvania in connection with the Cultural Olympics

Music Seminar Quiz Won By Dr. Drenick In Day Hop Contest

Dr. Edward L. Haenisch announced that Dr. Rudolph Drenick, of the engineering faculty, won the musical quiz conducted in the day hop seminar two weeks ago. He missed but three of a possible thirty for a 90% average.

An anonymous contestant attained the second highest rating and freshman William Lichtor was third. Dr. Haenisch remarked that Dr. Drenick did not want to submit his paper because he thought he had too many mistakes.

Beethoven's Fifth Symphony will be played in the noon hour seminar tomorrow in the amphitheatre. Classically known as the Fate Symphony, its first four notes have recently been interpreted to signify "V for Victory." This work is considered by many musicians as the classic example of symphonic art.

Rev. John J. Vrana announced that the resident music seminar, usually held every Wednesday evening in Simpson Hall, has been disbanded for the summer. He claimed that the fair weather has provided too much competition.

Here For Engineers' Convention

Vincent J. Gordon, president of the local student branch of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, is shown greeting Miss Helen Oladko, senior mechanical engineering student from Newark College of Engineering, at the tenth annual convention of the Eastern Student Conference of the organization, held on the campus Monday, April 20.

Contest

To Determine Valedictorian for Commencement Exercises Will Be Conducted Tomorrow

The trials to determine the student who is to deliver the annual Commencement Oration will be conducted tomorrow at 2:30 P. M. in the Mendel Hall amphitheater, Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O. S. A., director of the contest, announced today.

The following students have been named as eligible to compete for the honor: John P. Fullam, from the School of Education; William E. Schubert, Jr., of the arts school; Thomas A. Sullivan and Edward R. Frank, both of the School of Commerce and Finance; Eugene Nelson and Joseph Koch, science school students; and Joseph C. Dorsey and Vincent Gordon , engineering students.

All of the above students are honor men in their respective schools.

Group Constructs Radio Transmitter

Work on the new radio transmitter being built by the members of the Belle Masque Radio Club, under the supervision of Paul Simpson, freshman engineer, has now been completed and the new station will be ready to go into operation about June 8, the beginning of the summer semester, it was announced today by Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A., club advisor.

The club is now in the process of organizing its some thirty members into various departments paralleling the system used in the larger commercial stations.

Pending the solution of a few problems connected with the sound system, which will utilize the college bell wires, the club is continuing to record several of the scripts and plays written by the members.

School Closing Brings Small Elation As Speeded Course Cuts Vacation

By JIM McWILLIAMS

While just puttering around the other day we happened to glance into a large crystal ball, which we always carry when we putter, and our eyes were immediately attracted to a very stirring scene which was taking place in the globe under the dateline of May 15, 1942.

The locality of the strange saga that was to follow was a little difficult to determine at first, as the "ceiling" happened to be very low in Louie's at the time. But after an exhaustive fanning of the atmosphere, we could see the outlines of a Villanova Resident hall slowly becoming visible.

At first the dim sight appeared to be Alumni Hall, but after closer scrutiny when we saw no one hanging or pushing anyone else out of the windows, we changed our decision. Someone suggested that it might be Mendel Hall, but this statement was readily tossed out when we discovered that the occupants were fully clothed, and looked almost human.

Vacation Here

The picture finally became intelligible, and we could see that our little sphere was now focusing on students; one staggering blindly through his room, and the other frenziedly dashing to and fro trying to pack. The staggering chap, with a bewildered and bedraggled look, was wandering aimlessly about the suite (?), all the while making strange gurgling noises and muttering, "No, No, it can't be true. My tests are all over, and vacation is here."

Then he would proceed to rap his head lightly against the wall, turn around and set out in the opposite direction. He was, as we could plainly see, an engineer.

The second fellow, barely visible behind the "ceiling" which was beginning to settle down, was gleefully packing a tennis racket, baseball spikes and shoes, swimming trunks, and an odd assortment of souvenirs

Uninvited Guest

Suddenly his joyous visage turned a sorrowing blue, and a where-did-you-come-from-look came into his eyes as he gazed disdainfully upon a textbook, which he quickly shoved to the rear of his trunk. We agreed with the suggestion that he was perhaps a commerce man.

"What are you going to do this summer, Punchy?" queried the trunk-packing student.

"Oh, I guess I'll sleep for a week or so, Joe, and then just lie around for the rest of the vacation," answered the groggy-eyed fellow. "How about you?"

"Well I don't know. I got an "A" once this year, and I played some doggone good games of basket ball and softball in intramural this year, so I think I'll lay off books for a while and just loll around the house. Boy, you know its going to be great just to do nothing for the whole vacation. No studying—No homework—No cuts. I'm going to have a date every night with a different girl. Man, will I dig into pop's gas rationing card? Hey, will you stop beating your head on the wall, you're knocking the rest of the plaster off the wall. Vacation's here.

Bubbling Sounds

Another joyous burst of "Glub, glub," this time accompanied by bubbling sounds came forth from our engineering minded friend.

By this time Joe had finished his packing, and taking a short glance at the trusty mantel clock, made a flying leap for the portal.

"Wow! I've only got about two minutes to make my train. Well, so long, Punchy. Have a good vacation. I'll see you when I come back." And off he went, with suitcases dragging, while his former room-mate carefully inspected the calendar again, moaning, "No, No, it can't be true."

Finally he convinced himself that classes were really over, and with one loud "Yip," started to toss his belongings at his valise. Through the window of the room we could see the speeding image of the railroad train that was carrying our business man home for the vacation.

Two Small Tears

But no. Peering profoundly into the prognosticating ball we could see the door of the half-vacant room slowly open, and there stood our boy, who a few moments before had been so joyous and carefree now had two small tears running down each cheek.

"What's the matter, Joe?" inquired Punchy.

"Aw, I just missed the train and the next one out to my home in Chicago won't be along for about five hours."

"Well that's not too bad."

"Oh, no! Why don't you see I won't get home until the day after tomorrow, and there wouldn't be any sense in going home that late. I'm going to take that new accelerated program, and I would only have to start back in a couple of days to be here on time."

'Cats Seek Second Victory Over Temple Nine

VILLANOVAN SPORTS

SPORTORIAL

By JACQUES MAUCH, Sports Editor

As the season draws to a close and the sportorial is primed for its final curtain we bid adieu to nineteen Villanova men . . . true Villanova men . . . nineteen fine athletes . . . but more than athletes at Villanova . . . scholars, and gentlemen also.

These seniors who have done their work and done it well gave us many a thrill during the past year and brought joy to the hearts of many loyal Wildcat fans. Each one will hold an individual spot among our happy memories of Villanova athletics.

Not only we, but the Clipper will miss the grid stalwarts . . . the brainy Joe Behot, fine player who could bear down in the clinches . . . the tackle trio, Bronc Stenn, who never got mad, Ed Kasky, the tower of defense, and "Bull Moose" Nieman great reserve man . . . Guard Tony Anderson whose Baylor game play will be remembered . . . Joe Yednock and his tremendous soaring punts . . . the Ivy League trio, Elk Murray, Bill Howlett, and Tom Morgan, all hard workers . . . and last but far from least, Ed Korisky, all-east center who deserved many more plaudits than he received . . . a human dynamo with a never-say-die spirit.

On the wooden way will be missing the long and short of a snappy combination that found themselves in midseason . . . Captain Dick Gray, flashy little ball handler and super heckler on defense . . . just a few of his many accomplishments . . . Fred Gerland's daring pivot shots.

Doc Jacobs also laments the loss of three diamond warriors . . . Captain Joe Yednock, whose antics around the third sack and whose handling of that wooden stick made one smile with delight and wondermen . . . Joe Malone and his ten strikeouts in six innings of his first varsity pitching experience . . . Jim "John L." Lattanza, the fielder's choice.

One of the greatest natural athletes in Villanova's history will hang up his spikes next month. Jumbo Elliott's prize pupil captain Bill Hooper . . . from tankman to trackman in six easy strides . . . a boy who never tried track until his second year of college and in two seasons has come along so fast he scares the veterans . . . does everything right . . . broke 1:56 for the half mile.

Three of Hooper's former teammates, swimmers Tom Lyons, Johnny Maher and Bob Koness who will splash their way ahead in the world of tomorrow were our especial buddies and we will always remember the trips to and from the various meets.

The last of the nineteen is Dave Daly, captain of the tennis team . . . not just a tennis player . . . intramural star in baseball, softball and basketball.

Two others may be added to this list, Joe Daly and George Fitzgerald. Joe Daly is the wide awake senior manager of Doc Jacobs' diamond club . . . really keeps things organized and moving along with a high efficiency that makes one stop and gape in amazement at the hustling lad . . . besides great baseball knowledge, almost as much as Doc himself, Joe cavorts about the intramural basketball court . . . Fitzgerald, the Judge Landis of intramural athletics . . . the fact that Fathers Dunne and McKee do not go at each others throats more often is attributed to George's fine diplomacy, a rarity in the intramural league. George is also the Bill Dickey of Fedigan Hall, the best non-varsity catcher on the campus . . . could give the varsity members a run for their money.

Yes, they're a swell bunch of men and we salute them all as they write "30" to their Villanova careers.

Jacobsmen Gain Sixth Straight Win; Take Three Games On Trip South

By JACK KOVAL

Changing their field of action from northern to southern soil, the Villanova baseball team, still fresh from their smashing victory over the Temple Owls, defeated in three successive days the nines of Loyola, Western Maryland and George Washington University by the respective scores of 27-4, 16-1, and 5-4. The charges of Doc Jacobs, boasting one of the best offensive teams in the history of baseball at Villanova, set up some sort of record when they registered a remarkable total of forty-eight runs in the three games played against their southern foes.

Using the word "slugfest" in its real sense, the Wildcats opened up their southern campaign with a 27-4 victory over the Greyhounds of Loyola. It was Joe Malone who went the whole route on the mound for Villanova allowing but seven hits.

Batting averages for the Wildcats boomed sky high in this extremely one-sided game as they garnered twenty-two hits to a meager seven made by the Greyhounds. Leading the attack for the Blue and White were Joe Koproski, Joe Yednock, Joe Coffee and Bill Smith, whose bats accounted for fifteen of the twenty-two hits. One interesting feature of the game was that all the extra-base hits were made by the Wildcats with home runs by Koproski, Coffee and Smith.

Plenty of Hitting Power

The Wildcats scored four runs in the opening frame to start off the merciless attack on the Greyhounds. This four-run splurge was just an appetizer for the 'Cats, for in the next frame they made eleven. From then on the Blue and White were consistent in their scoring pushing across three in the third inning, two in the fourth, four in the fifth, and three in the seventh.

The Loyola nine went through two scoreless innings, but in the third they scored one run followed by two in the fourth, with their final tally coming in the fifth.

Knowing that his team didn't have a chance against the Wildcats, the Loyola coach requested a seven inning game, with Doc Jacobs agreeing to the truce.

After resting their tired feet over night from running around the bases so much in the Loyola game, the Villanovans played the Green Terrors of Western Maryland on Friday afternoon. The Wildcats took them over the hurdles in another slugfest game 16-1. The same Western Maryland team was defeated by the Jacobsmen last year to the tune of 8-3.

Assuming the mound duties and pitching a fine game for the Wildcats was Frank Chapler. The Terrors succeeded in getting only five hits off him.

Base hits were galore in this contest with every Wildcat contributing to the cause. Once the Villanova offensive machine got started, going strong as it did in the Loyola game, the Terrors could not decrease the efficiency with which it was working.

By winning this game the Wild-

Wildcat Quartet Wins Mile Title At Penn Relays

Villanova's limited entries in the Forty-eighth Annual Penn Relay Carnival came away from the two-day affair possessors of a fine trophy and four beautiful gold medals for their efforts in the Class B mile relay.

Jumbo Elliott's quartet of George Guida, Captain Bill Hooper, Bob O'Sullivan and Dixie Dunbar ran the fastest mile relay that any Wildcat team has ever turned in when they sped to the Class B Championship of America ahead of Syracuse and Army in 3 minutes, 19.2 seconds. The time was the third fastest mile clocking of the entire carnival.

O'Sullivan Runs Well

During the indoor season, this team with John DiCarlo running in Guida's place was clocked in 3.20.3. DiCarlo's illness last weekend kept him out of the mile and the 400 meter hurdle test in which he was a favorite.

Although Indiana led the title winners and Dartmouth and Penn State helped to dethrone N. Y. U., the perennial power, the Wildcats' race was a thriller all the way. Guida finished the tough first leg in fourth place and captain Bill Hooper moved to third on his. O'Sullivan took the baton from Hooper about ten yards back and sped around the turn and into the back stretch like a tornado, making up eight yards ,and running a fine race.

Dunbar Beats Radcliffe

Dixie Dunbar started his leg about two yards behind the Syracuse anchor, Lynn Radcliffe, who the day before ran an amazing 1.50.9 half mile leg in the sprint medley, forged to the front in the backstretch and held off Radcliffe's final bid to cross the line first. Dun-

'Plenty Of Power' Theme Of Closing Football Workouts

Three senior gridders, veterans of three campaigns, strolled as far as the stadium where underclass stars were being put through their paces by Clipper Smith. There they stood for a few minutes eyeing their former mates running through plays. Then they turned and leisurely walked back across the campus. It was great to be able to look on, but at the same time there was a certain empty feeling they couldn't deny because they knew their playing days were over. And if they had stayed there much longer they would have wanted to get in there and show some of those upstarts how to throw a real block or toss a real pass.

Ten men will be gone when October comes. Six of them had held down starting positions. That's why the Clipper is watching his squad so closely. He's trying to discern among these lads some who will step into the shoes of departed stars.

More Offensive Power

After two years of good defensive play the Wildcats are going in for more power on the offense. The way the team has gone in for the new high powered attack is most heartening to Coach Smith. An unexpected shift finds George Smith going to fullback while Ziggy Zamlynski has moved over to the left halfback spot. Ziggy has been the surprise of the camp with his ball handling, passing, and hard running. It can be definitely stated that the offense will be far better than that of the last couple of seasons. It will be more intricate, involving more spinner plays than ever before.

The work of Tom Gildea at guard has been nothing short of phenomenal. At this early date he practically has a stranglehold on that spot.

With existing conditions as they are, Coach Smith has found it advisable to omit noon day lectures and written quizzes for the gridders. The condensed program of studies has given the boys so much

Battle Here Tomorrow "Must" Game Of Season

Jacobsmen Try for Seventh Straight Win; Annual Fordham Game Saturday in New York; Final Game With Loyola May 8th

By BILL WALSH

With but three games remaining on the 1942 baseball schedule, the Villanova diamond forces hope to finish the season in a blaze of glory, with victories over Temple, Fordham and Loyola, in that order. Temple and Loyola have already been met and beaten this season by the Wildcats, but the Fordham tussle will be the first between these two schools since last spring, when the New Yorkers were humiliated by the lopsided score of 8-0.

Having already avenged one of the two defeats suffered at the hands of the Temple Owls last year, the Villanovans hope to make it two in a row, when they engage the Owls in another contest tomorrow. The 18-12 win registered by the 'Cats over their Quaker City rivals did much to restore the confidence of the Jacobsmen, especially when Andy Tomasic was knocked out of the box in the second inning, and was charged with the defeat.

Previous to this sad event in Tomasic's career, the Hokendaqua Hurricane had never been beaten by a Villanova team, and had a string of twelve victories over all competition. The Temple baseball team, as a whole, had possessed a victory string of eleven games, and this was also washed out by the Main Liners.

Probably Tomasic Again

The minions of Pep Young, having recovered from the stunning defeat suffered at the hands of the Wildcats, regained their victorious form last Wednesday, when they overwhelmed Rutgers, 15-1, to begin what they hope will be another long-winning streak. Tomasic was the winning pitcher in this tussle with the Scarlet, as he allowed nine hits over the full nine inning route, showing that he has regained his winning ways.

It is almost a certainty, therefore ,that he will oppose the Blue and White batters again tomorrow. The thought of revenge will be uppermost in the mind of "Handy Andy," as well as in the minds of the rest of the Cherry and White team.

Seven Straight Victories

On Saturday, the 'Cats journey to New York City to meet the Fordham Rams in the contest held every year between these two rival schools. Fordham possesses an enviable record, having won seven games so far his year, while losing none ,and hopes to add Villanova to its list of victims. Stunned by the 8-0 defeat handed to them by the Wildcats last spring, the Rams have one thought in mind — to beat the Jacobsmen, and beat them by as large a score as possible.

Jack Coffey's nine is a greatly improved team over that put on the field during the '41 campaign, and at this point appear to have won the Metropolitan title. Included in their seven wins, are victories over such powerful aggregaions as Holy Cross, Boston College, Columbia, City College, and Duke.

In all, the Maroon nine seems to be working to perfection. At third base and shortstop, respectively, are sophomores Ray Goodrich and Jack Szajna. They have been play-

Golfers Win Two; 3 Matches Remain

St. John's Match Scheduled for Last Friday Cancelled Because of Blowout

The rubber shortage, which caused the postponement of the LaSalle-Villanova tennis match a few weeks ago, was also the cause of the failure of the Wildcat linksmen to meet St. John's in Long Island for their scheduled match last Friday. It's true that the reason was slightly different from that which stymied the netsters, but the basic material involved was the same.

Despite the fact that the golfers couldn't get their usual new balls for the match, they, unlike the racquet wielders, had others, and would have been able to play, had they not met with another, and at the present time, more serious mishap. With just about half the distance to Long Island having been covered, a blowout of the right front tire stopped the linksmen just outside of Plainfield, N. J. Having no spare, they had no hope of getting to New York on that day, so the match had to be postponed until a later date.

Walsh Cards a 79

Earlier in the week, however, the Blue and White had been victorious in two matches; one, a practice contest with Swarthmore, and the other, a regularly-scheduled engagement with Haverford. Swarthmore was beaten, 5-4, on Monday, while Haverford was disposed of rather easily two days later, to the tune of 6½ to 2½.

In the Swarthmore encounter, Bill Walsh and Bob Casey won both their individual matches by scores of 4 and 2 and 1 up, respectively, and also triumphed in the best-ball, 2 and 1, to gain three points for the Wildcats. Hugh Mathews won his individual match, 4 and 3, and combined with Bill Powers in winning the best-ball, 3 and 2, to bring the Villanova total to five. Bill Walsh had the low medal for the day, when he put together a 40 and a 39 for a 79.

On Wednesday the team journeyed to the rolling Paxon Hollow Country Club to engage the Haverford six. Casey, Klappenbach, Powers, and Mathews won their individual encounters for four points, and two of the best-ball matches were won while another was halved, to bring the Villanovans' score to six and a half. Bob Casey, playing the number two position for the Blue and White, took the low medal honors for the day with an 82, while overwhelming his opponent, 8 and 6.

Coach Moore Enters Coast Guard

Tom Moore, Villanova swimming coach, left last Wednesday for the U. S. Coast Guard Academy at New London, Conn., where he will train for an ensign's commission in the Coast Guard Reserve.

Moore, a graduate of the class of '41, enlisted in this service over a month ago and was accepted. He had been waiting to report to the Academy where he will undergo an intensive ninety-day training prior to receiving his commission.

The youthful mentor guided the destinies of the Wildcat tank team this past season during one of its most extensive campaigns. He was a member of the team for three years and distinguished himself in many extra-curricular activities. He was editor of the "Belle Air" year book and gave the valedictory at last year's graduation.

Austin, Fedigan Playoff For I-M Baseball Title

Thursday afternoon Fedigan Hall and the league leading Firemen from Austin will meet at three o'clock to decide the championship of the Intramural baseball league. This contest will take place on Mendel Field.

During the last week both Austin and Fedigan were victors, so that the unbeaten Austin club holds only a game lead over the senior hall. Although the game is classified as a post season contest, it is the one that was rained out on Sunday, March 29. If the Fediganites should be the victors, there will be a tie and another contest will have to be played. But if Austin wins, the championship will be theirs with an unbeaten record which hasn't been equaled in past years. Both halls are assured of having their strongest lineups present. The probable batteries will be Lukacs and Kempf for Austin, while on the mound for Fedigan will be Steve Aisenbry with George Fitzgerald behind the bat.

Fifth Straight For Lukacs

On Wednesday past, Austin solidly trampled Mendel, 15-0. Lukacs hung up his fifth straight victory of the season and his first shutout of the current year to become the leading hurler of the league.

The game was featured by a home run by Helies with Hobbs on first to score the last two runs. The outcome was evident after the first stanza, in which Austin sent twelve men to bat before the helpless Greenies were able to retire three. This merry-go-round netted Father McKee's boys a total of eight runs which was about half of their final total.

Fieding .983

If Austin's nine can keep up this pace in their coming game they are assured of the title, for there is no better defense than a good offense which they have been demonstrating all year. But this doesn't signify that they can't field for their average as a team is .983 which also tops the league. At first, the injured Tom McQuade will be back again with his big bat with such men as Bull Molnar, Art Martin and Jim Hobbs tossing them over to him for those needed putouts. The outfield packs plenty of punch and can field with the best of them.

Last Sunday afternoon, to keep in the running for the I-M flag, Fedigan, after a big week-end came out and beat Alumni in a very closely contested game, nine to eight. The deciding run came across while Alumni was leading seven to six in the last inning as Art Connor, the winning hurler, drove out a long single to center to score Muench who had replaced Knapps in the Fedigan lineup. Morgillegat had preceded Muench across the plate to tie up the game.

Fedigan Has sluggers

It was a tough game throughout with Alumni gaining an early lead which they held until the last frame. Kennedy had a field day at bat, leading both teams with three for four, one being a long double to aid in the losers cause.

After winning this game Fedigan has shown that they have plenty of power and that they can come from behind to win. This will no doubt keep Austin on their toes. The Firemen won't be able to play too close on such sluggers as Stan Kazior, George Fitzgerald and Art Koerner. This all points towards a great game, the climax of an exciting season.

Temple Battle

ing magnificent ball for Jack Coffey, and are the big factors in the team's great defensive record this season. In seven games this spring, the Rams have committed only two miplays, quite a record for a college ball club.

Szajna is also a powerful hitter. He is second in the team's batting averages to big George Cheverko, another sophomore, who is very ably handling the Maroon catching assignment. Also noted for his abilities on the gridiron, for which he gained nation-wide acclaim last fall, George possesses the highest batting average on the squad, the very creditable mark of .450.

On the hill for the Gothamites in this encounter, will undoubtedly be Ed Alex, with relief, if necessary, coming from Bob Anderson and Dick Fitzgerald. Alex has a personal score to settle with the Blue and White, as he was on the losing end of the smashing victory registered by the Jacobsmen last spring. He has a record of three wins and no defeats for the Rams this season, while Anderson and Fitzgerald divided the other four victories ,each getting credit for two of them.

A return engagement with Loyola on the home diamond will bring down the curtain on the '42 campaign, on Saturday, May 9th. Having already beaten the Greyhounds once this spring by the overwhelming score of 27-4, the Wildcats should have little trouble with their Maryland rivals.

SEVEN HITS

Clean-up-man Joe Koproski had seven straight hits out of seven times at bat during two games against Loyola and Western Maryland.

Fedigan, Austin Lead Choices On "All" Teams

Players from Fedigan and Austin Halls dominated the All-Intramural baseball team picked last week by the team moderators. Fedigan led the polling by placing five men on the team of ten. Two pitchers were chosen and one man for each of the other positions. Austin took four places and Alumni's Al White grabbed the second base slot, the only freshman to make the team.

The five most outstanding men were repeaters from last year's all-star outfit. They were: George Fitzgerald, Fedigan's superb backstopper, Art Koerner, first sacker of the Gigilos, Phil Mariani, Austin's dependable centerfielder, and the two mound stars of the intramural league, Al Lukacs and Steve Aisenbrey.

Lukacs has not lost a game in three seasons of hurling and Aisenbrey, Fedigan n ainstay, has helped his team out of numerous difficulties.

Two infielders deserve special mention for their fine work. Art Martin, choice for shortstop is one of the leading hitters in the league and Stan Kazior, third baseman of the Gigiloes was by far the best man seen at the hot corner all season.

Dentistry is the only profession that is decreasing in personnel.
More dentists are presently needed for the Army and Navy. More dentists are likewise needed for civilion service, since a greater proportion of the public is rapidly being educated to the importance of dental services.
Two years of pre-dental college studies are required for admission including: inorganic chemistry (8 sem. hrs.), organic chemistry (4 sem. hrs.), physics (8 sem. hrs.), and biology or zoology (8 sem. hrs.). No conditions on admission are allowed.
Pre-dental students who will qualify by June or by September are advised to apply for admission immediately. Freshmen will begin their dental studies in an accelerated program on September 25, 1942.

Here and There

By Jack Dudley

WITH the defeat of Temple the baseball team had gone through the first half of its season without having a single game postponed. That's the best kind of luck because a game rained out in this abbreviated campaign would never be played.

A record of four wins and two losses is what we had. Our statistics show that the Wildcats, in six games, had scored sixty-two runs while our opponents had pushed forty tallies over the plate, or an average of 10.3 runs a game for the 'Cats and 6.7 for the other side. That's indicative of plenty of power at the plate, but it doesn't speak well for the pitching staff.

We had good pitching in some of the games, but in only two did the hitters and pitchers get together to really hand the opposition a respectable defeat. It's possible by mixing the scores a bit to compile a record to that date of six wins and no defeats. Take that game Jigger Donaghue pitched against Vermont. He sent them down hitless, which should have been good enough to win, but two runs crossed on errors. If Villanova had scored those nine runs they made against Penn against Vermont, they would have won easily.

We didn't need twelve runs to score a shut-out victory over Rider, so we could have tossed them against Penn, and thus we eradicate, mentally, the two defeats of the season. Vermont would have fallen, nine to two. Penn would have been nosed out, twelve to eleven, and Rider would have been stopped by a score of one to nothing.

Impractical as the above suppositions are, they at least demonstrate what we could have done if everybody came through at the same time. We could put the Athletics in first place by winning their games that way, so we're not going to feel bad because Villanova lost a couple of close ones. They're making a good showing, and after that great Temple game, we're proud of the boys!

—V—

VILLANOVAN readers usually don't take long to turn to the Sports page when they glance through their favorite weekly every Tuesday. There's nothing they like better than a big, blazing headline. It tells them there is a story breaking which will be of great interest to them all. Through experience, or mayhaps, through newspaper instinct, they know they will find the story of the week in the right-hand column. So by a careful perusal of headlines and fifth columns, and we're not thinking of saboteurs, we've been able to piece together a general history of sports at Villanova during this past year.

One of the first streamers we noted was about the Jaspers from Manhattan preparing an aetiel attack in the hopes of upsetting a band of favored Wildcat gridders. And how they did that!

On November 4th, we saw what we were looking for right on page one: 'Cats Ready to Wreak Vengeance On Temple. There was one on the first sports page also: "Stop Tomasic!" Cry of Confident Cats. If we keep on looking we should find one that didn't bode so bad for Villanova.

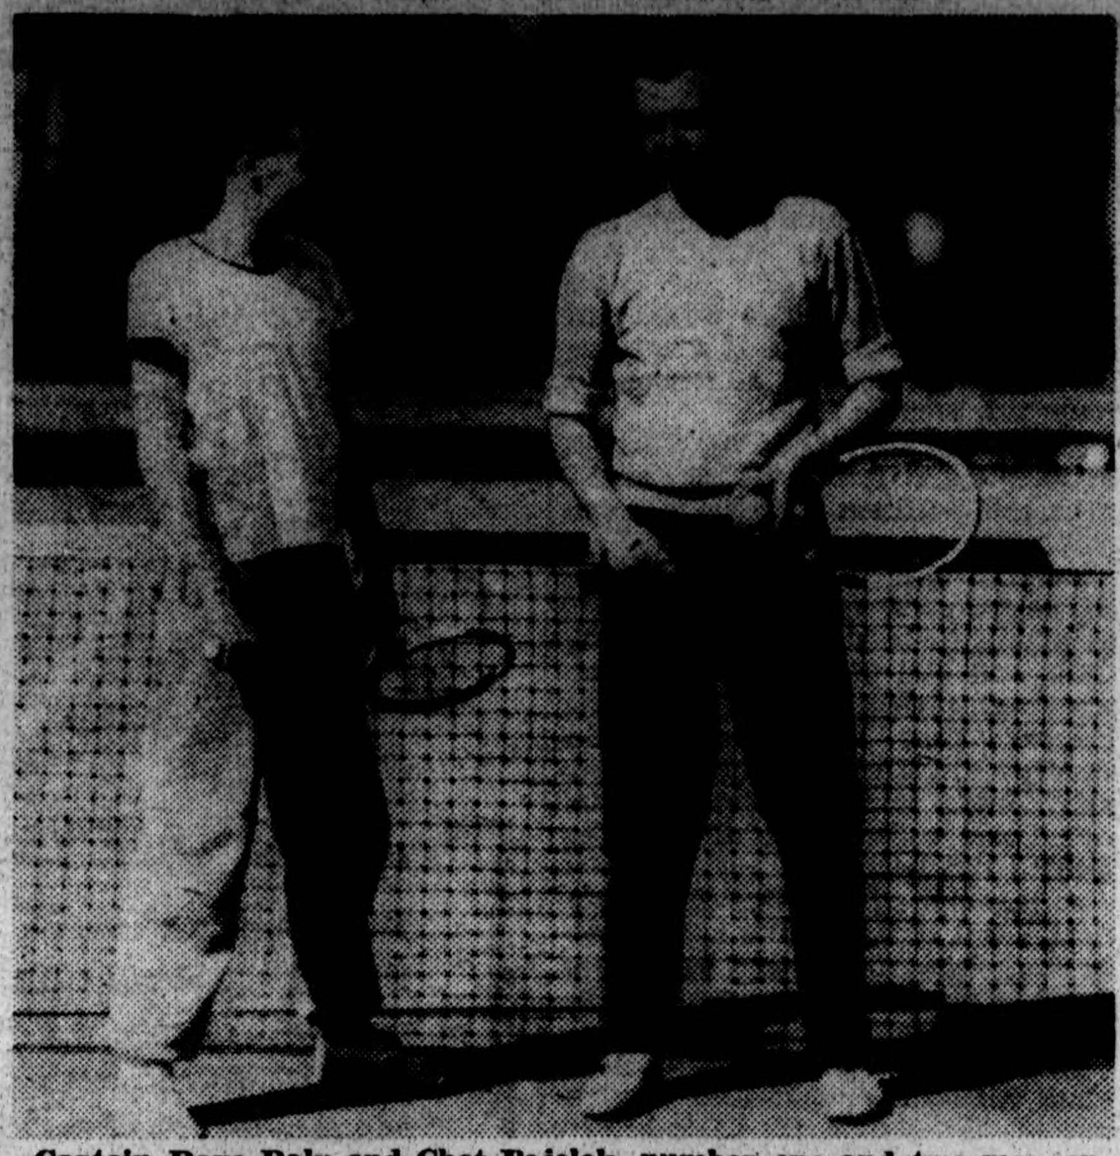
By January 20th, the Sports page had changed hands; Jake Mauch taking over the reins from Bob Funabashi. Fred Clark also took his picture out of "Here & There" after a year of successful writing.

Jake's first issue was bereft of good news. The basketball team, by then in the middle of their season, had yet to start winning consistently, and the big story of that issue was about a basketball team seeking victories.

February 10th was the day before the basketball game of the year, a tussle with the favored Duquesne five. The Dukes, all of them sophomores and juniors fell before our up-and-coming Wildcats.

The March 3rd issue carried accounts of our indoor relay team entering the I. C. 4-A. Championships, in which they were good enough to take second place. Also demanding room on the sports page by then was baseball. It was the seventy-third start of a Villanova diamond season.

Where Are The Tennis Balls?



Captain Dave Daly and Chet Pajolek, number one and two men on the Wildcat tennis team rest between sets in preparation for their opening match with Delaware tomorrow. Both La Salle and Delaware matches were postponed because the athletic department was not able to procure tennis balls in time.

School Runners Compete May 9th

Saturday, May 9th several hundred schoolboy runners will compete in the Fifteenth Annual Villanova Interscholastic Track Meet. Entries have been sent to over a hundred schools in Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, and Ohio.

This meet is one of the largest open meets of its kind in this vicinity. All the local high and prep schools of the city and suburbs are represented. Last year the local boys did well. Ridley Park dethroned Norristown for the Class A title, West Catholic retained their Class B crown, and Seton Hall Prep reigned supreme in Class C, prep. school division.

Southern Trip

cats boosted their total runs for two games to forty-three, an average of about twenty-two runs a game.

In a ten inning game played the next day, a tough George Washington nine was defeated 5-4, after they had led the Main Liners for five innings. Robertson was on the hill for the Colonials and did a fine job of pitching. Opposing him on the mound was Veteran Bill Wood. The Colonial team, even though they nicked Wood for ten safeties, were unable to convert them into runs for the Blue and White hurler kept them well scattered.

Colonials Are Tough

The Washington nine threw a scare into the Wildcats by scoring three runs right in the opening frame. However, the Main Liners didn't give up hope. In the fourth they pushed one run across, and came back with two more in the sixth to knot the score at three all. Another run in the eighth put them ahead for the first time 4-3.

Seting the offensive pace for the Blue and White club were Bill Smith, Jim Traitz and Jim Lattanza each getting two hits apiece.

to do that they would find this additional work too much of a burden.

Brinjac Looks Good

Many of the freshman gridders have not reached draft age yet. It is Smith's hope to keep these frosh in a unit so that in the event they will still be around for a couple of seasons from now they will have had lots of experience playing as a team.

Brinjac, at right halfback has shown up well in practice. A transfer from Notre Dame, he will be available for duty next season.

Scrimmage will be over soon and the boys will put away their togs until the fall when they will be back raring to go and full of ambition to give the Main Line an undefeated season once more.

bar ran a beautiful 48.3 seconds quarter, one of the best he has ever turned in.

The Wildcat sprint medley team composed of the same four men finished fifth on Friday to Penn State, Syracuse, Seton Hall, and Xavier, finishing in that order. Their time was 3.29.8 as compared to the winner's 3.26.5.

Captain Bill Hooper, in running the half mile anchor leg in this race was timed in 1.55.3, the fastest half mile of his short career.

In The Sportlight

By FRANK BAGOT

Eleventh inning, the score is tied, Villanova has a man on second, the seventh man in the batting order is at the plate. Crack! It's a clean single down the left field foul line. The runner from second crosses the plate and Jim Lattanza romps to first. That run was the one needed to beat Manhattan and Jim rather bashfully received the plaudits of his teammates.

What manner of man is this who so adequately comes through in a pinch? Let's look into the past of this fellow.

Jim attended Overbrook High where he played baseball, football, and basketball. Pitching was his specialty in baseball and he alternated in the halfback positions on the football team.

When he left Overbrook, Jim stopped at Brown Prep for a year's stay; here, he played only baseball, again as a pitcher.

Played Lightweight Football

In his first year at Villanova, Jim played on the 150-lb. football team and in his sophomore year he received the singular honor of being named on the Little All-American team. Increased avoirdupois made it necessary to abandon this promising football career. However, there still remained baseball.

As a sophomore, Jim had tried out for the team and has been a successful squad member for three years. Doc Jacobs saw fit to take Jim from the pitching staff and place him on the field this season as utility fielder. In this capacity he has played every game of the season, spending most of his time in right field, but filling at infield positions when the necessity arose.

Won Sixteen Games

Summers for Jim are just a continuation of his baseball career. Really married to the game, he spends all his extra time on the diamond. The Happy Hour Club in the South Philly League boasts him on their roster and he won sixteen out of twenty games for them last year which is a good pitching record in any league.

Playing with this club Jim has lots of interesting experiences. His greatest thrill occurred when he pitched and won a game against Kensington which was televised and broadcast by R. C. A.

JIM LATTANZA

Again, while playing a team in Berwick, Pa. (Paul Stenn's home town), the boys were taken on a tour of the great Berwick Tank Works.

"It was almost beyond imagination," said Jim. "Maybe I'll be driving one soon."

Maybe he will, for when he receives his degree this May as an accountant, Jim is going to spend his few remaining months as civilian, playing baseball and keeping in shape, till the day when his Uncle Sam calls him for that biggest game of all.

Infantile Paralysis Discussed By Mann In Research Seminar

Acute anterior poliomyelitis or, as it is more commonly known, infantile paralysis, was discussed at the Research Seminar last Thursday in Simpson Hall by Lester A. Mann, sophomore science student.

In the talk, such things as clinical symptoms, epidemiology, pathological lesions, methods of treatment, and types of cases were included. "In abortive cases of infantile paralysis detection is very difficult, especially in sporadic instances," he explained.

"Many people are afflicted with the disease in this modified form and never are aware of it. Infantile paralysis itself is extremely difficult to detect in the early stages, but it is easily recognized once the flaccid paralysis sets in."

The research discussions will be resumed for the summer sessions on or about Thursday, June 11, Mann announced.

FOURTH REGISTRATION

The fourth Selective Service Registration was held yesterday for those men between the ages of 45 and 65. Registration was held in the office of the Registrar between the hours of 7:00 A. M. and 9:00 P. M. and accommodated the faculty as well as the general public.

New Summer Course Planned For C. P. T.

A summer session in civilian pilot training will begin about June 15, it was announced by Professor W. G. Driscoll, coordinator of the College Flying program.

This course will be open to seniors who are willing to enlist in the Army or Navy Air Corps before starting training. These students will be placed in a reserve status until completion of the course when they will be assigned to active duty.

At the end of the course, students may be permitted to continue in civilian pilot training taking secondary and advanced training for an instructor's rating.

All students who will have attained a senior status by June 15 and who are interested in applying for this summer training course are requested to get in touch with Professor Driscoll at the earliest possible date.

Engineering Jobs

A representative from the personnel department of the Philadelphia Electric Company will be in room 214 Mendel Hall at 1:00 P. M. on Thursday afternoon to outline the company's plan to employ underclass electrical and mechanical engineers during the summer months.

All interested engineers are invited to attend.

Behnke Elected ASME Chairman

Herman C. Behnke, junior mechanical engineering student, was elected chairman of the local branch of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers at the elections held yesterday afternoon in room 207, Mendel Hall.

Also voted into office were James F. Schultes, a junior, as vice-chairman, and William J. Doyle, a sophomore, as secretary-treasurer.

Behnke, a member of Phi Kappa Pi, engineering fraternity, numbers membership in the Villanova Math Club and Chi Epsilon Mu, honorary engineering fraternity, among his activities. In the recent elections of Phi Kappa Pi, he tied Malachy Boyle, junior electrical engineer, twice before a third balloting elected the latter.

A member of the Owl Hop committee last Fall, Behnke has recently complete the flying course offered by the college under the sponsorship of the C. A. A.

Schultes, who was in the C. A. A. class with Behnke, is also a member of Phi Kappa Pi, as is Doyle.

Retiring officers of the local A. S. M. E. branch are Vincent J. Gordon as chairman, John Regan as vice-chairman, and Francis Mambretti as secretary-treasurer.

President In Washington For Army Reserve Plan

At the invitation of Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War, Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, left for Washington yesterday morning to confer with the State Department concerning a proposed Army program for the enlistment of college students in the Army Reserve Corps.

The plan, as formulated at present, would allow such students to continue in college in an inactive status after enlistment.

Summer School Ready To Start Courses Monday

Enrollment Expected To Be High for Six Weeks Program; Formal Graduation Set for August 8

Students from 15 states will attend the 25th annual Summer Session of the college which opens on June 29 with Mass celebrated in the Chapel. Classes begin the same day and end with graduation on August 8. Formal graduation ceremonies will be held on the campus.

Attending the new session will be nuns, priests, brothers and lay students who are seeking bachelor degrees in arts, education, nursing education, library science, and master degrees in arts and science. Among the lay students are men and women of other colleges who wish to further their work for a degree this summer.

Large Enrollment Expected

Last year the total registration was eleven hundred and six students. This figure was made up of eight hundred and ninety-two nuns, ninety-one priests and brothers and one hundred and twenty-three lay students. No figures are available for this year's registration, but it is expected to compare favorably with the registration of last year.

The regular faculty will be augmented by visiting lecturers and instructors. Classes will be held 5 days a week at the college. These classes are to be conducted independently of those given under the accelerated program.

Entertainment Planned

Advance reservations for rooms in Austin, Alumni and Saint Rita's halls have been made by nuns for all the available space. Brothers of religious orders have reserved the 20 room accommodations offered in Simpson Hall, and men students have taken those in Mendel Hall.

For the entertainment of these students the faculty has arranged to show a motion picture each Friday night in the auditorium of the commerce school.

High Mass Opens Summer Semester

Before the assembled students in the college chapel, Solemn High Mass was celebrated last Thursday by Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A. as the formal opening of the first summer session in the history of the college. Following the Mass which was sung by the seminary choir, Fr. Stanford addressed the student body.

In speaking to them Fr. Stanford directed his first words to the freshmen in extending to them a sincere welcome from the administration, faculty and older students, and urging them to quickly throw themselves, full-heartedly, into the life and work of the campus.

New Precedent

Fr. Stanford remarked that the beginning of the college term with the celebration of Mass was according to the traditions of the college but that the beginning of the summer session was "without parallel in the 100 year old history of this college."

To those who are enlisted in the armed services of the country and have been placed on the inactive list in order that they might finish their education, he emphasized the trust and confidence which has been placed in them and the consequent duties.

"You young men are amongst a privileged few who are being assigned to active duty at college. . . Hundreds of thousands of other young men of your age are now under military duty at home and abroad. Responsibility, hardship, sacrifice are their lot. Your obligations are no less serious in degree, if not in kind," the president stated.

Six New Priests Added To Faculty

Rev. Joseph Warren Kemme, O.S.A., is a native of Philadelphia and has received his A.B. degree here and M.S. degree in Washington.

Studying speech and dramatics for four years at Catholic U., Rev. John J. Coffey, O.S.A., has been added to faculty rank for the summer semester.

Rev. Charles Kropp, O.S.A., attended the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy previous to his course at Catholic U. and transfer here.

Increased Burden Forces Addition To Teaching Staff

Seven Counsellors Replaced in Resident Halls; Fr. Grimes Made Acting Chaplain

Six additions to the faculty have been made in accordance with the accelerated program now being conducted. They are Rev. Thomas Burke, O. S. A., Rev. John J. Coffey, O. S. A., Rev. John A. Klekotka, O. S. A., Rev. Joseph W. Kemme, O. S. A., Rev. Dante L. Girolami, O. S. A., and Rev. Charles A. Kropp, O. S. A. All received graduate degrees last month at Catholic U.

An internal change resulted in Rev. E. T. Grimes, O. S. A., being made Acting Chaplain, replacing Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O. S. A.

Positions as counsellors in the resident halls were assigned to Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O. S. A., and the six new instructors. The counsellors in Fedigan Hall include Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O. S. A., Rev. Thomas Burke, O. S. A., and Rev. Dante Girolami, O. S. A. Mendel Hall will have Rev. Charles Kropp, O. S. A., and Rev. Joseph Kemme, O. S. A., as moderators, while Simpson Hall will be supervised by Rev. John Klekotka, O. S. A., and O'Dwyer Hall by Rev. John Coffey, O. S. A.

Before entering the Augustinian Academy, Rev. Thomas Burke, O. S. A., was graduated from Rennsalear Polytechnic obtaining a degree in engineering. After one year at Villanova he went to Catholic University for four years and was awarded an M. S. degree in Physics last month.

Rev. John J. Coffey, O. S. A., went through the usual preliminary training before entering St. Mary's Hall at Villanova. Here, after four years study he obtained an A. B. degree and then matriculated for four years at Catholic University, receiving his degree in speech and dramatics. His home town is North Roxbury, Mass.

Like Father Coffey, Rev. Dante L. Girolami, O. S. A., resided in St. Mary's Hall and on receiving an A. B. degree went to Catholic University and was awarded an M. S. in Mathematics. He is a native Philadelphian.

Rev. Joseph Warren Kemme, O. S. A., accompanied Fr. Girolami throughout his Augustinian education, obtaining an A. B. at Villanova and his degree as master of Rev. John A. Klekotka, O. S.A., is a graduate of the engineering school and is assuming his position with an M.S. degree in Physics.

Rev. Dante L. Girolami, O.S.A., another addition to the faculty, received his A.B. degree here and a M.S. in Math at Catholic U.

Rev. Thomas Burke, O.S.A., who last month received his M.S. in Physics assumes also the position of counselor in Fedigan Hall.

Latest Science Bulletin Features "Fungi" Article

The May issue of the Mendel Bulletin, quarterly publication of the School of Science made its appearance June 10, featuring an article by Sister M. St. Agatha, I. H. M. on "Fungi for Food."

The feature article of the second issue of the year laments the failure of people to make use of the various types of edible fungi which at the present time may augment present food supplies. Following a brief discussion of the various types of fungi, Sr. Agatha takes into consideration the habitat of the forms of fungi and its life history, dividing the latter into two phases, the vegatative and reproductive stages.

This last issue also includes an article on "Sargasso Sea" by William A. Hadfield, Jr., which explodes the myths concerning this "sea within a sea." Also included were: "The Preparation of the Polysaccharide of Pneumococcus," by Lawrence J. McStravog and Daniel C. Cedrone; "Vitamin K," by Philip J. Mariani; "Shoestring Fungus," by Wallace James Redner, Jr.; and "A Variation in the Skeleton of the Opossum," by Andrew J. Jupa.

VILLANOVAN Awarded First Class Honors In Collegiate Press Rating

For the fifth successive year the VILLANOVAN has been awarded First Class Honor rating by the Associated Collegiate Press. Highest department rating was won by the editorial page which for the first time received the maximum possible score of "Superior." The association's critical analysis service rated the weekly as "Excellent" in coverage, balance, vitality, originality, treatment, news stories, features and editing. For the departments rated, the VILLANOVAN was given a total of 900 points out of a possible 1090.

The A. C. P. is an association of professional newspaper experts sponsored by the University of Minnesota. College newspapers throughout the country are subjected once a year to a critical analysis in an effort to improve collegiate journalism and to help the staffs in the solution of their publication problems.

The above scores were awarded to those issues published under the editorship of Thomas H. Doyle, Jr. last year.

A similar contest sponsored by the Catholic Intercollegiate Press Survey, in which the VILLANOVAN was entered, has not yet released the results of its ratings.

New Pamphlets Discuss Youth And Marriage

Pamphlet racks conveniently situated throughout the campus have been restocked with many new pamphlets on various subjects. The racks are sponsored by the Catholic Press Apostolate which is locally represented by Rev. Edward B. McKee, O. S. A.

Popularly received last year the racks have been placed in the rear of the chapel, in the main corridor of Mendel Hall, in the C. & F. building and the newest one in the Pie Shoppe.

The new pamphlets with which the scripture captioned racks have been restocked are concerned principally with the problems of young men and with marriage. Among those written by Daniel A. Lord, S. J. are "What to Do On a Date," "What is Decent Literature," "So We Abolish the Chaperone," and "Speaking of Birth Control."

Questions on marriage are dealt with in "Steering the Boy to a Happy Marriage," by Dr. Winfield S. Hall, "Divorce is a Disease which Destroys Marriage," by Martin J. Scott, S. J. and "Questions on Marriage," by Daniel A. Lord, S. J.

College To Begin 10-Hour Blackout At 8:30 Tonight

Dusk - to - Dawn Dimout Ordered by State Defense Council To Be Enforced on Campus

"Put out that cigarette, fellow! This is a blackout!"

This cry will probably be heard tonight as Villanova participates with ten million other Pennsylvania citizens in a dusk-to-dawn practice blackout beginning at 8:30 P. M. The first blackout of this type was called at the request of the U. S. Army Fighter Command, whose responsibility it is to protect this area from the attacks of enemy raiders.

Total blackout will exist for only one-half hour during the night. During the remainder of the time, till 5:00 A. M. tomorrow morning traffic will proceed normally, street and safety lights will remain on but all interior lighting must be screened from view.

Listen for Those Bells!

The time of the total blackout will remain a secret. Air raid sirens will signal the period of total blackout. On the campus, the bells will ring steadily for three minutes to signal the beginning of the total blackout period. The end will be marked by intermittent ringing of the bell; steady ringing of the bell for 5 seconds followed by 10 seconds of silence. This will be continued for 3 minutes.

This state wide dusk-to-dawn blackout has been called by the State Council of Defense to teach its citizens how to carry on their normal duties all night long with a minimum of light showing. Already cities within a 50 miles radius of the coast are operating under "dim-out" regulations every night.

Penalties for Violators

Previous blackouts have been for a few minutes only but with the dusk-to-dawn blackout authorities will have the advantage of seeing defects in air raid precautions.

Men From 18 - 21 Register June 30

Approximately 150 students will register next Tuesday under the requirements of the fifth registration of the Selective Service Act. As in the past, registrations will be conducted at the college under the direction of Paetrus F. Banmiller, registrar, in the Reception Room of Mendel Hall. Hours set for registration are from 9:00 A. M. to 5:00 P. M.

Those who must register will be students "born on or after January 1, 1922, or on or before June 30, 1924."

No Trips Necessary

Registration is conducted on the campus in order that resident students may continue their work without interruption. No trips to local boards are necessary. Upon the students filling out the required forms, registrations will be forwarded to the local boards according to the respective addresses.

Non-resident students may also take advantage of the campus registration if registration at their local boards is inconvenient. Two registrars will be in attendance throughout the eight hours of registration in order that any possible delay may be reduced to a minimum. This is the fourth registration to be conducted on the campus.

'Frosh' Orientation

Formal orientation of freshmen will be postponed until the beginning of the fall term, it was disclosed today. With the exception of wearing the identification pin, no other "frosh" regulations will be carried out.

TUESDAY - - - - - - - - - - JUNE 23, 1942

Our Battle Begins

The opening of classes under the accelerated program on June 8 represented a history making event at Villanova. Taking full cognizance of the futility of "business as usual," and in cooperation with requests of governmental agencies, the college authorities inaugurated an added semester of studies. It now remains for the students to show that they are equal to the trust that has been placed in them by their college.

As far as we've seen, the burdens of summer school have been accepted in a thoroughly cheerful manner by the student body. Transition to the new hours and schedule of classes has been made with an absolute minimum of confusion.

The rigorous classes in physical training have resulted in groans — good-natured ones, springing from aching bones rather than from strained morale. On the whole the calisthenics and contact work have produced energetic and interested cooperation.

But the summer isn't over yet by any means. There will be long hot days ahead; languid evenings when the mere thought of applying one's self to assignments acts as a mental emetic. Visions of summer pleasures in a world at peace will defeat differential calculus in the battle for our attention.

It is then that the real battle will take place. We have a job to do here this summer and no amount of wishful thinking of what we'd like to be doing is going to get it done. It's going to be a summer of work; it had better be a summer of prayer. Let's make up our minds now to be faithful to our twofold duty; work diligently and pray that we may work the harder.

Men Of Villanova

At the formal opening of the first summer session of the college Very Reverend Edward V. Stanford extended a sincere welcome to you freshmen on behalf of Villanova.

The VILLANOVAN wishes to reiterate that welcome and likewise to emphasize the opportunities which Villanova offers.

Never before in the century of its history has Villanova seen its doors open for a full summer session. Never before has it offered so complete an education both spiritual, mental and physical. Never before have the duties of you — as freshmen—been so evident.

The chapel of St. Thomas of Villanova stands as the focus point of Villanova's activities. Within it lies the Purpose for which we shall labor so hard. To you, freshmen, it is an opportunity to make yourselves an integral part of that which we, regardless of the type work, aim to imitate.

All though formal orientation has been postponed until the Fall season, you will be expected to make yourselves worthy of the name "men of Villanova." This honored title has been conferred upon you subject to the condition that your actions must continue to merit the honor.

Other men of Villanova are now on the field of battle—living that name. In all justice you must equal their high ideals!

Villanova is proud of these men and fervently hopes to be equally as proud of you. She has done and will continue to do all that will augment your spiritual, mental and physical development. She is presenting all the opportunities—you must be worthy of her confidence, men of Villanova!

Are We Christian?

Some two thousand years ago Christ changed the Mosaic law from "An eye for an eye" to "—we forgive those who trespass against us." This implies in as clear a form as is imaginable that we are to return good for evil, blessings for a curse, a smile for a smirk, a boon for a buffet.

That we of America are followers of Christ has been contended long and hotly since the outbreak of the war. We call ourselves a "Christian country." We fight for the order and justice of Christ. We are not supposed to be revengeful, proud, full of hate.

It is rather surprising and contradictory, then, to read Dorothy Thompson"s proposals of retaliation for the wrongs of our enemies. According to this famous columnist, we are perfectly justified in slaughtering our enemies as our enemies have slaughtered us, in a ratio of ten or more to one. This may be perfectly moral on the battlefield; it is not where civilians are concerned. It may be perfectly just in the treatment of spies; it is not in the treatment of diplomatic hostages.

Perhaps we have been guilty of misinterpreting Miss Thompson. It is difficult to imagine any American proposing that we lower ourselves to the level of our enemies by being guilty of the same crimes as they are. It is equally difficult to imagine anyone suggesting that we forget our present policies of Christian warfare, as evidenced in the poison gas question and the treatment afforded the state hostages of our worst enemies.

We have shown ourselves to be thoughtful, Christian warriors; we have bombed none but military objectives; we have handled Finland with the greatest of courtesy; we have picked up half-drowned survivors of enemy sea disasters; we have fed entire cities, when such action brought us no military gain; we have tried to speed Russia on the way to political and moral reform; we have warred against the guilty and befriended the less guilty; in short, we have been the best of Christians, thus far.

Let us not be led into an era of post-war hate by these knights of the soap-box who seize the present patriotism of the populace and pervert it to their liking by the injection of hatred for fellow men, hatred of true justice, and hatred of the teachings of Christ. These hate-mongers, whose names comprise a formidable list, are the real threats to our way of life. Most of them are high up in Washington news circles; some of them are even officers in our armed forces; but all of them depend on hate to make a living. Such can never be right.

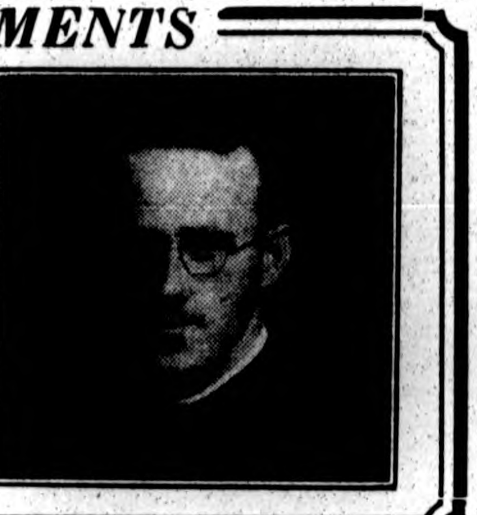
FACULTY COMMENTS

Post-War Problems Need Educated Men

By FR. BRESNAHAN



I WONDER if my reader is familiar with the stirring and once popular war poem which begins with the thematic words:

> "It isn't playing the game," he said, as he threw his books away.

—and from there goes on to tell of how a lad left college to go to fight, and to die a hero's death, at war.

As said, it is a stirring poem and is one that portrays the kind of fidelity to the noble ideal of patriotism that we want to see in our country's youth. But, in the present article, it is the writer's aim to convince any readers that need the convincing that, for our present crisis at least, it is to the better interests of our country itself that those of our boys who can should go on with their college schooling—yes, even in the face of the war hazard.

Short of Desperation

I make no question here of the readiness that there should be to stake even the lives of all our nation's youngest manhood, without exception, against the threat of ultimate defeat. But as long as the circumstance of war stands short of desperation, I hold for the proposition which I have uttered.

What are we fighting for?

As with most human activity, there are many motives involved in our fighting of this war. And not all people or peoples are joined in the Allied Cause for the same motive or motives, or with equal intensity of motive. But surely the most honorable motive proposed, and the one which most justifies our fighting the war, is the motive—not of "saving the world for democracy," but—of saving democracy for the world. For that is the only sensible meaning of our charter of the Four Freedoms.

Democracy Threatened

I think we need not labor the point that the continuity of the democratic form of government is seriously threatened by the current war. Every one takes it for granted that, unless the United Nations successfully resist the threat of the Axis Powers, democracies that are really independent will have ceased to exist. It is most important, therefore, that we win this war. We just can't—we just won't!— lose it.

But winning this war of machines and high-explosives is, as I see it, by far the "smaller half" of our battle for democracy. Ideas are far more powerful than guns and bombs. And the world at large today—even our country within itself—is engaged in a vast conflict of ideas and ideologies.

Organic cohesion

Assault by an external force has caused the citizens of our country to unite their energies in opposition, and this united effort has surely strengthened us in our common adherence to our basic national ideals. But what of the time when this external pressure, or splint, will have been removed? Will the knitting of our national fibres have become sufficiently organic to withstand the surge from within?

I do suppose that distaste for the enemy dictators will save us from extremes in that direction. But we must remember that, by this war, we avoided rather than solved our radical economic problems. With this in mind, along with an awareness of the claim that Russia will have to our sympathies after the war, we can see a likelihood, if not a liability, of what outlet a confusion of ideas within us might seek.

Informed Men Needed

My reader may think that I am having us "die many times before our death." I myself, however, am sufficiently confident of the validity of my argument to be willing to stand responsible for its public statement. But let us get back to the college student of these war times.

It is my contention that our democracy will not be safe in the post-war world unless the representative citizens of the democracy are intelligent and rightly informed men who accept our form of government with conviction. And who will these representative citizens be, pray, if not, sooner or later, the war-time college students? If, then, there is to be a post-war crisis for democracy (which I take for granted), it would be poor strategy for our generals of government to create today a void that will prove a gap in the ranks of tomorrow's battle front.

Dismayed at New Draft

It is with dismay that I face the prospect of the draft's being lowered to include boys of eighteen years of age. I know, of course, that college students pursuing schooling in the scientific branches will be allowed to continue their training for the best interests of their country at war. But what of the students of other pursuits?

Especially (to come to the subject nearest my heart), what of the students so "foolishly idealistic" as to ambition an education in the liberal-arts? Our own President knows himself that, of the resources upon which he has been able to draw for the adroit maneuvering of his policies of government and war, his own liberal education has been perhaps the foremost in importance. And if tomorrow is going to demand as great, or even greater, statesmen—I ask you: From what surer source than the ranks of those educated in the liberal tradition can we reasonably expect them?

FACTS ABOUT NAVY V-1 at Villanova

The Navy's V-1 Plan under which Freshmen and Sophomores from 17 through 19 years of age can continue their courses and prepare to become officers in the Naval Reserve has been accepted by our school. Hundreds of colleges and universities are backing the Navy's V-1 program, and thousands of students in other schools have already enlisted under this plan.

Only 80,000 men will be accepted annually for this training, but the Navy wants these men to be fully acquainted with all V-1 details before enlistment. Many questions have been asked. In this column we will answer those most frequently asked and in addition carry informative articles covering all phases of V-1 activities. Some questions asked are:

Q. I am a sophomore and will be 20 years old next month. Can I enlist in V-1?

A. Yes. If you have not yet reached 20 and you are otherwise qualified, you're eligible.

Q. When the war ends, do I stay in the Service?

A. Under V-1, you enlist in the Naval Reserve. As an enlisted man or as an officer, you may be released from active duty as soon as possible after the war is over.

Q. Will the Navy pay my tuition and other expenses while I am still in college under the V-1 plan?

A. No. Navy pay does not start until you are assigned to active duty.

Q. What is the citizenship requirement for acceptance for V-1?

A. Applicants for V-1 must have been citizens for at least 10 years before the date of application.

Q. When can students enlist in the V-1 Program?

A. Ordinarily a student will be enlisted in the V-1 Program at any time during his first semester or quarter in college. A student wishing to enlist should report to the nearest Recruiting Station with the necessary papers, or if a college has a number of men to enlist, arrangements should be made by the institution with the Recruiting Service to send a Recruiting party to the campus.

Q. When will direct enlistment in V-7 be closed?

A. Ultimately all men desiring to enter V-7 must first enlist in V-1. However, since the V-1 plan started with the 1941-42 freshmen and sophomore classes, another year will elapse before men in V-1 become available for V-7. In this interval direct enlistment in V-7 will be accepted as the needs of the Navy determine.

Q. Can a freshman wait until his sophomore year to enlist in Class V-1?

A. All freshman students admitted to colleges and universities beginning with the summer and fall term of 1942 and wishing to enlist in Class V-1, must do so prior to the end of the semester or quarter in which they are admitted to the university. Students attending short summer sessions as regularly enrolled freshmen will be allowed to enlist in Class V-1 during a period equivalent to regular semester or quarter in that institution. However, students who were freshmen or sophomores during the academic year 1941-42 and who were then eligible to enlist in V-1 and did not do so may enlist at any time prior to November.

Any questions concerning the Navy V-1 program should be addressed to the VILLANOVAN where they will be forwarded to the proper authorities. Answers to these questions will appear in a subsequent issue.

Four Teams To Provide Competition In Summer Intramural Softball Loop

Aggregations Representing Austin, Fedigan, Alumni and Mendel, to Participate in Major Mural Sport of the Summer; First Half Schedule Is Released

By JACK KOVAL

Now that all Villanova sports of major importance are for the present to be forgotten, attention will be focused this summer on an intramural softball campaign set up by Fathers McKee and Dunne. The athletic competitors taking part in this softball program consist of four teams: three composed of upperclassmen and one of freshmen. Managing the three upperclass teams, whose players chiefly originate from Fedigan hall, are Tony Paruta, Stan Kazior, and Joe Barry. Fr. Kemme, one of the six new priests here at Villanova, is capably handling the freshman team.

The softball games got under way last week with powerful teams taking the field. A three-way tie for first place existed on Thursday of last week with Tony Paruta's aggregation leading the other teams in the most-runs-scored department.

On Friday, a faculty team made up of the Fathers of Villanova, encountered Stan Kazior's softballers, defeating them by an 11-8 score. In spite of the athletic inactivity of the priests, they put up a remarkable demonstration of power which was certainly astonishing to the opposing team and spectators. Plans are being discussed for the installation of a permanent faculty team in the softball league.

Following is the first-half schedule of the teams with Alumni representing Paruta's team, Austin—Kazior's, Fedigan — Barry's, and Mendel the freshmen squad:

Baseball Team Compiles Record Of 9 And 3

Supremacy over opposing teams characterized the powerful Wildcat baseball nine, which, on April 4th, initiated what proved to be another successful season. In spite of their shortened schedule, the Wildcat nine, cleverly guided by "Doc" Jacobs, played spirited ball in every contest, and finished the season with a record of nine wins and three losses.

Coming into the home stretch of their twelve game season, the Villanovans succeeded in subduing a highly touted Fordham team. The Rams of Fordham were going strong, winning seven games in a row, until they met up with the Wildcats, who gave them their first defeat of the season, 10-4.

A return engagement with Loyola brought down the curtain on the '42 campaign with the Wildcats overwhelming the Greyhounds in another one-sided contest 15-0. This game was marked by the brilliant no-hit no-run performance of freshman Jim Burns.

Linksmen Have .600 Percentage

Haverford, Delaware and Swarthmore Are Listed as Victims of Wildcat Sextet

Although their record was quite as impressive as that of last year's links squad, the Wildcat golf team recently concluded its season with a total of three victories as against two defeats. This showing, in view of the fact that four new men were on the team this spring, was quite impressive. Bill Walsh and Bob Casey were the only veterans on the squad, and last April the outlook for a successful campaign was not too bright. However, the newcomers came through with surprising success, and the season can be called a successful one.

St. John's of Brooklyn was the first opponent met by the Wildcats, and, avenging their two defeats of the '41 season, the Redmen won out in a closely contested match 4-3.

After this opening setback however, the Villanovans came to life and were victorious in three consecutive engagements. Swarthmore was the first to fall, by the score of 5-4. Next on the list were Haverford and Delaware, who were beaten by scores of 6½-2½, and 5-4 respectively. In the final encounter of the year, an away match with Delaware, the Wildcats lost out 5-4.

Hugh Mathews, newcomer to the squad last spring, who played in the number 6 position, compiled the best match play record, as he was victorious in all five matches while losing none. Bill Walsh, playing at number 1 was next in order, with four wins and one loss. Bob Casey, at number 2, won three and lost two, while Ernie Klappenback, the number 4 man, was credited with two victories and three defeats.

Jim Elliott Gets Navy Commission

Jim "Jumbo" Elliott, erstwhile track star, golfer, and more recently, coach of the two sports here at Villanova, is now a Lieutenant (J. G.), in the United States Naval Air Corps.

"Jumbo," who produced a crack mile relay team last winter, is stationed at present in the Widener Building in Philadelphia. He has temporarily been assigned as Recruiting Officer for the Navy Air Corps in this district. His position is to familiarize seniors in the surrounding colleges with the idea of joining the Navy Air Cadets. In July he will be sent to Corpus Christi, Texas, where he will begin flight instruction himself.

A familiar figure around Villanova for quite some time, Jumbo's absence will be felt heavily, especially next winter when the indoor track season rolls around.

Besides being an outstanding track coach, "Jumbo" is also an amateur golfer of high rank, and before his enlistment in the Navy, he played in a number two spot on the Whitemarsh Country Club team.

Murphy Receives Wings

John Murphy, '41, was recently awarded his wings and commission as Ensign in the Naval Air Corps. Murphy completed his training last week at the U. S. Naval Air Station at Jacksonville, Florida.

Nicknamed "Red," Murphy was varsity catcher on the baseball team during his senior year, and was also a member of the basketball squad. Coming from South Ozone Park, New York, he was graduated from Villanova with a B. S. degree in Economics.

Sportorial

By BILL WALSH

WITH "Jake" Mauch having resumed his duties as lifeguard at Seaside Heights, N. J. for the summer, it is necessary for this department to struggle along without him. During the three month interval, we will do our best to follow his splendid example of the last six months.

It is the usual custom in the first issue of the school year to picture the coming football season, and state the possibilities of a very successful, if not unbeaten season. This issue, however, as we all know, is one of a new era, an era in which we are four or five months ahead of schedule. With tennis occupying the only varsity spot for the summer, there is not much to discuss of the immediate future regarding intercollegiate competition. With this in mind we will move the calendar back about five or six weeks and delve a little more deeply into the recently completed baseball season.

Congratulations, first of all, go to "Doc" Jacobs, for his coaching a team, made up mostly of sophomores and freshmen, through a successful season. The baseball nine, with a percentage of .750 (nine wins and three losses) had the best record of any of the various athletic teams at Villanova during the past year. After losing two games out of the first three, the diamond club bounced back in true Villanova fashion, to win eight of their last nine contests.

Too much credit can not be given to the fellows who were playing their first year of varsity ball for the Wildcats. Joe Lord, at second base, very ably filled the shoes of Woody Reitmier, who was drafted last summer. Woody had been recognized as one of the flashiest keystone sackers ever to matriculate at Villanova, and Joe's assignment was certainly not an easy one. He performed flawlessly in the field, however, and after a slow start at the plate, found his batting eye, and finished with a very creditable average.

Another Joe, and only freshman in the regular lineup, was Joe Coffee, the untried yearling who made Villanova rooters forget the work of Tony Callandra around shortstop the year before. Joe also had a tough job getting started at the plate, but after the middle of the season he hit regularly.

Joe Koproski in center field, and Bill Smith in right, were two more first year men who came through with flying colors. Koproski batted in the cleanup spot throughout the season, and although his batting average was not too high, he led the team in extra base knocks. Smith was the steadiest and most dependable hitter on the club, finishing with the remarkable average of .429.

Although he was out for the team in his sophomore year, Jim Traitz, recently graduated, may also be classed as a first year man, in that this was his first year as a regular. He held down the first base position, and his work around the initial sack left little to be desired.

And so, we give "Doc" Jacobs and all his boys a well-deserved pat-on-the-back.

College Launches Extensive Physical Training Program For All Students

Coaching Staff Headed by Smith in Charge of Conditioning for War Service; Three Hours Prescribed for Each Week

A new physical fitness program, designed to condition students for war service, went into effect last week, in all the major colleges of the country who have adopted the accelerated program. Villanova is included in this group, and under the guidance of "Clipper" Smith, and his aids, McNally, Jacobs, and Severance, it shouldn't be too long before all Villanova students are in tip-top shape.

Three hours a week is the time alloted for the training of each student. Each of the three classes for the student are held on different days, so that he receives the conditioning exercises on three days out of every week. Over and above these three hours of actual exercise, the same amount of time is alloted each week for the changing of clothes, showers, and trips to and from classes.

Various forms of exercise are offered to the student, with the accent being placed on group competition. Fifteen minutes of calisthenics are required in each class, to loosen stiff muscles, and the remaining forty-five minutes are given over to various athletic contests.

Obstacle Course Featured

Included in the competition are outdoor basketball, volleyball, softball, touch football, and obstacle races. The obstacle course, built just inside the quarter-mile track in the stadium, is not yet completed, but will be finished in the next week or two. It is a real test for the student and is the most novel of the contests planned by the instructors.

An additional evening swimming course is being conducted by Severance for those students who prefer swimming to the other forms of exercise. These classes will be held three nights during the week, with an hour each night being the minimum time prescribed. Those who wish to take the swimming as well as the outdoor exercise, will be received on the specified evenings by Mr. Severance. He will also conduct courses in the fundamentals of swimming, for those who feel that they need coaching in this sport.

Rain or Shine

Rain will not serve as a hindrance to the conditioning program, as ample room is provided in the gym for the students on these days. While indoors, calisthenics will be given on the basketball floor, followed by games of basketball and volleyball. The swimming pool will also be in use at these times.

Uniforms will be worn by the students during all gym classes, consisting of white "T" shirts and shorts, which will be furnished by the college. The student is required to provide himself with sneakers.

Director "Clipper" Smith, in compliance with the wishes of the military officials of the country, has planned an interesting program, and the students should be in condition within a few weeks. This will afford them a better opportunity to pass the various physical exams required for commissions in the Army, Navy, and Marines.

Tennis Team Will Be Active Soon

Only Aggregation to Engage in Varsity Competition During the Summer Months

Villanova's sports' program is going to keep up with the accelerated academic course in at least one sport, for if present plans work out, there will be an intercollegiate tennis team on the campus this summer. However, as yet there has not been any official schedule released. This marks a new era in the history of Villanova sports, so it will be the first time that the college has ventured forth in the field of intercollegiate athletics during the summer months, since the founding of the College, one hundred years ago.

The team, as it sizes up, is for the most part, unknown, although there will be Austin Gavin and Bill McDonald as well as Hugh Wells and Joe Daly from last season's squad. Gavin, however, is the only one who has seen much varsity competition, so he will be counted on to fill the number one spot.

Freshmen Eligible

Johnny Green, a junior, will also help a great deal, as well as Charley LaBelle who was out last year, but due to other activities was unable to play. Because of the new freshmen rule, the frosh will also stand a good chance of placing men on the club, but of course little is known of them as yet.

In order that a better idea of the prospects might be had, it is planned to have an intramural tournament from which the top men will be drafted and placed on the squad.

In general, there is very little known of the actual ability of this new net team, but the potentialities are strong and to borrow an old saying, "Where there's a will there's a way," and it is certain that a way will be found, for there seems to be plenty of will. One of these ways might be the creation of a general tennis interest in the student body by having a majority of them trying out for the team when the first practice session is held.

Prospective opponents during the summer months are: the University of Pennsylvania, St. Joseph's College, the University of Delaware, La Salle College, Rider College, and Temple University.

Our Battle Begins

The opening of classes under the accelerated program on June 8 represented a history making event at Villanova. Taking full cognizance of the futility of "business as usual," and in cooperation with requests of governmental agencies, the college authorities inaugurated an added semester of studies. It now remains for the students to show that they are equal to the trust that has been placed in them by their college.

As far as we've seen, the burdens of summer school have been accepted in a thoroughly cheerful manner by the student body. Transition to the new hours and schedule of classes has been made with an absolute minimum of confusion.

The rigorous classes in physical training have resulted in groans — good-natured ones, springing from aching bones rather than from strained morale. On the whole the calisthenics and contact work have produced energetic and interested cooperation.

But the summer isn't over yet by any means. There will be long hot days ahead; languid evenings wher the mere thought of applying one's self to assignments acts as a mental emetic. Visions of summer pleasures in a world at peace will defeat differential calculus in the battle for our attention.

It is then that the real battle will take place. We have a job to do here this summer and no amount of wishful thinking of what we'd like to be doing is going to get it done. It's going to be a summer of work; it had better be a summer of prayer. Let's make up our minds now to be faithful to our twofold duty; work diligently and pray that we may work the harder.

Men Of Villanova

At the formal opening of the first summer session of the college Very Reverend Edward V. Stanford extended a sincere welcome to you freshmen on behalf of Villanova.

The VILLANOVAN wishes to reiterate that welcome and likewise to emphasize the opportunities which Villanova offers.

Never before in the century of its history has Villanova seen its doors open for a full summer session. Never before has it offered so complete an education both spiritual, mental and physical. Never before have the duties of you — as freshmen—been so evident.

The chapel of St. Thomas of Villanova stands as the focus point of Villanova's activities. Within it lies the Purpose for which we shall labor so hard. To you, freshmen, it is an opportunity to make yourselves an integral part of that which we, regardless of the type work, aim to imitate.

All though formal orientation has been postponed until the Fall season, you will be expected to make yourselves worthy of the name "men of Villanova." This honored title has been conferred upon you subject to the condition that your actions must continue to merit the honor.

Other men of Villanova are now on the field of battle—living that name. In all justice you must equal their high ideals!

Villanova is proud of these men and fervently hopes to be equally as proud of you. She has done and will continue to do all that will augment your spiritual, mental and physical development. She is presenting all the opportunities—you must be worthy of her confidence, men of Villanova!

Are We Christian?

Some two thousand years ago Christ changed the Mosaic law from "An eye for an eye" to "—we forgive those who trespass against us." This implies in as clear a form as is imaginable that we are to return good for evil, blessings for a curse, a smile for a smirk, a boon for a buffet.

That we of America are followers of Christ has been contended long and hotly since the outbreak of the war. We call ourselves a "Christian country." We fight for the order and justice of Christ. We are not supposed to be revengeful, proud, full of hate.

It is rather surprising and contradictory, then, to read Dorothy Thompson"s proposals of retaliation for the wrongs of our enemies. According to this famous columnist, we are perfectly justified in slaughtering our enemies as our enemies have slaughtered us, in a ratio of ten or more to one. This may be perfectly moral on the battlefield; it is not where civilians are concerned. It may be perfectly just in the treatment of spies; it is not in the treatment of diplomatic hostages.

Perhaps we have been guilty of misinterpreting Miss Thompson. It is difficult to imagine any American proposing that we lower ourselves to the level of our enemies by being guilty of the same crimes as they are. It is equally difficult to imagine anyone suggesting that we forget our present policies of Christian warfare, as evidenced in the poison gas question and the treatment afforded the state hostages of our worst enemies.

We have shown ourselves to be thoughtful, Christian warriors; we have bombed none but military objectives; we have handled Finland with the greatest of courtesy; we have picked up half-drowned survivors of enemy sea disasters; we have fed entire cities, when such action brought us no military gain; we have tried to speed Russia on the way to political and moral reform; we have warred against the guilty and befriended the less guilty; in short, we have been the best of Christians, thus far.

Let us not be led into an era of post-war hate by these knights of the soap-box who seize the present patriotism of the populace and pervert it to their liking by the injection of hatred for fellow men, hatred of true justice, and hatred of the teachings of Christ. These hate-mongers, whose names comprise a formidable list, are the real threats to our way of life. Most of them are high up in Washington news circles; some of them are even officers in our armed forces; but all of them depend on hate to make a living. Such can never be right.

FACULTY COMMENTS

Post-War Problems Need Educated Men

By FR. BRESNAHAN

I WONDER if my reader is familiar with the stirring and once popular war poem which begins with the thematic words:

"It isn't playing the game," he said, as he threw his books away.

—and from there goes on to tell of how a lad left college to go to fight, and to die a hero's death, at war.

As said, it is a stirring poem and is one that portrays the kind of fidelity to the noble ideal of patriotism that we want to see in our country's youth. But, in the present article, it is the writer's aim to convince any readers that need the convincing that, for our present crisis at least, it is to the better interests of our country itself that those of our boys who can should go on with their college schooling —yes, even in the face of the war hazard.

Short of Desperation

I make no question here of the readiness that there should be to stake even the lives of all our nation's youngest manhood, without exception, against the threat of ultimate defeat. But as long as the circumstance of war stands short of desperation, I hold for the proposition which I have uttered.

What are we fighting for?

As with most human activity, there are many motives involved in our fighting of this war. And not all people or peoples are joined in the Allied Cause for the same motive or motives, or with equal intensity of motive. But surely the most honorable motive proposed, and the one which most justifies our fighting the war, is the motive —not of "saving the world for democracy," but—of saving democracy for the world. For that is the only sensible meaning of our charter of the Four Freedoms.

Democracy Threatened

I think we need not labor the point that the continuity of the democratic form of government is seriously threatened by the current war. Every one takes it for granted that, unless the United Nations successfully resist the threat of the Axis Powers, democracies that are really independent will have ceased to exist. It is most important, therefore, that we win this war. We just can't—we just won't!— lose it.

But winning this war of machines and high-explosives is, as I see it, by far the "smaller half" of our battle for democracy. Ideas are far more powerful than guns and bombs. And the world at large today—even our country within itself —is engaged in a vast conflict of ideas and ideologies.

Assault by an external force has caused the citizens of our country to unite their energies in opposition, and this united effort has surely strengthened us in our common adherence to our basic national ideals. But what of the time when this external pressure, or splint, will have been removed? Will the knitting of our national fibres have become sufficiently organic to withstand the surge from within?

I do suppose that distaste for the enemy dictators will save us from extremes in that direction. But we must remember that, by this war, we avoided rather than solved our radical economic problems. With this in mind, along with an awareness of the claim that Russia will have to our sympathies after the war, we can see a likelihood, if not a liability, of what outlet a confusion of ideas within us might seek.

Informed Men Needed

My reader may think that I am having us "die many times before our death." I myself, however, am sufficiently confident of the validity of my argument to be willing to stand responsible for its public statement. But let us get back to the college student of these war times.

It is my contention that our democracy will not be safe in the post-war world unless the representative citizens of the democracy are intelligent and rightly informed men who accept our form of government with conviction. And who will these representative citizens be, pray, if not, sooner or later, the war-time college students? If, then, there is to be a post-war crisis for democracy (which I take for granted), it would be poor strategy for our generals of government to create today a void that will prove a gap in the ranks of tomorrow's battle front.

Dismayed at New Draft

It is with dismay that I face the prospect of the draft's being lowered to include boys of eighteen years of age. I know, of course, that college students pursuing schooling in the scientific branches will be allowed to continue their training for the best interests of their country at war. But what of the students of other pursuits?

Especially (to come to the subject nearest my heart), what of the students so "foolishly idealistic" as to ambition an education in the liberal-arts? Our own President knows himself that, of the resources upon which he has been able to draw for the adroit maneuvering of his policies of government and war, his own liberal education has been perhaps the foremost in importance. And if tomorrow is going to demand as great, or even greater, statesmen—I ask you: From what surer source than the ranks of those educated in the liberal tradition can we reasonably expect them?

The Navy's V-1 Plan under which Freshmen and Sophomores from 17 through 19 years of age can continue their courses and prepare to become officers in the Naval Reserve has been accepted by our school. Hundreds of colleges and universities are backing the Navy's V-1 program, and thousands of students in other schools have already enlisted under this plan.

Only 80,000 men will be accepted annually for this training, but the Navy wants these men to be fully acquainted with all V-1 details before enlistment. Many questions have been asked. In this column we will answer those most frequently asked and in addition carry informative articles covering all phases of V-1 activities. Some questions asked are:

Q. I am a sophomore and will be 20 years old next month. Can I enlist in V-1?

A. Yes. If you have not yet reached 20 and you are otherwise qualified, you're eligible.

Q. When the war ends, do I stay in the Service?

A. Under V-1, you enlist in the Naval Reserve. As an enlisted man or as an officer, you may be released from active duty as soon as possible after the war is over.

Q. Will the Navy pay my tuition and other expenses while I am still in college under the V-1 plan?

A. No. Navy pay does not start until you are assigned to active duty.

Q. What is the citizenship requirement for acceptance for V-1?

A. Applicants for V-1 must have been citizens for at least 10 years before the date of application.

Q. When can students enlist in the V-1 Program?

A. Ordinarily a student will be enlisted in the V-1 Program at any time during his first semester or quarter in college. A student wishing to enlist should report to the nearest Recruiting Station with the necessary papers, or if a college has a number of men to enlist, arrangements should be made by the institution with the Recruiting Service to send a Recruiting party to the campus.

Q. When will direct enlistment in V-7 be closed?

A. Ultimately all men desiring to enter V-7 must first enlist in V-1. However, since the V-1 plan started with the 1941-42 freshmen and sophomore classes, another year will elapse before men in V-1 become available for V-7. In this interval direct enlistment in V-7 will be accepted as the needs of the Navy determine.

Q. Can a freshman wait until his sophomore year to enlist in Class V-1?

A. All freshman students admitted to colleges and universities beginning with the summer and fall term of 1942 and wishing to enlist in Class V-1, must do so prior to the end of the semester or quarter in which they are admitted to the university. Students attending short summer sessions as regularly enrolled freshmen will be allowed to enlist in Class V-1 during a period equivalent to regular semester or quarter in that institution. However, students who were freshmen or sophomores during the academic year 1941-42 and who were then eligible to enlist in V-1 and did not do so may enlist at any time prior to November.

Any questions concerning the Navy V-1 program should be addressed to the VILLANOVAN where they will be forwarded to the proper authorities. Answers to these questions will appear in a subsequent issue.

Four Teams To Provide Competition In Summer Intramural Softball Loop

Aggregations Representing Austin, Fedigan, Alumni and Mendel, to Participate in Major Mural Sport of the Summer; First Half Schedule Is Released

By JACK KOVAL

Now that all Villanova sports of major importance are for the present to be forgotten, attention will be focused this summer on an intramural softball campaign set up by Fathers McKee and Dunne. The athletic competitors taking part in this softball program consist of four teams: three composed of upperclassmen and one of freshmen. Managing the three upperclass teams, whose players chiefly originate from Fedigan hall, are Tony Paruta, Stan Kazior, and Joe Barry. Fr. Kemme, one of the six new priests here at Villanova, is capably handling the freshman team.

The softball games got under way last week with powerful teams taking the field. A three-way tie for first place existed on Thursday of last week with Tony Paruta's aggregation leading the other teams in the most-runs-scored department.

On Friday, a faculty team made up of the Fathers of Villanova, encountered Stan Kazior's softballers, defeating them by an 11-8 score. In spite of the athletic inactivity of the priests, they put up a remarkable demonstration of power which was certainly astonishing to the opposing team and spectators. Plans are being discussed for the installation of a permanent faculty team in the softball league.

Following is the first-half schedule of the teams with Alumni representing Paruta's team, Austin—Kazior's, Fedigan — Barry's, and Mendel the freshmen squad:

Baseball Team Compiles Record Of 9 And 3

Supremacy over opposing teams characterized the powerful Wildcat baseball nine, which, on April 4th, initiated what proved to be another successful season. In spite of their shortened schedule, the Wildcat nine, cleverly guided by "Doc" Jacobs, played spirited ball in every contest, and finished the season with a record of nine wins and three losses.

Coming into the home stretch of their twelve game season, the Villanovans succeeded in subduing a highly touted Fordham team. The Rams of Fordham were going strong, winning seven games in a row, until they met up with the Wildcats, who gave them their first defeat of the season, 10-4.

A return engagement with Loyola brought down the curtain on the '42 campaign with the Wildcats overwhelming the Greyhounds in another one-sided contest 15-0. This game was marked by the brilliant no-hit no-run performance of freshman Jim Burns.

Linksmen Have .600 Percentage

Haverford, Delaware and Swarthmore Are Listed as Victims of Wildcat Sextet

Although their record was quite as impressive as that of last year's links squad, the Wildcat golf team recently concluded its season with a total of three victories as against two defeats. This showing, in view of the fact that four new men were on the team this spring, was quite impressive. Bill Walsh and Bob Casey were the only veterans on the squad, and last April the outlook for a successful campaign was not too bright. However, the newcomers came through with surprising success, and the season can be called a successful one.

St. John's of Brooklyn was the first opponent met by the Wildcats, and, avenging their two defeats of the '41 season, the Redmen won out in a closely contested match 4-3.

After this opening setback however, the Villanovans came to life and were victorious in three consecutive engagements. Swarthmore was the first to fall, by the score of 5-4. Next on the list were Haverford and Delaware, who were beaten by scores of 6½-2½, and 5-4 respectively. In the final encounter of the year, an away match with Delaware, the Wildcats lost out 5-4.

Hugh Mathews, newcomer to the squad last spring, who played in the number 6 position, compiled the best match play record, as he was victorious in all five matches while losing none. Bill Walsh, playing at number 1 was next in order, with four wins and one loss. Bob Casey, at number 2, won three and lost two, while Ernie Klappenback, the number 4 man, was credited with two victories and three defeats.

Jim Elliott Gets Navy Commission

Jim "Jumbo" Elliott, erstwhile track star, golfer, and more recently, coach of the two sports here at Villanova, is now a Lieutenant (J. G.), in the United States Naval Air Corps.

"Jumbo," who produced a crack mile relay team last winter, is stationed at present in the Widener Building in Philadelphia. He has temporarily been assigned as Recruiting Officer for the Navy Air Corps in this district. His position is to familiarize seniors in the surrounding colleges with the idea of joining the Navy Air Cadets. In July he will be sent to Corpus Christi, Texas, where he will begin flight instruction himself.

A familiar figure around Villanova for quite some time, Jumbo's absence will be felt heavily, especially next winter when the indoor track season rolls around.

Besides being an outstanding track coach, "Jumbo" is also an amateur golfer of high rank, and before his enlistment in the Navy, he played in a number two spot on the Whitemarsh Country Club team.

Murphy Receives Wings

John Murphy, '41, was recently awarded his wings and commission as Ensign in the Naval Air Corps. Murphy completed his training last week at the U. S. Naval Air Station at Jacksonville, Florida.

Nicknamed "Red," Murphy was varsity catcher on the baseball team during his senior year, and was also a member of the basketball squad. Coming from South Ozone Park, New York, he was graduated from Villanova with a B. S. degree in Economics.

Sportorial

By BILL WALSH

WITH "Jake" Mauch having resumed his duties as lifeguard at Seaside Heights, N. J. for the summer, it is necessary for this department to struggle along without him. During the three month interval, we will do our best to follow his splendid example of the last six months.

It is the usual custom in the first issue of the school year to picture the coming football season, and state the possibilities of a very successful, if not unbeaten season. This issue, however, as we all know, is one of a new era, an era in which we are four or five months ahead of schedule. With tennis occupying the only varsity spot for the summer, there is not much to discuss of the immediate future regarding intercollegiate competition. With this in mind we will move the calendar back about five or six weeks and delve a little more deeply into the recently completed baseball season.

Congratulations, first of all, go to "Doc" Jacobs, for his coaching a team, made up mostly of sophomores and freshmen, through a successful season. The baseball nine, with a percentage of .750 (nine wins and three losses) had the best record of any of the various athletic teams at Villanova during the past year. After losing two games out of the first three, the diamond club bounced back in true Villanova fashion, to win eight of their last nine contests.

Too much credit can not be given to the fellows who were playing their first year of varsity ball for the Wildcats. Joe Lord, at second base, very ably filled the shoes of Woody Reitmier, who was drafted last summer. Woody had been recognized as one of the flashiest keystone sackers ever to matriculate at Villanova, and Joe's assignment was certainly not an easy one. He performed flawlessly in the field, however, and after a slow start at the plate, found his batting eye, and finished with a very creditable average.

Another Joe, and only freshman in the regular lineup, was Joe Coffee, the untried yearling who made Villanova rooters forget the work of Tony Callandra around shortstop the year before. Joe also had a tough job getting started at the plate, but after the middle of the season he hit regularly.

Joe Koproski in center field, and Bill Smith in right, were two more first year men who came through with flying colors. Koproski batted in the cleanup spot throughout the season, and although his batting average was not too high, he led the team in extra base knocks. Smith was the steadiest and most dependable hitter on the club, finishing with the remarkable average of .429.

Although he was out for the team in his sophomore year, Jim Traitz, recently graduated, may also be classed as a first year man, in that this was his first year as a regular. He held down the first base position, and his work around the initial sack left little to be desired.

And so, we give "Doc" Jacobs and all his boys a well-deserved pat-on-the-back.

College Launches Extensive Physical Training Program For All Students

Coaching Staff Headed by Smith in Charge of Conditioning for War Service; Three Hours Prescribed for Each Week

A new physical fitness program, designed to condition students for war service, went into effect last week, in all the major colleges of the country who have adopted the accelerated program. Villanova is included in this group, and under the guidance of "Clipper" Smith, and his aids, McNally, Jacobs, and Severance, it shouldn't be too long before all Villanova students are in tip-top shape.

Three hours a week is the time alloted for the training of each student. Each of the three classes for the student are held on different days, so that he receives the conditioning exercises on three days out of every week. Over and above these three hours of actual exercise, the same amount of time is alloted each week for the changing of clothes, showers, and trips to and from classes.

Various forms of exercise are offered to the student, with the accent being placed on group competition. Fifteen minutes of calisthenics are required in each class, to loosen stiff muscles, and the remaining forty-five minutes are given over to various athletic contests.

Obstacle Course Featured

Included in the competition are outdoor basketball, volleyball, softball, touch football and obstacle races. The obstacle course, built just inside the quarter-mile track in the stadium, is not yet completed, but will be finished in the next week or two. It is a real test for the student and is the most novel of the contests planned by the instructors.

An additional evening swimming course is being conducted by Severance for those students who prefer swimming to the other forms of exercise. These classes will be held three nights during the week, with an hour each night being the minimum time prescribed. Those who wish to take the swimming as well as the outdoor exercise, will be received on the specified evenings by Mr. Severance. He will also conduct courses in the fundamentals of swimming, for those who feel that they need coaching in this sport.

Rain or Shine

Rain will not serve as a hindrance to the conditioning program, as ample room is provided in the gym for the students on these days. While indoors, calisthenics will be given on the basketball floor, followed by games of basketball and volleyball. The swimming pool will also be in use at these times.

Uniforms will be worn by the students during all gym classes, consisting of white "T" shirts and shorts, which will be furnished by the college. The student is required to provide himself with sneakers.

Director "Clipper" Smith, in compliance with the wishes of the military officials of the country, has planned an interesting program, and the students should be in condition within a few weeks. This will afford them a better opportunity to pass the various physical exams required for commissions in the Army, Navy, and Marines.

Tennis Team Will Be Active Soon

Only Aggregation to Engage in Varsity Competition During the Summer Months

Villanova's sports' program is going to keep up with the accelerated academic course in at least one sport, for if present plans work out, there will be an intercollegiate tennis team on the campus this summer. However, as yet there has not been any official schedule released. This marks a new era in the history of Villanova sports, so it will be the first time that the college has ventured forth in the field of intercollegiate athletics during the summer months, since the founding of the College, one hundred years ago.

The team, as it sizes up, is for the most part, unknown, although there will be Austin Gavin and Bill McDonald as well as Hugh Wells and Joe Daly from last season's squad. Gavin, however, is the only one who has seen much varsity competition, so he will be counted on to fill the number one spot.

Freshmen Eligible

Johnny Green, a junior, will also help a great deal, as well as Charley LaBelle who was out last year, but due to other activities was unable to play. Because of the new freshmen rule, the frosh will also stand a good chance of placing men on the club, but of course little is known of them as yet.

In order that a better idea of the prospects might be had, it is planned to have an intramural tournament from which the top men will be drafted and placed on the squad.

In general, there is very little known of the actual ability of this new net team, but the potentialities are strong and to borrow an old saying, "Where there's a will there's a way," and it is certain that a way will be found, for there seems to be plenty of will. One of these ways might be the creation of a general tennis interest in the student body by having a majority of them trying out for the team when the first practice session is held.

Prospective opponents during the summer months are: the University of Pennsylvania, St. Joseph's College, the University of Delaware, La Salle College, Rider College, and Temple University.

Soldiers Visiting Campus Describe Fighting In Iceland And Philippines

By ROBERT T. CANFIELD

Bataan, Corregidor, Australia, Iceland—these are names which conjure visions in the minds of us all. To most of us remote from the scene they are merely heroic names, but to four soldiers visiting the Villanova campus last weekend they signify life and death, blood and fire.

Upon the invitation of Villanova, Pvt. Warren Squires, an American soldier, and Sgt. Alfred C. Nuesca, Sgt. Crisanto Bautista, and A. Gonzaga, three members of the Philippine Scouts were granted leave from the Tilton General Hospital at Fort Dix, New Jersey, to visit the campus.

Sgt. Nuesca, a veteran of 23 years army service, was stricken with psychoneurosis, hysteria and paralysis of the leg last August. Although he failed to see action in the Philippine war he was far from the safety zone. At the outbreak of hostilities he was transferred from the 91st Coast Artillery Corps at Fort Mills, Corregidor to the general hospital in Manila. From there he was evacuated to Australia.

Iceland Saw Action

While in Australia, Sgt. Nuesca, recovered sufficiently to walk with the aid of a cane. When the safety of Australia was in doubt, the army transferred him aboard a large ocean liner converted into a transport, which later docked on the east coast of the United States. Nuesca proceeded to Fort Dix where he was again hospitalized.

Warren Squires, the American member of the party, last saw action in Iceland. During enemy action, he was wounded in the thigh and returned to the States for treatment and convalescence. The wounded soldier is an expert marksman with ratings in pistol, rifle and machine gun firing. He's been a member of the fighting forces for over five years, though he is only 22. Before his Iceland experience, he received training at Fort Hayes, Ohio; Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana; and Fort Custer, Michigan.

It's A Military Secret

Sgt. Bautista was the most severely injured of the group. He suffered the loss of his left leg in the fighting on Bataan Peninsula. After lying wounded on the battlefield for six hours, the Philippine Scout was located by stretcher bearers and sent to Pampanga Hospital near Bataan.

The fourth of the visiting soldiers, Gonzaga, who had seen 22 years of service, was the most reticent of all, preferring to stroll about the campus to being interviewed. He hesitated to even mention his birthplace and filled out his conversation with solemn nods of his head. He parried every question with "it's a military secret."

But the failure of these men to show a "bravado" spirit brought the "real" side of war life to those fellows with whom they talked. The lack of the cock-sure attitude which is usually attributed to the American soldier seemed to bring the grimness of war to those about and to deepen their appreciation of this country.

Loudest of all in his praise of the United States, Bautista said that in all his life he never dreamed of going overseas. Now he repeats that "only God knew, and He saved my life. Now that I'm here in the United States, my greatest dreams have come true and I am happy to know the American people. I would like to live here for the rest of my life." Bautista's home was in San Marcelino Zambales, in the Philippines.

All men were anxious to return—to get this war settled. Squires expected to be removed from the sick list this week and then to head for the Quartermaster Corps. His description of Iceland left this reporter wondering. According to him, it's common occurrence to find the sun shining, the moon out, the northern lights in the horizon with rain and snow falling, all at the same time. "You have to get used to that together with the six months of daylight and six months of dark."

After leaving the campus yesterday morning the four soldiers were to be guests of a Main Line estate before returning to Fort Dix and further orders.

Civilians will also be able to test their own air raid precautions and will have the opportunity of planning further methods which will enable them to carry on their normal duties when and if regular blackouts become common practice.

Throughout the night, air raid wardens will inspect their local districts for defects. Violations will be punished both here at the college and in other areas. All citizens have been requested to follow the advice of their wardens without argument if they wish to escape the penalties set up for violators.

Senior Balloting Names J. Quinn Class President

Meehan Elected Vice-President; Results of Sophomore and Junior Voting Also Released

John J. Quinn of the Engineering school has been elected president of the Senior class according to the recently disclosed results of last May's class elections.

In his sophomore year the senior president was elected treasurer of his class, was appointed to the committee of the Sophomore Cotillion and served on the orientation committee. This past year marked his appointment as President of the Philadelphia Region of the National Federation of Catholic College Students (NFCCS). In his junior year Quinn served as co-chairman of the Junior Dinner Dance. The new president has also been a member of the Engineering fraternity, Phi Kappa Pi, for three years.

The other new Senior class officers are James J. Meehan of C. & F., vice president; James J. Donnelly, an engineering student, secretary; Harry Keefrider, commerce man, treasurer; and John Di Carlo, a C. & F. student, and George N. Eriksen of the science school, Student Council officers.

JOHN J. QUINN

Commerce Student Elected

William R. Sullivan, C. & F. student, and well-known end of the football team, was elected Junior class president. Since his entrance at Villanova he has been a prominent figure in sports. Thomas A. Delahanty, a science student, was chosen as vice president of the Junior class; Louis A. Merlini, an engineering student, as secretary; Francis X. Quinn, an engineering student, as treasurer; and Harry L. Bansback, an engineering student, Richard J. Ryan, of C. & F., and Louis G. Fares, a science student, as the Student Council members.

Freshmen Elect

Edward A. Fanelli of C. & F. was chosen by last year's freshmen as president of the Sophomore class. Throughout his first year he was an active member of the Spanish club. He also belonged to the Choral Society. Richard P. Breen, likewise of C. & F., was made vice president; Francis P. Motzenbecker, an engineer, treasurer; and William J. Baer, of the science school, a member of the Student Council.

Meet The Boys:

Bill Walpole, Ex-President, Heads For Law School If Army Says "Yes"

By LOUIS A. DE SIMONE

IT was the great Carlyle who once said, "Biographies are most interesting, especially the biographies of worthy personages." We agree whole-heartedly with that statement and have selected as the first biography of the new school year "The life and loves of one Bill Walpole—character extraordinary."

"Smiling Bill" makes his home in Oak Park, Ill. It was here that he was introduced to the world on March 20, 1921. At the tender age of six he entered the William Hatch grammar school, where he immediately proceeded to the head of the class as the outstanding scholar of the first grade. To show that it wasn't just a coincidence he maintained this pace throughout his eight year stay. It was during his grammar school days that Bill began his literary career. He wrote a few plays and short sketches, early promise of later brilliance.

Regarded As Prodigy

It was with open arms that the Oak Park High School awaited Bill's coming. He was regarded as a prodigy, and rightly so. Bill was, as usual, to be found as one of the outstanding members of his class both as a scholar and as an athlete. He continued to write plays and sketches and was a principal writer for the "Tabulae," school magazine. He was a leading member of the English and Chemistry Clubs.

As an athlete Bill starred as a member of the varsity football team for three years, and participated in numerous intra-mural activities.

Upon graduation from high school, Bill decided on law as his chosen field of endeavor. Villanova stood out in his mind as the collossus of eastern colleges, so Bill made the long journey.

Consistent Honor Man

Upon his enrollment in the commerce school, Bill was determined to continue his good work. Everyone he met became his friend as evidenced by the "gang" that was always to be found in his room at 28 Mendel. The Spanish Club, the Holy Name Society, and various intra-mural organizations listed him as a member. From the first report card he received as a freshman until the last one he received as a junior, the name of William Walpole has graced the honor roll in the School of Commerce and Finance.

During his sophomore year Bill added the History Seminar and the Radio Club to his list of activities. His rapid rise to popular favor is attested to by his election in his junior year to the presidency of his class and to the Student Council.

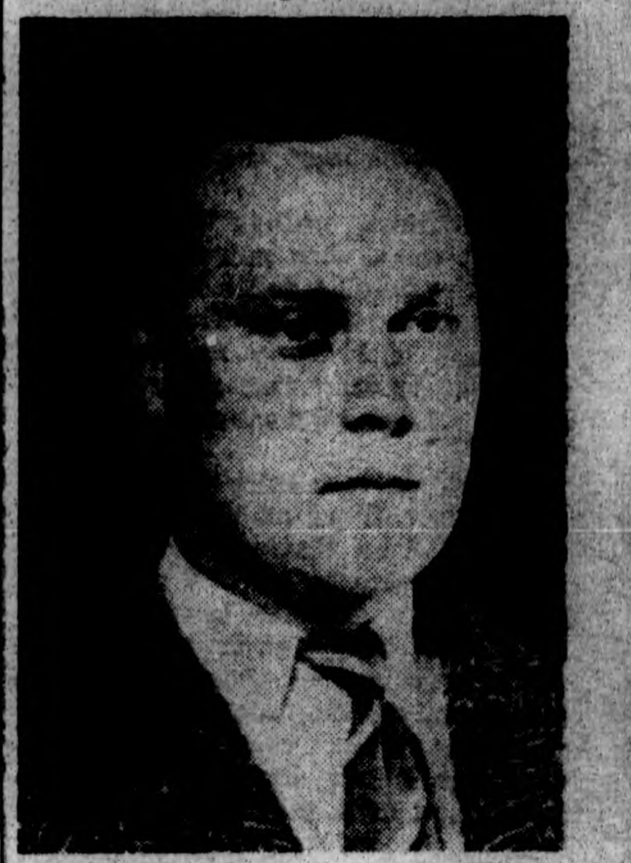
No Dodger Fan

His room in Fedigan became a public gathering place. From what has been said, let us not assume that Bill is a book worm or an angelic individual. He is always in some sort of mischief (from good authority). His present room in Simpson is a "hide-out" for his "gang." He likes to play cards, especially bridge, and is quite fond of baseball and golf.

When asked about his favorite baseball team he said reluctantly, "Oh, anybody but the Brooklyn Bums." Movies have a great attraction for him and after the show he enjoys "a nice juicy steak" smothered in onions. He says that his most enjoyable hobby is just plain sleep. These 8:00 A. M. classes just don't agree with him.

Home Town Attraction

The fact that his home is several hundred miles from here does not affect Bill in the least. He goes home about every three weeks and admits rather shyly that his "one and only" is back home even though he has taken dates to practically every dance on the campus. Besides traveling to and from Illinois, Bill takes frequent trips to a certain college situated high upon a hill. His red curly hair and fair blue eyes really attract the fairer sex.



Bill claims that his future is somewhat vague. He expects eventually to matriculate at Harvard Law School. But upon graduation here he is quite certain to be a member of a really important institution—the Uncle Sam Arsenal. Bill is awaiting a deferment to allow him to finish his studies here.

science at Catholic University last month. He also is from Philadelphia.

Villanova College looked upon Rev. John A. Klekotka, O. S. A., earlier in its history as an engineering student. After being graduated from Roman Catholic High School he entered Villanova College and after four years obtained a B. S. degree in Electrical Engineering. After preliminary training, he required only one year in St. Mary's Hall at Villanova. At Catholic University last month, where he studied for four years, he acquired an M. S. degree in Physics.

Rev. Charles F. Kropp, O. S. A., originally was graduated from the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy before joining the Augustinian Order. After preliminary training and a year at Villanova he began a four year course at Catholic University. Last month he secured an M. S. degree in Biology. He is a native of Plains, Pa.

Portugese Group Vote Membership To Fr. Stanford

President Chosen to Corresponding Post by Institute of Coimbra, Noted Literary Academy

Notification of his election to a corresponding membership in the Institute of Coimbra, celebrated Portugese Scientific and Literary Academy, was received last week by Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college.

Although the scroll received by Fr. Stanford indicated that the honor had been bestowed as early as August 10, 1941, no word of the choice was forwarded until last week.

Purposes Listed

According to the Statutes of the Institute, its purpose is "the culture of the Sciences, Belles Lettres and Arts." The end is to be attained through the study and discussion of scientific, literary and artistic problems, and the publication of a scientific and literary review.

Composed of active, corresponding, honorary, and benemeritos members, the Institute has imposed stringent entrance conditions. The following are listed for active and corresponding members:

"1. To possess an exemplary reputation, both moral and civil.

"2. To offer an original monograph upon some subject which would merit publication in the review of the Institute or to have some work of recognized merit, to have performed outstanding services in the sciences, Belles Lettres or Arts, or to have obtained academic diplomas of distinct literary merit."

Fr. Stanford's name was proposed for membership by Professor Honorable Emile Schaub-Koch, noted Swiss educator, who is a member of the Pontifical Academy. According to a communication received by the president from Professor Schaub-Koch, the nomination was made in consideration of his "exceptional services rendered to the Educational Science and to Religious problems."

Among the privileges accruing to the president by virtue of his membership will be the use of the insignia of the Institute and the right to publish his writings and to receive a copy of the Review.

Founded in 1852, the Institute of Coimbra has been reformed four times since that time, the last revision of the statutes taking place in 1938.

Fr. Stanford is also a corresponding member of the Institut Litteraire et Artistique de France.

The 1940-41 edition of "Who's Who in America" lists sixteen different memberships for Fr. Stanford. Born in Boston in 1897, he attended Boston College before entering Villanova, where he gained an A. B. degree in 1918, an M. S. degree in 1922. He also holds an honorary degree from Loyola University.

One of America's youngest college presidents when he was appointed in 1932, he was an instructor in descriptive geometry and chaplain before assuming his present position.

Most noteworthy of his many educational accomplishments was his presidency of the Association of American Colleges in 1940. He is also the author of scientific and religious texts.

No Issue Next Week

Due to the Fourth of July weekend, there will be no issue of the VILLANOVAN next Tuesday. The paper will be published as usual on Tuesday, July 14.

Positions are still open on all staffs to interested freshmen and upperclassmen. Those who desire to join the staff should signify their intention of doing so by submitting their names at the office of the paper, room 119 Mendel Hall.

Enlarged Library Facilities Head List Of New Campus Improvements

Extensive renovations and repairs of existing campus facilities, begun last Spring, are now in the process of completion. Many of the improvements, such as the enlargement of the library, are already in use.

The large scale renovation of the library has been termed by college officials as the outstanding change here for the summer sessions. By a more economical use of floor space and a thorough revision of office rooms, it was possible to install another reading room.

Fluorescent lighting fixtures have also been installed in the new room, which is at present being used as a work room by the library staff. Periodicals are also filed here.

Residence Halls Renovated

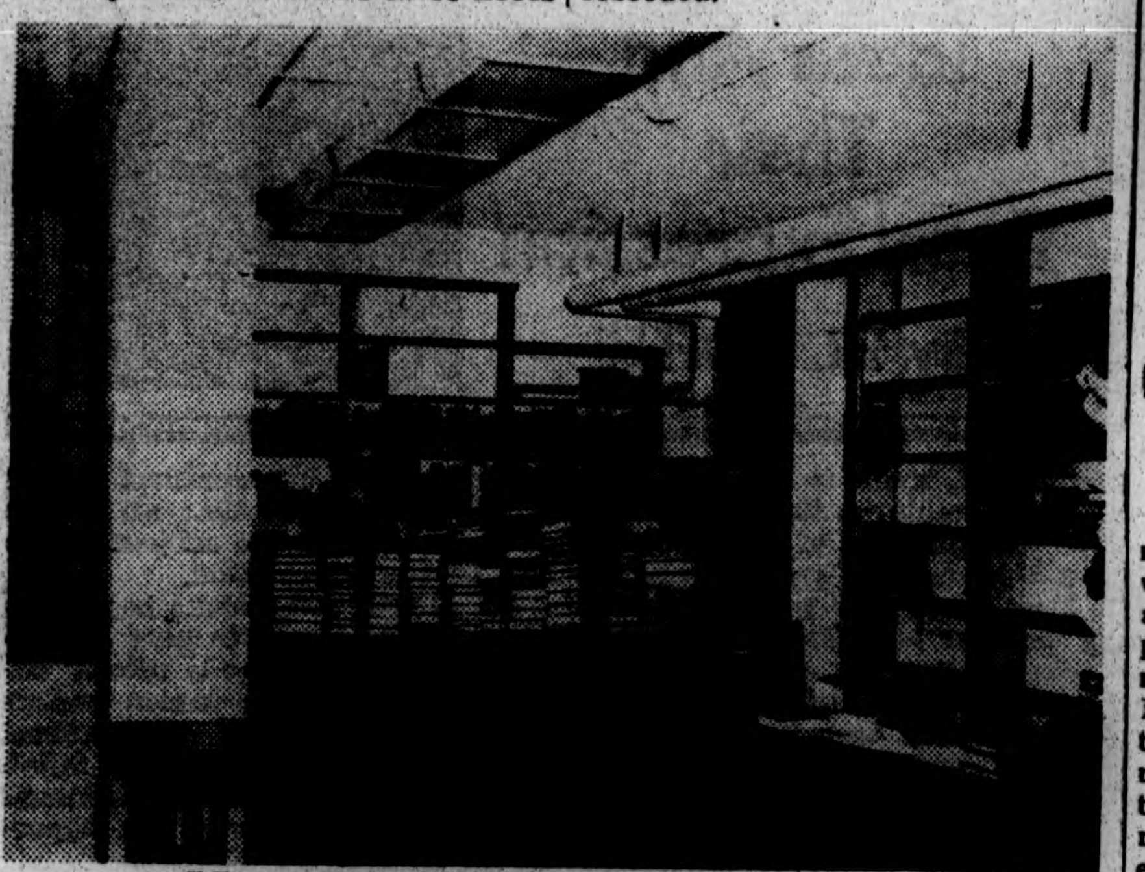
Interior renovation of two residence halls has also been effected. Austin Hall has been completely repainted in green, buff, blue, and peach, with white ceilings. Hallways, toilets, and shower rooms have been repainted and new fixtures have been installed in the hallways. Alumni Hall's three floors have been repainted and redecorated.

The physical appearance of the campus has been transformed by the elimination of the path leading from the rear of Mendel Hall to the post office. The path itself has been removed by grading; hedges have been planted to prevent its reappearance through erosion. Officials expressed the hope that students would refrain from their former habit of cutting across the campus to the post office.

"Keep Off the Grass"

In the parking triangle behind Mendel Hall a new curve is under construction to prevent motorists from driving on the lawn. Another curve has been placed in the front to prevent washouts of the flower beds, and evergreens have been planted on the west lawn. The lawn at Simpson Hall near the barn has been graded.

At St. Mary's Hall an incinerator has been removed. The circle at the main driveway in front of St. Rita's Hall was thinned out and reseeded.



New Reading Room Opened

One of the members of the library staff is pictured (above) in the recently completed extension of present library facilities. Termed by college officials as the outstanding improvement for the summer session, the new room, currently being used by the staff as a work room, has fluorescent lighting fixtures.

Sam Canning Returns From West To Enter Officers' Training School

Last year's junior class found no harder job than keeping a vice-president in office for more than one month. One of those who vacated the position at the special invitation of his local draft board was Sam Canning — now Corporal Samuel J. Canning, Jr., U. S. A.

"Corporal Sam" paid a flying visit to the campus last week, arriving no later than 3:00 A. M. Wednesday. Arousing Fedigan Hall from its slumber he found himself besieged with questions from his former college buddies singing those "I'm Waiting to Hear from My Local Draft Board Blues."

On a Western Tour

Sam "used-to was" columnist for the sports staff of the VILLANOVAN before he left college last February. The grand exodus was made with the completion of his mid-term exams. Before entering the army, Sam made a complete tour of the West. After seeing the major portion of that country, Sam enlisted in the army, thereby beating the local board to the punch.

He was sent to Camp Callan near San Diego, California. By swimming in the middle of January, but only on his off hours, Sam acquired about ten pounds of muscle and a heavy coat of tan, not to mention promotion to the rank of corporal on June 15, three months after enlisting.

Ack-Ack Division

The appointment came upon his acceptance as an officer candidate. From his overnight stop-over on the campus he headed for his New York home, then to Camp Davis in North Carolina. While there he will study for three months in the Antiaircraft division, which course he hopes will lead to a commission as a second lieutenant in that division. Until that time he will not be assigned to any regiment.

About Army routine, Sam has a lot to say. First, was the value of a college education. He stressed the fact that his education, although not complete, enabled him to advance as fast as he did.

Does he like the Army? Sam said, "Yes, with restrictions. The army routine and life is completely different from ordinary life. Of course I would like to be doing other things; no one likes war or any part of it. But the army, as the army, is good. Life begins at camp at 5:30 A. M. Mass is said every day at this time for those who wish to attend—and almost all do. Drilling follows throughout the day until 5:00 P. M. Then you're free, unless you have been assigned to guard duty, until 11 that night. All lights-out at eleven."

He Looked It!

In regard to that important question of "food" Sam agrees that the U. S. Army is the best fed organization in the world. "The food is fresh and well-cooked, with plenty of second helpings."

Will he finish college after helping to finish the Axis? Sam said that it depended on the length of the war. "If it lasts more than three years, I doubt whether I shall return. I'm afraid it would be too difficult to take up college studies again, what with the change in life and atmosphere now."

He didn't say the army was too tough but he admitted that "you took a lot" but that you had your chance to "give it back." With this in mind he looked upon the physical training program at the college as being a great preparation for the raw recruit.

There's War and War

From here Corporal Sam was planning a short visit home. The army gives no furloughs now except transfer furloughs. He had

Redner, Hadfield Named To Head Mendel Bulletin; Plan Summer Issue

Fr. Dougherty Appoints Junior Sciencemen to Replace Nelson; Staff of Seven Will Assist

William A. Hadfield and W. James Redner, both junior sciencemen, have been appointed co-editors of the Mendel Bulletin, science school quarterly, Rev. Joseph M. Dougherty, dean of the School of Science and moderator of the publication, announced yesterday.

The new editors, who are to hold office for a scholastic year, fill the vacancy created by the graduation of J. Eugene Nelson. Close companions since their freshman year, the new editors have matched each other's accomplishments since then.

Both consistent honor men, they have been members of the German Club and Research Seminar and have contributed several articles to earlier issues of the Bulletin.

For the first time in the history of the publication an issue will be published this summer, the new editors announced. The format will be the same as in past years, and contributions will be accepted from any member of the science school.

Music Seminar Opens Summer Sessions; Faculty Members Attend Meetings

In an unpublicised meeting of the music seminar last Friday, Dr. Edward L. Haenisch, its moderator, announced that recordings will be played every Wednesday during the noon hour in room 215 Mendel Hall. He hopes to be able to continue the programs throughout the summer semester. Dr. Haenisch extended an open invitation to all music lovers, including the nuns enrolled in the summer school, to attend the weekly sessions.

After playing three movements of Tschaikowski's Fifth Symphony, Dr. Haenisch took requests for selections to be played in future programs. The feature work on tomorrow's program will be Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto for the piano. The title was not Beethoven's but was so named by the critics as being the "emperor" of all the piano concertos. This was before Tschaikowski's was written.

Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, attended a meeting of the General Executive Board of the National Catholic Educational Association at New York's Hotel Pennsylvania on Thursday, June 26.

Villanova was represented at a conference of selected colleges in New York last week by William G. Driscoll, associate professor of physics. The conference was called under the auspices of the Civil Aeronautics Authority to consider proposals for Army and Navy flight programs at the colleges. Driscoll is the local director of the C. A. A. student flight training plan.

J. Stanley Morehouse, dean of the School of Engineering, attended a meeting of the Society for Promotion of Engineering Education. The sessions were held in New York from June 27 to 29.

Registration Today For 18-20 Group

All students "born on or after January 1, 1922 or on or before June 30, 1924," must register today under the requirements of the Selective Service Act.

Registrations will be conducted on the campus for both resident and day students. It will not be necessary to register at local boards. All may register in the Reception Room of Mendel Hall between 9:00 A. M. and 5:00 P. M.

Two registrars will be in attendance throughout the day to eliminate any delay. Upon completion of the registrations, the information will be sent to their respective draft boards.

Belle Air Staff Calls Meeting For Tomorrow

An important meeting of all students wishing to join the staff of the Belle Air, college year book, will be held tomorrow at 1 P. M. in room 51 Mendel Hall, Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, O. S. A., moderator of the publication, announced today.

With the announcement of the meeting, the unspoken fears of students that the Belle Air planned to cease publication for the duration of the war were allayed. Distribution of the 1942 annual, edited by William E. Schubert, Jr., has occupied the time of present staff members for the past two months.

Two Former Students Celebrate First Masses

Last Sunday two former students of the engineering school here celebrated their First Masses.

Rev. Fenton J. Fitzpatrick, S. J., was assisted by Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, O. S. A., instructor in library science. Fr. Fitzpatrick, a former member of the class of 1928, was studying for an electrical engineering degree prior to his entry into the seminary.

In the Queen of Peace Church in Kew Garden Hills, L. I., Rev. Joseph A. Hahn, M. M., also sang his first Solemn High Mass. Fr. Hahn was a mechanical engineering student in the class of 1933.

It's Labor's Choice

THE eloquent eyebrows of John L. Lewis, king of the United Mine Workers, mus thave glowered even more than usual at the charge made in the House recently by a Democratic Congressman.

"The most sinister figure in the nation," was the scorching label tagged on labor's former wonder-boy.

This condemnation marks the climax of a chain of Lewis-made blunders, highlighted by his jealous row with Philip Murray, C. I. O. president, and his efforts to frustrate the proposed merger of the C. I. O. with the American Federation of Labor.

It also marks the fall of a man who once enjoyed the confidence of millions of working men and women, and whose career promised to match that of the great Samuel Gompers. But this was not to be.

Drunk with power, insanely jealous of any who threatened to overshadow him, the victim of a tragic political faux pas during the Willkie-Roosevelt campaign, the man now goes the way of all who violate public duty and responsibility.

Lewis is learning the painful lesson that no man is bigger than organized labor, bigger than our government, nor bigger than the American public.

The irony of it is that the stigma of betrayal is borne, not by Lewis, but by the rank and file of labor. Public opinion places full responsibility for the acts of labor on the shoulders of every workman. This is certainly as it should be.

Today organized labor faces a crisis paralleling that which confronted the employers and big businessmen of a decade ago. Can we hold and honor the trust placed in us by the general public? Can we recognize our duties as well as our privileges? Can we regulate ourselves?

These are the questions every worker must answer and act upon — the same questions which big business and laissez faire addicts refused to answer in the not too distant past.

Labor unions must recover the reins of self-government which they have carelessly bestowed on unscrupulous leaders.

Failure on the part of the unions to mend these errors will cause the labor front to meet with the same fate which befell the money-mad prophets who made free enterprise mean unbridled, cutthroat competition.

Labor's destiny will be one of two things: self-regulation through internal reform, or slow strangulation by the federal government.

The choice is labor's—the opportunity now!

—R. T. C.

A Necessary Step

THE overly-debated lowering of the draft age to eighteen has been made a part of the Selective Service Act. The arguments pro and con the movement will be forgotten for a while and all the time we formerly gave over to raving will be occupied by serious thoughts on how we can best observe the law.

Army officials are not averse to telling us why young men make better soldiers than older men. They say that the young man has the ability to adapt himself physically and psychologically to the situation of the moment; the young man has the endurance and stamina, so necessary in warfare.

The lowering of the draft age, the average age of our standing army, is a good thing for the army and for the country no matter what our personal theories may be.

—T. P. McF.

July 4, 1942

IN the midst of Valley Forge's blackest moments there appeared a pamphlet beginning with the words, "These are the times that try men's souls." Whether because of Paine's words or not, from that time on American fortunes of war became the better.

Our position in the present war is, of course, a far cry from the dreary condition in which the Continetal soldiers found themselves. But we very definitely are not winning the war just now.

Daily the number of merchant ship sinkings increases. When the Navy began its convoying in the Atlantic, submarine activity slackened there only to be renewed with increased vigor in the Caribbean and Gulf areas. The loss of Libya, the threat to Egypt and its key ports, and German advances in Russia add up to a serious blow to Allied hopes.

These are indeed times that try men's souls—and faith, and courage. But in a few days we shall celebrate the anniversary of a day when men with great souls, with faith in their ideals and courage in their hearts declared the rights of free men to achieve their ideals in a decent community, under their own government. On this Fourth of July let us take added resolve and determination from their example.

—T. F. D.

Let's Have Vaudeville

FOR the past few weeks there has been a definite movement to bring vaudeville back to the American theatre. If it recovers from its decadent stage it will be one of the best things, in our opinion, that has ever happened to this country.

Ever since the decline of good, clean vaudeville shows, the country has of necessity relied on the motion pictures as a source of entertainment. Of course there have been many good pictures, we admit that, but the lack of competition, together with the apparent lack of real talent, has resulted in the distribution of pictures unfit for the public, morally and otherwise. So unfit that at times they have been classified as "immorally funny."

We hope Hollywood has a moral competitor. We know it will have talent. Only on the stage is there some assurance of talent, as "hams" usually receive their vegetable rations from a disgusted audience.

Even if it doesn't return to its former height, we believe that it will arouse Hollywood to the fact that we would much rather see honest talent than some of the so-called entertainment which has left an undesirable aroma in the motion picture houses of the nation.

Ideas And Their Vocal Expression

By FR. COFFEE

TODAY, youth is fast becoming as familiar with the mechanical workings of a dive bomber, a U-boat, or a heavy steel-plated tank as it was yesterday with the more or less disagreeable task of changing a flat on the family car. Youth's proficiency in the skillful use of war implements is the toast of crafty statesmen, military strategists, and propagandizing Literateurs.

Gray-haired and portly elders praise quite lavishly youth's steady hands, broad shoulders, and tireless energy. Indeed, the mature who have bungled the universe into the present conflict, now find themselves depending upon the immature to defend a house built on the sands of unbridled greed and unhealthy ambitions.

Something Deeper

In spite of the darkness of the hour, however, and youth's willingness to work, to fight, and to die, the elders of the world must not forget that beneath those bodies perspiring so profusely there beat hearts nurturing noble aspirations, lofty ideals, and pleasant dreams. Even though today worldly leaders may bid youth: "Go, and he goes . . . Come, and he comes" there will dawn a time when youth will no longer remain inarticulate.

That time is no too far distant and that time will be the time for you, as a distinct unit in the grownig ranks of Catholic college men of this nation, to speak out, clearly and courageously, principles of right living, principles healthy to the core.

A Tomorrow Coming

Today the world is deaf to youth's words while it applauds its deeds. Tomorrow, however, when the world's palate will be sickened with the gore of young heroes it will anxiously listen to men with worth-while ideas. History shows that after bloody holocausts have been foolishly sacrificed to gods of clay, peoples beseech the heaven to raise up prophets of the truth.

You, the young men of Villanova, will be among those knowing the truth, you will be among those expected to speak the truth—but are you now the young preparing to express the true philosophy of life when the proper time arrives? This is a fair question. This is a serious question. This is a tremendously important question for you personally, for the nation collectively, for civilization universally, for Christianity religiously.

Ideas and Their Expression

The day on which the sword of war is sheathed, innumerable screeching voices will fill the air with innumerable inane theories about the what, why, where, and how of life. On that day your minds, now being formed into arsenals of truth, will blast through the fallacy of those theories of life opposed to the supernatural theory of life recognizing that all things and all creatures are subject to the rule of a provident God.

Yet if your mind alone is prepared and your power to give expression to lasting truths is utterly deficient, then you, the future leaders in the business and professional life of our nation, will have failed the men and women less fortunate than you, blessed with the opportunity of a college education.

Effective Speech

One way and a most effective way of expressing the truth is through the power of speech. Speech! From the days of Plato and Aristotle among the Greeks to Cicero and Quintillian among the Romans down to the present moment, intelligent persons have recognized that leadership among men is conceded to him who speaks forcefully, clearly, and sincerely. A person of upright character cannot find a more effective way of spreading abroad an idea, a message, a philosophy of life than through the spoken word.

The greatest message the world ever heard was the message of Salvation spoken from the Cross. Yet this message traveled from the mount of Calvary to the seven hills of Rome by the spoken word. Christ never commanded His apostles to write books but He did command them to preach. Over half a century after the Ascension, the first Evangelist, St. Matthew, wrote he first life story of Him who is the Way, the Truth, the Life. Up until that time thousands upon thousands of souls embraced the Christian way of life hearing of this way solely from the preachings of zealous speakers.

Heirs of a Glorious Heritage

You, the members of a Catholic college, are the heirs of a glorious heritage. To you have been bequeathed the same truths that turned a poison Rome into the center of Christianity. You not only know these truths but you live up to them as well as you can. Everything opposed to these truths you oppose, at least mentally.

You have no sympathy with Nazism, you fathom the weaknesses of Communism, you despise the spinelessness of naturalism and indifferentism. Your entire being testifies to the undeniable fact that Christianity alone is true with the truth of God. Yet how many opportunities to inform less enlightened minds than yours will you allow to pass unchallenged, if you are not able to stand on your two feet and speak out clearly, simply, and effectively the truth and faith that is in you.

If you find that you are unskilled and awkward in this important business of expressing your ideas orally it is worthy of your deepest consideration. You should and can very easily do something to remedy your deficiency.

Like Inept Athlete

The pitiable sight of a college man bursting with worthwhile ideas but unable to express himself effectively is somewhat similar to a type of boy one finds in a number of American neighborhoods.

All of you must have known such a lad in your earlier days. I refer to the boy who owned the community football, whose head was protected by a flashing helmet, whose shoulders were well-padded, whose thighs were guarded by the very latest style of football pants, whose feet were encased in trim looking cleats, and finally whose memory retained perfectly every regulation in the rule book.

In a word, this boy had everything needed for the great game of football except that he could not tackle, neither could he run, punt,

FACTS ABOUT NAVY V-1 at Villanova

Q. Can a student enlist in this program prior to starting his freshman year in college?

A. If a student has been accepted by an approved V-1 institution, and he is within the required age limits and can meet physical requirements of the program, he can be enlisted in the V-1 Program prior to the time college opens.

Q. Can juniors and seniors enlist in V-1 after June 1, 1942?

A. Generally speaking juniors and seniors cannot enlist in the V-1 Class. However, students who were freshmen or sophomores during the academic year 1941-42 and who were then eligible to enlist in V-1 and who did not do so may enlist any time prior to November 1, 1942.

Q. Do the calendar years start at the time of enrollment in school or at the time of enlistment in the V-1 Program?

A. The term "two calendar years" as used in the regulations for the V-1 Program start the day the student enters his freshman year in the college.

Q. What will the "classification examination" given in March each year include?

A. The examination will have three parts including (a) a verbal type test of the general ability (b) an examination in mathematics and (c) an examination in physics.

Q. Can next years' seniors enlist in Class V-7?

A. Until the V-1 program has been in operation long enough to furnish sufficient men for the V-7 plan, direct enlistments in V-7 will be accepted as the needs of the Navy dictate. Inquiry concerning V-7 should be made to the nearest office of the Officer Procurement.

Q. When do the V-1 men indicate whether they will try for V-5 or V-7?

A. Each V-1 enlistee will be asked to indicate his choice of V-5 or V-7 at the time of enlistment; however, this choice will not be binding.

Q. What will be the status of premedical and predental students under the V-1 program?

A. Premedical students may enlist in the V-1 program, and take the prescribed V-1 course. After the classification examination, a student, provided he qualifies, will be classed V-7 and permitted to continue his premedical course until he receives his degree. At the completion of his premedical course, if he submits evidence to the Bureau of Naval Personnel that he has been accepted as a medical student in an accredited medical college, he will be discharged from Class V-7 and reclassified H-V(P) and permitted to continue his medical education. However, if at that time he is not accepted in a medical college, he will naturally continue with his V-7 Reserve Midshipman Training.

Any questions concerning the Navy V-1 program should be addressed to the VILLANOVAN, where they will be forwarded to the proper authorities. Answers to these questions will appear in a subsequent issue.

Smith Pleased With Progress In Physical Training

Students Are Getting Into Condition Quickly; Obstacle Course, Near Completion, Is Popular With All

Villanova's recently organized physical fitness program, designed to condition students for war service, is now running in full capacity. Coaches Smith, McNally, and Jacobs, in charge of the daily outdoor classes, are quite pleased with the progress made in the past two weeks, and seem quite confident that their program will rank with the best in the country. Mr. Severance, in charge of the evening classes, which are held for those who do not have time, or who are physically unfit for the more strenuous outdoor sessions, also announces with pleasure, the advances made by the group.

Obstacle Course Is Featured

The main feature of the outdoor classes, an obstacle course, built just inside the quarter-mile track in the stadium, seems to be a backbreaker for many of the students. Although only half of the course is fully completed, it has made many of the fellows realize how sadly out-of-shape they are at present. Probably the toughest obstacle offered so far, is the seven and one half foot wall which everyone must, (at least attempt to) scale every day. Many have been unable to get over the wall as yet, but the majority have learned the knack of surpassing this toughest obstacle.

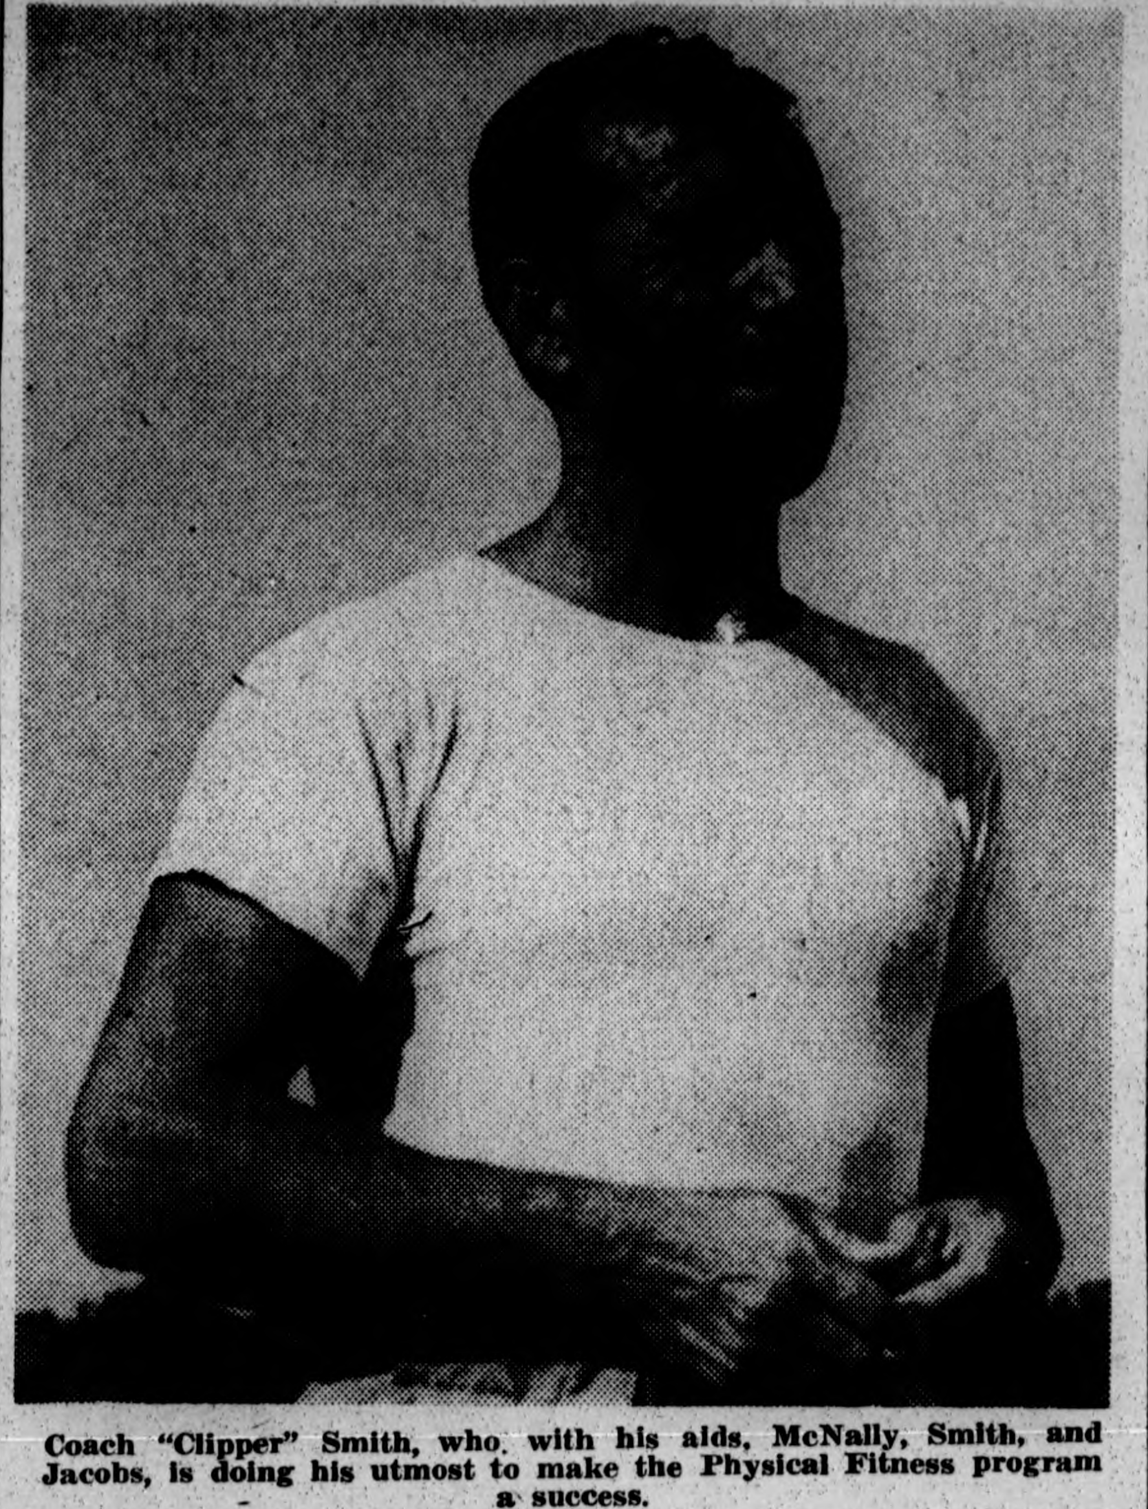
Another phase of the course, which has already caused many of the students to land knee-deep in water, is the jump over twelve feet of water from a ten-foot ramp. A pile of sawdust has been placed on the far side of the water for those who make the leap, but those who are unsuccessful find themselves in the water hole, constructed for just that purpose. After one soaking however, a fellow has an added incentive to get over the water, with the result that the number of casualties on Friday were not as great as those on Monday.

Time Trials Held

It is "Clipper's" plan to take time trials of a few of his charges everyday, and in this way afford the students another opportunity for competition, besides that already offered in baseball, basketball, football, tug of war, etc. Although only a few have been timed up to this point, the best performance turned in so far has been that of Charley Rini, a freshman, who toured the semi-completed course in the remarkable time of 36.6 seconds. Only three or four of the fellows timed so far, have succeeded in touring the course in less than forty seconds. The outstanding feature of Rini's performance was his hurdling of the five-foot rail which is another of the many obstacles, and which everyone else gets over with the help of his hands.

Although those who take their exercise in the evening do not have an obstacle course as a part of their physical fitness curriculum, they are kept mighty busy by basketball coach Al Severance. They have calisthenics, basketball, volleyball, and various other indoor games as their form of recreation, and each class is ended with a refreshing dip in the swimming pool.

Going Off The Ramp



Coach "Clipper" Smith, who with his aids, McNally, Smith, and Jacobs, is doing his utmost to make the Physical Fitness program a success.

SPORTORIAL

By BILL WALSH, Sports Editor

By BILL WALSH

For quite some time Villanova has been extremely active in Intramural Athletics. They have offered the student body various forms of activity in which to display their athletic prowess. Such a small percentage of the average college students are capable of playing varsity sports and engaging in intercollegiate competition, that a well-founded program consisting of intramural sports is vital and necessary to every college's curriculum.

Under the leadership of Fathers McKee and Dunne, Villanova has more than succeeded in doing this, as the past few years have shown. Probably the most popular sport in the past has been basketball. The league, consisting of six teams, begins in October and ends in March, thus affording the students six months of the court game, with the exception, of course, of the time alloted for the Christmas vacation every year.

Next in importance, and undoubtedly so in popularity during the spring of every year, has been the baseball league. This league is only made up of four teams, however, as the Dayhops (C & F and Mendel), are not able to play on Sundays, the day on which most games take place. These contests hold the intramural spotlight right up until the week before the final exams, at which time the intramural program is concluded until the following October.

This year, however, in view of the accelerated program, the intramural program had to continue right through the summer. Inasmuch as tennis would be the only intercollegiate sport during the summer months, Fathers McKee and Dunne were faced with the problem of providing enough activity for the students who were taking advantage of the summer semester. This was not an easy task for the respective Moderators as they didn't know just how many students to plan for during the summer. On top of that, the Nuns would be living in Austin and Alumni Halls, and thus two teams would be eliminated from the competition; that is, if the same rules were followed as during the regular school year.

Something new was tried in the summer program, however, in view of the scarcity of teams, with four Captains being chosen by the Moderators and these same Captains being permitted to select their teams of ten men. These groups were to participate in a softball league.

Yes, after much consideration, softball was chosen as the main intramural sport of the summer, and a good choice it was. Four games are to be played by each team each week, provided, of course, that the weather man doesn't interfere. These contests take place from Monday to Thursday evening inclusive, and they begin immediately after chapel. This enables the students to enjoy some form of entertainment during the evenings when daylight makes studying quite boresome.

So far the league has been a huge success and seems to be headed for greater heights. An added attraction was supplied when the four captains chosen were to name their teams after the respective halls, regardless of where they themselves lived, so that the league would run with the same personnel as during the spring.

Not too much credit can be given to the four Captains for their spirit and cooperation in making the league a success. Joe Barry's Fedigan aggregation is presently leading the league with a record of five and one for an .833 percentage. In second place is Stan Kazior's team, representing Austin Hall, and which has won four and lost two for .667. Alumni, captained by Tony "Peppy" Paruta, is next with three and three for .500. Probably no other player has done as much to add zip and interest to the contests than has Paruta. Although his team is in third place, he is easily the most outstanding player on the field with his noisy antics.

Although not a participant in the actual league competition, the faculty has also formed a team which engages the leading student team on Friday of each week. The first of these encounters was staged a week ago last Friday when the Austin team captained by Stan Kazior met the untried faculty aggregation. Austin, by virtue of a toss of a coin, had been chosen as the first opponent of the faculty although the Alumni and Fedigan squads were also tied for first place.

Inexperienced and out of practice as they might have been, the faculty staged a surprise 10-7 victory over the Austin team. Their hitting power was tremendous, especially that of Fathers Coffey, McCarthy and Sullivan, the three outfielders of the team composed solely of priests. Father Coffey hit a home run and also batted in four runs. Father Donallen was the winning hurler for the faculty.

Fedigan Leads Intramural Softball League With Five And One Record

Barry's Team Wins Three Straight to Assume Undisputed Lead, After Second Week of Competition, Austin Drops to Second; Alumni to Third

By JACK KOVAL

Pacing the league at the termination of last week's schedule were Joe Barry's Fediganites, proudly possessing a record of five wins against one defeat. Their only loss was suffered at the hands of Austin Hall, which gave them a 7-2 trimming.

In second place were Stan Kazior's Firemen with a record four and two. Next in line, and right on the heels of Austin were the spunky Alumnites, managed by "Peppy" Paruta. They had an even number of three victories and three defeats.

Freshmen In Cellar

Occupying the cellar position in the league are the new arrivals here at Villanova — the Mendel freshmen. The fact that the frosh are new to their competent coach, Father Kemme, and that it has taken him a little time to properly detect the individual potentialities of his players, is probably the reason why the frosh got off to such a bad start. However, now that things are in full swing and the Mendelites have been placed in their most advantageous positions, results are being obtained, as could be observed in last week's games, when the frosh offered a little more competition to their older and more experienced foes.

On Monday, the day on which the second round of games was to be played, the weatherman stepped in and thoroughly inundated the playing field, thus bringing about a nullification of the contests for that day. However, play was resumed the following day with Alumni tangling with Fedigan and Austin meeting Mendel.

Fedigan Trounces Alumni

In the former contest the Fediganites emerged victorious by the score of 7-4. Going into the third frame, both teams were tied up at one apiece. But Fedigan untangled the score in their half of the third with a four run splurge. Another tally in the fourth and one in the sixth brought their score to seven, enough to win the ball game.

Alumni had one big inning in the fifth when they scored three runs to come within two runs of their opponents. Further attempts by the Alumnites to score were in vain, as Fedigan kept them scoreless for the final innings of the game.

The next day Alumni and Fedigan were respective winners over tough Mendel and Austin aggregations. Though they played comparatively better ball than during the previous week, the freshmen squad came out on the short end of a 12-8 score. Mendel sprang off to an early 3-1 lead in the first inning, but the Alumnites displayed such a sparking offense, an offense that brought results in every inning of the game, that the frosh had to submit to their superiority.

The other game on Wednesday was the very important Austin-Fedigan contest. On that day both teams were deadlocked for first place with a record of three wins and one loss apiece. However, the tie was dissolved by Fedigan when they defeated Kazior's tough squad to the tune of 6-3, thus taking first place.

Suffering a tough 5-4 defeat on Thursday at the hands of Austin was Alumni Hall. An early 3-0 Austin lead didn't tear down any of the spirit of the Green Wave, for they pushed one run across in the second and another in the third to slash the three-run lead down to one. However, Austin came back with one in the fourth to make it 4-2. Two more runs by Alumni in the sixth put the game into a 4-4 tie, but then the Austinites scored another run in the last frame to annex the game.

Members Of '42 Nine Are Active During Summer

It seems that the hunger for activity, in an athletic way, is never appeased in those who participate in college varsity sports. At least this is true with regard to Villanova athletes. The majority can not resort to an inactive life. Their surging blood encourages them to strive for competitive sporting activities.

When college terminates at the last semester of the ordinary school year, a time when the seashore and vacation time calls, these same fellows are busy at work and play.

Two on Shamrocks

Joe Lord, who played second base for Doc Jacobs during the past spring, is now performing around the keystone sack for the Norristown A. C. Joe Koproski, the varsity center-fielder during the recently completed baseball season, spent a few weeks in Philadelphia participating in the national pastime, then returned to Stamford, Conn. to continue his favorite sport. Jim Lattanza, another spectacular out-fielder is with the 48th Ward "Shamrocks" in the South Philadelphia League. One of Jim's cohorts on the Shamrocks is a former teammate, Bill Woods.

It would be difficult to forget "Major" McDonnell; in fact it would be impossible. "Major" is now pitching with the Port Richmond club in the Philadelphia League. Bill Smith is doubly busy these days, playing for General Electric in the Industrial League in Philadelphia, and with Ardmore in the Main Line League.

Teammates Oppose One Another

Frank O'Neill and Joe Mahalic are both playing along the "Line." In this case they are opposing one another; the former playing for Brookline, and the latter for Narberth in the Main Line League. Joe is also playing for Bartram in the South Philadelphia League.

The U. S. Navy has in its service, Ted Bickey. Joe Yednock, spectacular third sacker, and Captain of the '42 baseball team is now working in Autocar in Ardmore. Shortstop, Joe Coffee is over in Sun Shipyard doing his part. Jim Traitz is at Temple Medical School.

Summer 'Mural Program Includes Swimming, Tennis

During the present summer term, an extensive swimming and tennis program will operate at Villanova. Fr. McKee, Moderator of Intramural Athletics, said that both these sports, in addition to the present Softball League, will make up the schedule until September. The swimming contests will be a real challenge to the Dayhops who appear very powerful at present, due to the many non-residents registered during the summer. Both these sports will bring about strong and spirited competition among the students. The schedules have not been completely assembled as yet, but will be released in a week or two.

Swimming and tennis are generally the two most popular of summer sports and there is no reason why the two added features of the Intramural program will not be met with great approval by the student body. The present accelerated Freshmen class should also offer keen competition for the upperclassmen in the two newly arranged programs. Under the able guidance of Fr. McKee, both swimming and tennis should easily become as popular as the present softball league.

It's Labor's Choice

THE eloquent eyebrows of John L. Lewis, king of the United Mine Workers, must have glowered even more than usual at the charge made in the House recently by a Democratic Congressman.

"The most sinister figure in the nation," was the scorching label tagged on labor's former wonder-boy.

This condemnation marks the climax of a chain of Lewis-made blunders, highlighted by his jealous row with Philip Murray, C. I. O. president, and his efforts to frustrate the proposed merger of the C. I. O. with the American Federation of Labor.

It also marks the fall of a man who once enjoyed the confidence of millions of working men and women, and whose career promised to match that of the great Samuel Gompers. But this was not to be.

Drunk with power, insanely jealous of any who threatened to overshadow him, the victim of a tragic political faux pas during the Willkie-Roosevelt campaign, the man now goes the way of all who violate public duty and responsibility.

Lewis is learning the painful lesson that no man is bigger than organized labor, bigger than our government, nor bigger than the American public.

The irony of it is that the stigma of betrayal is borne, not by Lewis, but by the rank and file of labor. Public opinion places full responsibility for the acts of labor on the shoulders of every workman. This is certainly as it should be.

Today organized labor faces a crisis paralleling that which confronted the employers and big businessmen of a decade ago. Can we hold and honor the trust placed in us by the general public? Can we recognize our duties as well as our privileges? Can we regulate ourselves?

These are the questions every worker must answer and act upon — the same questions which big business and laissez faire addicts refused to answer in the not too distant past.

Labor unions must recover the reins of self-government which they have carelessly bestowed on unscrupulous leaders.

Failure on the part of the unions to mend these errors will cause the labor front to meet with the same fate which befell the money-mad prophets who made free enterprise mean unbridled, cutthroat competition.

Labor's destiny will be one of two things: self-regulation through internal reform, or slow strangulation by the federal government.

The choice is labor's—the opportunity now!

'A Necessary Step

THE overly-debated lowering of the draft age to eighteen has been made a part of the Selective Service Act. The arguments pro and con the movement will be forgotten for a while and all the time we formerly gave over to raving will be occupied by serious thoughts on how we can best observe the law.

Army officials are not averse to telling us why young men make better soldiers than older men. They say that the young man has the ability to adapt himself physically and psychologically to the situation of the moment; the young man has the endurance and stamina, so necessary in warfare.

The lowering of the draft age, the average age of our standing army, is a good thing for the army and for the country no matter what our personal theories may be.

—T. P. McF.

July 4, 1942

IN the midst of Valley Forge's blackest moments there appeared a pamphlet beginning with the words, "These are the times that try men's souls." Whether because of Paine's words or not, from that time on American fortunes of war became the better.

Our position in the present war is, of course, a far cry from the dreary condition in which the Continetal soldiers found themselves. But we very definitely are not winning the war just now.

Daily the number of merchant ship sinkings increases. When the Navy began its convoying in the Atlantic, submarine activity slackened there only to be renewed with increased vigor in the Caribbean and Gulf areas. The loss of Libya, the threat to Egypt and its key ports, and German advances in Russia add up to a serious blow to Allied hopes.

These are indeed times that try men's souls—and faith, and courage. But in a few days we shall celebrate the anniversary of a day when men with great souls, with faith in their ideals and courage in their hearts declared the rights of free men to achieve their ideals in a decent community, under their own government. On this Fourth of July let us take added resolve and determination from their example.

—T. F. D.

Let's Have Vaudeville

FOR the past few weeks there has been a definite movement to bring vaudeville back to the American theatre. If it recovers from its decadent stage it will be one of the best things, in our opinion, that has ever happened to this country.

Ever since the decline of good, clean vaudeville shows, the country has of necessity relied on the motion pictures as a source of entertainment. Of course there have been many good pictures, we admit that, but the lack of competition, together with the apparent lack of real talent, has resulted in the distribution of pictures unfit for the public, morally and otherwise. So unfit that at times they have been classified as "immorally funny."

We hope Hollywood has a moral competitor. We know it will have talent. Only on the stage is there some assurance of talent, as "hams" usually receive their vegetable rations from a disgusted audience.

Even if it doesn't return to its former height, we believe that it will arouse Hollywood to the fact that we would much rather see honest talent than some of the so-called entertainment which has left an undesirable aroma in the motion picture houses of the nation.

Ideas And Their Vocal Expression

By FR. COFFEE

TODAY, youth is fast becoming as familiar with the mechanical workings of a dive bomber, a U-boat, or a heavy steel-plated tank as it was yesterday with the more or less disagreeable task of changing a flat on the family car. Youth's proficiency in the skillful use of war implements is the toast of crafty statesmen, military strategists, and propagandizing Literateurs.

Gray-haired and portly elders praise quite lavishly youth's steady hands, broad shoulders, and tireless energy. Indeed, the mature who have bungled the universe into the present conflict, now find themselves depending upon the immature to defend a house built on the sands of unbridled greed and unhealthy ambitions.

Something Deeper

In spite of the darkness of the hour, however, and youth's willingness to work, to fight, and to die, the elders of the world must not forget that beneath those bodies perspiring so profusely there beat hearts nurturing noble aspirations, lofty ideals, and pleasant dreams. Even though today worldly leaders may bid youth: "Go, and he goes . . . Come, and he comes" there will dawn a time when youth will no longer remain inarticulate.

That time is no too far distant and that time will be the time for you, as a distinct unit in the growing ranks of Catholic college men of this nation, to speak out, clearly and courageously, principles of right living, principles healthy to the core.

A Tomorrow Coming

Today the world is deaf to youth's words while it applauds its deeds. Tomorrow, however, when the world's palate will be sickened with the gore of young heroes it will anxiously listen to men with worth-while ideas. History shows that after bloody holocausts have been foolishly sacrificed to gods of clay, peoples beseech the heaven to raise up prophets of the truth.

You, the young men of Villanova, will be among those knowing the truth, you will be among those expected to speak the truth—but are you now the young preparing to express the true philosophy of life when the proper time arrives? This is a fair question. This is a serious question. This is a tremendously important question for you personally, for the nation collectively, for civilization universally, for Christianity religiously.

Ideas and Their Expression

The day on which the sword of war is sheathed, innumerable screeching voices will fill the air with innumerable inane theories [illegible] the what, why, where, and how of life. On that day your minds, now being formed into arsenals of truth, will blast through the fallacy of those theories of life opposed to the supernatural theory of life recognizing that all things and all creatures are subject to the rule of a provident God.

Yet if your mind alone is prepared and your power to give expression to lasting truths is utterly deficient, then you, the future leaders in the business and professional life of our nation, will have failed the men and women less fortunate than you, blessed with the opportunity of a college education.

Effective Speech

One way and a most effective way of expressing the truth is through the power of speech. Speech! From the days of Plato and Aristotle among the Greeks to Cicero and Quintillian among the Romans down to the present moment, intelligent persons have recognized that leadership among men is conceded to him who speaks forcefully, clearly, and sincerely. A person of upright character cannot find a more effective way of spreading abroad an idea, a message, a philosophy of life than through the spoken word.

The greatest message the world ever heard was the message of Salvation spoken from the Cross. Yet this message traveled from the mount of Calvary to the seven hills of Rome by the spoken word. Christ never commanded His apostles to write books but He did command them to preach. Over half a century after the Ascension, the first Evangelist, St. Matthew, wrote he first life story of Him who is the Way, the Truth, the Life. Up until that time thousands upon thousands of souls embraced the Christian way of life hearing of this way solely from the preachings of zealous speakers.

You, the members of a Catholic college, are the heirs of a glorious heritage. To you have been bequeathed the same truths that turned a poison Rome into the center of Christianity. You not only know these truths but you live up to them as well as you can. Everything opposed to these truths you oppose, at least mentally.

You have no sympathy with Nazism, you fathom the weaknesses of Communism, you despise the spinelessness of naturalism and indifferentism. Your entire being testifies to the undeniable fact that Christianity alone is true with the truth of God. Yet how many opportunities to inform less enlightened minds than yours will you allow to pass unchallenged, if you are not able to stand on your two feet and speak out clearly, simply, and effectively the truth and faith that is in you.

If you find that you are unskilled and awkward in this important business of expressing your ideas orally it is worthy of your deepest consideration. You should and can very easily do something to remedy your deficiency.

Q. Do the calendar years start at the time of enrollment in school or at the time of enlistment in the V-1 Program?

A. The term "two calendar years" as used in the regulations for the V-1 Program start the day the student enters his freshman year in the college.

Q. What will the "classification examination" given in March each year include?

A. The examination will have three parts including (a) a verbal type test of the general ability (b) an examination in mathematics and (c) an examination in physics.

Q. Can next years' seniors enlist in Class V-7?

A. Until the V-1 program has been in operation long enough to furnish sufficient men for the V-7 plan, direct enlistments in V-7 will be accepted as the needs of the Navy dictate. Inquiry concerning V-7 should be made to the nearest office of the Officer Procurement.

Q. When do the V-1 men indicate whether they will try for V-5 or V-7?

A. Each V-1 enlistee will be asked to indicate his choice of V-5 or V-7 at the time of enlistment; however, this choice will not be binding.

Q. What will be the status of premedical and predental students under the V-1 program?

A. Premedical students may enlist in the V-1 program, and take the prescribed V-1 course. After the classification examination, a student, provided he qualifies, will be classed V-7 and permitted to continue his premedical course until he receives his degree. At the completion of his premedical course, if he submits evidence to the Bureau of Naval Personnel that he has been accepted as a medical student in an accredited medical college, he will be discharged from Class V-7 and reclassified H-V(P) and permitted to continue his medical education. However, if at that time he is not accepted in a medical college, he will naturally continue with his V-7 Reserve Midshipman Training.

Any questions concerning the Navy V-1 program should be addressed to the VILLANOVAN, where they will be forwarded to the proper authorities. Answers to these questions will appear in a subsequent issue.

Smith Pleased With Progress In Physical Training

Students Are Getting Into Condition Quickly; Obstacle Course, Near Completion, Is Popular With All

Villanova's recently organized physical fitness program, designed to condition students for war service, is now running in full capacity. Coaches Smith, McNally, and Jacobs, in charge of the daily outdoor classes, are quite pleased with the progress made in the past two weeks, and seem quite confident that their program will rank with the best in the country. Mr. Severance, in charge of the evening classes, which are held for those who do not have time, or who are physically unfit for the more strenuous outdoor sessions, also announces with pleasure, the advances made by the group.

Obstacle Course Is Featured

The main feature of the outdoor classes, an obstacle course, built just inside the quarter-mile track in the stadium, seems to be a backbreaker for many of the students. Although only half of the course is fully completed, it has made many of the fellows realize how sadly out-of-shape they are at present. Probably the toughest obstacle offered so far, is the seven and one half foot wall which everyone must, (at least attempt to) scale every day. Many have been unable to get over the wall as yet, but the majority have learned the knack of surpassing this toughest obstacle.

Going Off The Ramp

Another phase of the course, which has already caused many of the students to land knee-deep in water, is the jump over twelve feet of water from a ten-foot ramp. A pile of sawdust has been placed on the far side of the water for those who make the leap, but those who are unsuccessful find themselves in the water hole, constructed for just that purpose. After one soaking however, a fellow has an added incentive to get over the water, with the result that the number of casualties on Friday were not as great as those on Monday.

Time Trials Held

It is "Clipper's" plan to take time trials of a few of his charges everyday, and in this way afford the students another opportunity for competition, besides that already offered in baseball, basketball, football, tug of war, etc. Although only a few have been timed up to this point, the best performance turned in so far has been that of Charley Rini, a freshman, who toured the semi-completed course in the remarkable time of 36.6 seconds. Only three or four of the fellows timed so far, have succeeded in touring the course in less than forty seconds. The outstanding feature of Rini's performance was his hurdling of the five-foot rail which is another of the many obstacles, and which everyone else gets over with the help of his hands.

Although those who take their exercise in the evening do not have an obstacle course as a part of their physical fitness curriculum, they are kept mighty busy by basketball coach Al Severance. They have calisthenics, basketball, volleyball, and various other indoor games as their form of recreation, and each class is ended with a refreshing dip in the swimming pool.

Coach "Clipper" Smith, who, with his aids, McNally, Smith, and Jacobs, is doing his utmost to make the Physical Fitness program a success.

SPORTORIAL

By BILL WALSH, Sports Editor

By BILL WALSH

For quite some time Villanova has been extremely active in Intramural Athletics. They have offered the student body various forms of activity in which to display their athletic prowess. Such a small percentage of the average college students are capable of playing varsity sports and engaging in intercollegiate competition, that a well-founded program consisting of intramural sports is vital and necessary to every college's curriculum.

Under the leadership of Fathers McKee and Dunne, Villanova has more than succeeded in doing this, as the past few years have shown. Probably the most popular sport in the past has been basketball. The league, consisting of six teams, begins in October and ends in March, thus affording the students six months of the court game, with the exception, of course, of the time alloted for the Christmas vacation every year.

Next in importance, and undoubtedly so in popularity during the spring of every year, has been the baseball league. This league is only made up of four teams, however, as the Dayhops (C & F and Mendel), are not able to play on Sundays, the day on which most games take place. These contests hold the intramural spotlight right up until the week before the final exams, at which time the intramural program is concluded until the following October.

This year, however, in view of the accelerated program, the intramural program had to continue right through the summer. Inasmuch as tennis would be the only intercollegiate sport during the summer months, Fathers McKee and Dunne were faced with the problem of providing enough activity for the students who were taking advantage of the summer semester. This was not an easy task for the respective Moderators as they didn't know just how many students to plan for during the summer. On top of that, the Nuns would be living in Austin and Alumni Halls, and thus two teams would be eliminated from the competition; that is, if the same rules were followed as during the regular school year.

Something new was tried in the summer program, however, in view of the scarcity of teams, with four Captains being chosen by the Moderators and these same Captains being permitted to select their teams of ten men. These groups were to participate in a softball league.

Yes, after much consideration, softball was chosen as the main intramural sport of the summer, and a good choice it was. Four games are to be played by each team each week, provided, of course, that the weather man doesn't interfere. These contests take place from Monday to Thursday evening inclusive, and they begin immediately after chapel. This enables the students to enjoy some form of entertainment during the evenings when daylight makes studying quite boresome.

So far the league has been a huge success and seems to be headed for greater heights. An added attraction was supplied when the four captains chosen were to name their teams after the respective halls, regardless of where they themselves lived, so that the league would run with the same personnel as during the spring.

Not too much credit can be given to the four Captains for their spirit and cooperation in making the league a success. Joe Barry's Fedigan aggregation is presently leading the league with a record of five and one for an .833 percentage. In second place is Stan Kazior's team, representing Austin Hall, and which has won four and lost two for .667. Alumni, captained by Tony "Peppy" Paruta, is next with three and three for .500. Probably no other player has done as much to add zip and interest to the contests than has Paruta. Although his team is in third place, he is easily the most outstanding player on the field with his noisy antics.

Although not a participant in the actual league competition, the faculty has also formed a team which engages the leading student team on Friday of each week. The first of these encounters was staged a week ago last Friday when the Austin team captained by Stan Kazior met the untried faculty aggregation. Austin, by virtue of a toss of a coin, had been chosen as the first opponent of the faculty although the Alumni and Fedigan squads were also tied for first place.

Inexperienced and out of practice as they might have been, the faculty staged a surprise 10-7 victory over the Austin team. Their hitting power was tremendous, especially that of Fathers Coffey, McCarthy and Sullivan, the three outfielders of the team composed solely of priests. Father Coffey hit a home run and also batted in four runs. Father Donellon was the winning hurler for the faculty.

Fedigan Leads Intramural Softball League With Five And One Record

Barry's Team Wins Three Straight to Assume Undisputed Lead, After Second Week of Competition, Austin Drops to Second; Alumni to Third

By JACK KOVAL

Pacing the league at the termination of last week's schedule were Joe Barry's Fediganites, proudly possessing a record of five wins against one defeat. Their only loss was suffered at the hands of Austin Hall, which gave them a 7-2 *trimming.

In second place were Stan Kazior's Firemen with a record four and two. Next in line, and right on the heels of Austin were the spunky Alumnites, managed by "Peppy" Paruta. They had an even number of three victories and three defeats.

Freshmen In Cellar

Occupying the cellar position in the league are the new arrivals here at Villanova — the Mendel freshmen. The fact that the frosh are new to their competent coach, Father Kenme, and that it has taken him a little time to properly detect the individual potentialities of his players is probably the reason why the frosh got off to such a bad start. However, now that things are in full swing and the Mendelites have been placed in their most advantageous positions, results are being obtained, as could be observed in last week's games when the frosh offered a little more competition to their older and more experienced foes.

On Monday, the day on which the second round of games was to be played, the weatherman stepped in and thoroughly inundated the playing field, thus bringing about a nullification of the contests for that day. However, play was resumed the following day with Alumni tangling with Fedigan and Austin meeting Mendel.

Fedigan Trounces Alumni

In the former contest the Fediganites emerged victorious by the score of 7-4. Going into the third frame, both teams were tied up at one apiece. But Fedigan untangled the score in their half of the third with a four run splurge. Another tally in the fourth and one in the sixth brought their score to seven, enough to win the ball game.

Alumni had one big inning in the fifth when they scored three runs to come within two runs of their opponents. Further attempts by the Alumnites to score were in vain, as Fedigan kept them scoreless for the final innings of the game.

The next day Alumni and Fedigan were respective winners over tough Mendel and Austin aggregations. Though they played comparatively better ball than during the previous week, the freshmen squad came out on the short end of a 12-8 score. Mendel sprang off to an early 3-1 lead in the first inning, but the Alumnites displayed such a sparking offense, an offense that brought results in every inning of the game, that the frosh had to submit to their superiority.

The other game on Wednesday was the very important Austin-Fedigan contest. On that day both teams were deadlocked for first place with a record of three wins and one loss apiece. However, the tie was dissolved by Fedigan when they defeated Kazior's tough squad to the tune of 6-3, thus taking first place.

Suffering a tough 5-4 defeat on Thursday at the hands of Austin was Alumni Hall. An early 3-0 Austin lead didn't tear down any of the spirit of the Green Wave, for they pushed one run across in the second and another in the third to slash the three-run lead down to one. However, Austin came back with one in the fourth to make it 4-2. Two more runs by Alumni in the sixth put the game into a 4-4 tie, but then the Austinites scored another run in the last frame to annex the game.

Members Of '42 Nine Are Active During Summer

It seems that the hunger for activity, in an athletic way, is never appeased in those who participate in college varsity sports. At least this is true with regard to Villanova athletes. The majority can not resort to an inactive life. Their surging blood encourages them to strive for competitive sportir activities.

When college terminates at the last semester of the ordinary school year, a time when the seashore and vacation time calls, these same fellows are busy at work and play.

Two on Shamrocks

Joe Lord, who played second base for Doc Jacobs during the past spring, is now performing around the keystone sack for the Norristown A. C. Joe Koproski, the varsity center-fielder during the recently completed baseball season, spent a few weeks in Philadelphia participating in the national pastime, then returned to Stamford, Conn., to continue his favorite sport. Jim Lattanza, another spectacular out-fielder is with the 48th Ward "Shamrocks" in the South Philadelphia League. One of Jim's cohorts on the Shamrocks is a former teammate, Bill Woods.

It would be difficult to forget "Major" McDonnell; in fact it would be impossible. "Major" is now pitching with the Port Richmond club in the Philadelphia League. Bill Smith is doubly busy these days, playing for General Electric in the Industrial League in Philadelphia, and with Ardmore in the Main Line League.

Teammates Oppose One Another

Frank O'Neill and Joe Mahalic are both playing along the "Line." In this case they are opposing one another; the former playing for Brookline, and the latter for Narberth in the Main Line League. Joe is also playing for Bartram in the South Philadelphia League.

The U. S. Navy has in its service, Ted Bickey. Joe Yednock, spectacular third sacker, and Captain of the '42 baseball team is now working in Autocar in Ardmore. Shortstop, Joe Coffee is over in Sun Shipyard doing his part. Jim Traitz is at Temple Medical School.

Summer 'Mural Program Includes Swimming, Tennis

During the present summer term, an extensive swimming and tennis program will operate at Villanova. Fr. McKee, Moderator of Intramural Athletics, said that both these sports, in addition to the present Softball League, will make up the schedule until September. The swimming contests will be a real challenge to the Dayhops who appear very powerful at present, due to the many non-residents registered during the summer. Both these sports will bring about strong and spirited competition among the students. The schedules have not been completely assembled as yet, but will be released in a week or two.

Swimming and tennis are generally the two most popular of summer sports and there is no reason why the two added features of the Intramural program will not be met with great approval by the student body. The present accelerated Freshmen class should also offer keen competition for the upperclassmen in the two newly arranged programs. Under the able guidance of Fr. McKee, both swimming and tennis should easily become as popular as the present softball league.

Meet The Boys:

Music And Medicine Chief Appeals of Angelo Macchia, L. K. D.'s Prexy

By HARRY BINDER

At 7:00 A. M. on February 7, 1921, a bundle was delivered to Camillo and Mary Macchia in Ardmore, Pa., with a tag attached. On the tag was the name Angelo. Angelo Macchia, the lad we are introducing this week, was born just "down the line" in Ardmore, but subsequently resided in Wayne until he reached the age of eight years. Then we find him living in Trenton until he came to Villanova three years ago.

"Ange," as he is called by his associates, went to Hamilton High School in Trenton from 1936 to 1939. When he graduated he decided that he would like to become a doctor, and in the following September, we find him matriculating at Villanova College, taking the Pre-Med course in the Science School.

Going Rather Tough

All did not go too easy with Angelo that first year, however. As he relates, he found the going quite tough, and that college was a big jump from Hamilton high. But Ange quickly regained his stride, kept in there plugging, and when June rolled around, he found a grand total of no "F's" and no "E's" on the final report card.

He saw that his plugging was not in vain, so that year he came to summer school with the intention of trying to get enough credits to be graduated in three years. And since then he has been with us every summer session.

Honor Man Finally

All this time Angelo was improving with rapid strides and as proof of that fact we find his name ranking high on the science school's honor roll for this last semester.

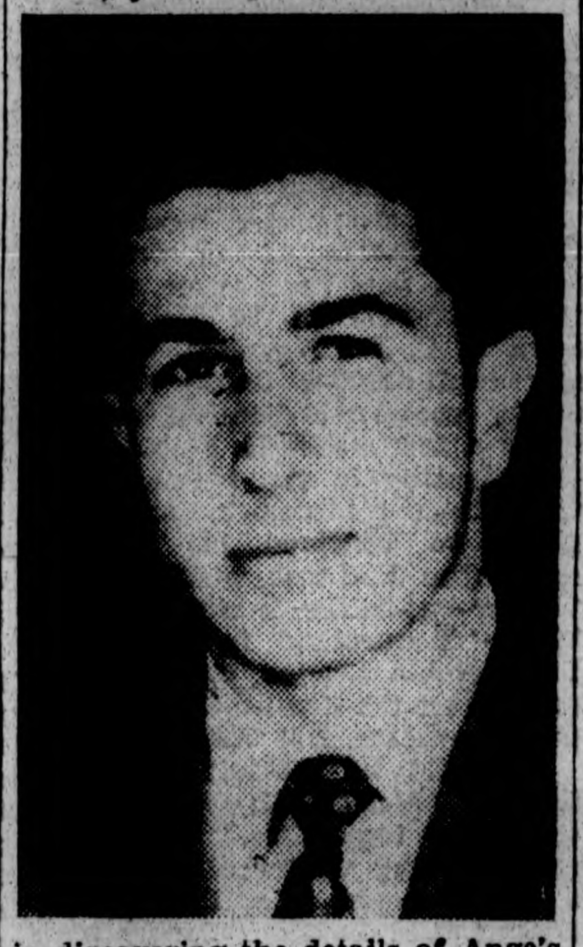
Getting back into the swing of things after his freshman year, he joined the L. K. D., the science school fraternity, the Science Seminar, and participated in practically every intramural sport on the campus. "Ange" played clarinet in both the marching band and the symphonic orchestra in his freshman year and every year since.

As proof of his popularity and good standing with his fellow students, last year the brothers of Lambda Kappa Delta elected Ange as president of the fraternity.

Likes Surgery

Not being draft conscious, (i. e., he is practically draft exempt as most pre-med students are) Ange has high hopes of entering Pennsylvania Medical School when he graduates. When asked if he intended to specialize in any branch of the medical profession, Ange said he was not sure, but he thought he liked surgery best, and that the next few years in medical school would help him to make his final decision. Anatomy and embryology have been his favorite subjects.

Getting from the serious to the social, your reporter had difficulty in discovering the details of Ange's love life. He merely and nonchalantly stated: "Right now, I'm playing the field." However, we did find out that he likes dancing very much; so much so, in fact, that it is his main consumer of time (next to study, of course).



Ange thinks that Glenn Miller is just about tops in both sweet and swing and Mr. Miller is the one who "sends" him when he goes about "consuming his time."

This brings us up to the present in the life of Angelo Macchia, and we wish the best of luck to a gentleman, a scholar, and a true Villanovan. Good luck, Ange.

Speech

nor throw. As a player he was an out and out flop. The youngster certainly possessed more than sufficient knowledge about football and was amply equipped to enter into the fray. He was a misfit, nevertheless, since he lacked playing technique.

Don't Be "Unaccustomed"

Some day you may feel similar to the unfortunate boy who has everything else for a game of football but is deficient in the proper muscular coordination necessary in playing the game. This sickening feeling will be yours the day you find yourself present in a business or social gathering listening to some one uttering a fallacious statement while you must remain silent for no other reason than this—your power of expression, your speaking technique, your ability to convince an audience of the truth is miserably weak!

While you are here at college, then, be very anxious to seize all opportunities of standing on your feet and thinking while a sea of faces moves restlessly before your vision. Constantly appearing before an audience is the secret in your aim to acquire poise and effectiveness in oral expression.

Democracy Calls, Too

Finally there is much spoken and written these days about the blessing of the democratic form of government. Here is a point to bear in mind: a democracy will aways be that much stronger in proportion to the greater number of men living in that democracy capable of expressing sound ideas with the apt technique of competent speakers.

Thus democracy, also, along with Christianity looks to you, the college men of America, to keep alive its noble ideals by pleading with you to re-enkindle a dying enthusiasm for the art of sincere and effective public expression. Become, therefore, day by day, more and more speech-conscious.

four days to travel from California to North Carolina. To shorten the trip and give him a few days to renew acquaintances, he flew in from the coast in 18 hours, leaving him three days for himself.

About the war itself, he claimed "you don't have time to think about the war as it is in the newspapers. All you hear is guns, artillery, mechanization, etc. It's strange, but the war seems far away while the army is made a part of you. The only news of the outside we hear, besides letters from home, is the regular news broadcast during breakfast and who would listen to war news when there's food before them?"

Doyle Enlists

Another VILLANOVAN chief entered the services of Uncle Sam last week when Thomas H. Doyle, Jr., editor of last year's publication, enlisted in the Army Saturday. Doyle was a graduate of the School of Commerce and Finance.

Navy Man Speaks

LT. H. E. MILLIKEN

Navy Plans

Requirements and procedure of the V-1, V-5, and V-7 Naval Reserve Programs were explained to thirty underclassmen by Lt. (s. g.) H. E. Milliken, Assistant Recruiting Inspector, last Friday after noon.

Lt. Milliken, who is stationed in New York, was accompanied by Warrant Officer H. F. Gilmore, U. S. N. To the freshmen, sophomores and juniors attending the session, he explained the purpose of the Reserves as twofold: to equip the Navy with better trained and better qualified officers and to enable college students to complete their education.

Following a description of the courses together with a summary of the requirements, Lt. Milliken answered questions put to him concerning the Naval Programs.

Letters To The Editor

The following is an excerpt from a letter received from Ensign Thomas A. Shallow, U. S. N. R. Ensign Shallow, a graduate of the class of 1942, is now stationed at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

June 20, 1942

"Dear Tom:

". . . The boys in our class come from all parts of the country; compared to the distance most of them have come, I am a local boy.

"It has been a lot of fun so far. Boston welcomes service men with open arms. Last night we attended Fred Waring's broadcast — and it was really good.

"After his real broadcast he put on a show that lasted more than an hour. Afterwards we met him in the bar and met Jane Wilson, the soprano, in the hotel lobby. But Patsy Garrett wouldn't come down from her room, darn it.

"There is always something doing so there isn't any chance to get homesick. There's one thing, though; after looking around Tech, I still think V. C. is a good school. The students up here go around dressed in anything, and as for being punchy they have the Villanova engineers beat a mile. (Ed. note. Ensign Shallow was a mechanical engineering student here).

Sincerely,
Tom."

Philly Rates High In Hospitality With Hoosier Sailor Based There

By ROBERT T. CANFIELD

To Naval Headquarters he is just Serial Number 6262520, but to Villanova and all his friends he is Jack Croteau, U. S. N.

An apprentice pharmacist's mate stationed at the Philadelphia Naval Hospital, Jack was a weekend visitor to the campus recently. With the usual affability of the American sailor, Jack needed little or no persuasion to narrate a few of his impressions of "life as a gob."

A veteran of six months service, Croteau proved eager to confirm reports that "The Navy's the best outfit in the world" and quickly launched into a colorful description of his "boot training" at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station.

Wear Canvas Boots

In answer to the puzzled expression on your reporter's face, Jack explained that "boot training" has no reference to violent physical treatment (such as that doled out by Villanova's Physical Training Program) but receives its name from the fact that raw naval recruits in training are the only sailors to wear brown canvas "boots."

In February, two months after Pearl Harbor, Jack found himself swinging along with a few hundred other landlubbers toward the guarded gates of the G.L.N.T.S. Swept through the now familiar lines of waiting men with usual Naval efficiency, Jack received his quota of shots in the arm, an issue of Navy "blues" and "whites" and was assigned to a barracks—all before the day was out. And, as Jack says, "Here's where the fun started. A typical day began at 5:30 A. M. policing your barracks for inspection, breakfast, and then drilling and marching until only your boots held you up."

Assigned to School

Graduating from the small surfboats and dories to the larger and swifter cutters and cruisers, Jack completed his five and a half weeks of indoctrination and was assigned to the Hospital Corps School for a six weeks course leading to apprentice pharmacist mate's rating.

But Jack was anxious to add that, "Life at the station was not all work and study. Next to payday and mealtime, liberty, the sailor's holiday, is the most popular event of all."

Chicago and Milwaukee, according to him, are "the best liberty cities in the country." Hearing this, your reporter began to wonder whether a sailor had anything to do with naming Philadelphia "The Cradle of Liberty."

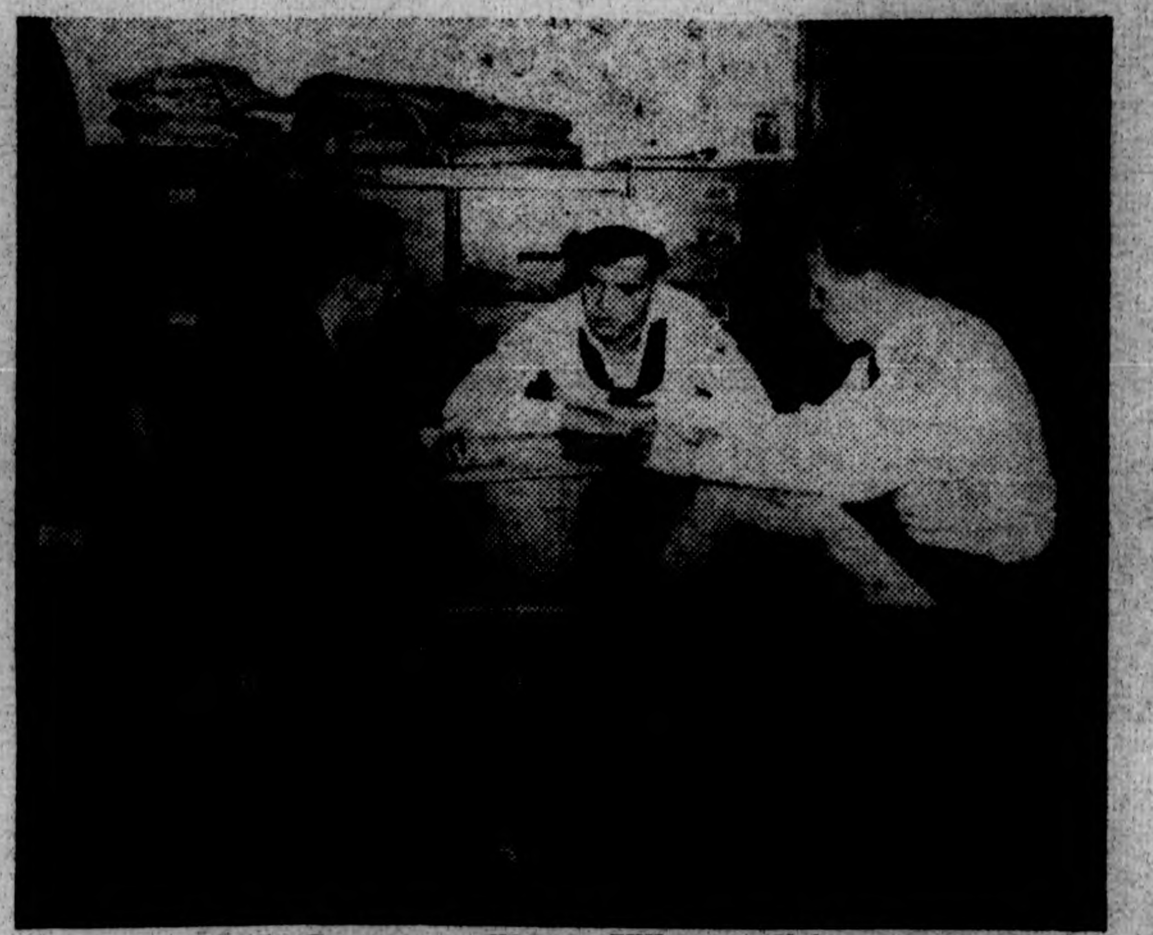
Philly Close Third

After giving a canteen on Broad Street the once over, however, Jack conceded that Philadelphia runs a close third. He is still puzzled over the fact that "a new crew of hostesses are on hand every night."

The Navy places a high value on practical experience, so, upon graduating from the Corps School, Jack was transferred and reported for orders at the Philadelphia Naval Hospital a week ago.

He readily agrees that Philadelphia is the City of Brotherly Love but on his first night in our fair city fate stepped in and dealt him a hard blow.

Wearied by the long train trip from Chicago, Jack looked forward anxiously to "hitting the hammock for a while." But no sooner had he stretched his cramped legs when an emergency call was relayed from the hospital's pneumonia ward and Jack spent the rest of the night watching over a patient in an oxygen tent.



Jack Croteau spellbinds Villanova listeners.

Duties are Varied

"My duties at the hospital are varied if nothing else," Jack admits. His work includes standing watch, administering injections, aiding in the rehabilitation of patients, moving bed-fast convalescents, and all the other details of the modern hospital which are too strenuous for the naval nurses who act as supervisors in each of the wards.

While his present work involves mostly the care of post-operative and convalescent patients, Jack is anxiously looking forward to a sea-going assignment where, "Emergency cases tend to liven up the routine, especially during fleet action when there is never a dull moment."

He still has high hopes that the Navy will not go back on its promise traditionally made to all recruits, "Join the Navy and see the world." But Jack says, "Right now the Navy has a bigger job on its hands than a sightseeing tour."

A native of the Hoosier State, Jack abandoned his studies at the University of Indiane after a year, to enlist last February.

College Students To Obtain Loans Under New Plan

Congressional Act Releases $5,000,000 to Aid Those Enrolled in Certain Courses to Complete Education

In the third wartime letter issued by the president's office within a week, Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., disclosed plans formulated under a recent act of Congress whereby $5,000,000 has been appropriated to the Federal Security Agency to make certain loan provisions to students who meet the requirements of the loan plan.

Although full details of the plan have not as yet been revealed by the government officials, Fr. Stanford included in the letter all information available.

Under the act, loan provisions may be made for the students who are "participating in accelerated programs in degree-granting colleges and universities in Engineering, Physics, Chemistry, Medicine (included Veterinary), Dentistry and Pharmacy, whose technical or professional education can be completed within two years."

Agree in Writing

At Villanova these loans will be made to students who meet the following requirements: They must be enrolled in engineering, physics or chemistry courses and must be able to complete their professional or technical education within two years; they must be in need of assistance; they must now maintain and continue to maintain satisfactory standards of scholarship; they must agree in writing to participate, until otherwise directed by the Chairman of the War Manpower Commission, in accelerated programs of study in engineering, physics, or chemistry and further agree in writing to engage for the duration of the war in which the United States is now engaged, in such employment or service as may be assigned by officers or agencies designated by the Chairman of the War Manpower Commission.

Limit on Amount of Loan

The letter also disclosed that the amount of the loan can not exceed tuition and fees plus $25.00 per month and in total, not exceed $500.000 to any one student during any twelve-month period.

Evidence of the loans will be notes executed by the student payable to the Treasurer of the United States which bear an interest rate of 2.5% per year.

Cancellation of such a plan is provided if a student, before completing his course, is ordered into military service during the present wars under the Selective Training and Service Act of 1940 or if he suffers permanent disability or death.

In order that the college might obtain an estimate of the amount required by Villanova students, Fr. Stanford has included in the letter a blank to be filled out after the careful reading of the conditions of the plan and returned to his office. The president emphasized "careful" reading of the provisions of the plan by the student before making reply. Copies of the letter may be secured in the Registrar's Office, 118 Mendel Hall.

Offer Mass Thursday For Engineering Grad

A first anniversary Mass for the soul of Rudolph E. Lopez, a member of the Class of 1934, will be celebrated in the College Chapel on Thursday at 7 A. M., Rev. Edwin T. Grimes, O. S. A., chaplain, announced last week.

Lopez met his death last year while engaged in a construction project for a local engineering company.

A graduate of the School of Engineering, Lopez received a degree in civil engineering. While at college he was a four-year member of Phi Kappa Pi, engineering fraternity, and the American Society of Civil Engineers. He also served four years as a member of the marching band.

Fathers O'Donnell And McCarron To Serve Navy, Army As Chaplains

By WARD C. GUNCHEON

Two more priests have been added to the number of Villanova priests now serving as chaplains in the United States armed forces. Rev. Michael J. O'Donnell, O. S. A., and Rev. Charles J. McCarron, O. S. A., are now in preparation for service in the Navy and Army forces.

Upon his appointment and reception into the Navy, Fr. O'Donnell was commissioned a first lieutenant. At the present time he is at the training station at Norfolk, Va., for the six weeks training course. Following its completion he will be assigned to active duty.

Fr. McCarron left this morning to begin service under his recently obtained commission of first lieutenant in the Army. He has been ordered to the port of embarkation, New Orleans, La. Although none was mentioned in his orders, Fr. McCarron will be probably assigned to some Army camp.

Headed Order Guild

Replacing Rev. Francis X. N. McGuire, O. S. A., as moderator of the C. & F. intramural activities when the latter was named vice-president, Fr. O'Donnell directed their participation until the close of the last term. He was graduated from Villanova in 1927 with an A. B. degree. For three years following his graduation he studied at Catholic U. in Washington, receiving his M. A. degree in 1931.

At Villanova he was an associate professor in English in the college division although he resided in St. Mary's Hall, the residence of the seminary instructors. Fr. O'Donnell also headed the Augustinian Guild whose purpose it is to obtain funds for the education of seminary students.

Member of Mission Band

Fr. McCarron has been a member of the mission band of the Augustinian Order for the past eleven years. He has conducted within the past five years two of the annual mid-year retreats for college students. Following his graduation from Villanova, Fr. McCarron was assigned to parish duty at St. Claire's parish, Grosse Point, Mich. Subsequently he was transferred to the mission band. He was a member of the Villanova community when he received orders to report for chaplain service in the Army.

Two other graduates of Villanova and members of the Augustinian order now in the service are Rev. Paul Potter, O. S. A., and Rev. Burchert Murray, O. S. A.

Army Reserve Program Announced By President

Fr. Stanford States Enlistment Opportunities in Fourth Wartime Letter; Eligible Students to Remain in College at Least Two Years

By THOMAS L. GOWEN

Opportunities for students to enlist in pre-induction training in colleges and universities under the provisions of the Army Enlisted Reserve plan were announced last week by Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, in his fourth wartime letter to parents and students, dated July 3. The plan was first announced to non-resident students on July 1 by Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O. S. A., assistant to the president.

Fr. Stanford assisted the War Department in the formulation of the program last April when he went to Washington at the request of Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War, to act as an advisory consultant. He also aided the Navy Department in the preparation of the Navy V-1 program.

Stay In College

Students who enlist under the Army program will be removed from the jurisdiction of Selective Service, will be allowed to complete at least two calendar years of their college education, and will be permitted to complete their course if they pass the qualifying examination.

The examination, to be given to students at the end of two calendar years of college will include tests in English, mathematics, aptitude, and a physical science. Those who pass these tests will be allowed to complete their education.

Upon completion of his studies, the candidate will be sent to an induction center as a selectee. There he will receive a basic training course designed to show his proficiency and ability in military science. Those with satisfactory ratings will be sent to Officers' Training School when the basic training is finished.

May Choose Branch

It is planned by the Army to allow candidates to express a preference for the branch of service desired. However, expressions of preference will be secondary to the needs of the Army at the time.

As of June 27 the following quotas have been assigned to Villanova for enlistment of students in the Enlisted Reserve Corps: freshmen, 124; sophomores, 113; juniors, 83; seniors, 75; and special students, 95.

College authorities have been authorized to begin at once the selection of students who have reached the age of eighteen. The names of those qualifying will be sent to the district commander at Baltimore, who will notify the candidates' draft boards that they are no longer subject to the provisions of the Selective Service Act.

Defense Classes Enroll Over 185

Sixty Girls Among Students Taking Latest Government-Sponsored Emergency Courses

Over one hundred and twenty-five men and sixty girls were enrolled last Wednesday in the second opening of Villanova's tuition-free defense classes, J. Stanley Morehouse, dean of the Engineering School, announced today.

Especially designed for men employed in war industries and for those who desire such employment, the courses feature such technical subjects as engineering mathematics, engineering physics and engineering drawing.

Authorized as an emergency measure, these courses do not grant college credits, but are being offered solely to enable men to advance to more responsible positions.

The classes are being held in cooperation with the Engineering, Science and Management War Training Program sponsored by the United States Department of Education.

Those desiring admission to any of these courses, which are being held at Northeast Catholic High School, West Catholic High School and Villanova College three evenings each week must satisfy the following requirements: graduation from a standard high school with a minimum of two years of mathematics, one year of physics or chemistry, and a rank in one of the upper two fifths of the graduating class.

Council Begins Bond, Stamp Sale

Sale of Defense Savings Bonds and Stamps was begun here today when Edward Fanelli, president of the sophomore class, and Richard Ryan, junior class representative in the Student Council, represented the Council at a stand set up for the sale in Mendel Hall.

"The senior class, in close co-operation with the Student Council, is supplying the initial capital for working funds," John J. Quinn, president of the senior class and acting chairman of the Council, announced in opening the sale. Quinn is filling the chairman post in the absence of Jacques E. Mauch, senior artsman, who was elected to the office in June. Mauch will not return to school until the Fall session.

Asks Co-operation

In beginning the sale, Quinn made an urgent request for complete and generous co-operation on the part of each student. "We who are fortunate enough to remain in school have a sacred duty to support our comrades in arms to the utmost," he remarked. "This includes financial as well as moral support. The trifling sacrifices we may make in the purchase of bonds and stamps is nothing compared to the tremendous hardships endured by our soldiers, many of whom we knew intimately as fellow students."

Students may purchase stamps of any denomination from Student Council representatives, who will be on duty every day.

Haenisch Announces All-Strauss Program For Music Seminar

Viennese music will be featured tomorrow during the noon hour session of the Music Seminar. The music of the Strausses, Johann, Richard, and Oscar, will compose the program to be presented in Room 215 Mendel Hall. The same program was to be presented in the Spring before a large audience. Dr. E. L. Haenisch, Moderator of the seminar, has extended an invitation to all priests, nuns, and laymen in summer school.

Last Wednesday, Lizst's "Les Preludes" and "Hungarian Dances" were presented before a small gathering. At the end of the hour Dr. Haenisch accepted requests for future programs. Most of the records played in the Music Seminar are from his personal library.

Tomorrow will be the fourth meeting of the Music Seminar this summer. The size of the audience during the next few weeks will determine whether or not the seminary will be continued throughout the summer.

Meet The Boys:

Music And Medicine Chief Appeals of Angelo Macchia, L. K. D.'s Prexy

By HARRY BINDER

AT 7:00 A. M. on February 7, 1921, a bundle was delivered to Camillo and Mary Macchia in Ardmore, Pa., with a tag attached. On the tag was the name Angelo. Angelo Macchia, the lad we are introducing this week, was born just "down the line" in Ardmore, but subsequently resided in Wayne until he reached the age of eight years. Then we find him living in Trenton until he came to Villanova three years ago.

"Ange," as he is called by his associates, went to Hamilton High School in Trenton from 1936 to 1939. When he graduated he decided that he would like to become a doctor, and in the following September, we find him matriculating at Villanova College, taking the Pre-Med course in the Science School.

Going Rather Tough

All did not go too easy with Angelo that first year, however. As he relates, he found the going quite tough, and that college was a big jump from Hamilton high. But Ange quickly regained his stride, kept in there plugging, and when June rolled around, he found a grand total of no "F's" and no "E's" on the final report card.

He saw that his plugging was not in vain, so that year he came to summer school with the intention of trying to get enough credits to be graduated in three years. And since then he has been with us every summer session.

Honor Man Finally

All this time Angelo was improving with rapid strides and as proof of that fact we find his name ranking high on the science school's honor roll for this last semester.

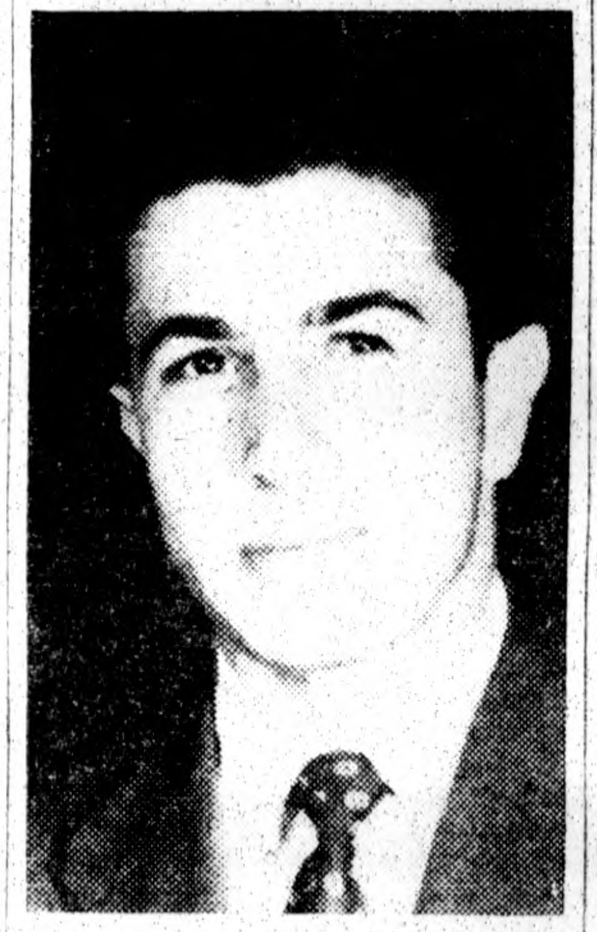
Getting back into the swing of things after his freshman year, he joined the L. K. D., the science school fraternity, the Science Seminar, and participated in practically every intramural sport on the campus. "Ange" played clarinet in both the marching band and the symphonic orchestra in his freshman year and every year since.

As proof of his popularity and good standing with his fellow students, last year the brothers of Lambda Kappa Delta elected Ange as president of the fraternity.

Likes Surgery

Not being draft conscious, (i. e., he is practically draft exempt as most pre-med students are) Ange has high hopes of entering Pennsylvania Medical School when he graduates. When asked if he intended to specialize in any branch of the medical profession, Ange said he was not sure, but he thought he liked surgery best, and that the next few years in medical school would help him to make his final decision. Anatomy and embryology have been his favorite subjects.

Getting from the serious to the social, your reporter had difficulty in discovering the details of Ange's love life. He merely and nonchalantly stated: "Right now, I'm playing the field." However, we did find out that he likes dancing very much; so much so, in fact, that it is his main consumer of time (next to study, of course).



Ange thinks that Glenn Miller is just about tops in both sweet and swing and Mr. Miller is the one who "sends" him when he goes about "consuming his time."

This brings us up to the present in the life of Angelo Macchia, and we wish the best of luck to a gentleman, a scholar, and a true Villanovan. Good luck, Ange.

nor throw. As a player he was an out and out flop. The youngster certainly possessed more than sufficient knowledge about football and was amply equipped to enter into the fray. He was a misfit, nevertheless, since he lacked playing technique.

Don't Be "Unaccustomed"

Some day you may feel similar to the unfortunate boy who has everything else for a game of football but is deficient in the proper muscular coordination necessary in playing the game. This sickening feeling will be yours the day you find yourself present in a business or social gathering listening to some one uttering a fallacious statement while you must remain silent for no other reason than this: your power of expression, your speaking technique, your ability to convince an audience of the truth is miserably weak!

While you are here at college, then be very anxious to seize all opportunities of standing on your feet and thinking while a sea of faces moves restlessly before your vision. Constantly appearing before an audience is the secret in your aim to acquire poise and effectiveness in oral expression.

Democracy Calls, Too

Finally there is much spoken and written these days about the blessing of the democratic form of government. Here is a point to bear in mind: a democracy will always be that much stronger in proportion to the greater number of men living in that democracy capable of expressing sound ideas with the apt technique of competent speakers.

Thus democracy, also, along with Christianity looks to you, the college men of America, to keep alive its noble ideals by pleading with you to re-enkindle a dying enthusiasm for the art of sincere and effective public expression. Become, therefore, day by day, more and more speech-conscious.

four days to travel from California to North Carolina. To shorten the trip and give him a few days to renew acquaintances, he flew in from the coast in 18 hours, leaving him three days for himself.

About the war itself, he claimed "you don't have time to think about the war as it is in the newspapers. All you hear is guns, artillery, mechanization, etc. It's strange, but the war seems far away while the army is made a part of you. The only news of the outside we hear, besides letters from home, is the regular news broadcast during breakfast and who would listen to war news when there's food before them?"

Navy Man Speaks

LT. H. E. MILLIKEN

Navy Plans

Requirements and procedure of the V-1, V-5, and V-7 Naval Reserve Programs were explained to thirty underclassmen by Lt. (s. g.) H. E. Milliken, Assistant Recruiting Inspector, last Friday afternoon.

Lt. Milliken, who is stationed in New York, was accompanied by Warrant Officer H. F. Gilmore, U. S. N. To the freshmen, sophomores and juniors attending the session, he explained the purpose of the Reserves as twofold: to equip the Navy with better trained and better qualified officers and to enable college students to complete their education.

Following a description of the courses together with a summary of the requirements, Lt. Milliken answered questions put to him concerning the Naval Programs.

Letters To The Editor

The following is an excerpt from a letter received from Ensign Thomas A. Shallow, U. S. N. R. Ensign Shallow, a graduate of the class of 1942, is now stationed at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

June 20, 1942

"Dear Tom:

". . . The boys in our class come from all parts of the country; compared to the distance most of them have come, I am a local boy.

"It has been a lot of fun so far. Boston welcomes service men with open arms. Last night we attended Fred Waring's broadcast — and it was really good.

"After his real broadcast he put on a show that lasted more than an hour. Afterwards we met him in the bar and met Jane Wilson, the soprano, in the hotel lobby. But Patsy Garrett wouldn't come down from her room, darn it.

"There is always something doing so there isn't any chance to get homesick. There's one thing, though; after looking around Tech, I still think V. C. is a good school. The students up here go around dressed in anything, and as for being punchy they have the Villanova engineers beat a mile. (Ed. note, Ensign Shallow was a mechanical engineering student here).

Sincerely,
Tom."

Philly Rates High In Hospitality With Hoosier Sailor Based There

By ROBERT T. CANFIELD

To Naval Headquarters he is just Serial Number 6262520, but to Villanova and all his friends he is Jack Croteau, U. S. N.

An apprentice pharmacist's mate stationed at the Philadelphia Naval Hospital, Jack was a weekend visitor to the campus recently. With the usual affability of the American sailor, Jack needed little or no persuasion to narrate a few of his impressions of "life as a gob."

A veteran of six months service, Croteau proved eager to confirm reports that "The Navy's the best outfit in the world" and quickly launched into a colorful description of his "boot training" at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station.

Wear Canvas Boots

In answer to the puzzled expression on your reporter's face, Jack explained that "boot training" has no reference to violent physical treatment (such as that doled out by Villanova's Physical Training Program) but receives its name from the fact that raw naval recruits in training are the only sailors to wear brown canvas "boots."

In February, two months after Pearl Harbor, Jack found himself swinging along with a few hundred other landlubbers toward the guarded gates of the G.L.N.T.S. Swept through the now familiar lines of waiting men with usual Naval efficiency, Jack received his quota of shots in the arm, an issue of Navy "blues" and "whites" and was assigned to a barracks—all before the day was out. And, as Jack says, "Here's where the fun started. A typical day began at 5:30 A. M. policing your barracks for inspection, breakfast, and then drilling and marching until only your boots held you up."

Jack Croteau spellbinds Villanova listeners.

Assigned to School

Graduating from the small surfboats and dories to the larger and swifter cutters and cruisers, Jack completed his five and a half weeks of indoctrination and was assigned to the Hospital Corps School for a six weeks course leading to apprentice pharmacist mate's rating.

But Jack was anxious to add that, "Life at the station was not all work and study. Next to payday and mealtime, liberty, the sailor's holiday, is the most popular event of all."

Chicago and Milwaukee, according to him, are "the best liberty cities in the country." Hearing this, your reporter began to wonder whether a sailor had anything to do with naming Philadelphia "The Cradle of Liberty."

Philly Close Third

After giving a canteen on Broad Street the once over, however, Jack conceded that Philadelphia runs a close third. He is still puzzled over the fact that "a new crew of hostesses are on hand every night."

The Navy places a high value on practical experience, so, upon graduating from the Corps School, Jack was transferred and reported for orders at the Philadelphia Naval Hospital a week ago.

He readily agrees that Philadelphia is the City of Brotherly Love but on his first night in our fair city fate stepped in and dealt him a hard blow.

Wearied by the long train trip from Chicago, Jack looked forward anxiously to "hitting the hammock for a while." But no sooner had he stretched his cramped legs when an emergency call was relayed from the hospital's pneumonia ward and Jack spent the rest of the night watching over a patient in an oxygen tent.

Duties are Varied

"My duties at the hospital are varied if nothing else," Jack admits. His work includes standing watch, administering injections, aiding in the rehabilitation of patients, moving bed-fast convalescents, and all the other details of the modern hospital which are too strenuous for the naval nurses who act as supervisors in each of the wards.

While his present work involves mostly the care of post-operative and convalescent patients, Jack is anxiously looking forward to a seagoing assignment where, "Emergency cases tend to liven up the routine, especially during fleet action when there is never a dull moment."

He still has high hopes that the Navy will not go back on its promise traditionally made to all recruits, "Join the Navy and see the world." But Jack says, "Right now the Navy has a bigger job on its hands than a sightseeing tour."

A native of the Hoosier State, Jack abandoned his studies at the University of Indiana after a year, to enlist last February.

College Students To Obtain Loans Under New Plan

Congressional Act Releases $5,000,000 to Aid Those Enrolled in Certain Courses to Complete Education

In the third wartime letter issued by the president's office within a week, Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., disclosed plans formulated under a recent act of Congress whereby $5,000,000 has been appropriated to the Federal Security Agency to make certain loan provisions to students who meet the requirements of the loan plan.

Although full details of the plan have not as yet been revealed by the government officials, Fr. Stanford included in the letter all information available.

Under the act, loan provisions may be made for the students who are "participating in accelerated programs in degree-granting colleges and universities in Engineering, Physics, Chemistry, Medicine (included Veterinary), Dentistry and Pharmacy, whose technical or professional education can be completed within two years."

Agree in Writing

At Villanova these loans will be made to students who meet the following requirements: They must be enrolled in engineering, physics or chemistry courses and must be able to complete their professional or technical education within two years; they must be in need of assistance; they must now maintain and continue to maintain satisfactory standards of scholarship; they must agree in writing to participate, until otherwise directed by the Chairman of the War Manpower Commission, in accelerated programs of study in engineering, physics, or chemistry and further agree in writing to engage for the duration of the war in which the United States is now engaged, in such employment or service as may be assigned by officers or agencies designated by the Chairman of the War Manpower Commission.

Limit on Amount of Loan

The letter also disclosed that the amount of the loan can not exceed tuition and fees plus $25.00 per month and in total, not exceed $500.000 to any one student during any twelve-month period.

Evidence of the loans will be notes executed by the student payable to the Treasurer of the United States which bear an interest rate of 2.5% per year.

Cancellation of such a plan is provided if a student, before completing his course, is ordered into military service during the present wars under the Selective Training and Service Act of 1940 or if he suffers permanent disability or death.

In order that the college might obtain an estimate of the amount required by Villanova students, Fr. Stanford has included in the letter a blank to be filled out after the careful reading of the conditions of the plan and returned to his office. The president emphasized "careful" reading of the provisions of the plan by the student before making reply. Copies of the letter may be secured in the Registrar's Office, 118 Mendel Hall.

Offer Mass Thursday For Engineering Grad

A first anniversary Mass for the soul of Rudolph E. Lopez, a member of the Class of 1934, will be celebrated in the College Chapel on Thursday at 7 A. M., Rev. Edwin T. Grimes, O. S. A., chaplain, announced last week.

Lopez met his death last year while engaged in a construction project for a local engineering company.

A graduate of the School of Engineering, Lopez received a degree in civil engineering. While at college he was a four-year member of Phi Kappa Pi, engineering fraternity, and the American Society of Civil Engineers. He also served four years as a member of the marching band.

Fathers O'Donnell And McCarron To Serve Navy, Army As Chaplains

By WARD C. GUNCHEON

Two more priests have been added to the number of Villanova priests now serving as chaplains in the United States armed forces. Rev. Michael J. O'Donnell, O. S. A., and Rev. Charles J. McCarron, O. S. A., are now in preparation for service in the Navy and Army forces.

Upon his appointment and reception into the Navy, Fr. O'Donnell was commissioned a first lieutenant. At the present time he is at the training station at Norfolk, Va., for the six weeks training course. Following its completion he will be assigned to active duty.

Fr. McCarron left this morning to begin service under his recently obtained commission of first lieutenant in the Army. He has been ordered to the port of embarkation, New Orleans, La. Although none was mentioned in his orders, Fr. McCarron will be probably assigned to some Army camp.

Headed Order Guild

Replacing Rev. Francis X. N. McGuire, O. S. A., as moderator of the C. & F. intramural activities when the latter was named vice-president, Fr. O'Donnell directed their participation until the close of the last term. He was graduated from Villanova in 1927 with an A. B. degree. For three years following his graduation he studied at Catholic U. in Washington, receiving his M. A. degree in 1931.

At Villanova he was an associate professor in English in the college division although he resided in St. Mary's Hall, the residence of the seminary instructors. Fr. O'Donnell also headed the Augustinian Guild whose purpose it is to obtain funds for the education of seminary students.

Our Christian Knights

THE chaplains in the Army of the United States are officers; they have always proved heroes. They receive a respect from the men which borders on veneration. There is a reason for this. It is that the chaplain is primarily interested, not in the war, or victory, but in the souls of the boys. The chaplain cares for the boys' souls with the same patience and sense of continual duty with which the quartermaster cares for their supplies, if the comparison be not strained.

That the chaplains are fulfilling the American laws and traditions is undeniable, since virtue is an American tradition and vice an importation — like the Japanese beetle. What better proof have we of this truth than the action recently taken by the President against the "redlight" districts in the vicinity of Army camps and plants engaged in the war effort.

But it was a command to the Army, a command from the Commander-in-Chief. And what happened in the Army? Co-operation and obedience, except from a few officials who persisted in a famous World War I mistake. After closing the houses of prostitution, they fostered fornification in another way. They still insisted that men leaving the camps of which they were the rulers were obliged to receive and carry contraceptive materials; either that or stay on the grounds. This conduct was disgraceful enough, but that which followed was worse.

The chaplains in these camps, in line of their avowed duty, attempted to put an end to this. Firstly, they spoke to the commanding officers who were immediately responsible; then they wrote to congressmen. They received no gratification from either source. Finally, they appealed to the President. The result was speedy and efficient. The condition was cleared up for the time. The President had done his duty; he stepped out of the picture.

Here, however, came to view the nasty aspect of the difficulty. For the chaplains' trouble and effort, they were lowered in rank by the commanding officers. It is against such injustice and for the keeping up of the Army's excellent reputation that we write.

One knows that as soon as conditions of this sort are brought to the public's eye, or to the attention of the President, they are not long-lived. There is no trouble on this score. During World War I the policy of these guilty officers was tried and, necessarily, failed. Any student of modern history will trace the present prevalence of venereal diseases to the loose army regulations during the last war. Realizing this, and foreseeing that which we see today, the Medical Board of the Council of National Defense, meeting June 7, 1917, spoke of sexual continence as "compatible with health and the best prevention of venereal diseases." Nothing was said of the moral issue.

The "moral fitness" which the President urged is continually dispensed with as irrelevant. The object of removing venereal disease, although right in itself, is still only the lesser portion of the tale. The morale of the army is talked of, debated, but is not helped. Mere material things like cakes and letters for the boys, while right in themselves, are still not as necessary as cleanliness of soul and body. Why then, are people like Miss Sanger looked upon as patriots, when their avowed aim is contrary to the ideas we have about our soldiers?

Ninety percent of our soldiers are men to be proud of, to love. They are, according to the chaplains and officers of the army, devoted to duty to such an extent that they begin to appear before the public as daredevils. They are so convinced that this country is right that they go to battle with a smile. This is the point.

Why do people play the imp and smother these men with temptations? Why do miserable tavernkeepers try to corrupt them? Why are diseased and horrid women allowed to "play the coast" like tigers waiting for prey? And why, too are these persons called patriots? Because they buy bonds? Or is it because we are importing some more vice from already corrupt European governments? Time alone will answer that.

Take A Second Look

A report from Rome confirming the acceptance of a Japanese ambassador by the Vatican has provoked an unwarranted amount of suspicion and criticism in the United States. Unthinking Americans, Catholics among them, have weakly succumbed to the enemy inspired propaganda that the Holy See is actually on the side of the Axis powers and in league with the Jap dictatorship.

Blinded by war—fanned emotionalism, these individuals refuse to look beneath the surface and discover the existing facts. They fail to understand that the real purpose of diplomatic relations is two-fold: to allow a study of the situation and to defend the interests of the party in question.

That the Church has vital interests to defend is self-evident from the constant stream of governmental and ecclesiastical reports of Japanese attempts to suppress Catholicism.

The fanatic revival of Shinotism by the Japanese Empire, the near complete extinction of the Church in Korea and Manchuria, efforts to convert Christians to Buddhism in Japanese-occupied Thailand and Indo-China—all these and more have presented a critical problem which the Vatican is bound in conscience to solve.

The only possible solution is through the establishment of formal diplomatic negotiations.

Rising above a sea of shallow criticism the Catholic Church continues to protect and promote the religious welfare of its persecuted members regardless of political differences.

FACULTY COMMENTS

The Value Of The Scene In Fiction

By FR. McSHEA

THERE are many pleasant surprises for the reader of George Meredith's novels. Their virtues are literally manifold. They are witty and spirited. They are modern; there is nothing obsolete, for example, in tracing the career of an egoist, a perennial type, as there is in the anger of Charles Dickens at a system of poorhouse administration which is now no longer a problem. They contain, in the person of Nevil Beauchamp, a prophetic anticipation of all those bright young men of today who find the grand solution to the world's difficulties in Marxism.

Meredith's technique, however, is more relevant to our purposes than his modernity. His passion for the aphorism is no doubt a matter of mixed virtue. But his observation that "the wine ebbed, and the laughter," to select one specimen, is at least superior to most of the imitations of this kind of writing for which magazines give prizes.

Substitutes Scene for Plot

Much more to his credit is the substitution of the well dramatized incident or scene for the formal plot of the traditional narrative method. For in introducing and emphasizing the scene for its own internal strength he compensates fully for the omission of that planned element in story-telling which moves along to a specific but single climax.

It is not easy to define the scene as a factor in the novel and in the short story. While it is not a secondary or auxiliary kind of climax, it has all the concentrated force of a successful one. It is really that high point of intensity in human realtionship which may develop as the outcome of any episode. It may appear several times in the same narrative.

In brief, the scene is that moment of the most sharpened type of feeling, that composite of tenseness, anxiety, and deadly friction which dramatizes the inevitable conflict between people of invariably different interests. Its effect upon readers naturally varies, but only the very dull can possibly miss that complete absorption in the situation that results in dramatic helplessness.

Variety of Immediate Causes

The scene may have a variety of immediate causes. The most likely are terror, embarrassment, and that peculiar species of offensive tyranny which invite rebellion. The various forms of insolence and the unexpected, blunt accusation are still other frequent occasions. There is a masterly illustration of the latter form in John O'Hara's short story, "Do You Like It Here?"

The newly-arrived student is summoned to the headmaster's office. The youth has, up to this point, occupied himself with self-pity and the task of acclimation—he has been to numerous boarding-schools—but otherwise he demonstrates no extremes of good or evil. The principal is affable and casual; he queries the boy about commonplaces.

Abrupt Climax Attained

Then with an abrupt and startling gesture he flings a wristwatch on the desk and demands that the young man tell what he may know about it. Apparently it has been stolen but the thief, obviously sensing final detection, has returned it secretly to the headmaster. The scene is superbly projected: the older man is angry and displeased that such a situation is possible in his school; the boy is injured by the charge and though clearly innocent, incapable of convincing defense. Two people are experiencing an emotional strain: a sense of hostility charges the atmosphere as the headmaster and student reach a pitch of unbearable excitement.

Meredith's "Evan Harrington" contains an especially excellent scene. Just possibly it may reflect some earlier uneasiness in the author's own life, for the book is autobiographical in some respects, and Evan's father was a tailor, as was Meredith's. The scene itself is the result of heartless snobbery and the dangers that surround and torment the newly-rich who can not completely delete the lack of gentility in their ancestry.

A New Background Created

Evan and his sisters have bettered themselves far beyond any dreams they might have had as children in their home behind their father's shop. But in their new positions they can not afford ever to be known as the children of a tradesman. They create for the information of their new acquaintances a much more polite background.

The young women, Evan's sisters, are actually more self-conscious of the social fiction that he, and they suffer as a result when, at a house party, the conversation turns to tailors who are unmercifully lampooned. They are embarrassed almost to hysteria, and their terror is pitiable. Not sufficiently composed to join in the common ridicule and pretend that they share their friends' sentiments, they must undergo a type of torture at the thought that they may be discovered and shamed. Utterly terrified they can only hope that someone will effectively turn the direction of the talk elsewhere.

OPEN LETTER—

Villanova's second War Bond drive begins today!

Unlike the last, the drive is well organized and needs only the cooperation of the individual student. We are not asking that the student "break himself" in the purchase of these war bonds but to deny himself some little luxury to purchase a little bit of America's future victory.

If each student would sacrifice that extra "coke", or maybe that pack of cigarettes, or that movie — that's all we ask.

The drive's success depends on you as an individual. Please don't ask George to do it.

Throughout the world's battlefields today other American young men are making the supreme sacrifice. They are looking to you to give them a "solid front" at home. Every dollar you give increases their strength in the field of battle!

You have been given the opportunity to finish college in the face of dangers which in other countries would immediately warrant your call into the armed service. This opportunity you must continue to maintain and deserve. How? By your purchase — no matter how small — of War Bonds and Stamps.

America's future — your future is at stake!

Villanova's FightingMen

SINCE the local draft boards began placing their finger on "men physically fit for military service" Villanova has been sending its share of graduates and students not yet finished with their college career into the armed forces.

From time to time they have written the VILLANOVAN asking about the college life they have left behind and giving personal glimpses into the new life opened to them.

This column will endeavor to list as many of these men as possible with their addresses and print portions of their letters or any correspondence received here from the public relations bureaus of the various branches of the armed force.

Paul Nugent, graduate from the C. & F. school in '41, was recently commissioned an ensign at the Jacksonville Naval Air Station in Florida. Together with his commission, Nugent received his "wings of gold," which label him a naval flying officer. For his four years here Nugent was one of Al Severance's mainstays on the hardwood floor. His "prelim" flight training was received at Floyd Bennett Field in Brooklyn.

One of the "ex-members" of the civil engineering class of '41, George Moleski is now a Second Lieutenant in the Army Air Forces. The Philadelphian was commissioned at the advanced flying school located at Turner Field, Albany, Ga. From here out it's Tokio bound for the former engineer.

Corporal Sam Canning, who was a recent visitor on the campus writes from Camp Davis. Sam is studying at the officers' training school located there.

Stealing a few minutes between lectures he gives an insight into the rigorous training these "ninety day wonders" receive.

". . . I'm up at 5:30 A. M. Just time enough to dress, wash, shave and eat before school at seven o'clock. I don't get out of school 'till nine and sometimes ten o'clock at night. I get a half-hour for lunch and a half-hour for supper.

"Imagine fourteen hours of school a day!

"I have to learn in three months what a man at West Point learns in four years. He just has more time to practice each thing. On top of this there is a constant 'pressure' on you all of the time, as officers are observing you for 'Military Bearing.' This is very, very essential. If your brass isn't shined, your shoes glistening, your clothes neat and pressed, your hair combed, your shoulders straight, head up, chest out and at attention all of the time, they make out 'gig' slips. 'Gigs' are demerits and a certain unknown number of demerits puts you out on your ear as private.

"So the pressure is terrific while you're trying to cram stuff into your head that you never knew a thing about. My Waterloo is electricity. It's got me spinnin'. You get an exam two or three times a day in what you have had thrown at you. I can see why they call us 'ninety day wonders.' I call it a wonder if I ever get through here. I'll be a walking encyclopedia."

Canning received his corporal's rating three months after enlisting, but as is the custom of the Army his title was removed on entering the officers training school. He can be written to as:

Mr. S. J. Canning
Officers Candidate School
Battery G Platoon 3
Camp Davis, N. C.

Another Villanova graduate was awarded his "wings" and commissioned as ensign in the Naval Reserve this past month at Jacksonville, Fla. Edward Doudican of the '39 class from the science school has completed the intensive course. He lives at Hyannis, Mass.

ODDS AND ENDS:

George Kaseman, ex-member of the centennial class and the commerce school, completed flight training at Jacksonville and was transferred to Miami, Fla, for his final training. Loring Jones, John "Obie" O'Brien, both ex-members of the present senior class, together with George Oberhoffer and Logan Philips of last year's senior class are stationed at the Naval Air Station in Philadelphia for their preliminary training.

Alumni Leads Intramural Softball League With Record Of 10 And 4

Paruta's Team, Definitely on the Upgrade, Wins Seven of Last Eight Games to go From Third to First Place; Austin Two Full Games Behind

By JOE DALY

During the past two weeks, a drastic change has taken place in the softball standings. Alumni, aided by a seven game winning streak, moved into first place last Thursday, two full games ahead of their nearest rivals, Austin Hall. Led by their fiery captain, Tony Paruta, they downed all opposition with their big bats* and timely fielding, along with the best pitching to date, by Captain Paruta and the reliable left hander, Joe Portali.

The fire-works started on June 29 when they found their batting eye against Dick Ryan and the Fedigan gigoloes, banging out twenty-four hits which netted twenty runs. They followed up this triumph with a 13-7 win over the then helpless frosh with the next victim being the Firemen of Austin. Then they met Fedigan in a pitching duel in which Paruta bested Joe Barry three to one, scoring the winning runs in the seventh. They continued this pace around the league once again until last Thursday night the law of averages caught up with them, and the up and coming freshmen trounced them by a score of 14 to 6.

Mendel Improving

This was the second win of the season for the Gold Bugs of Mendel and the second in a row. It seems at last that they have developed a winning combination. For again Friday night they came up with another victory, when they defeated Fedigan 8 to 7. Probably the primary factor in the improvement shown by the freshmen, is the addition of several new men in the infield, and the fine pitching they have been getting in their more recent contests. Jim Hobbs has steadied down the right side of the diamond no little with his stellar performances at the hot corner, and Jim Carbine has figured in more double plays than any other man in the league, at second. The outer gardens are well patrolled by Jim Daly and the two Quinns.

Uniforms Issued

Another influence might be the new uniforms which were issued to each club last week. The frosh are wearing the gold of Mendel, and they are living up to Gold Bug records of the past. Alumni is all decked out in the most colorful suits of them all. They are wearing green caps with gold letters, and white shirts trimmed in red. Conservative Austin is sporting blue tops and blue caps with white. Fedigan, living up to their Indian heritage, have red caps and dark brown jersies. All the uniforms bear the "Health" insignia, which is one of the newly drafted mottoes here at Villanova.

Fedigan Slips

Austin and Fedigan have both been in a slump. Tied for first place a little more than a week ago, Austin has dropped to second place and Fedigan to third, a game behind. The injured stricken Fedigan team seemed to run into hard luck at every turn. With Charley LaBelle on the sidelines with an injured leg, Joe Barry has had to carry the heavy burden of pitching every night plus the task of running the team.

All in all, the only bright spot for the Fediganites was a 5-0 shutout pitched by Joe Barry against the Freshmen. This was the first shut-out of the year.

Austin, after losing three in a row, revised their line up last Thursday, and came from behind to win 8-7 over Fedigan. Whitey Kemp polled out his third homer of the year, with DeBlois on second, to win the game.

Standings

Alumni	10	4	.714
Austin	8	6	.571
Fedigan	7	7	.500
Mendel	3	11	.273

D. H. Organize Softball League

Five Teams Entered in Competition; Hybrids Setting Pace After First Week

In keeping with the Resident student body, the Dayhop scholars have also formed a Softball League under the leadership of Father Sullivan. The league consists of five teams, each of which is out to win the coveted title—"Dayhop Softball Champions." Having begun last Tuesday, the league will continue until September 18, at which time, the champion will be crowned.

Formed along the same lines as the Grapefruit Touch Football League which attained such great popularity among the Dayhops last fall, these games also take place during the noon hour on the softball diamonds to the rear of Mendel Hall. Inasmuch as the contests must terminate at 1:30, regardless of the score at that time, quite a few of the contests will end as deadlocks. This was observed last week, when two games ended in this fashion.

Hybrids Set Pace

After four days of play, the Hybrids are setting the pace with a record of three wins as against no losses. Holding down second position are the Meteors, with two victories and one defeat, followed by the Nestors who have won one game while losing two. The Selmodes and the Yondos, the two remaining teams in the league, have yet to hit the win column, and hold down fourth and fifth places respectively.

The Standings

Team	W	L	T
Meteors	2	1	1
Nestors	1	2	0
Selmodos	0	1	2
Yondos	0	2	1

Alumni Trounces Faculty 13-0

Playing the same brand of ball which they have displayed in their last eight contests of the Softball League, Tony Paruta's Alumni team defeated the Faculty nine last Friday night by the overwhelming score of 13-0. The Alumni squad reached its peak in this game, as their bats pounded out hit after hit, and they scored as they pleased over the seemingly helpless faculty team

This was the second engagement between the team composed solely of priests, and a student aggregation. It is the custom for the leading student team in the Softball League at the end of each week, to meet the Faculty on Friday night. Two weeks ago, the scheduled contest was rained out, and inasmuch as last Friday night was part of the 4th of July holiday, no game was played then, either.

Held to Five Hits

Friday night's contest was the first played by the faculty since they trounced Joe Barry's Fedigan team at the end of the first week of play to the tune of 10-7. Last week, however, the priests could not find their batting eyes, which had been so potent in the Fedigan game, and were held to a mere five hits by Joe Portali.

So, with this defeat, the faculty now has a percentage of .500, and will be out to make it .667 this Friday. Who they will play, however, cannot be determined until Thursday night.

Sportorial

By BILL WALSH
Sports Editor

Quite a surprise to many readers no doubt, was the Villanova-Haverford baseball game which took place last evening. Inasmuch as there was no issue of the VILLANOVAN last week, due to the 4th of July holiday, there was no opportunity for us to let the public know of the proposed hardball team which would represent Villanova on the diamond during the summer months. So, although the first contest has already been staged, we will attempt to give a belated account of the particulars which made this diamond aggregation possible.

After the close of the varsity baseball season last spring, there was little hope that hardball would be played on the campus during the summer as a regular organized sport. Softball had been chosen as the most convenient form of competition for the advocates of the accelerated program, as it would appeal to more individuals than any other athletic activity.

That's just what Fathers McKee and Dunne wanted for the summer months—something in which most of the students took part. Well most of the students did take part, and are still taking part, but now there is more than an Intramural Softball League, there is a hardball team which will represent Villanova in intercollegiate competition.

Haverford, as we all know by this time, was the first opponent of this recently organized group, and according to last week's plans, the two schools will battle it out again on the diamond next Monday evening. Swarthmore is also another foe scheduled for one or more engagements with our Main Liners. Although nothing definite has been decided as yet, a game with Princeton may also be an accomplishment of this Wildcat ball club.

The exact status of this team is not easily determined. At first it was supposed that an Intramural relationship would be formed with both Haverford and Swarthmore, with these three local colleges having more or less of a league among themselves. Since the initial negotiations, however, the games have developed into what can truly be called intercollegiate contests. The Philadelphia papers are also considering the contests as such, so that the Blue and White of Villanova will be out defending the enviable record established by varsity nines in the past. It is not a mistake, therefore, to consider the summer aggregation as a separate and distinct outfit of varsity status, rather than one taking part in an intramural league.

It would be too much, of course, to expect the calibre of this club to be on an even par with that of the regular varsity squad which won 9 and lost 3 games last spring. In the first place, only three members of the varsity squad are among those students taking the accelerated program. These are Joe Nunan, a catcher, Joe Elward, an outfielder, and Al "Frenchy" DeBlois, a right-handed pitcher. With the possible exception of DeBlois, who pitched a one-hit, 12-0 shutout over Rider College, last April, these carryovers from Doc Jacobs squad have not seen much action. They will, of course, be the mainstays of the newly organized group, but the rest of the current team, for the most part, is sadly lacking in experience.

Besides Elward, DeBlois, and Nunan, however, there were a few other untried newcomers who performed remarkably well during the practice sessions last week. Stan Kazior, a senior, seemed certain to clinch the third base spot, as he was very powerful at the plate, besides fielding brilliantly at the hot corner. Art Martin, at second base, and Whitey Kempf at first, two more seniors, also looked very good. So, with those just mentioned as well as the three carryovers from the varsity, the team should shape up rapidly and improve with every contest.

Although already burdened with the extensive intramural duties on the campus, Fathers McKee and Dunne have also assumed the strenuous task of coaching the team. They are helped in this endeavor by Fathers Sullivan and Coffey, who have also done much toward discovering the respective abilities of each candidate for the squad.

Villanova Intramural Stars Trounce Haverford Varsity By Score Of 8-3

Newly Organized Squad Shows Great Promise in Their Initial Contest; DeBlois Hurls Five Hit Game, as Kazior and Nunan Hit Home Runs

By JACK KOVAL

A spunky team of baseball players recently organized by Fathers McKee and Dunne, and bearing the name of the "Villanova Intramural All-Stars," took to the diamond last night and defeated the nearby Haverford College nine by the score of 8-3. Last night's game was the opening engagement on the All Stars' summer schedule. Further contests will undoubtedly be staged, with the only definite contest at present, being with the same Haverford squad next Monday.

Assuming the mound duties for the Blue and White was Al "Frenchy" DeBlois, last year's varsity hurler for the Wildcats. Things didn't look too good for Al in the first inning, however, as the very first ball he pitched went for a two base hit with the runner scoring on an error. This, nevertheless, didn't discourage the tall right-hander, for he struck out the next three batters, thus retiring the side.

Score Three in First

The All Stars went into an early 3-1 lead in the very first inning by virtue of a smashing circuit clout by Stan Kazior, rugged third baseman, with Tony Paruta and Joe Elward on base.

Haverford made it 3-2 in the second frame when Kirk scored on costly errors by Graziano and Centanni, but the Wildcats also garnered another tally, to keep two runs in front.

Reaching pay dirt again in the following inning, the All Stars managed to tally three runs on but one hit to put them in the lead by a five-run margin, 7-2. Joe Nunan, hard-working backstop for the All Stars, climaxed the offensive splurge by clouting out a home run into left center field.

After being held scoreless by hurler DeBlois for three consecutive innings, the Haverford nine succeeded in scoring their third and last run of the game on singles by Swartley and Finley in the sixth frame.

The final tally for Villanova came in the last half of the sixth, when Centanni sent a sharp single to center, and scored on an error by the center fielder.

Thirty-Two Entrants Vie for Intramural Tennis Crown; Gavin Favorite

Perfect tennis weather opened the Intramural Tennis Tournament this week, as the contestants began to compete with each other in the first round of play. The first few matches, however, will probably be nothing more than a weeding out process, to determine those who will meet in the later encounters. About thirty-two players make up the tournament. One-half of this number will be removed in the first round and the remaining will play off in a second round thereby eliminating another one-half and so on, until five rounds will finally wind up the contest with one man acclaimed the winner.

Great Interest Among Students

Unusual interest has been stimulated over the tournament and this is due to the fact that this is the first form of tennis competition offered to the students this summer. The accelerated program, in combination with the summer school, has brought back many of the best players on the Villanova courts, who have added much to the calibre of the field. In the past all tennis tournament matches were held in the early spring and the contestants did not number as many, but now, in the midst of perfect tennis weather, the entrants are in shape to do their all on the courts.

The top-seeded players, who are evenly distributed among the other competitors are: Austin Gavin, Joe Daly, Bill McDonald, Jim Daly and Tom Quigley. The latter three are new members to the courts and it is expected that they will make a very favorable showing. With regard to Gavin and Daly, both are former varsity members and there is no question about their respective abilities. They did splendid work on this year's squad and they will probably be number one and two men respectively on next year's varsity tennis team. This summer tournament should also bring into the limelight promising varsity material.

Faculty Also Competes

In addition to these matches, the Faculty will also wage a contest among the better players of the Order. The purpose of this is to determine the best player among them, who will, in turn, compete with the student champ in the final playoff. That winner will wear the crown of the "Villanova Champion."

McGovern Sets Obstacle Record

Ed McGovern, a sophomore in the commerce and finance school, is the current holder of the record for the obstacle course, which serves as the main feature of Villanova's Physical Fitness program. McGovern toured the 160 yard layout, which consists of seven obstacles, in the remarkable time of 34 seconds, thus smashing the two week old record of 36.6 set by Charley Rini, a freshman.

With every student having experienced a time trial at this point, the times were, for the most part, surprisingly good. Lou Carideo, a junior in the Science school, holds down second place with 34.4, followed very closely by sophomore John Bittig at 34.6. About fifteen other students were timed in less than forty seconds.

mit necessary information so that local draft boards could be informed of the status of the candidates. "Then State Directors of the Selective Service System concerned will be informed that the students named have been accepted provisionally by the institution, and will be requested to inform in turn the Chairman of the Local Selective Service Boards having jurisdiction in each case to defer any action toward the induction of those students until enlistment in the Enlisted Reserve Corps has been accomplished."

In commenting on student response to the plan, which will be under the supervision of Fr. McQuade, Fr. Stanford remarked, "First indications are that it is being enthusiastically received by the students. Applications to be considered under the quota have been coming in steadily."

Students interested in joining the Enlisted Reserve Corps may obtain the necessary applications at the Registrar's office.

Service Summary

With the announcement of the latest reserve plan, a summary of services offering a reserve status to college students has been drawn up by authorities here. The deferments offered by the different branches vary from one school year up to the period required for graduation.

Services open to freshmen (i. e., those entering in June or October, 1942) include: Army Enlisted Reserve Corps, Army Air Force Enlisted Reserve, Naval Reserve V-1, and Marine Corps Reserve.

Sophomores (those who have completed two semesters) may join the Army Enlisted Reserve Corps, Army Air Force Enlisted Reserve, Naval Reserve (V-1 and V-5), and Marine Corps Reserve.

Juniors (those who have completed four semesters) are eligible for Army Enlisted Reserve Corps, Army Air Force Enlisted Reserve, Naval Reserve (V-5 and V-7), and Naval Reserve E-V (P). Engineers, chemists, and physicists may join the Army Signal Corps.

Services offering reserve status to seniors (those who have completed six semesters) are: Army Enlisted Reserve Corps, Army Air Force Enlisted Reserve, Marine Corps Reserve, and Naval Reserve (V-5 and V-7). Pre-medical students are eligible for Army Medical Administrative Corps and Naval Reserve H-V(P); electrical engineers and physicists, for Army Signal Corps; economics majors, for Naval Reserv SC-V(P),, and engineers and chemists for Naval Reserve E-V(S).

Scene In Fiction

dling, she dominates the life of her Bishop-husband and determines even matters of ecclesiastical policy in her little Anglican world at Barchester. Motivated variously by whim and by malice she forces her opinion upon the entire diocese and quite effectively makes puppets of her husband and of all within her orbit. In her favor is the fact that most of the clergymen about her submit their anger and resentment to a naturally safe but selfish kind of discretion.

But such a reign could scarcely be permanent. Eventually there appears at the cathedral a gruff country parson who is unimpressed by the lady's formidable manner. He has come to consult the Bishop about urgent matters; an interview is arranged and in accordance with her practice for years, Mrs. Proudie sits in as well. When she, however, rather than the Bishop, gives the clergyman her judgment, the situation has become intolerable. With back-country directness the parson turns to her and with a voice of thunder insists that she be quiet. This unprecedented conduct breaks the spell and Mrs. Proudie's tyranny has been challenged and smashed.

Misunderstanding precipitates a scene of considerable force in William Dean Howell's "Rise of Silas Lapham." There is a spirit of confusion in the Lampham household when it is realized that Tom Corey has been in love with Penelope, and not with Irene. Pathos and painful surprise are the immediate reactions of Irene whereas Tom suffers an acutely awkward moment when he cannot decide whether the blindness is his or that of the Laphams.

Most of the great English novelists have incorporated scenes in their works with varying degrees of subtlety and artistry. Stevenson, Kipling and Galsworthy have done it particularly well more recently. It would be a pointless truism to say that the scene has enriched the novel. Obviously it is an element which must improve the narrative in which it appears. And if full credit for realizing its essential value cannot be given to Meredith without crippling qualifications, it might at least be granted that he focused attention on a literary item of distinct benefit to imaginative writing.

Letters To The Editor

This is a letter to the editor received from Lieut. R. F. Harper, U. S. Naval Reserve, 4th Naval District of the Naval Aviation Cadet Selection Board.

Dear Sir:

A letter from one of your former students who is now undergoing flight training at the Naval Air Station at Jacksonville should be of interest to your readers.

In an informal letter to the writer Jack Grabosky made the following comments:

"All the boys from Philadelphia are getting along fine with only two casualties so far—Bob McKee losing his voice and Russell Studemond making a delayed leap from the station bus, slightly twisting his knee. "Ace" Findley was put on flight report for slipping where he shouldn't and one or two of the boys have down checks because they didn't slip where they should — it's a tough grand life, eh?

All the fellows miss Philadelphia as it really holds fond memories for us all, and though the fellows left some nice damsels up North — they're doing pretty well with the southern belles down here—so much so, in one case that Dick Schaughency now has definite rebel drawl instead of the western Pennsylvania babble of his.

We were interested in seeing some pictures of the new Villanova Unit in the papers. They're a swell looking bunch. Regards to the officers at the base and good luck!"

Very truly yours,
Roland F. Harper.

To the Editor:

Congratulations on your paper's make-up. Put me on your fan mail list—or make Canfield do it.

A tired and weary,
Tom Doyle.

Love's Query

How shall I say my heart's fierce burning?
In accents styled and sweeping?
How express its plaintive yearning?
In verses sadly weeping?

Or should my love, like brooklet leaping,
Dart forth in joy supreme
And seek the sea, midst flowers peeping.
On its banks, in Spring's sweet dream?

Or is my love like calm, blue sea,
Like the depths of your gentle eyes,
Where, reflected in splendid majesty,
The placid lovelight never dies?

No matter, my love, how it's spoken;
Look not for accents styled;
But may that spell be never broken
That you cast when first you smiled.

Study, Work And Exercise Combined With Irish Wit — That's Joe Hagerty

By JACK DEERY

JOE HAGERTY, known by his local draft board as Joseph Aloysius Hagerty, is of Irish descent. All the attributes and fighting spirit of the Irish have been bestowed upon Joe, or "Jiggs," as his intimates know him. How to describe him? Well, how would you describe an Irishman? His dimensions are about 5' 8" by 30". He has light brown hair and at present heavily tanned skin. He has carried this structure through the arts classes since 1939.

Joe is a wit, a satirist, cleverly facetious, having the power of combining ideas with a ludicrous effect. He can make jocose such subjects as Rosemont, the engineering school and its members, Paul Stenn (whom Joe subdued), the science school and its boiling water, the satires of Juvenal, his and Art Martin's relation to the anthropoids, the commerce and finance school and its athletes—but why go on. Joe is one of the most spontaneous of the Villanova wags. By every extension of the meaning of the word Joe is a humorist.

50-50 Honor Man

He possesses the knowledge and all mental faculties that the cerebrum of a true wit contains. Joe has hit the honor roll safely on every other attempt at the roster, for an average of .500, which is good in any league. Joe declined to explain the cause for these intellectual cycles, but he offered to discuss the effects. On pausing to assemble some ideas for the witty theme that might have followed, Joe's knowledge of philosophy prevented him from analyzing the effects without carefully examining the cause.

P. T. Not New to Him

But enough of Joe's mental life, how does the physical training course affect him? He finds it interesting. Interesting in that he is able to observe the triumph of matter over mind, able to hear grunts replace the human tone. It is merely a concentrated routine for Joe, because he has in the past proved himself a capable athlete.

He played third base for the Villanova freshman baseball team and capably filled the suit until his employment cancelled most extra-curricular activity. He was a spirited performer in the intramural basketball during his sophomore year and in the latter part of his junior year he placed third in the intramural golf tournament. At the present time he is playing shortstop for the "Nestors" at noon. Thus he is an unrecognized three letter man. Again he proves himself an ideal artsman — combining with his intellectual gymnastics an Athenian stride in the physical world.

Vital Facts

But what of Joe's pre-Villanova preparation? Naturally he was born—on April 6, 1922, in Philadelphia. On June 6, 1930, Joe was eight years and two months old, enjoying the summer vacation after a tough third grade in the public school. After passing through the eight year routine he entered Germantown High School where he became conscious of the female. After four years there he was graduated and enrolled at Villanova.

Here Joe was fortunate in meeting a fellow-artsman, Joe Mahoney by name, of his calibre with whom he could discuss his favorite subjects. At the Pie Shop round table the two Joes discussed Cicero, Logis, athletics, and women. In the classroom they attempted to keep up with the wit of Father Kiley.

But what of Joe's formal extra-curricular activities? At the present time Joe is secretary of Epsilon Phi Theta, arts school fraternity. He was co-chairman of the Junior Dinner Dance committee last Spring, at which time he said he "helped" John Quinn.

Headed for Defense Job

What is Joe's "space-sweeping soul" preparing for itself in the future? On last December 6, Joe was preparing to use his A. B. degree to enter the Penn Law School; however, his uncle recently offered him a position which can be his immediately after graduation. He is helping the war cause now by working for the Crown Can Company, which manufactures gas masks.

In order to get to the North Philadelphia factory at least reasonably late, Joe starts a mad dash after every Physical Training class. He leaves evidence of his haste all along the line from the end of the obstacle course, across the field, through the shower room, and in the locker. His hapless locker mate spends a half-hour every day clearing up the havoc he has created.

Through all these distractions, Joe has maintained his wit and his classmates think he will retain it forever.

And That Wildcat Is No Kitten!

Villanova's "Flying Wildcat" Unit Solos At Naval Reserve Air Base

By HARRY J. BINDER, JR.

It's to be gold bars and Navy wings in a few months for eight former Villanovans who comprise the "Flying Wildcats," or the Villanova Unit of the Naval Air Corps.

Members of the Civilian Pilot Training course here together, the eight decided to stay together in Uncle Sam's Navy, with an eye to taking the traditional Villanova spirit into the air with them. Those in the unit are: Mark E. Fitzgerald, '42; Edward Leahy, '40; John J. O'Brien , ex-'43; William DeGrace, '42; Logan Phillips, '42; Loring Jones, ex-'43; Herman Oberhofer, '42, and Walter Mason, '42.

Receiving Basic Training

Ordered to duty on June 4, they were assigned to the Naval Reserve Base in Philadelphia, where they are now receiving their basic training.

Approximately half-way through the course, most of the group have already soloed, Walt Mason being the first to achieve this honor. Navy officials expect that all the future pilots will have soloed in the next few days.

At the completion of the basic training, which is expected to be within the next few weeks, the group will be assigned to an advanced training base. According to present information, they will probably be sent to Jacksonville or Pensacola, Fla., or to Corpus Christi, Texas.

Will Receive Commissions

The intensive advanced training received there will result in commissions as ensigns. They will then be assigned to active duty.

Leahy returned to school after graduation to take the Civilian Pilot Training offered here under the auspices of the Civil Aeronautics Administration. While an undergraduate he was a member of the swimming team and was chairman of the Ring Committee.

Phillips an Award Winner

Mason and O'Brien were active participants in intramural sports. Oberhofer and Phillips played on the 150-pound football team, the latter serving as regular tackle. In his senior year he received the coveted Alumnus Award as the outstanding player on the team.

Jones was associate editor of the Belle Air, a member of the swimming team and a staff member of the VILLANOVAN for two years. In his junior year he was appointed Advertising Manager of the latter publication.

A Full Class Day

Fitzgerald was a four-year member of the marching band and the symphonic band; he was also an active participant in the Math Club. DeGrace served as a manager of the varsity football team.

In a letter to Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, one of the members of the unit indicated the comparatively easy life the local college students enjoy. "Classes run from 8:00 A. M. until 6:00 P. M. and we receive only one liberty a week," he wrote. "None of this dashing out each night until 12:30."

Sporting their distinctive insignia, the "Flying Wildcats" are the first students of Villanova to enter the armed services as a group.

In spite of, or perhaps because of, their rigorous training, several of the unit find their way back to the campus on Sundays to enjoy their day of liberty. They say the school looks even better than it did in their student days here.

Seminar Features Wagnerian Operas

Tomorrow at 12:40 P. M. Dr. E. L. Haenisch, moderator of the Music Seminar, will present an all Wagnerian program in room 215, Mendel Hall. The featured work will be the Siegfried Idyll. The program will also include a recording of Kirsten Flagstad singing "Liebestod" from Tristan Und Isolde, and the popular "Ride of The Valkyries."

Music of Vienna was the highlight of last week's meeting with waltzes and polkas by the three unrelated Strausses: Johann, Richard, and Oscar comprising the program. These popular works attracted a large audience.

The featured work tomorrow, Siegfried Idyll, was written in 1871, when Wagner was 57 years of age, as a birthday gift to his wife and was named for his son Siegfried. Most of the thematic material was drawn from the opera Siegfried and an old German cradle-song. The other work, "The Ride of The Valkyries" from Die Walkure is a description of the rush and dash of steeds.

President Reappointed As Consultant To Navy

Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, was recently reappointed to assist the Navy Training Program for the period ending July 1, 1943.

Fr. Stanford began his service with the Navy Department on Feb. 25, 1942, but the appointment extended only to June 30, 1942. The new appointment was effective July 1.

Latest Registration Figures List 882 Students In All Courses Here

A total of 882 students are now enrolled in the various courses at Villanova, it was announced yesterday by Paetrus F. Banmiller, college registrar.

Of these, 315 are full time students registered in the accelerated program. This total is apportioned among the various schools as follows: 109 in the School of Science; 91 in the School of Commerce and Finance; 89 in the School of Engineering; and 26 in the School of Arts. Resident students total 164; day students, 151.

Sophomores Lead List

The sophomore class has the greatest representation with a total of 92 students, the junior class is runner-up with 86, the seniors boast 84 members and the freshmen total 46. There are 7 special students.

Rev. Joseph C. Bartley, O. S. A., dean of the regular Summer School, reported to the registrar a total of 568 students enrolled in these sessions at Villanova. The nuns represent the largest single group with 506 students represented, 309 of which are graduate students; 182, undergraduates; and 15, library science students. In addition to 97 laymen and 20 laywomen, there are also 10 priests, 15 brothers, and 20 Augustinians to complete the list.

Seven Extension Schools

Fr. Bartley also enrolled 497 students in seven extension schools. There are 189 at Reading, 75 at Cornwells, 57 at Bernharts, 52 at Hallahan, 41 at Glen Riddle, 34 at Sea Isle, and 29 at Merion. Each of these schools are under the supervision of the Augustinian order for the summer.

Representatives in all the combined summer courses are found from fourteen states and the District of Columbia. The Far West is represented by Oregon, the North by Michigan and Massachusetts, and the South by Alabama, Virginia and North Carolina. Most of the states on the eastern seaboard are also listed. There are several students from Puerto Rico enrolled. The total number of religious communities represented is 48.

Student Council Plans "Summer Hop" On Aug. 28 In Unprecedented Move

By WARD C. GUNCHEON

Democracy still exists on Villanova's campus!

Although it was never in doubt, it made itself known last week when the Student Council, acting on the request of the student body, announced the first summer dance to be held in the history of the college. "The Summer Hop" will be held in the Field House, August 28, with dancing from 9:00 P. M. to 1:00 A. M.

Two weeks ago the Council distributed among the students questionnaires concerning the advisability of holding an informal dance during the present summer session. The results of the student polling were definitely in the affirmative with only a "no" here and there among the approximately four hundred questionnaires turned in.

Will Hire Local Band

After compiling the answers, Student Council President John J. Quinn announced the following plan for the dance. Music for the four hours of dancing will be supplied by a local orchestra.

Inasmuch as the "Villanovans," the band usually engaged for informal dances, is not organized for the summer session, a local band must be engaged. The Council will endeavor to make the selection of the band according to the names submitted on the questionnaires. However, the element of price is to be considered. Because of the rationing of tires and gas and the ban on bus and train travel of name bands, the local orchestras have been burdened with heavier bookings and have raised their prices accordingly. But a good band has been definitely assured.

Individual Assessments

Tickets for the dance will be placed on sale at $2.20 per couple, tax included. Again acting on the questionnaire response, the Council has placed an assessment on each individual student of $1.00. This amount will be applied towards the purchase price of the ticket, reducing it to $1.20.

The assessment has been levied by the Council in order that some definite action may be taken in regard to the signing of a band. The treasury of the Council has at the present time money sufficient only to meet its ordinary expenses. Since it is required that one-half of the total price of the band be paid on the signing of the contract, it was necessary to place the assessment.

A "No Profit Dance"

This assessment will also be an indication as to the top price which the Council can meet in the selection of an orchestra.

The dance is not being run for War Casualty List Of Villanova Men Increased To Five

Lang and Wanger, Former Science Students, Reported Killed and Missing by Marine and Navy Officials

The fourth and fifth Villanova casualties of World War II were announced last week by Marine and Navy officials. Marine Corps Staff Sergeant Walter A. Lang, Jr., was killed in an aircraft collision June 19. Lieutenant James C. Wanger, U. S. N., was reported missing in enemy action by the Navy department.

Sgt. Lang was enrolled at Villanova in 1938. After completing his freshman year in the science school he enlisted in the Marine Corps in September, 1939. Three years later he was graduated from the Naval Training Station at Pensacola, Fla. In February of this year he was assigned to a San Diego Base.

Member of Swimming Team

He met his death while in a fighter plane over Kearney Meca, near the base at which he was stationed. His plane crashed into another plane during maneuvers.

LT. JAMES C. WANGER

During his freshman year he was a member of the swimming team, a sport which he continued from his high school days at Upper Darby. He was an honor graduate of that school.

Lt. Wanger was a former member of the class of 1935 in the School of Science. He likewise completed only one year at Villanova, leaving here for Temple University Dental School. He completed the latter course in 1937. Six months later he was appointed a lieutenant in the Naval Dental Corps and was transferred to Norfolk, Va., station for training.

In Center of Action

Completing his training there, Lt. Wanger was given his first seagoing assignment aboard the U. S. S. Houston. This ship was later sunk in enemy naval action off the coast of one of the Dutch East Indies. Two months before the attack on Pearl Harbor, he was transferred to the Cavite Naval Base in the Philippines.

President Serves Manpower Board

Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., was one of a selected group of sixty college and university presidents invited to attend a meeting of the War Manpower Commission held last Wednesday and Thursday at the Lord Baltimore Hotel in Baltimore, Md.

Meeting to discuss the immediate problems confronting higher education and to suggest ways and means for developing a more effective utilization of it in the war effort, the group appointed a committee of nine to draw up, edit, and revise statements prepared as a result of the conference.

Harry W. Chase, president of New York University, was elected chairman of the committee which includes the following presidents besides Fr. Stanford: James B. Conant of Harvard, Donald J. Cowling of Carlton College, Edmund E. Bay of Cornell, Charles Diehl of Southwestern University, Charles E. Friley of Iowa State College, and William E. Wickenden of the Case School of Applied Science.

When the work of this committee has been completed reports will be sent to President Roosevelt, the Secretaries of War, Navy, and the Manpower Commission, and the Director of Selective Service.

Political Poison, Self-Administered

CRUEL the epithets, and caustic the criticisms which we Americans have so generously heaped upon our British allies for their costly blunders committed in the war thus far.

But on the vital question of inflationary control we must submit to a meek "volte face," for the British can rightfully boast of an efficient system which has been in operation since 1939 — even before they entered the war.

We, on the other hand, might well look homeward in this instance and put our own houses in order. For in this same battle against inflation our own Congress has reduced price control to little more than the proverbial political football.

Beset with the usual machinations of pressure groups and private interests, the Price Control Board, under the skillful administration of Leon Henderson, continues the struggle to establish at least a semblance of stabilization for rents, wages, profits, and prices.

But up to now the struggle has been a losing one. Congress has proved to be the fly in the ointment.

While the farm bloc holds out for parity prices and storms against rising war wages, labor unions on the other side of the fence shout with indignation at higher farm prices and view the sky-rocketing wage level with a practiced eye of approval.

And in the middle we find, as usual, the general public — interested but strangely silent bystanders.

The cause of the problem is as familiar as the problem itself.

Pre-occupied with their own political fortunes, our Senators and Representatives balk at the prospect of losing the weighty farm vote and recoil with experienced horror at the thought of alienating the affections of organized labor.

Blanket price legislation would naturally affect them all.

But why these shifty tactics on the part of Congress?

Have we forgotten? Election time is but a few months off!!!

How can the voters convince Congress that they are, as always, strongly in favor of sacrificing all private interests when our collective national safety is in danger?

There is one way. Should efforts at price control legislation prove a failure, those of our representatives who proved spineless in the crisis may well look to their laurels.

November will then see many new faces enter Congress.

The attempted pension grab and the X card furore have already caused Congress to lose face.

An abortion performed on price control would be a fitting climax — and a welcome goodbye to Congressional saboteurs.

Especially now do we need Courageous statesmen who know their own minds instead of the spineless politicians, who, with ear to the ground, miss their own death knell.

—T. F. D.

Aren't We Forgetting Something?

IN the hurried, often frantic preparation of materials for war effort it would perhaps be well to take time out for a moment to put first things first.

We make guns, we buy bonds, we build up our bodies, we train our minds—all with one purpose in view—victory. But in this concentration on things material we have almost entirely neglected things spiritual.

We wend our way to the Field House at least three times a week. Why? To build strong bodies to withstand the rigors of modern war. We go to the library at least three times a week? Why? To train our minds against the onslaughts of a materialistic philosophy during the war and to aid in the reconstruction of a better world after war.

This means we pass—and unfortunately all we do is pass—the chapel at least six times a week. How many time do we stop in—for just a minute, that's all God asks—to pray for the spiritual strength which we shall so sorely need in the very near future.

It might be objected that such fleeting visits will be of little or no lasting spiritual value. But who are we to measure the efficacy of the shortest visit, the most hurried aspiration? God waits, a Prisoner of Love, while we hurry on the gym and the library. And we're students in a Catholic college!

Judgment will be passed upon us as Catholic college students in proportion as we show some evidence of the religious training which is, after all, the distinguishing characteristic of any Catholic education. Let's not forget the first things first.

—T. F. D.

Can You Spare The Time?

PULL up a chair and sit down for a minute!

Let's take a look at this War Bond drive begun last week. Have you seen the stand in Mendel Hall? Yes, you've probably passed it, trying to look the other way. And you were late for class or that lunch in the Pie Shoppe or dining hall just couldn't wait. Too bad—so many soldiers, sailors, and marines were depending on you!

But what difference does it make to you that some poor fellow dies just because those extra pennies were not invested in War Bonds? Mind you the government doesn't ask you to give—but to invest!

You probably had the cash for that date last weekend or for that movie! Even if you didn't have the time, you made it. Pretty soft isn't it?—air-conditioned theatre, pretty girl, and nothing to worry you.

Strange how some people can be so complacent while others die to protect them!

Sure! Sit down for a while and take a look at what you have done for the American victory. As usual, you'll blame the British, you'll blame anyone who has had the courage to try and solve this "problem" —but will you help just a little? "Sorry, not today!"

We hope this isn't your answer!

FACULTY COMMENTS
The War And Inter-American Relations
By FR. McCARTHY

THE United States and the twenty nations of Latin America are currently riding a wave of mutual friendship and close political, cultural and economic relations. This is not a new phenomenon in the history of Inter-American relations. Previously, however, the periods of harmony and mutual understanding have been comparatively brief and separated by longer periods of distrust and dissension.

Differences in language, religion, political and social ideals and national objectives have tended to separate rather than unite the nations of the western hemisphere. Taken as a whole the history of the political, economic and cultural relations between the United States and Latin America has not been a happy one.

Heartening Change Effected

During the past decade, however, a most heartening change has been effected. Some factors contributing to this change go back much more than a decade, but it has been in these last years that such real progress has been made that there are sound reasons for hoping that the present trend will continue far into the future. Of these older factors contributing to closer Inter-American relations the two most important are the Pan-American Conferences and the first World War.

To date, eight Pan-American Conferences have been held, the first at Washington in 1889, the eighth at Lima in 1938. To these have been added recently special international meetings called to consider particular emergency problems arising out of the political and economic unrest of the world.

Importance Overlooked

The great importance of these conferences has sometimes been overlooked. This has been due to the fact that the dissensions and failures of the conferences have usually been more sensational, and therefore more highly publicized, than the many real and lasting improvements they have made in Inter-American relations.

The first major world event that tended to link the Americas more closely was the World War. Before 1914 the interest of the United States in Latin America was confined almost solely to Mexico, Central America and the Caribbean Islands. The larger nations of South America had little interest in the United States. Economically and culturally both North and South America looked toward Europe rather than toward one another.

Closer Economic Relationship

The war forced the two Americas into a closer economic relationship. It also brought home to them that they had a set of interests, a tradition, and certain political ideals that were distinct from those of Europe. While the dissensions of the post-war years did much to destroy the trend toward closer relations, the mutual interest and commercial relations begun during the war years remained as a foundation for further development.

The present friendliness between the two Americas can be attributed chiefly to three factors: the stabilization of most of the Latin American governments, the "Good Neighbor" policy of the United States and the world-wide disturbance caused by the depression and the present war.

Never Democracies

Latin American countries have never been democracies. Dictatorship has been, and still is, in most countries the ordinary form of government. In the more advanced countries, however, real progress in the nature of government and in the calibre of the ruling class has been made. Revolutions have become less common and as the countries have gained in economic strength, their political stability has become more marked.

The importance of the "Good Neighbor" policy in Latin American relations can hardly be overestimated. The name itself is merely a political catch phrase but the diplomatic practice of the United States under it has brought about a much better mutual understanding and closer political and economic ties.

Americas Closer Now

As was the case in the last World War, the present war, and the economic and political unrest that preceded it, has thrown the Americas closer together. Economic and political necessity has brought solution to many vexing problems and has cleared the path for a more closely united hemisphere.

The problem on both sides is to turn temporary needs into permanent advantages. The developments of the past ten years indicate that both the Americas realize the value of mutual friendship and help. It seems unlikely that either side will be willing to sacrifice the gains already made or will fail to see the need of even closer ties.

WELL, another term, another column; I'll do my best to wow em. That's what I told the editor at the beginning of the term. Then after I had missed the first few issues he told me something. So, with my typewriter and two index fingers I'm back on the job again. For the benefit of the new students; this is a column of college publication exchanges and various news items of interest. All complaints forwarded to the VILLANOVAN Office.

In the "Ram" of Fordham we find a story which might give us an idea as to a columnist's future . . . It's the truth; ask me.

"What have you done?" St. Peter asked,
"That I should admit you here?"
"I ran a column," the gentleman said
"In college for one long year."
St. Peter gravely bowed his head,
And gently touched the bell.
"Come in, poor thing, select your harp,
You've had your share of hell."

According to the following story in the "St. Bonaventure" very few people get drunk . . .

In moonshine country, whiskey looks like and is drunk like water. It's natural that there are different ideas as to when a man is actually drunk.

In the town one afternoon a man lay in the road, an empty or two beside him.

"He's drunk," said the sheriff, "Lock him up."

But a woman noted, pointing out, "No he ain't . . . I jest seen his fingers move."

The Hard Life:

Under the rules, soldiers in Sacramento, Cal., can be served hard liquor only between 6:00 P. M. and 10:00 P. M., while sailors can stand up to the bar and get anything they want as long as the place is open. This has caused all kinds of friction, as the soldiers have to drink beer after 10:00 P. M. and they dislike it when sailors taunt them with, "Why don't you join the Navy?"

There are also feminine complications. If a soldier has a girl friend, she quits him at 10 o'clock and goes over to the Navy.

A No-Prize Contest:

This year's Atlantic $10,000 Novel Contest has ended, and after eight weeks of deliberation, the judges have announced that not a single one of the 646 manuscripts submitted has been deemed worthy of the award.

Flying Frieghts:

This term will become an actuality after the war. The Army at present is producing a plane with a carrying capacity of two box cars. With its speed of 200 miles an hour, it will do the work of a 30 car train. It will be a common place thing to look up at a plane winging overhead and say: "There goes the Sante Fe overnight freight."

Too True:

Aren't women baffling . . . they climb chairs and scream at the sight of a mouse and then go out with a wolf.

All Out:

The senior pre-meds have become business minded since they've discovered how to make soap from egg yolks in the Bio-Chem lab. They might even decide to commercialize it . . . I can see it now . . . "Villanova Soap Works"; the vitamin soap fit to eat.

I Dood It!

First Moron: "What happened to your forehead?"
Second Moron:: "I bit me."
First Moron: "Yuh can't fool me. I know you couldn't do that."
Second Moron: "Yes I did, I stood on a chair."
First Moron: "Oh."

SPORTORIAL
By BILL WALSH, Sports Editor

Probably never before in the history of our country have athletics and a yen to become "physically fit" been so much in prominence as they are today. Japan's attack on Pearl Harbor last December 7th made America war-conscious, but it also did something else. It made young men all over the United States anxious to serve their country to the best of their ability. They discovered, however, that physical fitness was an essential requirement in being allowed to serve in any one of the armed forces.

It's true that before war was declared, the Selective Service Act had been in progress for over a year, but the requirements for the draft were not too hard for those who had no outstanding physical disabilities. Besides, we weren't at war at that time, and there was no ulterior motive for getting in condition as rapidly as there is today. At least fifty percent of the Selectees were quite certain that after their year or two of training was up, they would resume their soft civilian life again.

The declaration of war by President Roosevelt last December, however, aroused young men, and old men too, to a point where they could not wait to get in there and do something to "those dirty Japs."

Many Enlistments Refused

Enlistments came pouring in, but many were refused because they were deemed physically unfit for war service. After quite a number of these physical failures, Army and Navy officials all over the country suggested that Physical Fitness programs be inaugurated in all colleges throughout the nation. These ideas were carried out as "Hale America Programs," but it can't be said that they were too successful.

Realizing that something must be done to get the future officers of our Armed Forces in tip-top condition, compulsory Physical Training programs were then begun throughout the country, to bring the average collegian into line.

It is surprising, really, when you think of how many college students, the youth of our country, so to speak, try to avoid all forms of athletics. In spite of the fact that most fellows are extremely active in high school, college seems to bring a wave of laziness over them. With the exception of those who take part in intercollegiate and intramural athletics, most college students seemed deeply inclined toward indolence.

Compulsory Training Quite Successful

The "Hale America" program, although followed very religiously for a few weeks also fell by the wayside after a short time. This certainly cannot be said, however, of the Physical Fitness program. All students, regardless of their physical abilities, or lack of them, are going through the paces at least three times a week. Many fellows are realizing that they feel healthier than ever before in their lives, and they're liking it.

Officer Candidates Must Train

College men, despite the fact that they are better equipped mentally, than those who have not had the advantage of a college education, now realize they must be even better physical specimens than the average individual because the Army, Navy, and Marines require almost perfect condition of those candidates for commissions as 2nd lieutenants and Ensigns.. Thus, many college men have an added incentive in becoming "physically fit," and these individuals are undoubtedly working harder than the others who do not plan to enter Officer's Training School upon graduation.

We do think, however, that the War Conditioning programs throughout the country are a prime necessity, and an essential part of a college education. We therefore, strongly advocate the continuance of these compulsory programs ,even after the war has drawn to a close. Certainly better character, and better health result from this form of athletic endeavor.

Day Hop League Is Reorganized

The cry of "Play Ball" yesterday at noontime inaugurated a newly organized Dayhop Softball League and speculation was running high over the relative merits of the five evenly matched teams.

Calling for a reorganization of the previously existing lunchtime competition, Rev. Edward B. McKee, O. S. A., and Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O. S. A, last week met with the representatives of each team, and established a league that would be comparable to the Resident circuit.

Five Teams in Competition

Five teams have been "franchised" and will compete until August 7, at which time there will be crowned a First Half Champ. Then when the Second Half has been completed, there will be a playoff and a supreme Dayhop Champion will be determined.

It is hoped that the winner of this league will be able to meet the winner of the resident league in what will amount to Villanova's own "World Series."

The names of the new clubs are: Muses, Hybrids, Actors, Engineers, and Frosh. Four of the new squads have assumed different names, but the Hybrids, winners of four games while losing none in the old league, have kept their original moniker.

Last Week's Contests Nullified

It was agreed at the meeting last Tuesday that all the contests played last week would automatically be erased from the books. To do away with the many arguments which occurred last week, rules were agreed upon, in which the decisions of the umpires must be accepted. If the game is protested, the issue will be decided at a meeting of the team captains and the Moderators. These meetings will be held at regular intervals throughout the season.

Faculty Scores Over Mendel 6-5

In the third of the regularly scheduled contests between a student team, and that made up of members of the Faculty, staged last Friday night, the Faculty aggregation nosed out the Mendel freshmen 6-5, in a hard fought contest. Although Alumni, according to previous rulings was scheduled to engage the Faculty team again last week, the Freshmen squad, because of its remarkable improvement during the past two weeks was granted the privilege of playing last Friday. Alumni had played the week before, and the Moderators thought it only fair to give the spunky freshmen team a chance to display their prowess in one of these so-called exhibition games.

Freshmen Lose Early Lead

Having won four of their last six games, while tying two, the Freshmen seemed well on their way to a victory over the Priests, as they led at the end of four and a half innings by a score of 5-1. In their half of the fifth, however, the Faculty pushed across three runs to make the score 5-4, and, greatly aided by a ground rule triple by Fr. Kemme in the following frame, they added two more, to make the final score 6-5.

Faculty Has Won Two

With this victory, the Faculty now has a record of two victories and one defeat against the student teams. They have defeated Austin and Mendel, but lost out to Alumni. On Friday the softball diamond will be the scene of another of these Faculty vs. Student contests. Who the student team will be however, cannot be determined until next Thursday night.

Alumni Increases Lead In Softball Loop To 3 Games
Paruta Aggregation Wins Two and Ties One Last Week to Near First Half Title
By JOE DALY

As the softball teams enter the last stretch of the first half, the Green Wave of alumni is still firmly imbeded in first place. During the past week, although handicapped without the services of their captain, Tony Paruta, they won twice, and finished in a deadlock with the frosh in their other contest. The first of these wins for the Greenies was registered over Fedigan Hall last Tuesday, for all games scheduled for Monday were postponed until a later date.

Austin Wins two

Paruta sent Joe Portali to the mound, and, although he was touched for nine hits, he was able to bear down when it counted most. The Gigoloes were held to two runs while Alumni tallied five times. The other win was registered over the Austin Firemen who didn't put the fire out soon enough in this case and the league leaders eked out a close victory 5-4, giving them a lead of three full games over the second place Austin club.

De Blois Leads Batters

Austin still must be watched however, for although they are weak in the pitching department they boast the best sluggers in the league. Al DeBlois leads the batters with thirty-nine hits in seventy-two trips to the plate, thus giving him a lusty average of .555. Whity Kempf, with five homers, leads in that department. He has also driven in the most runs to date. During the last week they won one, lost one and tied with the frosh, for a five hundred average.

Their win was over the helpless Fedigan team, who have now lost six in a row and are giving Mendel a good battle for the cellar position. Their trouble seems to be a great lack of hitting power.

Frosh Deadlock With Austin

The Frosh were undefeated this week and were chosen as the team of the week to play the Faculty, last Friday. Opening up on Tuesday night, they stalemated with Austin Hall 5-all after leading 5-3. In the seventh frame Whitey Kempf poled out a homer with one aboard to give Austin two more runs. The game was not allowed to continue because of the eight o'clock rule, stating that an inning may not be started after eight o'clock.

Alumni Also Plays Tie Game

The following night the same rule was brought into effect in the game with Alumni. This was a very hotly contested game. Going up for the last bats the Gold Bugs were behind 8-6. Then three hits followed and it was 8-all with Jim Carbine on second and one away. Daly then grounded to Cahill who threw to first for the out. Meanwhile the speedy Carbine rounded third and made for home with the winning run, but he was a second late, for stubby "Doc" Coll dove and tagged the runner out, according to the umpire. The frosh immediately stormed the field with protest, but to no avail. The score stood at 8-all.

Carbine, Reagan Excel

Their final game was with the Redmen of Fedigan, who were subdued quite easily, contributing four errors to the Frosh cause. The game was featured by DiGeralamo's long round-tripper in the third, with the bases empty. Too fast double play executed by the best keystone combination in the league — Pat Reagan and Jimmy Carbine, aided the Frosh no little.

Eight more games remain to be played in the first half, and they will be staged this week.

The Standings

Team	W	L	T
Alumni	12	4	1
Austin	9	7	1
Fedigan	7	10	0
Mendel	4	11	2

Return Contest With Haverford Postponed
Last Night's Scheduled Game To Be Played Next Week; Two Other Encounters Also Scheduled For Villanova Intramural Stars
By JACK KOVAL

Despite the supreme eagerness of the Villanova Intramural All Stars to play the additional collegiate baseball clubs on their present summer schedule, last night's contest with nearby Haverford College had to be postponed because of unfavorable weather conditions. Every minute detail for the game had been taken care of very competently by Rev. Edward McKee, O. S. A., and Rev. John Dunne, O. S. A., but when it came time for the teams to go into action, the weather man stepped in and marred the plans.

The Haverford nine attempted to stage a practice session before game time, but had to give it up because their vision was almost entirely hampered by the settling fog. Under these conditions, a postponement was inevitable.

Game To Be Played On 29th

Arrangements have been made by the respective coaches of the Villanova and Haverford nines to play the postponed game on Wednesday, July 29. Fathers McKee and Dunne endeavored to have the contest played tonight, but unfortunately Haverford had a scheduled game with Swarthmore College.

In looking back over the initial contest of the All Stars, incidently with the same Haverford College nine, it could be seen that the chances for another victory over the Maroon and White were very great. Nevertheless, Haverford might have improved considerably, even though only one short week had elapsed. Their next meeting on the 29th of this month will reveal which is the better team, but as a result of the All Star's 8-3 victory over the Haverford squad last Monday, they, without any doubt, hold the edge.

Paruta And Graziano Injured

Due to unexpected injuries suffered by two of the All Stars, a few replacements were to be made in the regular lineup. Tony Paruta, spirited right fielder on the squad, injured his ankle while stealing second in last week's Haverford game. Scheduled to take his place in the number 9 spot, was "Frenchy" DeBlois, who otherwise pitches for the All Stars. He was the winning hurler in last Monday's contest, allowing but five hits. Shortstop Carmen Graziano also had to be removed from the lineup because of a side injury. Presumably taking over his post would have been Art Martin, who last week held down the first base position for the Wildcats.

Slated to take over the mound duties for the All Stars in last night's postponed game was "Rocky" Giannini, right handed hurler for the Blue and White. It would have been his first pitching assignment. He looked rather good in practice during the week and certainly could have performed his task in a capable manner.

Games Scheduled with Swarthmore

Besides the return game at Haverford next Wednesday, the Villanova All Stars have also scheduled contests with Swarthmore College on the fifth and 12th of August. These games will be played on a home and home basis, with the first encounter being staged at Swarthmore. No definite arrangements have been made, as yet, with regard to other contests, but more games will undoubtedly be scheduled in the next few weeks.

'Mural Tennis Victors Advance
First Round Completed, All Seeded Players Come Through As Expected

Under a scorching sun, the first round of the Intramural Tennis Tournament came to an end last Friday. Tom Quigley, fourth seeded player, eliminated Jack Bambrick in one of Monday's contests, 6-2, 6-1. Bill McDonald, seeded third, came through as expected against his first round cempetitor, John Surmont, but not without a tough fight. Surmont played an exceptionally good game but gradually fell before McDonald's steady attack, by scores of 6-3, 6-2.

Gavin Triumphs Easily

Top seeded player Austin Gavin scored an easy triumph over Steve Knapp. Gavin excelled his opponent in every respect. His overhead smashes and backhand drives kept Knapp on the run throughout the entire contest. He defended his top-seeded position brilliantly, and will undoubtedly glide through the early rounds very easily.

Jim Daly and Jim Carbine, two outstanding netmen among the freshmen, (Daly being fifth seeded) conquered their opponents without much difficulty. They both had love matches.

The greatest upset of the week occurred when Ray Baldwin triumphed over Panda Bradley. Bradley led early in both sets but Baldwin overcame the deficit on both occasions and won out 7-5, 6-4.

Daly Hard Pressed

Winding up the first round matches, was the contest between Joe Daly and Lou Fares. Daly, a member of last year's varsity squad and second seeded in the tournament, encountered great difficulty in the first set, due to the fact, that his service, usually the strongest part of his game, was definitely off. He had a powerful stroke but couldn't seem to keep the ball inside the boundary lines. He finally pulled himself together in the final set, however, and blotted out Fares by a score of 10-8, 6-2.

Other encounters of importance were those matches in which Lou Carideo beat Bill Schwerman, 6-0, 6-0; Angelo Macchia defeated Johnny Green, 6-2, 6-0; and Joe Elward upset Joe Silva, 6-4, 6-2.

Obstacle Gourse Altered Slightly

Having completed its sixth week, Villanova's Physical Fitness Program is still gaining in popularity with the majority of the students. The obstacle course, feature of the physical curriculum, was altered somewhat again last week, in order to make it just a little bit harder for the students.

Although the full course is not complete as yet, it is rapidly nearing completion. New balance runs were introduced last week, and are quite a bit higher than those which they replaced. They average thirty or thirty-five feet in length, and are 3½ feet in heighth. A new ladder, slightly longer than the previous one, was also in use last Thursday.

Ed McGovern still holds the record for 160 yards of the obstacle run at 34 seconds. No time trials were held last week, but are scheduled to be held in the very near future. After the next series of trials the record should be lowered to thirty seconds or less, as the students are becoming more familiar with the various obstacles at every class.

Daly Addresses Research Group

Last Wednesday evening, Joseph Daly, a junior science student, addressed the Research Seminar on "Psychology and Medicine." His talk emphasized the intimate connection between mind and body and the immense value that an exact knowledge of this connection would be.

Daly pointed out that medical authorities are now convinced that it is necessary to take both the mind and the body into consideration when effecting a cure. If the body is out of order the mental attitude changes; irritability and nervousness frequently appear.

Similarly, a troubled mind is often conducive to numerous bodily ills. There are too, many people who complain of disorders which are merely concoctions of their imagination. Thus, to heal, our medical men must be well acquainted with psychology as well as with anatomy.

Confidence Needed

By affirming the part played by the mind in curing the body, Daly stressed that medical circles were not advocating Christian Science, although it does have many practical advantages. There can be no doubt that a physician should have the full confidence of his patient in order to enact a cure.

In conclusion he impressed upon all the part to be played by psychology in the future. Daly stated that to the young medical student psychology presents a large field for advancement, for although the relationship between the human mind and the human body has been investigated to some extent, there is room for much further development. "The day of the country doctor has gone forever. This is the day of the specialist. We have discovered great surgeons, there are many eminent men of medicine, but there are still few to treat the mind."

At the next meeting of the Research Seminar, Melvin Samuels, another junior science student, will speak on "Physiological Chemistry and Medicine."

Lights Out!

For the second time since the beginning of the summer semester, Villanova will take part in a state wide blackout tomorrow evening.

As in the past, all lights must be out or screened from outside view. The time of the blackout will not be revealed. It will be signalled by the ringing of bells in the campus buildings. Severe penalties will be imposed upon violators of blackout regulations.

Registrar Attends Reserve Conference

Paetrus F. Banmiller, college registrar, represented Villanova at a joint meeting called last Monday by the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps College Procurement Commission at the University of Pennsylvania for colleges located in the Third Army Corps Area.

The purpose of the meeting was to devise a method of coordinating the efforts of each of the three services in recruiting college students for the various Reserve programs.

A similar meeting was held July 16 in New York City for colleges in the New York State and New England area.

profit, Quinn said. It has been announced as a "student body" dance and as such will not be credited to any individual class. Members of Student Council in their capacity as student representatives will act as general chairmen, combining the activities of the several sub-committees appointed.

To date, five sub-committee chairmen have been appointed. Thomas F. Devine, senior artsman, will handle the publicity committee. George N. Eriksen, Jr., senior science student, has been placed in charge of the ticket committee, while refreshments will be arranged for by a committee headed by Nicholas Eni, senior scienceman.

Decorations will be designed and erected by Richard J. Ryan, junior commerce student. The assembly of the program details will be under the chairmanship of Edward A. Fanelli, another junior commerce student. The head of the patron committee has not as yet been appointed.

The sub-committee chairmen will meet later this week to select those students who will assist them in their work.

Cooperation of All Needed

This week the Council will appoint to each class and each school a student to collect the dollar assessment. Upon payment of this the student will be given a receipt which when submitted with $1.20 will entitle the student to a dance ticket. Tickets will be placed on sale three weeks before the dance.

Meet The Boys:

Ed Cubler Establishes Standards Of Gallantry For Future Villanovans

By TOM GOWEN

ED CUBLER gives an Aleo Templeton touch to the Villanova campus. He can combine in a program the latest swing with the best of classical music delightfully. And his gallant fight in gaining a college education against great odds matches the blind pianist's battle against a similar affliction.

Born in Philadelphia in 1920, Ed attended St. Mary's Institute for the Blind in Lansdale for his elementary and high school training. Besides learning, he also taught other students mathematics and Spanish. His scholastic attainments include medals for algebra and highest honors. For two years he led his class and won a ring for scholastic and extra curricular ability.

A Consistent Student

Ed's first contacts with and first attractions to Villanova were formed on his various visits to the campus. The tremendous task of acclimating himself to collegiate routine was aided immeasurably by his roommate and reading companion, Chuck Callahan. The success with which he has assimilated Chuck's reading is attested to by the fact that through three years Ed has placed in the upper quartile of the class.

His work on the piano is, of course, his favorite diversion. He studied the instrument for nine years at St. Mary's. He numbers Chopin's "Nocturne in E Flat," Shubert's "Unfinished Symphony," Paderewski's "Minuet," and the Nutcracker Suite of Tschaikowski among his favorite classical selections.

Has Swing Favorites, Too

"The Jersey Bounce" tops his swing selections, and the modern ballads receive his approving nod.

Pinochle and poker are his favorite vices. In this connection he relates an amusing tale about his winnings.

His victims have at times expressed some suspicion at his agility with a deck of cards; he seems to anticipate their every move. When pressed Ed admits that the bottom of each card is marked in Braille and that it is a rather easy matter for him to deal aces to the proper parties. In all fairness it must be admitted, however, that Ed usually deals from the top of the deck—or so he says.

A Busy Man

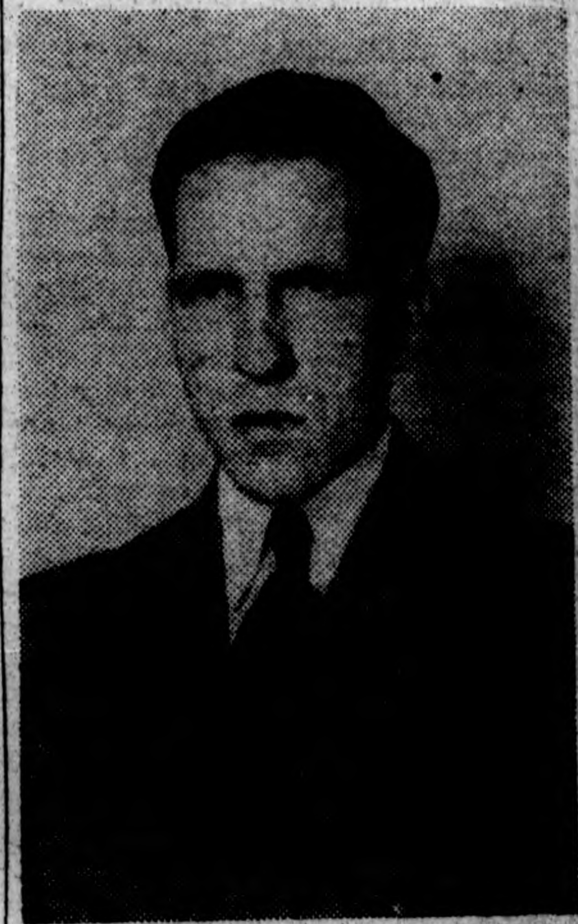
Ed has found time for many activities on the campus. He is a member of the Glee Club, the Music and History Seminars, and has held honorary memberships in the Belle Masque Society, and Delta Pi Epsilon, the commerce school fraternity. Last year he was the honorary chairman of the Junior Dinner-Dance Committee.

Sports have always rated high on Ed's list. His favorites are football, in season, and baseball all year 'round. Although the Cardinals are his pets, he thinks Brooklyn and the Yankees will win pennants in their respective leagues. When the home teams play good ball, he is a staunch rooter.

He Even Plays Baseball

Ed described a system of baseball used by the students at St. Mary's Institute. A catcher, pitcher, two infielders, and two outfielders play. A regulation softball is rolled to the plate by the pitcher. When hit, the ball is fielded by sound as it whizzes over the ground. Possible hits are a single, double and home run.

Usually Ed pitched, but one time he played the outfield. Hearing a hard line drive coming at him, he instinctively put down his glove to field it. The ball came straight into his glove. The batter attempted to stretch the hit to a double, so instead of throwing the ball back to the infield, Ed ran from the outfield to second base in time to block the base and tag the runner out. Besides baseball he swims and turns out for an occasional calesthenics session in the Field House.



Plans Salesman's Career

When school is finished next February, Ed wants to travel to California to see his ninety-year-old grandmother. Then he intends to start his business career. He would like to become an inside salesman, and later a traveling salesman. Ed's second ambition is to organize a band.

In all the uncertainty that surrounds a young man's future in these times, we feel certain that Ed will be successful in the career he undertakes. His irrepressable good humor, his open friendliness, and his disarming charm make him at all times a welcome companion; his courage, determination and cheerfulness in the face of seemingly insurmountable difficulties make him a friend to be emulated and admired.

Shall We Be Found Wanting?

IN the hot and incredible hell that was Pearl Harbor on Sunday, December 7, a Villanova man was shot down in the line of duty. After long weeks in Australian hospitals Lt. Bert Passanante returned to America — with one leg shot off.

Over rugged California mountains into the raw December wind flew another Villanova man. Two weeks later the jagged remains of the bomber were found with the body of Lt. Ben Maloney.

Two months later a third Villanovan, Lt. Dennis Dowling, plunged into the waters of Massachusetts Bay when the pursuit plane which he was piloting crashed into the waters at a terrific speed.

Two weeks ago Navy and Marine officials listed two more Villanova men as missing and dead. Lt. James C. Wanger, U. S. N., is perhaps a prisoner of war. Staff Sergeant Walter Lang died in an airplane crash near his San Diego base.

Heroes all. Yes, and Villanovans all, too. Their unselfish devotion to their country finds a sad commentary in the actions of their fellow Villanovans, however. We who are fortunate enough to remain in college are not, it is true, likely to have the opportunity of displaying such splendid courage while we are here. But we have been asked to fight in our own way, to buy Savings Stamps and Bonds.

Last year the Student Council made some efforts to inaugurate a drive among the students for the purchase of stamps. At that time, unfortunately, little progress was made. The fault lay with the Council. With the opening of the summer semester this fault was speedily corrected. An initial purchase of stamps was made by the Council, for resale to the students. Response to the drive has been little short of disgusting.

While a few students recognize their duty — and it is a duty — the great majority feel that "they also serve who only stand and wait." In this war, though, nobody who stands and waits is helping the country to win.

In the final analysis, just how much is the college student doing for the war effort? He is, of course, training his mind so that he will be that much more valuable to his country when he has completed his course. That military officials recognize the value of such a contribution is indicated by the extensive reserve programs designed to enable college students to complete their education.

But apart from this, which requires no real sacrifice on the part of the student, how much does he realize that now we cannot expect to keep the level tenor of a life we have so loved? Not very much, if we are to judge by his response to the Savings Stamp sale.

As a whole, the college has invested more than $50,000 in Savings Bonds, but these funds represent, for the most part, the money deposited in the Scholarship Funds by graduating classes. The individual student is not accounted for in this contribution.

There is no need to list here the purchase of vital war commodities that can be made with even the smallest investments in Savings Stamps. These figures have been brought to our attention on numerous other occasions.

The point is not what even the most modest help in the war effort will do, it is rather to what extent we are willing to sacrifice our personal satisfaction to gain the greater satisfaction of playing a part in aiding our country. Villanova students are now on trial. Their duty is plain. No exceptions have been made in the requests for financial support of our armed forces. Other Villanova men have seen their duty, and in the face of much greater sacrifices, have unswervingly embraced it. Let them not find us wanting.

"Mikado" Selections On Music Program

Highlights from Gilbert and Sullivan will be presented tomorrow at 12:40 P. M. by Dr. E. L. Haenisch in room 215 Mendel Hall. The most popular selections from the operettas "The Mikado," "H. M. S. Pinafore," and "Pirates of Penzance" will constitute the program.

The program tomorrow is in line with the new policy of the Music Seminar to alternate a light program with a heavy one. Last Wednesday an all Wagnerian program was presented with the Siegfried Idyll as the featured work.

Next week, the compositions of Mozart will be featured.

Doctor To Address Science Students

Dr. Henry Dintenfass, a Philadelphia medical specialist, will address a combined meeting of the Science Seminar, the Science Forum, and L. K. D., science school fraternity, at 7:00 P. M. on Thursday, August 6.

Through the showing of several motion pictures, he will illustrate his talk on "The Ear, Nose, and Throat with the latest operational techniques and treatments.

An associate professor in the University of Pennsylvania, of which he is a graduate, Dr. Dintenfass gave a similar demonstration at Villanova four years ago.

Too Much Of This —

While students at college cluster around the soda fountain, other young men in uniform are asking for their financial support in the way of purchases of United States Savings Bonds and Stamps. The scene above is typical. Ice cream and coke sales mount during the hot summer months, the cigarette dispensers are busy, long waiting lines form at the pinball machines. The average Villanova student is content to think that life shall go on as usual. And life as usual means for him all those little luxuries that his government is asking him to do without, to forego for regular investments, however small, in the defense of his country.

Not Enough Of This —

The student making his purchase of Savings Stamps (above) is one of the all too few who have recognized that their part in the country's war effort does not consist in passive recognition that a state of war exists. While Student Council officials, who are directing the sale of stamps, declared that the drive was meeting with "fair success," they noted that rather large purchases are being made by relatively few students. The appeal made to all the students has, as usual, met with the response of a few who are bearing the burden of all. The Stamp table is located in the main corridor of Mendel Hall. Student Council representatives are on duty every day between 12:30 and 1:30 P. M. to exchange savings stamps for your dimes and quarters. Books will be issued on the initial purchase; keep adding stamps regularly until the book is filled. Student Council members will then exchange your book for a bond of the proper denomination.

To Pay For This

Pictured above are the low-winged, 450-horsepowered monoplanes used for basic training at Randolph Field, "West Point of the Air." Money invested in Savings Stamps go a long way toward defraying the cost of these and thousands of other implements of war. The familiar phrase "War costs money" has been heard often; just how much will your Savings Stamps investment buy? The money required for a $500 bond will enable the government to buy 25,000 .45 caliber cartridges; $250 in bonds will fire a .50 caliber anti-aircraft gun more than a thousand times; $200 in bonds will buy forty steel helmets for Uncle Sam's fighting men.

Army Outlines Reserve Corps Enlistment Plan

Students Must Present Birth Certificate, Parents' Consent and Letter From College at Recruiting Office

Procedure to be followed for enlistment in the Enlisted Reserve Corps was outlined by the Army last week in a letter to college authorities. The details were released by Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O. S. A., assistant to the president and liaison officer to the Army at Villanova. The plan is temporary and will be in operation only until regular recruiting parties are authorized to be sent to the campus.

According to instructions contained in the letter, a student who is liable for immediate induction and who desires to enlist under the plan must first proceed at his own expense to the nearest recruiting station with a birth certificate, parental consent, if a minor, and a letter from the college certifying that he has been approved and is included under the official quota allotted to the college.

Advance Arrangements Needed

It is necessary that arrangements be made in advance with Fr. McQuade before students present themselves at the recruiting office.

Established recruiting offices for the Third Corps Area are located at Philadelphia, Wilkes-Barre, Harrisburg, Erie, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Richmond, and Washington, D. C. The Philadelphia office is in the Customs House.

The Army Enlisted Reserve Corps is the latest of the programs designed for college men who are subject to induction under the Selective Service Act. The program will provide a reservoir of officer

No Enlistment After Induction Order

Quoting from a recent circular received from the Third Service Command of Baltimore Army Corps Headquarters, Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O. S. A., announced today that, "Any student who has not actually enlisted in the Army Reserve Corps before receiving orders to report for induction under the Selective Service Act, will be unable to enlist in the reserve program. Receipt of an induction order before enlistment immediately places a registrant in the Selective Service draft."

Menseck Directs Program Group

William R. Menseck, senior commerce student, has been named to head the Patron Committee for the Summer Hop, John J. Quinn, president of the Student Council, announced today. Aiding him in the preparation of the souvenir program will be Arthur R. Smith, senior engineer, and George W. Famiglietti, also a senior commerce student.

A member of Delta Pi Epsilon, commerce fraternity, and a participant of intramural athletics, Menseck aided in the decorations for the Junior Prom last year.

Committees Named

Members of several other committees were also named by the respective chairmen. Assisting Thomas F. Devine in handling publicity will be Ward C. Guncheon and William F. Friel, senior accounting majors. Edward A. Fanelli, commerce freshman, will work with George N. Eriksen, Jr., in the preparation and distribution of tickets.

The band committee, composed of Quinn and Devine, is considering local orchestras and plans an announcement in the near future. The committee stated that every effort is being expended to obtain the band indicated as most popular in the recent poll.

Submarine Menace: Our Second Front

INSPIRED by the United States naval victory at Midway—the first to break a seemingly endless chain of reverses—Americans have been loud and long in their clamor for a second war front.

Many of us have been only too anxious to grasp at this slender ray of hope in an effort to reinforce the traditional confidence placed in our armed forces.

Our unshaken pride in American arms has led us to expect and to demand immediate offensive action against the enemy. Our patriotism in this instance seems to have overcome our better judgment.

Self-styled military experts and arm-chair strategists have jammed the airwaves and cluttered the daily newspaper columns with illogical demands for a large-scale attack on Norway, or for an invasion of the French coast.

But the significance of vital details, such as troop transports, cargo ships, air escort, and naval convoys has been lost amid the insistent hue and cry.

Such second front advocates show an utter disregard for the supply of these weapons which are indispensable for a sustained long range attack.

The record shows that in all these weapons we are woefully lacking. Especially critical is our shortage of cargo ships and naval patrol vessels.

According to the latest figures compiled by the War Shipping Administration, 363 merchant ships were sunk by enemy submarines operating in the Atlantic between January and June.

For this same six months period only 228 new ships were launched. Thus we net a shipping deficiency of 135 vessels for the past six months despite the fact that our production quota of a ship a day has been reached.

We are still losing ships faster than we can build new ones.

How can we possibly expect our military leaders to undertake any large scale offensive in view of these facts? Troop transports cannot cross these dangerous waters nor can supply lines be maintained.

Anxious as we all are to bring the battle to the enemy's shores, no possible move can be made until the Atlantic submarine menace is solved once and for all.. The loss of sorely needed shipments to our British and Russian allies proves the hazard of these shipping lanes. Perhaps the solution lies in the use of air transports—flying freight cars.

Let the chronic "experts" retire into their shells of ignorance. The Allied High Command has no need of their advice nor should we permit their deliriums to arouse us.

Our confidence in our military and naval staffs has been well placed. They e equal to the problem. Let them decide the time and place for a second front.

Long years of experience and intimate familiarity with the problems peculiar to such a strategy have made them far more competent to handle the problem than the so-called militarists who shoot off no bigger cannon than their own mouths.

No Shortage Of "Beef"!

PHILADELPHIA papers have recently carried front page stories on the shortage of beef throughout the country.

We're inclined to disagree.

We haven't heard so many "beefs" about the war, about gas rationing, about the British and everything else, in many a year. There's no shortage of beef in this respect.

But take a look at the ones who are increasing our surplus of "beef." In most cases they are the ones who, when deliberate and swift action was needed, passed hte "buck" and decided to let George do it.

Well, George did. George had the courage to take action when others backed out. Now George is the one to suffer.

To the nation's "Georges" we take off our hat. We know you have made mistakes. But we understand the many possibilities of error which confronted you. We know of the many obstacles — the refusals of the "buck passers" to realize the seriousness of the war—which you have encountered. We know that you recognize your errors and are willing to accept the help of those willing to give it.

Keep at it, George; it's people like you who have made this country what it is!

Higher Education Makes Its Stand

THOSE of us who are faced with the dilemma of continuing in college or enlisting in some branch of the armed forces will be interested in the note of encouragement sounded recently by the American Council on Education.

At a special meeting of college and university presidents, at which our president, Fr. Stanford was a committee member, a seven point program to coordinate higher education with the war effort was drawn up.

Deploring the government's failure to utilize students and educational facilities to the fullest advantage, the Conference strongly advised the adoption of a plan which would recognize the following considerations:

Higher education, while indispensable to our national welfare, must not and need not interfere with the winning of the war.

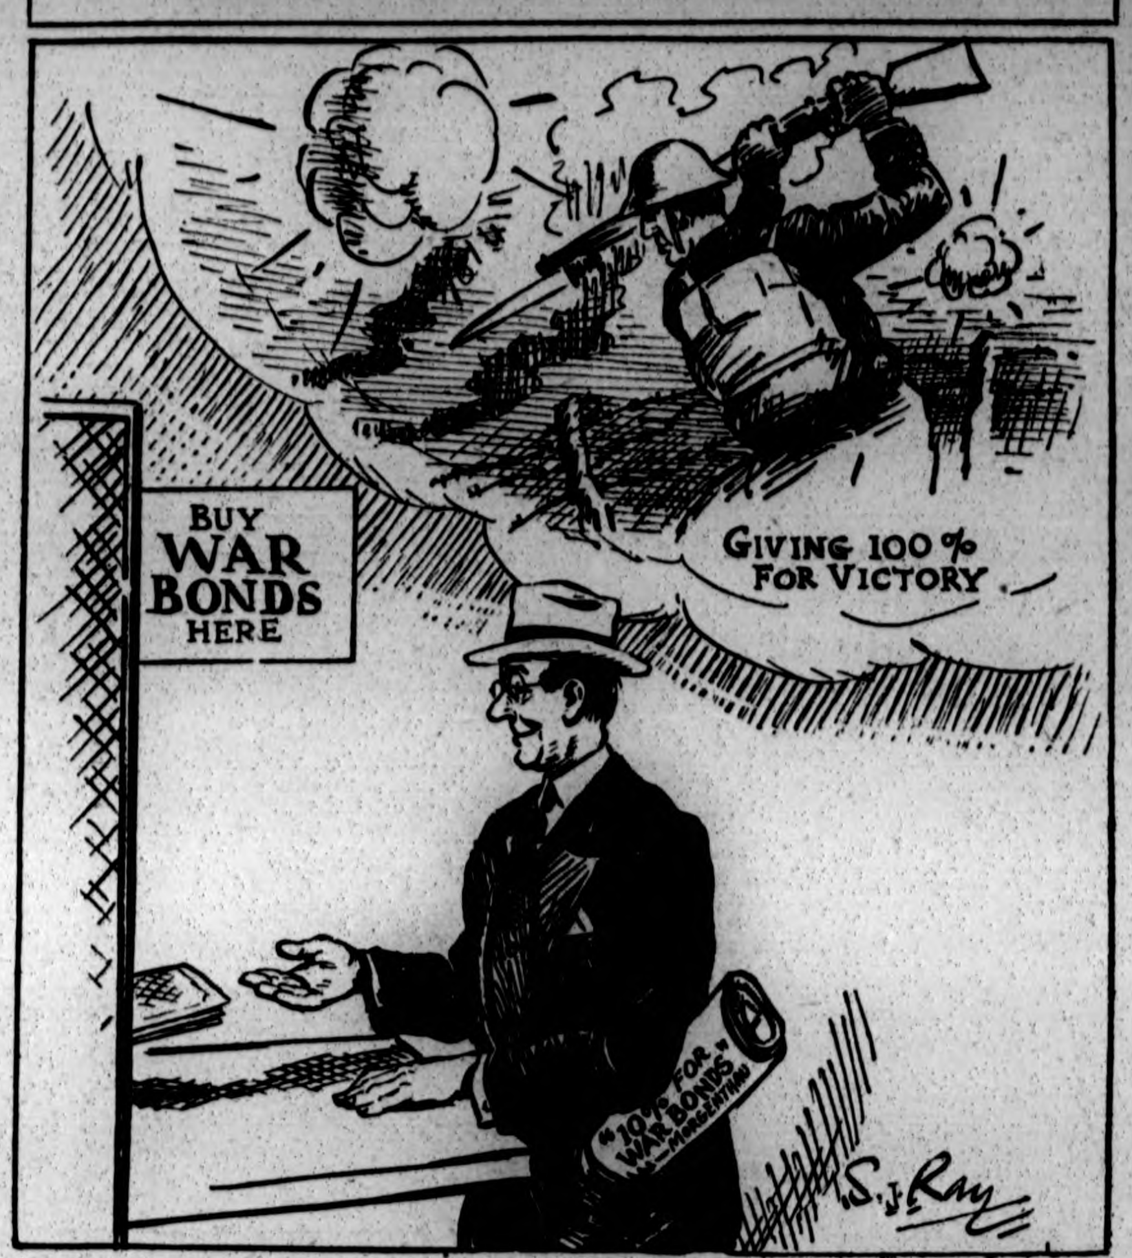
Through the provision of year round instruction and other changes, higher education has already demonstrated its readiness to devote its energies to the war effort.

While only 12 percent of the men inducted into the army are college graduates, the army has selected 80 percent of its officer candidates from this group.

Many intellectually qualified students are turned down for military service because of the strict physical standards. The army's preference for near physical perfection even for non-combatant officers has relegated mental ability to an insignificant role.

There is no need to debate the value of college trained men. This has already been established both in times of peace and in times of war.—R. T. C.

Where Ten Per Cent Is Little



FACULTY COMMENTS

Philosophy And Wartime Living

By FR. DWYER

WHEN a nation is at war in the struggle for its very existence the citizens become workers and fighters. It is the part of the patriot to abandon some of his peace-time activities. He steps up others to an intense degree. The genius of mechanical and administrative ability moves into full harmony with the destroying power of fighting men. Life takes on a pattern more complete in its social embrace than any other human activity is able to exercise.

Politics, religion, education, though they endure longer than war, are less rigid in their demands for uniformity, more tolerant in suffering contradiction. Despite its horrors, war appears to be man's most engrossing and exhausting occupation. If we judge our adult playthings by the attention which they can hold, war fixes our gaze while the rest compete weakly against each other for a five minute recognition.

War Was Always Total

War swallows more blood, material, enterprise, and effort than any peaceful pursuit. It was total in this sense long before the name became jargon. From the first time that nation took up arms against nation war has always made demands up to and beyond what flesh and blood can stand.

The second world war of our generation has several aspects which make it novel and ultramodern. One is from the side of those who must be prepared to make a total sacrifice. Civilian participation in offensive and defensive position has displaced the side-line rooting of loyal but helpless fans. Food seems to be about the only basis for distinguishing soldiers and civilians. Soldiers must get enough, civilians should be grateful for any.

Other Distinctions Useless

Other distinctive characteristics which occur to me haphazardly, uniform, weapons, sentry duty, heroism and calm under fire are as meaningless as breathing, swearing, or gas masks in differentiating civilians and soldiers. This novel phase of World War II is the result of a second and deeper change in war attitude.

Only starry-eyed immaturity sees the conflict between human freedom and human bondage settled to a nicety forever and ever in the post-war world. Prudent men and women are brave enough to be able and willing to foresee at least a minimum of delusions and disappointments. But they see, too, that according to plan some idols will fall.

Life Requires Hope

Our present travail pulses with ideals far beyond the defense of vested interests, be they industrial, imperial, political. The old distinction between the "haves" and the "have nots" has given way to a new contradiction of the "living" and the "dead." To live without hope of freedom is spiritual death. Men live in prison but only in the hope of release.

It is an axiom in the history of human thinking that great upheavals are prepared by decades or even centuries of seething aspirations. Is it possible that our contradicting generation will prove this axiom invalid? Is it possible that after the crater overflows and burns out the low-lands there will be no scenic crater cold and dead to which we can point? Shall we force the high points of human endeavor to erupt so violently that we shall no longer be able to see them on the horizon? Will man's undue ambition for riches, and power, and divinity, and knowledge destroy the restraining cliffs and crags to leave him helpless in poverty, weakness, deviltry, ignorance? That is the fullness of contradiction and the void of destruction.

Reason Not Excluded

Our age must be active, resourceful, constructive in its mentality, all the more because soldier and civilian alike will not be content with being handed a gun or helmet inscribed—This is Life. We must be allowed, even moved to cherish in heart and head the things of the living. Even God Himself, whose will is at times so far beyond our reach, whose wisdom is our folly, did not run the danger of confusing us by calling death the reward of living.

It is gratifying to note that the leaders of our people have refrained from declaring Philosophy "out for the duration." The temptation to demand only guns and tanks to the exclusion of reason, ideas, and ideals seems so attractive that we must gaze in admiration toward those whose foresight is great enough to see that this is a war of and for the people. They must preserve the will to live if they are to fight for life.

Assessment Collectors Appointed This Week

Lists of students in each school and class who have been authorized by the Student Council to collect the $1.00 assessments for the forthcoming "Summer Hop" will be posted this week, Council President John J. Quinn announced today.

The money paid by each student will be credited against the purchase price of his ticket, leaving a remainder of $1.20, tax included.

Information Needed:

The tiny villages in the interior of Mexico have little or no means of communication. Sometimes it takes months for news to travel to the hills. When Mexico declared war, messages were sped to the police officials throughout the country, announcing: "We are now at war. Arrest all enemy aliens." One police official in the southern part of Mexico sent a reply: "Have arrested two Americans, two Italians, three Germans, one Englishman. Now please advise with whom we are at war."

In this column last week we attempted to show the need of Physical Fitness programs throughout our colleges, and particularly during this time of war. We advocated these Conditioning plans because there are so few college students who would otherwise take part in athletic competition. We also stated that the Armed Forces gave preference to men who were athletically inclined, not simply because of their better physical condition, but also in view of their experience in competition, and their ability to contest with their fellow man. To further illustrate the importance of athletics in American life, we will give a few examples of the high positions now held in the Armed Forces by former athletes.

Tunney a Commander

First, and by far the most important, is Gene Tunney, who, I am sure, is greatly admired by every living Catholic today, as well as the great majority of the rest of the world. An endless string of stories illustrate his fine character before and after he retired as undefeated Heavyweight Champion of the world. The Navy Department, realizing this, accepted Gene as the head of its Physical Fitness program, and this same former boxing champion presently holds the rank of Commander in the United States Naval Reserve.

Cochrane Coaches Great Lakes Team

Another outstanding figure in the American sporting world, and one known to all baseball followers is "Mickey Cochrane," who now holds the rank of Lieutenant, in his capacity of coach of the Great Lakes Naval Training Station baseball team. This Great Lakes aggregation further illustrates the fact that the heads of our Armed Forces realize the importance of athletic competition even after an individual is in the service. Lieutenant Cochrane has on his squad such former big league notables as Bob Feller, Sam Chapman, Fred Hutchinson, and Johnny Rigney, to mention only a few of his galaxy of stars. These men, because of their work in the big leagues before enlisting, are still permitted to enjoy their favorite sport, as Uncle Sam realizes the morale built up by these numerous contests in which the team engages.

Coaches Also Receive Commissions

To enter another field of athletic endeavor, we find that many football coaches have also obtained high positions in the forces of our country. The most recent is the elevation of Dr. John B. (Jock) Sutherland, former Pitt mentor, and more recently coach of the Brooklyn Dodgers in the National Professional Football League, to the rank of Lieutenant Commander in the Navy. Also deserving mention here, is Bernie Bierman, who presently holds the rank of Major in the Marine Corps, and is actively engaged as head football coach at Iowa University's Pre-Flight Training school. Bernie, who has coached more National Champions than any other coach in football history, has a wealth of material on his hands at the Training center and should have little trouble in making a first rate team out of his charges at the Midwestern Air school.

Faculty Triumphs

In the fourth of the regularly scheduled contests between a student team, and that made up of members of the Faculty, staged last Friday night, the Faculty aggregation trimmed Joe Barry's Fedigan team by a score of 9-6. This was the second straight victory for the Faculty, and their third in four starts, thus giving them a percentage of .750 to date.

They were defeated by Alumni, the first half champions of the Student league, but gained victories over the other three teams, namely: Austin, Mendel, and Fedigan.

So, at the end of the first half of the Student Competition, the Priests hold a decided advantage over their foes, and are destined to hold this advantage until the competition is resumed on August 7.

First Half Champions

Alumni Gains First Half Title In Softball League

By JACK KOVAL

Alumni Hall, branded a winning ball club from the beginning of the Intramural Softball League six weeks ago, succeeded in living up to its motto, "Never Give Up," throughout the season thus far, and finally attained its prized objective of winning the first-half flag honors. Even though they were subject to creased pressure during the past two weeks from the other three teams in the circuit, they managed to repel their opponent's desperate thrusts, made to dislodge them from the leading spot in the league. The Green Wave crossed the first half finish line a good four and a half games in front of its nearest rival.

Frosh to Lose Reagan and Hobbs

Expected, but nevertheless surprising, was the way that the Mendel ball club retaliated from its long losing streak at the start of the season. During the past two weeks the Freshmen have been burning up the league, defeating the upperclassmen time and again. Bad news, however, is in store for the frosh, for two of the main cogs in their playing machine, Pat Reagen and Jimmy Hobbs, will be forced to hand in their yellow cap and shirt. Both are attending summer school and it will terminate, sad to say, on August 12.

Portali Leads Hurlers

Both Austin and Fedigan were partially successful at the beginning of the season in that they had at one time or other led the league. But as time went on, and with Alumni establishing a seven-game winning streak, both Austin and Fedigan had to enviably relinquish the lead to the stron Alumni aggregation.

Worthy of note in the pitching department of the teams is the way that Joe Portali, hurler for the Alumni squad, has kept his team in first place by means of capable pitching. He has a record of eight wins and three losses, and has given up but one base on balls, which certainly is to be regarded as a noble achievement.

Fedigan Wins Three

Possessing the best offensive record of last week's closing games in the first half, Fedigan hall emerged victorious in three out of their four contests. They were defeated only by Alumni 9-3. Joe Barry, manager and pitcher of the Gigiloes, indeed had plenty on the ball in the four games, and succeeded in bringing his team into second place in the final first half standings.

Mendel hall's record was a 5-5 deadlock with Austin, a 6-4 victory over Alumni, a 9-8 setback by Fedigan, and an 8-2 trouncing of Austin.

The Alumnites suffered two defeats last week. One was to Mendel 6-4, and the other a 9-2 beating by Fedigan's Gigiloes. In the remaining two contests, Fedigan was beaten 9-3, and Austin 2-1. The latter game is to date the lowest scoring game played in the league.

Austin in Slump

Certainly in a slump last week was the Austin nine, which for the first time, didn't succeed in winning a game at all. Their best performance was a 5-5 tie with Mendel. In the other three contests they were defeated by Fedigan, Alumni, and Mendel by the respective scores of 8-2, 2-1, and 8-2.

Due to the fact that examinations are in progress this week, there will be a week's intermission before the hectic second half gets under way. Games will probably be resumed on Monday, August 3.

Hybrids Set Pace In Dayhop League

Win Their Only Contest for Percentage of 1.000; Muses in Second

By JOE CARBINE

From the first few games that have been played in the new Dayhop Softball League, it is evident that all of the contests are going to be hard fought right down to the last contest. After a week of competition, it is discovered that every team has at least one victory to its credit, with one club, the Hybrids, having yet to lose. The first game was played last Monday between the Actors and the Muses, with the former emerging the victor to the tune of 4-1. The Actors looked like the team to beat in this first game, but since that time their play has fallen off, and they now find themselves occupying the cellar.

Muses Win Two

The Muses, composed principally of Arts students, started the competition by dropping their first two encounters, but they have come back strongly to win the most number of games, and are second in the league standings. Last Thursday, they exploded all of their potent power to drive the previously invincible Freshman pitcher, DiLuigi, from the mound and win the game 8-1. The victory was marked by the stellar play of John Quinn and Joe Hagerty, a flashy keystone combination, both of whom hit the ball hard. Lou Esposito, a converted outfielder, has been on the mound in each of the Muse victories. His best pitch is a well-controlled slow ball.

Hybrids Powerful at Plate

The Hybrid team is being helped by two power hitters, Carmen Graziano and Lou Centanni, both of whom play with the Intramural All-Stars. Together with Nick Sachetti they are batting 1.000, and are the principal reasons for the Hybrids being favored to cop the "pennant." No one, however, is selling any of the rival clubs short, chiefly because each team possesses the capability to defeat the others.

The work of George Harris in getting the league started is worthy of a vote of thanks. He has drawn up the schedule for the season's games, and is keepin a constant check on the league standings and the batting averages.

Intramural Stars Meet Haverford Tomorrow Night

Postponed Game, Originally Scheduled for Last Monday To Be Played Wednesday; Second Contest for Villanova

Provided Jupiter Pluvius doesn't interfere once again, the Villanova Intramural All-Stars will tackle the Maroon and White nine from Haverford College tomorrow night, in their second contest of the present campaign. This encounter was originally scheduled for last Monday evening, but an afternoon shower postponed the diamond proceedings until tomorrow night.

This will be the second game between the two clubs, and inasmuch as the series was arranged on a home and home basis, tomorrow evening's contest will take place at Haverford. The first engagement between these two Main Line rivals was played at Villanova, and was a rather one-sided contest in which the Wildcats handsomely trimmed the Maroon and White by a score of 8-3.

Haverford Has Beaten Swarthmore

Since that time, however, Haverford has engaged in two contests, while the All-Stars have remained idle. This gives Haverford a decided advantage, and they should show much improvement over their previous "Comedy of Errors," in which they made six costly miscues. They were easily defeated by Pennsylvania Military College 9-0 in a lopsided tilt ten days ago, but then bounced back to beat Swarthmore in a very close game last week 7-6. This was their second win over the Garnet nine.

Haverford Has New Moundsman

Coach Randall, of Haverford, uncovered a new twirler in this contest, in the person of one Roy Hopkins. Hopkins allowed the Garnet batters a mere six hits in this encounter, and after the second inning held the Swarthmore club scoreless. A five run uprising in the second inning, as a result of three errors on the part of the Haverford infield, spoiled an otherwise well-pitched game for Coach Randall's new find. In all probability he will choose Hopkins to oppose Villanova tomorrow night, inasmuch as his two other hurlers, Logan and Montgomery, proved so ineffective against the Wildcat batsmen in their previous engagement on July 13.

Giannini Probable All Star Hurler

For the All Stars, the probable hurler will be "Rocky Giannini," as he was the pitcher chosen to face Haverford in the game which was rained out last week. "Frenchy" DeBlois, who held the Maroon and White to a mere five hits in the previous contest between the two clubs, will be available for duty, if needed, as will Bill Swan, another righthanded member of the Villanova pitching staff.

DeBlois, being very powerful at the plate, may start in right field, so that his timely hitting may be utilized, but this, as yet, is not a certainty. The remaining positions in the two respective lineups will undoubtedly be the same as that of the first game, although Jack Koval, a newcomer, will probably hold down one of the outfield posts for the All Stars.

Submarine Menace: Our Second Front

INSPIRED by the United States naval victory at Midway—the first to break a seemingly endless chain of reverses—Americans have been loud and long in their clamor for a second war front.

Many of us have been only too anxious to grasp at this slender ray of hope in an effort to reinforce the traditional confidence placed in our armed forces.

Our unshaken pride in American arms has led us to expect and to demand immediate offensive action against the enemy. Our patriotism in this instance seems to have overcome our better judgment.

Self-styled military experts and arm-chair strategists have jammed the airwaves and cluttered the daily newspaper columns with illogical demands for a large-scale attack on Norway, or for an invasion of the French coast.

But the significance of vital details, such as troop transports, cargo ships, air escort, and naval convoys has been lost amid the insistent hue and cry.

Such second front advocates show an utter disregard for the supply of these weapons which are indispensable for a sustained long range attack.

The record shows that in all these weapons we are woefully lacking. Especially critical is our shortage of cargo ships and naval patrol vessels.

According to the latest figures compiled by the War Shipping Administration, 363 merchant ships were sunk by enemy submarines operating in the Atlantic between January and June.

For this same six months period only 228 new ships were launched. Thus we net a shipping deficiency of 135 vessels for the past six months despite the fact that our production quota of a ship a day has been reached.

We are still losing ships faster than we can build new ones.

How can we possibly expect our military leaders to undertake any large scale offensive in view of these facts? Troop transports cannot cross these dangerous waters nor can supply lines be maintained.

Anxious as we all are to bring the battle to the enemy's shores, no possible move can be made until the Atlantic submarine menace is solved once and for all. The loss of sorely needed shipments to our British and Russian allies proves the hazard of these shipping lanes. Perhaps the solution lies in the use of air transports—flying freight cars.

Let the chronic "experts" retire into their shells of ignorance. The Allied High Command has no need of their advice nor should we permit their deliriums to arouse us.

Our confidence in our military and naval staffs has been well placed. They are equal to the problem. Let them decide the time and place for a second front.

Long years of experience and intimate familiarity with the problems peculiar to such a strategy have made them far more competent to handle the problem than the so-called militarists who shoot off no bigger cannon than their own mouths.

No Shortage Of "Beef"!

PHILADELPHIA papers have recently carried front page stories on the shortage of beef throughout the country.

We're inclined to disagree.

We haven't heard so many "beefs" about the war, about gas rationing, about the British and everything else, in many a year. There's no shortage of beef in this respect.

But take a look at the ones who are increasing our surplus of "beef." In most cases they are the ones who, when deliberate and swift action was needed, passed hte "buck" and decided to let George do it.

Well, George did. George had the courage to take action when others backed out. Now George is the one to suffer.

To the nation's "Georges" we take off our hat. We know you have made mistakes. But we understand the many possibilities of error which confronted you. We know of the many obstacles — the refusals of the "buck passers" to realize the seriousness of the war—which you have encountered. We know that you recognize your errors and are willing to accept the help of those willing to give it.

Keep at it, George; it's people like you who have made this country what it is!

Higher Education Makes Its Stand

THOSE of us who are faced with the dilemma of continuing in college or enlisting in some branch of the armed forces will be interested in the note of encouragement sounded recently by the American Council on Education.

At a special meeting of college and university presidents, at which our president, Fr. Stanford was a committee member, a seven point program to coordinate higher education with the war effort was drawn up.

Deploring the government's failure to utilize students and educational facilities to the fullest advantage, the Conference strongly advised the adoption of a plan which would recognize the following considerations:

Higher education, while indispensable to our national welfare, must not and need not interfere with the winning of the war.

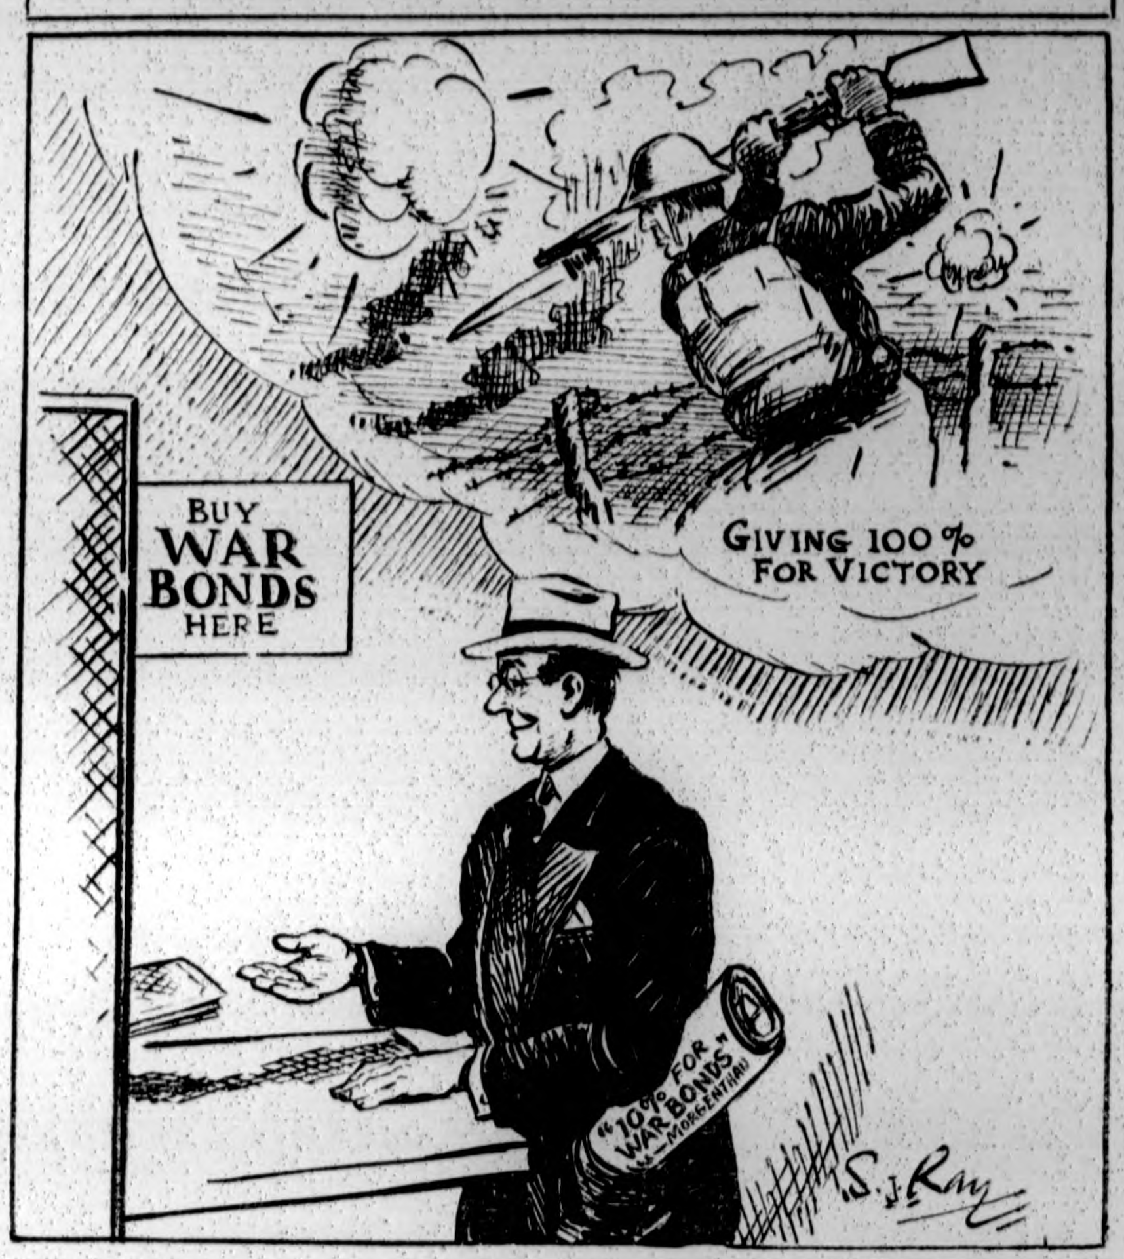
Through the provision of year round instruction and other changes, higher education has already demonstrated its readiness to devote its energies to the war effort.

While only 12 percent of the men inducted into the army are college graduates, the army has selected 80 percent of its officer candidates from this group.

Many intellectually qualified students are turned down for military service because of the strict physical standards. The army's preference for near physical perfection even for non-combatant officers has relegated mental ability to an insignificant role.

There is no need to debate the value of college trained men. This has already been established both in times of peace and in times of war. —R. T. C.

Where Ten Per Cent Is Little



FACULTY COMMENTS

Philosophy And Wartime Living

By FR. DWYER

WHEN a nation is at war in the struggle for its very existence the citizens become workers and fighters. It is the part of the patriot to abandon some of his peace-time activities. He steps up others to an intense degree. The genius of mechanical and administrative ability moves into full harmony with the destroying power of fighting men. Life takes on a pattern more complete in its social embrace than any other human activity is able to exercise.

Politics, religion, education, though they endure longer than war, are less rigid in their demands for uniformity, more tolerant in suffering contradiction. Despite its horrors, war appears to be man's most engrossing and exhausting occupation. If we judge our adult playthings by the attention which they can hold, war fixes our gaze while the rest compete weakly against each other for a five minute recognition.

War Was Always Total

War swallows more blood, material, enterprise, and effort than any peaceful pursuit. It was total in this sense long before the name became jargon. From the first time that nation took up arms against nation war has always made demands up to and beyond what flesh and blood can stand.

The second world war of our generation has several aspects which make it novel and ultramodern. One is from the side of those who must be prepared to make a total sacrifice. Civilian participation in offensive and defensive position has displaced the side-line rooting of loyal but helpless fans. Food seems to be about the only basis for distinguishing soldiers and civilians. Soldiers must get enough, civilians should be grateful for any.

Other Distinctions Useless

Other distinctive characteristics which occur to me haphazardly, uniform, weapons, sentry duty, heroism and calm under fire are as meaningless as breathing, swearing, or gas masks in differentiating civilians and soldiers. This novel phase of World War II is the result of a second and deeper change in war attitude.

Only starry-eyed immaturity sees the conflict between human freedom and human bondage settled to a nicety forever and ever in the post-war world. Prudent men and women are brave enough to be able and willing to foresee at least a minimum of delusions and disappointments. But they see, too, that according to plan some idols will fall.

Life Requires Hope

Our present travail pulses with ideals far beyond the defense of vested interests, be they industrial, imperial, political. The old distinction between the "haves" and the "have nots" has given way to a new contradiction of the "living" and the "dead." To live without hope of freedom is spiritual death. Men live in prison but only in the hope of release.

It is an axiom in the history of human thinking that great upheavals are prepared by decades or even centuries of seething aspirations. Is it possible that our contradicting generation will prove this axiom invalid? Is it possible that after the crater overflows and burns out the low-lands there will be no scenic crater cold and dead to which we can point? Shall we force the high points of human endeavor to erupt so violently that we shall no longer be able to see them on the horizon? Will man's undue ambition for riches, and power, and divinity, and knowledge destroy the restraining cliffs and crags to leave him helpless in poverty, weakness, deviltry, ignorance? That is the fullness of contradiction and the void of destruction.

Reason Not Excluded

Our age must be active, resourceful, constructive in its mentality, all the more because soldier and civilian alike will not be content with being handed a gun or helmet inscribed—This is Life. We must be allowed, even moved to cherish in heart and head the things of the living. Even God Himself, whose will is at times so far beyond our reach, whose wisdom is our folly, did not run the danger of confusing us by calling death the reward of living.

It is gratifying to note that the leaders of our people have refrained from declaring Philosophy "out for the duration." The temptation to demand only guns and tanks to the exclusion of reason, ideas, and ideals seems so attractive that we must gaze in admiration toward those whose foresight is great enough to see that this is a war of and for the people. They must preserve the will to live if they are to fight for life.

Assessment Collectors Appointed This Week

Lists of students in each school and class who have been authorized by the Student Council to collect the $1.00 assessments for the forthcoming "Summer Hop" will be posted this week, Council President John J. Quinn announced today.

The money paid by each student will be credited against the purchase price of his ticket, leaving a remainder of $1.20, tax included.

The tiny villages in the interior of Mexico have little or no means of communication. Sometimes it takes months for news to travel to the hills. When Mexico declared war, messages were sped to the police officials throughout the country, announcing: "We are now at war. Arrest all enemy aliens." In this column last week we attempted to show the need of Physical Fitness programs throughout our colleges, and particularly during this time of war. We advocated these Conditioning plans because there are so few college students who would otherwise take part in athletic competition. We also stated that the Armed Forces gave preference to men who were athletically inclined, not simply because of their better physical condition, but also in view of their experience in competition, and their ability to contest with their fellow man. To further illustrate the importance of athletics in American life, we will give a few examples of the high positions now held in the Armed Forces by former athletes.

Tunney a Commander

First, and by far the most important, is Gene Tunney, who, I am sure, is greatly admired by every living Catholic today, as well as the great majority of the rest of the world. An endless string of stories illustrate his fine character before and after he retired as undefeated Heavyweight Champion of the world. The Navy Department, realizing this, accepted Gene as the head of its Physical Fitness program, and this same former boxing champion presently holds the rank of Commander in the United States Naval Reserve.

Cochrane Coaches Great Lakes Team

Another outstanding figure in the American sporting world, and one known to all baseball followers is "Mickey Cochrane," who now holds the rank of Lieutenant, in his capacity of coach of the Great Lakes Naval Training Station baseball team. This Great Lakes aggregation further illustrates the fact that the heads of our Armed Forces realize the importance of athletic competition even after an individual is in the service. Lieutenant Cochrane has on his squad such former big league notables as Bob Feller, Sam Chapman, Fred Hutchinson, and Johnny Rigney, to mention only a few of his galaxy of stars. These men, because of their work in the big leagues before enlisting, are still permitted to enjoy their favorite sport, as Uncle Sam realizes the morale built up by these numerous contests in which the team engages.

Coaches Also Receive Commissions

To enter another field of athletic endeavor, we find that many football coaches have also obtained high positions in the forces of our country. The most recent is the elevation of Dr. John B. (Jock) Sutherland, former Pitt mentor, and more recently coach of the Brooklyn Dodgers in the National Professional Football League, to the rank of Lieutenant Commander in the Navy. Also deserving mention here, is Bernie Bierman, who presently holds the rank of Major in the Marine Corps, and is actively engaged as head football coach at Iowa University's Pre-Flight Training school. Bernie, who has coached more National Champions than any other coach in football history, has a wealth of material on his hands at the Training center and should have little trouble in making a first rate team out of his charges at the Midwestern Air school.

Faculty Triumphs

In the fourth of the regularly scheduled contests between a student team, and that made up of members of the Faculty, staged last Friday night, the Faculty aggregation trimmed Joe Barry's Fedigan team by a score of 9-6. This was the second straight victory for the Faculty, and their third in four starts, thus giving them a percentage of .750 to date.

They were defeated by Alumni, the first half champions of the Student league, but gained victories over the other three teams, namely: Austin, Mencel, and Fedigan.

So, at the end of the first half of the Student Competition, the Friests hold a decided advantage over their foes, and are destined to hold this advantage until the competition is resumed on August 7.

First Half Champions

Alumni Gains First Half Title In Softball League

By JACK KOVAL

Alumni Hall, branded a winning ball club from the beginning of the Intramural Softball League six weeks ago, succeeded in living up to its motto, "Never Give Up," throughout the season thus far, and finally attained its prized objective of winning the first-half flag honors. Even though they were subject to creased pressure during the past two weeks from the other three teams in the circuit, they managed to repel their opponent's desperate thrusts, made to dislodge them from the leading spot in the league. The Green Wave crossed the first half finish line a good four and a half games in front of its nearest rival.

Frosh to Lose Reagan and Hobbs

Expected, but nevertheless surprising, was the way that the Mendel ball club retaliated from its long losing streak at the start of the season. During the past two weeks the Freshmen have been burning up the league, defeating the upperclassmen time and again. Bad news, however, is in store for the frosh, for two of the main cogs in their playing machine, Pat Reagen and Jimmy Hobbs, will be forced to hand in their yellow cap and shirt. Both are attending summer school and it will terminate, sad to say, on August 12.

Portali Leads Hurlers

Both Austin and Fedigan were partially successful at the beginning of the season in that they had at one time or other led the league. But as time went on, and with Alumni establishing a seven-game winning streak, both Austin and Fedigan had to enviably relinquish the lead to the stron Alumni aggregation.

Worthy of note in the pitching department of the teams is the way that Joe Portali, hurler for the Alumni squad, has kept his team in first place by means of capable pitching. He has a record of eight wins and three losses, and has given up but one base on balls, which certainly is to be regarded as a noble achievement.

Fedigan Wins Three

Possessing the best offensive record of last week's closing games in the first half, Fedigan hall emerged victorious in three out of their four contests. They were defeated only by Alumni 9-3. Joe Barry, manager and pitcher of the Gigiloes, indeed had plenty on the ball in the four games, and succeeded in bringing his team into second place in the final first half standings.

Mendel hall's record was a 5-5 deadlock with Austin, a 6-4 victory over Alumni, a 9-8 setback by Fedigan, and an 8-2 trouncing of Austin.

The Alumnites suffered two defeats last week. One was to Mendel 6-4, and the other a 9-2 beating by Fedigan's Gigiloes. In the remaining two contests, Fedigan was beaten 9-3, and Austin 2-1. The latter game is to date the lowest scoring game played in the league.

Austin in Slump

Certainly in a slump last week was the Austin nine, which for the first time, didn't succeed in winning a game at all. Their best performance was a 5-5 tie with Mendel. In the other three contests they were defeated by Fedigan, Alumni, and Mendel by the respective scores of 8-2, 2-1, and 8-2.

Due to the fact that examinations are in progress this week, there will be a week's intermission before the hectic second half gets under way. Games will probably be resumed on Monday, August 3.

DeBlois Wins First Half Batting Crown With .490

Al "Frenchy" DeBlois, rightfielder for Austin Hall won the first half batting championship of the Intramural Softball League last week, with the remarkable average of .490. He made twenty-four hits in his first forty-nine trips to the plate and thus finished twenty-seven percentage points in front of his nearest rival, Charley DeBelle. The ten leaders are listed below:

Hybrids Set Pace In Dayhop League

Win Their Only Contest for Percentage of 1.000; Muses in Second

By JOE CARBINE

From the first few games that have been played in the new Dayhop Softball League, it is evident that all of the contests are going to be hard fought right down to the last contest. After a week of competition, it is discovered that every team has at least one victory to its credit, with one club, the Hybrids, having yet to lose. The first game was played last Monday between the Actors and the Muses, with the former emerging the victor to the tune of 4-1. The Actors looked like the team to beat in this first game, but since that time their play has fallen off, and they now find themselves occupying the cellar.

Muses Win Two

The Muses, composed principally of Arts students, started the competition by dropping their first two encounters, but they have come back strongly to win the most number of games, and are second in the league standings. Last Thursday, they exploded all of their potent power to drive the previously invincible Freshman pitcher, DiLuigi, from the mound and win the game 8-1. The victory was marked by the stellar play of John Quinn and Joe Hagerty, a flashy keystone combination, both of whom hit the ball hard. Lou Esposito, a converted outfielder, has been on the mound in each of the Muse victories. His best pitch is a well-controlled slow ball.

Hybrids Powerful at Plate

The Hybrid team is being helped by two power hitters, Carmen Graziano and Lou Centanni, both of whom play with the Intramural All-Stars. Together with Nick Sachetti they are batting 1.000, and are the principal reasons for the Hybrids being favored to cop the "pennant." No one, however, is selling any of the rival clubs short, chiefly because each team possesses the capability to defeat the others.

The work of George Harris in getting the league started is worthy of a vote of thanks. He has drawn up the schedule for the season's games, and is keepin a constant check on the league standings and the batting averages.

Intramural Stars Meet Haverford Tomorrow Night

Postponed Game, Originally Scheduled for Last Monday To Be Played Wednesday; Second Contest for Villanova

Provided Jupiter Pluvius doesn't interfere once again, the Villanova Intramural All-Stars will tackle the Maroon and White nine from Haverford College tomorrow night, in their second contest of the present campaign. This encounter was originally scheduled for last Monday evening, but an afternoon shower postponed the diamond proceedings until tomorrow night.

This will be the second game between the two clubs, and inasmuch as the series was arranged on a home and home basis, tomorrow evening's contest will take place at Haverford. The first engagement between these two Main Line rivals was played at Villanova, and was a rather one-sided contest in which the Wildcats handsomely trimmed the Maroon and White by a score of 8-3.

Haverford Has Beaten Swarthmore

Since that time, however, Haverford has engaged in two contests, while the All-Stars have remained idle. This gives Haverford a decided advantage, and they should show much improvement over their previous "Comedy of Errors," in which they made six costly miscues. They were easily defeated by Pennsylvania Military College 9-0 in a lopsided tilt ten days ago, but then bounced back to beat Swarthmore in a very close game last week 7-6. This was their second win over the Garnet nine.

Haverford Has New Moundsman

Coach Randall, of Haverford, uncovered a new twirler in this contest, in the person of one Roy Hopkins. Hopkins allowed the Garnet batters a mere six hits in this encounter, and after the second inning held the Swarthmore club scoreless. A five run uprising in the second inning, as a result of three errors on the part of the Haverford infield, spoiled an otherwise well-pitched game for Coach Randall's new find. In all probability he will choose Hopkins to oppose Villanova tomorrow night, inasmuch as his two other hurlers, Logan and Montgomery, proved so ineffective against the Wildcat batsmen in their previous engagement on July 13.

Giannini Probable All Star Hurler

For the All Stars, the probable hurler will be "Rocky Giannini," as he was the pitcher chosen to face Haverford in the game which was rained out last week. "Frenchy" DeBlois, who held the Maroon and White to a mere five hits in the previous contest between the two clubs, will be available for duty, if needed, as will Bill Swan, another righthanded member of the Villanova pitching staff.

DeBlois, being very powerful at the plate, may start in right field, so that his timely hitting may be utilized, but this, as yet, is not a certainty. The remaining positions in the two respective lineups will undoubtedly be the same as that of the first game, although Jack Koval, a newcomer, will probably hold down one of the outfield posts for the All Stars.

Samuels Discusses Work Of Hormones In Research Talk

In a talk addressed to last Wednesday's meeting of the Research Seminar, Melvin Samuels, a junior science student, discussed the "Physiological Aspects of the Principal Hormones of the Body." These hormones which keep the body fit and well-tuned include thyroxin, insulin, adrenalin, and the estrogenic and androgenic hormones.

Samuels explained how, when the body is faced with imminent danger or placed in any state of emergency, adrenalin causes an increase in the muscular agility of its subject, brings about a decided step-up in heart-beat while slowing down the digestive process, and bestows the blood with faster clotting properties. The adrenalin is supplied by the adrenalin glands.

The Seminar learned that an insufficiency of insulin in the body causes diabetes, as this is the hormone which beaks down its sugar content. The regulator of metabolism in the body, Samuel stated, is thyroxin, which is a secretion of the thyroid gland. Its over-activity causes a disease commonly known as goiter, while its under-activity causes cretinism in the young and myxedena in the mature human. It was found that goiter is prevalent in localities where the iodine content is low in food and water. This disease can be overcome by feeding its victims extracts of thyroid.

The final phase of Samuels' address concerned itself with the sex hormones. The sex hormones of the female, the estrogenic hormones, act in the metabolic process of the menstrual cycle. The sexual hormones of the male are the androgenic hormones, which function as the stimulators of the male glands.

personnel for the Army while at the same time permitting qualified students to complete their education.

Requirements Listed

Students who have shown that they possess high qualifications of character and are in good scholastic standing will be eligible for preliminary recommendation by the college.

Completed enlistment will be in the lowest grade and in the Enlisted Reserve Corps Unassigned. These enlistments are to be charged against the quota of the appropriate class in college.

Villanova's class quotas are: freshman, 124; sophomores, 113; juniors, 83; seniors, 75 and special students, 95.

Lind Named To Photography Post On '43 Belle Air

Centennial Yearbook to Include Separate Sections for Present Seniors, June Graduates and Present Juniors

By JACK DEERY

Robert E. Lind, a junior science student, has been appointed Photography Editor for the 1943 edition of the Belle Air, college year book, Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, O. S. A., moderator of the publication, announced last week.

At the same time Fr. Falvey revealed that the next issue, to be termed the Centennial Yearbook, will be published some time during the summer of 1943. Three separate sections, for the present seniors, for the June graduates, and for the present juniors in the accelerated program, who will be graduated in September, 1943, will be included.

ROBERT E. LIND

In addition to his Belle Air work for the past two years, Lind has been active in intramural sports and served as manager of the marching band.

Lind announced that photographs of graduates will be taken the week of September 8 and also during the first week of the Fall term. All seniors who return for the Fall term and seniors and juniors in the accerelated program will be photographed. The pictures can be taken either week, the choice being left to the student. More definite plans for this week will be announced later.

The component parts of the next Belle Air have also been outlined to some extent. The Centennial Yearbook is to complete the record of the hundred years' history of the College from its meagre beginning in 1842 to the present day; sections devoted to the Centennial Celebration, the activities of the senior and graduated junior classes, and the accelerated program will be featured.

Large Book Planned

Because of the magnitude of the next Belle Air and the time and work that has to be devoted to it, Fr. Falvey could not forsee the exact date of its publication. It is certain, however, that the senior class that is graduated in May will have to wait some time before securing it. Likewise those seniors in the accelerated program who will be graduated next January will have to wait several months.

Lind was certain that the Belle Air for the centennial year would be the largest in Belle Air history. The sections devoted to the three distinct classes and to the history would be sufficient to fill a normal Belle Air. These sections will constitute only two-thirds of the proposed issue.

Meet The Boys:

John Quinn, Senior Class President, Lists Many Other Executive Posts

By HARRY BINDER

It is with some trepidation that we begin the biography of John J. Quinn, chemical engineer extraordinary. The fear springs from this source—that we might miscount or ignore one of his many executive positions. At present he holds three full-time presidencies and is acting head of another activity, the Student Council. A resident of Catasauqua, Pa., he began his scholastic and social career here when he enrolled in the School of Engineering in September of 1939.

John's home town has always been Catasauqua since his earthly arrival on May 15, 1921. In the early years of his life, he attended St. Lawrence Grade School in Catasauqua. Allentown Central Catholic High School was the institution of learning he later attended.

On Championship Squad

Incidentally, almost every year this school has had a championship basketball team, and very modestly John confessed he was a member of squad that won three championships in a row.

As a freshman, John joined the engineer's fraternity, Phi Kappa Pi and when class elections came around, our Mr. Quinn was elected Treasurer of the sophomore class. Since this time, we find John becoming very active in extra-curricular activities despite the scholastic burden that a chem-engineer must carry.

Quite an Executive

As proof of the above statement all one has to do is to glance at the offices held by John: co-chairman of the Junior Dinner Dance Committee, President of the Holy Name Society, President of the National Federation of Catholic Colleges, Acting President of the Student Council, and President of the Senior Class.

Besides this John found time to participate in intramural sports, to be a four year member of the Phi Kappa Pi, a member of the Orientation Committee, and of the Sophomore Cotillion Committee.

Planned "Summer Hop"

While acting in his capacity of President of the Student Council John was largely responsible for the plans for the forthcoming "Summer Hop", and for the sale of War Stamps in Mendel Hall.

Last summer, because of his engineering training, John received a position with the Bethlehem Steel Company in an engineering capacity.

Instead of seeking summer employment this year, John thought it better to speed up his training and then to serve his country to better advantage.

Reticent on Romance

Up to now, we have seen John Quinn at work, in his more serious moments. Now we picture John at ease. He likes dancing, especially on the smooth side. But John was definitely uninformative on the matter of the names and addresses in the little black book. In his spare time, what little of it he has, one could not say that he is adverse to sitting in on a good bull session. John is not adverse to voicing his opinions on many different topics.

As for the future, John has his already planned, as he is an Ensign, United States Naval Reserve. As soon as he is graduated in February, he expects to go on active duty.

Sportorial

world of sports is Robert Tyre Jones Jr., known to his followers as Bobby, and who holds more fame in golfing circles than anyone before or since his famous "grand slam" of 1930, in which he won both the U. S. and British Amateur and Open titles. Although inactive competitively since his retirement in 1930, except for a few minor tournaments, he still rates high because of his former links prowess, and recently was commissioned in the Army Air Corps with the rank of Captain.

Elliott Represents Villanova

Even here on our own campus we have witnessed the enlistment of track coach "Jumbo" Elliott into the Naval Air Corps, where he will hold the rank of Lieutenant, (junior grade). Coach of one of the best track teams in Villanova history last winter and spring, "Jumbo" has been assigned to condition Air Corps candidates in Uncle Sam's flying Navy.

So, although we have space here to mention only a few of the high military positions held by individuals that earned fame in the athletic world before entering the service, the above mentioned instances, we think, illustrate thoroughly enough our point in stating that today, athletics hold a more important position in the American mode of life than ever before. Those who have been athletically inclined, along with those who are presently active in sports, are greatly appreciated by a country at war.

Quinn Announces Assessment Drive For Summer Hop

Student Council Seeks $1 and $2.20 Payments This Week to Swell Purse for Orchestra Committee

Friday is the deadline!

With this in mind the "selling committee" of the Student Council will canvass the college to obtain the $1.00 individual assessment or the $2.20 price of the ticket for the Summer Hop, Aug. 28, in an effort to sign one of the top Philadelphia orchestras now considered for the first summer dance ever to be held in Villanova's Field House.

John J. Quinn, acting president of Student Council, announced the appointment of seniors George N. Eriksen, Arthur R. Smith, George Famiglietti, William F. Friel, William R. Menseck, William Cabrera, and Nicholas Eni to the ticket committee. Juniors appointed were Richard J. Ryan, Joseph J. Carbine, and George A. Temple, while Edward Fanelli represents the sophomores.

All Depends on This Week

At the present time, the Council has made contact with several of the local orchestras and is in hopes of signing one of two which are considered "tops" in the local area. But the present lack of funds prevents the Council from signing the contract.

In order to complete the arrangements, one half of the total price of the band must be paid when signing the contract; the remainder to be paid on the evening of the informal. As the time of the dance is drawing near the band must be signed immediately.

Must Act Now

Quinn stated: "The demand for local orchestras has increased tremendously since the restrictions on travel have decreased the number of engagements 'name' bands are allowed to play. Consequently local orchestras must be signed far in advance of the dance if a desirable one is to be secured."

The eleven men just appointed will join with the members of the Council to obtain sufficient funds by Friday evening. Tickets for the dance are now on sale. Either the tickets may be purchased or the assessment paid. If the latter is done only a balance of $1.20 will remain to be paid before the ticket is given out.

Council Makes Plea

Students residing in the nearby area who are not attending the present summer session have been notified of the dance and many have signified their intention of attending.

Last week, the council distributed to the student body an open letter asking for cooperation in making the dance a success. The common complaint that the average student didn't have the use of a car because of the present restrictions, and that he didn't like to use the buses or trains, was answered by "it's the patriotic thing to do."

Alumni in Service Invited

The council is also endeavoring to extend invitations to all alumni of the college now in the armed services to attend the Summer Hop if they happen to be on furlough.

Besides the ticket and band committees, the patron committee is the only other group to have begun action.

New Age Limit

A recent communication received from the Navy Department by Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O. S. A., liaison officer here, reveals that the maximum age limit for V-1 candidates has been raised to twenty-six years.

At the same time, Fr. McQuade urged all students interested in obtaining commissions to report to the Naval Procurement Officer at the Widener Building, Chestnut and Juniper Streets in Philadelphia. This includes those who desire to enlist in the V-1, V-5, or V-7 programs, seniors interested in the Supply Corps, and junior and senior engineers.

Holidays Noted By Their Absence On College Calendar Just Released

Strictly school and more school is the order of the day from now until the end of the war. This was apparent from the release of the college calendar from the registrar's office late last week. "Changes in the calendar may be expected if the exigencies of the war require it," it was stated.

Seniors now in the "bell lap" will have their commencement exercises on Sunday, Jan. 31, following four days of final examinations beginning on Jan. 27.

None 'Til Christmas

The calendar released is divided into Fall and Spring terms. The former, beginning with registration for freshmen on Oct. 5, is uninterrupted with the exception of the Christmas holiday beginning on Dec. 23 and ending with the resumption of classes on Jan. 5. Resident students will return to the campus on the preceding day.

Upperclassmen will register on Oct. 6 and all classes will begin the following day. Classes will be held on the Feast of the Immaculate Conception and on Thanksgiving Day—holidays on the normal calendar. The Fall mid-term is Saturday, Nov. 28.

Spring Term Closes May 22

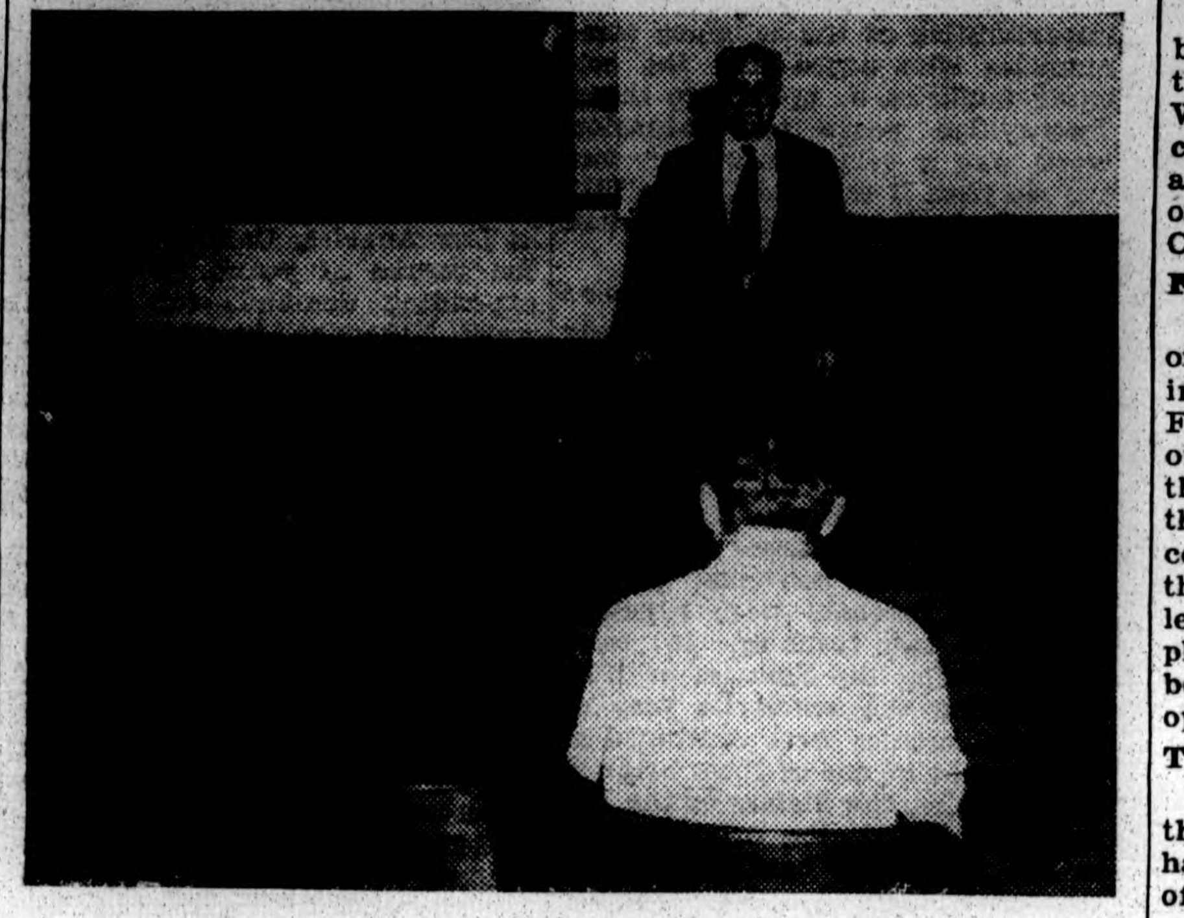
The annual retreat begins on Jan. 31. Registration for the Spring term will be held the first two days in February, during the retreat which closes Feb. 3. Classes for the Spring term begin the same day. From this day until April 23 and 24, Good Friday and Holy Saturday, classes will proceed without any interruption.

The final Spring term exams will extend from May 19 for four days until May 22. Graduation is scheduled for May 23. Only those days specifically mentioned on the calendar as having "no classes" will be observed by the college as holidays.

The complete calendar is as follows:

Oct.
5—Freshmen register.
6—Upperclassmen register.
7—Classes begin.
Nov.
1—All Saints' Day (Sunday).
23—Thanksgiving Day.
28—Mid-term.
Dec.
8—Immaculate Conception.
23—Christmas holiday begins—12:30 P. M.
Jan.
4—Resident Students return.
5—Classes resume, 8:00 A. M.
27—Term exams begin.
30—Term exams end.
31—Graduation exercises (Sunday).
31—Annual Retreat begins.
Feb.
1 & 2—Registration.
3—Annual Retreat ends.
3—Classes resume, 10:45 A. M.
22—Washington's Birthday.
March
10—Ash Wednesday.
27—Mid-term.
April
23—Good Friday—No classes.
24—Holy Saturday—No classes.
25—Easter Sunday.
May
3—Centennial Convocation.
19—Term exams begin.
22—Term exams end.
23—Graduation exercises.

Research And Science Forums Hear Professor On Operative Technique



DR. DINTENFASS prepares for Science lecture.

With the aid of motion pictures, Dr. Henry Dintenfass, eminent Philadelphia ear, nose, and throat specialist, addressed the combined meeting of the Science Forum and Research Seminar in the Mendel Hall Amphitheatre last Thursday evening. A graduate of the School of Medicine of the University of Pennsylvania, Dr. Dintenfass is now associated with the same school as professor of Otology.

Using the films as supplementary aids, he explained to the group the physiology and anatomy of the ear and throat, and the operative technique employed in a tonsilectomy and a mastoid operation.

Auditory Processes Shown

The first film showed the internal operations of the inner and outer ear when receiving sound, and the manner in which the nerves conduct the vibrations to the brain. Dr. Dintenfass pointed out that the human ear is similar to the telephone in its reception and transmission of sound. This movie also illustrated the physiological processes of the human voice, both when speaking and singing.

Subsequent films pointed out the intricacies and marvels of modern surgery. Pictures of an actual tonsilectomy highlighted the presentation. Operations performed with both general and local anesthesia were shown. A detailed close-up of the bloodless method employed in the removal of tonsils and adenoids was afforded the seminar.

Operation Explained

In the last reel Dr. Dintenfass demonstrated an operation for the cure of acute mastoidises, a condition of six or seven weeks. He stated that thanks to recent discoveries regarding the curative powers of sulphanilamide drugs, the number of mastoid operations has been reduced tremendously.

In expressing his appreciation to Dr. Dintenfass, Lester Mann, chairman of the Research Seminar, remarked on the profound impression made by the lecture on the members of the group and indicated a desire on the part of all present that Dr. Dintenfass return in the near future.

Group To Hear Music Of Herbert And Kern

The music of Victor Herbert and Jerome Kern will be featured by Dr. E. L. Haenisch, the moderator of the music seminar, at the noon hour tomorrow in room 215 Mendel Hall.

Last Wednesday several compositions of Mozart were played. The "Overture to the Marriage of Figaro," the string serenade, "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik," and his Symphony in D Major, the Haffner Symphony, comprised the program.

Dr. Hickey Receives LL. D. At 25th Commencement Of Summer School Classes

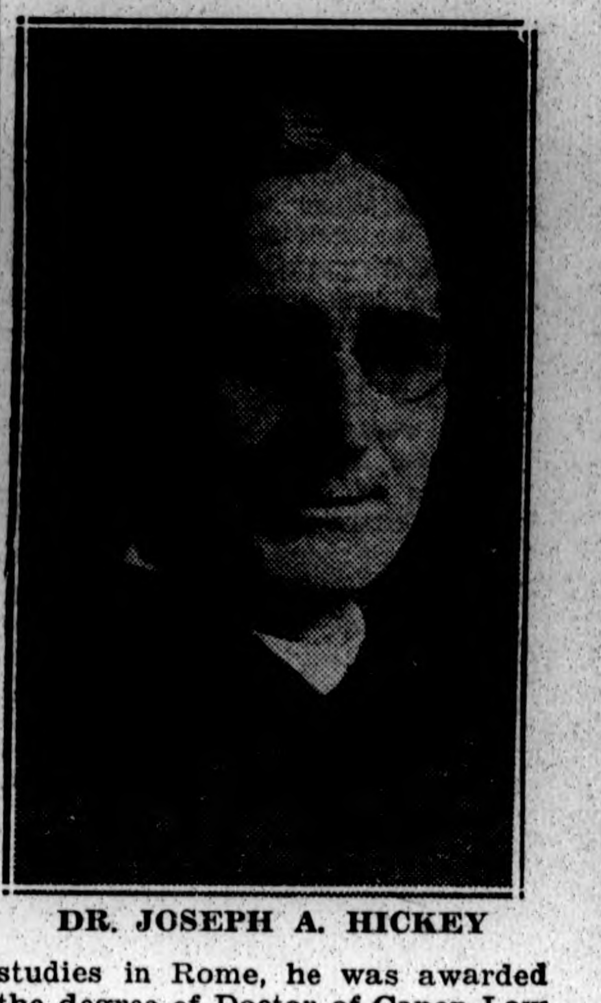
By THOMAS L. GOWEN

Very Reverend Joseph A. Hickey, O. S. A., assistant general of the Augustinian Order of English Speaking Nationals and former president of Villanova College, received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws at the twenty-fifth commencement of the summer session last Saturday. After the graduation Mass celebrated by the Rev. Joseph C. *Bartley, O. S. A., dean of the summer school, 79 candidates were presented for degrees.

Following the conferring of degrees by Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, Fr. Hickey delivered his address to the graduates. In commenting on the silver anniversary of the extension classes, he stated that it is now an intimate part of the curriculum of Villanova, and in line with the Centennial celebration, reviewed the history of the summer session over the past 25 years.

Studied in Rome

Fr. Hickey received his first degree from Villanova in 1902. The following year he was awarded the A. B. degree. Continuing his studies in Rome, he was awarded the degree of Doctor of Canon Law at Appollanre University, five years later. In 1918, he accepted the degree of Doctor of Theology.



DR. JOSEPH A. HICKEY

Although he has spent much of his time in Rome, he has held prominent positions in this country. From 1924-25, he was president of Villanova and is now a member of the Canon Law Department of the Divinity School at Catholic University.

Returned Here From Rome

At the outbreak of the war between France and Germany, he was ordered to return to the United States from Rome, where he was a member of the committee of Consultants of the Sacred Congress of Sacraments. On his return voyage across the Atlantic, Fr. Hickey was aboard the S. S. Washington when it was stopped by a German submarine. Although both the captains engaged in a heated argument, the ship proceeded unharmed to its destination.

Of the candidates granted degrees, 11 were members of the Sisters of the Immaculate Heart, 10 of the Order of St. Francis, eight of the Sisters of St. Joseph, five of the Order of Preachers and five of the Sisters of Mercy. The congregation of St. Basil was represented by five candidates, Christian Brothers by four, the Missionary Sisters of the Most Sacred Heart of Jesus by five and the Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament by seven.

The Sisters of the Holy Child Jesus received three degrees, the Sisters of the Holy Childhood of Jesus two, the School Sisters of Notre Dame, Sisters of Christian Charity and Sisters of St. Dorothea each one degree. Eight lay students, two priests and two brothers were also recipients of degrees.

Services Plan Joint Enlistment For College Men

Nine Army - Navy - Marine Corps Commissions Established for Enrollment of Students in Reserve Programs

Plans for the establishment of nine joint Army - Navy - Marine Corps Boards to visit all accredited colleges and effect enlistments of eligible students in those colleges was announced in a release from the War Department last week. Devised as a result of the findings of the joint Army-Navy-Marine Corps College Procurement Committee which recently returned to Washington after a tour of the country, the plan is proposed to channel into the armed services a continuous and regulated stream of college-trained manpower.

The districts covered by the nine boards correspond to the area of the nine Army Service Commands. While the Naval Districts do not correspond with these, the Navy and Marine Corps have designated officers to work with the Service Commands.

Five Officers on Board

Each board will consist of five officers, one representing the Army in general; one, the Army Air Forces; one, the Navy in general; one the Naval Air Arm; and one, the Marine Corps. In each case, the five officers will visit the same college on the same day, to give the students an opportunity to learn the details of each reserve plan. These meetings with student bodies will begin as the colleges open for their autumn semesters.

To Visit Service Schools

It was further announced that the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps have jointly invited representatives of the various colleges concerned with the training program to visit the service schools, technical schools, and officer candidate schools conducted by the various services.

Each college has been asked to delegate for this purpose one faculty member, who will later be the local representative of the Joint Board. Having seen the workings of service schools in action, he will be in a position to answer from a practical point of view many of the questions that college students ask about advanced military studies for which they are being prepared.

Put on Inactive Status

It was emphasized that the Joint Procurement Committee was set up to obtain a definite number of men each year possessing the necessary qualifications for specific military and naval duties, and therefore the plan goes only as far as the actual needs of the service demand. Furthermore, the needs of war industries for men with certain types of training must be taken into consideration.

Students who enroll in the enlisted reserves are actually members of the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps. While they maintain an inactive military status for the time being, they are regarded by the services as cooperating patriotically in the fulfillment of an important phase of the over-all war effort, for they are being qualified to fill definite needs.

Justice Is Served

JUSTICE has been served and six enemies of our country have satisfied for their crimes without any sacrifice of the democratic principles for which the country stands. That is the important consideration to be gained from the lengthy trial and speedy execution of the Nazi saboteurs.

When every legal consideration was granted the spies, there was some unfavorable comment in the country to the effect that they were receiving far better treatment than they deserved. Granted, but the fact that we are at war is no reason to suspend the fundamental right of the accused to a fair trial. The appeal to the Supreme Court was in accordance with our avowed method of trial.

Now that two of the saboteurs have been confined to prison there will no doubt be new evidences of disapproval from disgruntled citizens. "Kill every last one of them," will be the cry. But the recommendation of leniency on the part of the military judges should be enough to silence such voices. No doubt the sealed records of the trial contain potent reasons for the sentences of those spies who were spared.

The summary death of those condemed, without the fanfare that so tragically often accompanies American executions, is the crowning achievement of a task which was handled throughout in an exemplary manner.

—T. F. D.

The Indian Front

LIBERTY-LOVING Americans have traditionally felt a kindred bond of unity between ourselves and the nations which are still struggling to throw off the yoke of foreign rule.

The case of the Indian Empire is no exception.

News that Mohandus Gandhi, Indian Nationalist leader, has touched off a new wave of open revolt against the British administrators — in spite of the war emergency—has enjoyed a welcome reception from some Americans. Some have already bestowed their blessing on India's "fight for freedom."

History, even in recent times, proves that British policy has been often both unwise and unjust. And from an idealistic standpoint, we will agree that every nation is entitled to self-government.

But, as always, we must peer beyond the clouds of idealism and examine the question solely in the light of political realities. Wartime demands that we take such a practical stand.

Blighted by insurmountable problems of religious uprisings, degenerate caste hatreds and a ratio of ninety percent illiteracy among its 400 million population, India is in a state of total disunity.

Add to all this the obvious fact that an unarmed and undefended India would be an open invitation to the ever-alert Japanese invaders, and we will agree that "freedom for India" is a peacetime problem to be solved by future generations—perhaps ours.

—R. T. C.

Help Wanted!

WANTED, one salesman! In this country, today, we have practically every type of divertisement to take our minds from the present war that "commercially-minded" man can produce.

We go to the movies—to forget the war. We listen to sometimes humorous radio comedians—to forget the war. We go to the shore, or to a dance, or anywhere, to get away from the reality of war.

What we'd like to know is just when are we going to think of the war—as war and not as something to be headlined in the newspapers?

We've heard answers about buying bonds and about tire and gas rationing and the like, but buying bonds is investing, not giving, and somehow or other, even without gas and tires, we manage not to curtail our recreational activities to any great extent.

The lack of cooperation and of self-sacrifice, together with the failure of the entire country to realize that others are giving their lives to protect that which we are enjoying to too full an extent—these are responsible for our present situation.

Wanted, one salesman to sell the American people the idea that this is war. Qualifications: He must be blunt and drastic in his methods. Salary: The salvation of a nation!

—W. C. G.

China Sets The Pace

REPORTS of the development of the ideals of Christian Democracy in war-torn China are inspiring. The work and sweat of the missionaries of years ago is now bearing fruit. China, even while waging fierce war against an aggressor, is far too wise to forget the future. A few of the recent developments are:

1. The application of the democratic system of voting, first instituted in the counties of Hsien, in twenty out of the twenty-eight provinces. Preparations for the post-war National People's Congress are being made by a temporary legislative council which represents all of the counties.

2. Twenty percent of the wartime budget of most counties is being utilized in the education of the people. In the Szechwan province alone, there are 27,553 primary schools, and a budget of $700,000,000.

3. Freedom of religion, a requisite to the ordering of democracy, is universal. The number of conversions has multiplied a hundredfold. At present there are 5,053 priests, native and foreign, administering to the needs of the Chinese.

4. The New Life Movement, originated by Chiang Kai-shek, is making rapid strides in the moral education and betterment of the people. Practical drives such as are found in America have done much to better the economic situation.

These are but a few of the edifying movements now current in China, but they are many enough to show us our fault in leaving our own future problems untouched. The longer we allow post-war difficulties to rest unsolved, the more difficult to solve will they prove to be.

FACULTY COMMENTS

Twenty-Five Years Of er School History

By FR. HICKEY

(Excerpts from the historical sketch of the summer school delivered by the Very Rev. Joseph A. Hickey, Assistant General of the Augustinian Order, at the Baccalaureate Mass last Saturday morning.)

SPEAKING of the Summer Extension School, Dr. Hickey said:

"The initiative in the inception of the work came, in fact, not from the men at Villanova, but from the importunities of the religious communities who urged that the college's facilities be opened to them. Twenty-five years ago extension work was a very unfamiliar one . . .In fact, it was only. . .in 1911 that Catholic University. . .had founded the Sisters' College.

"Villanova's extension school work began in the scholastic year of 1916-1917, when Father Dohan, the then President, accepted invitations from two distinct communities, the Sisters of the Immaculate Heart and the Mercy Sisters, to conduct college classes for them at the respective convents. In this work two teachers were engaged, the same two teaching in each place. During the Summer of 1917, and during the scholastic year of 1917-1918, classes were continued at the convent of one of these original communities, the Sisters of the Immaculate Heart, the original staff in the meantime having been increased to four.

Starts on Campus in 1918

". . .Other communities had requested that they, too, be permitted to participate in the benefits of this extension work. Thus it was that the college authorities, not, however, without great hesitation, decided to inaugurate in 1918 a summer session on the campus, since which time the Summer Session has continued as a regular part of the college program.

"The attendance and enthusiasm shown at this first campus Summer School was most gratifying and encouraging. Well over one hundred were in attendance, representing a number of communities, several of which were from outside the Philadelphia Diocese. The offerings were many and varied, designed to meet the more pressing needs of the various communities; some fifteen teachers were engaged in the work.

Original Teachers Still Active

"Here it is interesting to note that several of the original teachers are still actively engaged in Villanova Summer School work, one of them being Father Bartley, the present Dean, who ever since, either at Villanova or at one of the centers, has continued to teach. . . At the conclusion of the first campus summer school session, the College decided ,at the earnest request of the religious communities, to continue courses throughout the year at some central point in Philadelphia which might be accessible to all.

"The World Wa intervened, however, so that it was not until the Autumn of 1919 that, through the encouragement of the Diocesan Superintendent of Schools, Father Joseph O'Hara, and his assistant Father, now Bishop Lamb, that regular extension courses were inaugurated at the Hallahan Girls' Catholic High School, Philadelphia.

Conducted Classes in California

"In 1925, and for several years thereafter, at the urgent request of the Bishop of the Diocese, Villanova conducted Summer Sessions in Los Angeles, California. During the course of years, to meet the expanding demands for part-time work, Villanova, in addition to its regular extension school at Hallahan, and its summer work at the College, has expanded its extension classes to include an evening session, and has opened various other centers.

"Villanova has reflected. . .the great development of Catholic school education at both the high school and college levels which began in the twenties. For the past several years the average attendance at these schools has reached the remarkable total of two thousand. During the year of 1941-1942, which closes with the present summer school, some eighty-three instructors have been engaged in the work.

Over 1000 Degrees Awarded

"From its beginning up to the present session more than one thousand degrees have been awarded to summer and part-time students. In this total are not included the teaching certificates which have been granted, the number of which, particularly in the early years, was very great. All these figures indicate clearly the growth of Villanova's part-time schools, and show how God has blessed and prospered the work.

"In its present great success much is owed to the fine cooperation, encouragement, and valued aid in the solution of many problems, to the authorities of the Philadelphia Diocese, particularly to the present Superintendent of Schools, the Right Rev. Monsignor Bonner, to whom Villanova will always remain deeply grateful.

Deans Listed

"The work of organization in the first few years was naturally an unfamiliar one. The part-time school had no special director or dean, but was controlled through the office of the Prefect of Studies. With its growth and development, however, the need of a special dean was soon felt. The first dean to be appoint-

At 2:00 A. M. a woman telephoned the manager of a department store. After much ringing, the manager answered with a sleepy and gruff "Hello."

"This is Mrs. Soandso," said the woman in a syrupy voice. "I just couldn't help calling you personally to tell you that the hat I bought at your store last week is simply stunning. I don't know when I liked anything so much."

"That's all very nice," yawned the manager, "but would you mind telling me why you call at this hour of the night about a hat you bought last week?"

"Because," she replied sweetly, "your van has just delivered it."

Alumni And Fedigan In Deadlock For First Place

Both Teams Have Record of Two Victories and One Defeat as Softball League Enters Second Half of Competition

By JOE DALY

Villanova's Intramural Softball League passed the halfway mark last Monday night with both Alumni and Fedigan, former first and second place finishers, respectively, taking their initial encounters. Alumni, with Captain Paruta on the bench, managed to down the Firemen of Austin, 10-7, after coming from behind in the second, to take the lead. Joe Portali was on the mound for the Greenies, allowing the opposition only eight hits. However, these blows, coupled with four bases on balls allowed Austin to tally seven times.

Alumni Overwhelms Fedigan

The following night Alumni again demonstrated the power which allowed them to win the first half, by trouncing their nearest rivals, the Gigoloes of Fedigan, 15-5. The Green Wave got off to an early start, Charley Labelle being touched for nine runs in the first, as he walked the first four men to face him, and was then greeted with a pair of two-baggers by Yeager and Corcillo, before the first put out of the game was made. Barry then came in to pitch for the helpless Fedigan men, but it was to no avail for the damage had been done. With the stellar hitting of Joe Szal, Labelle and Forebaugh, however ,they were able to cross the platter with five runs.

Austin Upsets Paruta's Team

On Thursday, Austin Hall, after losing their two previous games, came back to beat Alumni, 8-7. This loss gave Joe Barry and his Fedigan aggregation the chance they were waiting for; and as a result, they are tied with Alumni at the end of the first week, with a record of two wins and a defeat. The Gigoloes, who finished in second place in the first half, have now won five out of their last six games and seem definitely on the up grade.

LaBelle Hurls Three-Hitter

Behind the three-hit pitching of Charley LaBelle, they opened the second half of the season with a 3-1 victory over the stubborn Frosh, who don't give up until the last man has been retired. The Frosh drew first blood in the second inning when Quinn was safe on an error, stole second, and then came home on Conosa's single. Fedigan, however, came right back in the same stanza to tie it up, scored what eventually proved the winning run in the third, and then scored again in the sixth on two walks and a single by Szal.

Fontenova Sets Record

The following night, LaBelle was again sent to the slab, but as has already been mentioned, he was knocked out of the box in the first inning and the Fediganites were defeated 15-5. When play was resumed on Thursday night, however, the Gigoloes downed the Frosh, overcoming a six run deficit, to win 10-7, with speed ball artist Joe Barry on the mound. This victory really showed Fedigan's strength, for every man hit on at least one occasion. The Redmen had their big inning in the fifth, when they scored seven of their ten runs. Fontenova started things off in a bird-like fashion with a double down the left field foul line. Every man on the squad batted once, to make a complete circuit, and then Fontenova repeated again, to become the first man this year to hit safely twice in the same inning.

The other game of the week saw the Frosh down the Firemen of Austin, 15-10, in a slugfest, with Reagen leading the way for the Gold Bugs, with three singles in four times at bat.

Seminarians Triumph

For the second week in succession, the Seminarians were victorious over the Faculty last Friday night, as they trounced their seniors by a score of 5-2. In a previous contest the Priests had been defeated 9-7.

These games took place as a result of the one week layoff in the regular student league.

Gavin Advances In 'Mural Tennis

Quigley Also Successful in Reaching Quarterfinal Round; Three Matches Scheduled This Week

By JACK BAMBRICK

Although rain caused the postponement of three of the eight scheduled matches last week, five contestants were successful in reaching the quarter-final round of the Intramural Tennis Tournament. Headlining these second round victors was top-seeded Austin Gavin who continued his winning ways with an easy 6-1, 6-0 triumph over Joe Elward. Gavin, star of last year's Varsity Tennis team, is slowly winding his way toward the final round, and has lost only four games in his two matches to date. His next opponent will be Jim Bradley, who eliminated Ray Baldwin last week to the tune of 6-2, 6-4. Bradley looked very promising in this contest, and should give the top-seeded man quite a bit of competition.

Daly, MacDonald Rained Out

Tom Quigley, seeded fourth, overcame Joe Barry, but only after a stiff struggle. The score of this match was 6-4, 6-3. Jim Daly, a freshman, and one who has done exceptionally well thus far, crossed racquets with Red Quinn and blotted him out by the score of 6-1, 6-0. Jim Carbine moved up by virtue of a default.

The three postponed matches, two of which involve second-seeded Joe Daly and third-seeded Bill MacDonald, will take place as soon as possible, in order to seal up the second round. Both these stars are pitted against strong opponents, however, and may be upset. Daly is pitted against Charley LaBelle, while MacDonald plays Hugh Wells.

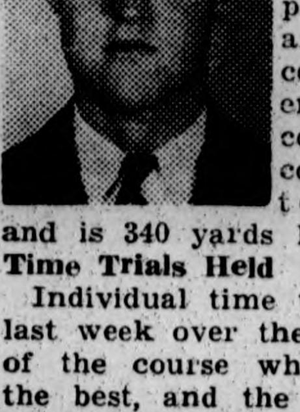
By BILL WALSH
Sports Editor

For those readers, who did not see the Sports section of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin of Saturday evening, August 1, we might mention the fact that Villanova's Physical Fitness Program received quite a bit of publicity in that issue; and well-deserved publicity it was. It was stated that the obstacle course, built just inside the quarter mile track in the football stadium, ranked with the best in the country, being on an even par with that of Texas University, which is generally recognized as the criterion of barricade runs. The write-up, along with the five action shots which also appeared, came as a result of the completion of the entire barricade course, which consists of fourteen obstacles and is 340 yards long.



Time Trials Held

Individual time trials were held last week over the first 170 yards of the course which ranks with the best, and the times were exceedingly good. Bill Meely, a junior in the engineering school and John Bittig a C. & F. sophomore tied for the record with the remarkable time of 35 seconds. Close on their heels was Lou Carideo, with 35.5. In all, about ten contestants were timed in less than forty seconds.

When the time trials for the entire course will be held, is not definitely known, although they will probably take place in the early part of September. It is Coach "Clipper" Smith's plan to get the students in as perfect condition as possible, before they tackle the full 340 yard layout.

Student Body Approves

With the completion of this same obstacle course, we realize what a remarkable job "Clipper" and his aids, Vince McNally and "Doc" Jacobs, have turned in from their positions as directors of Villanova's Physical Fitness Program, and they certainly deserve a great deal of credit for their untiring efforts. Probably at no time during their respective football and baseball coaching tenures have they exerted more effort to their cause than that which has been contributed in the present War-Conditioning campaign at Villanova. Their sedulous endeavor, however, has not been in vain. Aside from the fact that Villanova's obstacle course, has gained the distinction of being rated with the best in the country,

Intramural Stars Meet Swarthmore Tomorrow

Wildcat Nine Hopes to Avenge 5 to 0 Defeat Suffered at Hands of Garnet Aggregation Last Wednesday Evening

By JACK KOVAL

Seeking revenge for the 5-0 setback which they suffered at the hands of the Swarthmore College baseball nine last Wednesday, the Villanova Intramural All Stars will encounter the same Garnet club in a twilight contest tomorrow, and hope to let loose with the supreme offensive power, which they surely do possess, and even up the series with a smashing victory. This game will be the third on the Wildcat's summer schedule, the other previous contest with Haverford being postponed on two different occasions because of inclement weather conditions. The latter game was the only scheduled contest which necessitated a postponement.

Ogden Winning Pitcher

Last week's contest with Swarthmore found both teams exhibiting an offensive power which could not in any way be regarded as outstanding. It was exclusively a defensive game from start to finish. The total hits garnered by the Wildcats and Swarthmore were but five.

Johnny Ogden, Jr., outstanding hurler for the Garnets, and who incidentally comes from a family of baseball players, allowed but two hits, a single by third baseman "Stan" Kazior in the opening frame, and another bingle by leftfielder Jack Koval in the fifth inning. Ogden struck out eleven and gave up only two walks.

The All Stars will probably be facing him again in tomorrow's contest. He might, however, prove to be less effective and puzzling to the Wildcats, since they had the opportunity to study his style of pitching in their previous engagement.

Swarthmore Also Ineffective

Despite the fact that the Maroon and White defeated the Wildcats by five runs it gave no indication that they had shown power at the plate. On the contrary, however, for all five runs were unearned and the Villanova moundsman, "Rocky" Giannini kept them in check offensively, allowing only three hits, one in each of the first three innings. From then on, they were held hitless. But in the sixth frame the Blue and White hurler showed signs of weakening when three runs were scored on four straight walks. He was relieved by "Frenchy" DeBlois, who subsequently retired the side in short order.

Score Two In First

Villanova put themselves in hot water right in the opening frame, when Swarthmore took a 2-0 lead as a result of two straight walks, a batter hit by a pitched ball and a single. For the next four innings the Wildcats tightened their defense and held the Garnet nine scoreless. But then in the sixth frame, Swarthmore added three more runs to make the score 5-0. In the seventh inning the All Stars had their last opportunity to overtake Swarthmore's five-run lead, but failed in their endeavor. This was the first defeat for the All Stars in their present summer campaign.

Hybrids Triumph In Dayhop League

Gain First Half Title Easily; Muses Finish in Second, 1½ Games Behind

By JOE CARBINE

By eliminating the last threat of the Muse team with a 4-2 victory last Friday, the Hybrids have been crowned "First Half Champions" of the Dayhop Softball League. Under the leadership of Joe Matwieyczik, the Hybrids dominated the league from the start, and were beaten only once, that defeat having been suffered in the beginning of the season at the hands of the Actors.

Until last Friday, the Muses had an outside chance to win or tie, had the Hybrids lost three of the postponed contests which they would have been compelled to play, but with the defeat in Friday's encounter, they had to be content with second place. In this game the Hybrids took the lead in the first inning, when Lou Centanni walked, stole second, and tallied on a sharp single by Carmen Graziano. Art Martin, of the Muses, then tied the score, and a homer by Jack Deery put the Muse club in the lead 2-1.

Hybrids Lose Three Players

It is worth noting that the First-Half Champions will lose three of their star players as a result of the termination of the summer school. They are: Lou Centanni, Bob Gross, and Rocky Giannini. These three men have played a prominent part in all the Hybrid victories and it will be difficult to replace them.

Meet The Boys:

Bill Friel Has Many Opportunities For Showing His Tireless Spirit

By JACK DEERY

BILL Friel is action personified. If you see a student holding a microphone announcing the Villanova basketball games, pushing a pen in the Alumni office, studying accounting books, relaxing over a cup of Pie Shop coffee, it's probably Bill Friel. In fact, he might be mistaken for a college official. This mistake is pardonable, for he certainly is well suited for the part. His businessman's pose is always maintained.

Let us trace the history of dynamo Bill. He just missed being an "enfant de Noel" by fifty-five minutes. In the wee hourse of December 26, William Francis Friel became an argument for computing the birth rate for 1921. The city of Lancaster lays claim to him even though he left for Philadelphia six months later.

Busy In High School

His pre-Villanova education was completely Catholic. After attending the Transfiguration Parochial School, he entered St. Joseph's Prep. While at St. Joseph's he was a member of the stage crew, where he proved himself indispensible to the dramatics society. What Bill boasts about most though, is his perfect attendance as a member of the Knights of the Blessed Sacrament. To be a member of this organization the student devoted every Thursday afternoon to confession and Friday mornings to Communion. Bill considers this his most outstanding achievement while at Prep.

Studies Accounting

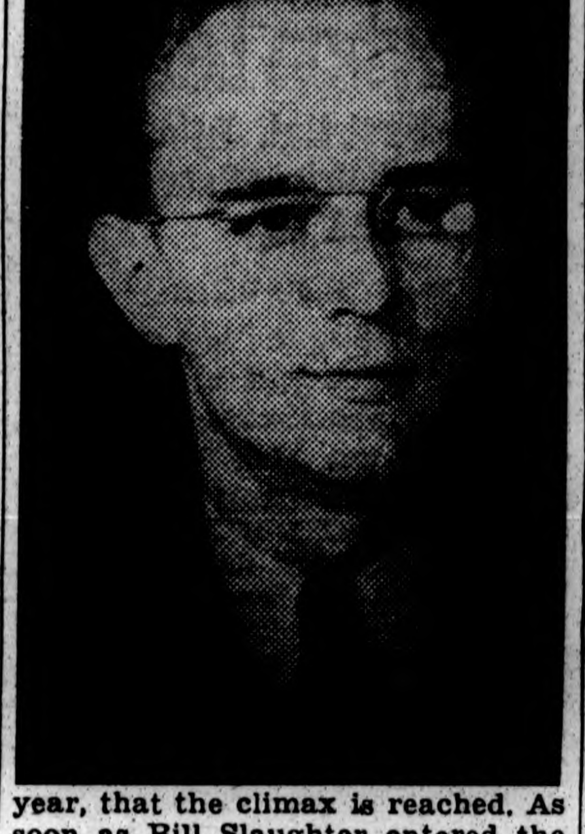
But what of his history here at Villanova? The tale of bill Friel is an action story. The opening chapter is not too exciting. Bill entered the Commerce and Finance school as an accounting major. Villanova was to act as a primary step to the securing of a Certified Public Accountant diploma. It is in the opening chapter, however, that the basis for the action in the next three is laid. Here Bill became acquainted with Bill Slaughter, N. Y. A. and Placement Director, and Rev. Ralph J. Handran, O. S. A. noticed his ability with a drumstick.

Enjoys Band Work

Chapters two and three saw Bill becoming Bill Slaughter's man Friday and drummer in the marching and symphonic bands. In chapter three, his junior year, Bill took up the microphone at the home basketball games. Ah, and during this period the annual Spring Concerts began. He enjoyed himself considerably during the practice sessions for the concert. (The Spring Concert is presented by a combined band of students from Immaculata College and Villanova.)

Such instances were sources of inspiration to Alfred Lord Tennyson when he wrote "In the spring, a young man's fancy . . ." But don't get Bill wrong, he has his Marie and is always ready, nay, proud to announce the fact.

Assumes Administrative Post



It is in chapter four, his senior year, that the climax is reached. As soon as Bill Slaughter entered the armed service, Bill acted unofficially in his ex-boss's manifold positions. As if this did not take up all his time, he still burns the midnight oil studying accounting.

But now the supreme question. What is Bill's draft board status? The Army has deferred him until January, the time of his graduation. He has attempted to enlist in the Supply and Ordinance department of the U. S. Navy; however, he was told that he must put on more weight. If he succeeds, preparation for this type of work will provide a six months graduate course at Harvard. This explains his increased reach at the dinner table.

Ex-Provincial Dies After Long Illness

The funeral of the Very Rev. Daniel A. Herron, O. S. A., former Provincial of the Augustinian Order, was held Friday, July 31 at the College chapel. Fr. Herron died at Misericordia Hospital after a prolonged illness. At the time of his death, he was rector of St. Mary's Parish in Waterford, N. Y.

After Fr. Herron's death, the body was taken to his home parish and a Solemn Requiem Mass was celebrated on July 30. It was then brought to Villanova, and the Office of the Dead was chanted the same evening, with the Very Rev. Henry A. Caffrey, O. S. A., presiding.

Requiem Mass Friday

At 10:00 A. M. on Friday the Solemn Requiem Mass was celebrated by the Very Rev. Joseph A. Hickey, O. S. A., fourth assistant general of the Augustinian Order, and a member of the Sacred Congregation of the Sacraments. Fr. Hickey is at present in the United States from his post in the Roman Curia.

The Very Rev. Mortimer A. Sullivan, O. S. A., the sole surviving ex-Provincial of the Province of St. Thomas, was the deacon of the Mass. The sub-deacon was the Rev. Edward J. Murtaugh, O. S. A., of Our Mother of Good Council parish, Bryn Mawr, a classmate of the deceased. The Rev. John E. Bresnahan, O. S. A., was master of ceremonies, and the minor officers were scholastics of St. Mary's Hall.

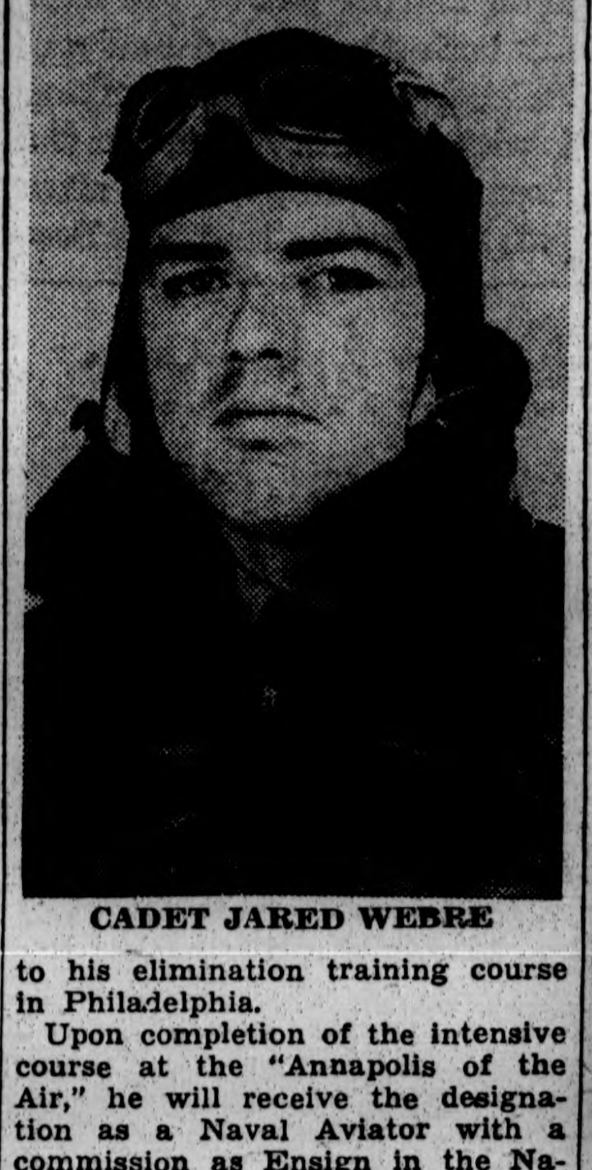
Choir Chants Mass

A choir of priests and scholastics, under the direction of the Rev. Ralph Handran, O. S. A., chanted the Gregorian music of the Mass. The Very Rev. John A. Regnery, O. S. A., of Staten Island, N. Y., delivered the sermon. Burial was in the monastery cemetery.

Villanova's Fighting Men

Jared S. Webre, a graduate of the School of Commerce and Finance in 1941, was recently appointed a Naval Aviation Cadet and was transferred to the Naval Air Station at Pensacola, Fla., for flight training, according to an announcement from the public reltions office of that station.

Webre received his B. S. degree here and was a member of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps prior to his elimination training course in Philadelphia.



CADET JARED WEBRE

Upon completion of the intensive course at the "Annapolis of the Air," he will receive the designation as a Naval Aviator with a commission as Ensign in the Naval Reserve or as a second Lieutenant in the Marine Corps Reserve, and will go on active duty.

Spanish Augustinian Consecrated Bishop In Lima Ceremony July 5

Word was received here recently that the Rev. Jose Garcia Pulgar, O. S. A., was consecrated Bishop at Lima, Peru, on July 5. Bishop Pulgar, an Augustinian ordained in Spain, will be stationed at Iquitos, the most important city of his diocese.

The newly consecrated bishop was born in Parajeo del Puerto, Spain, in 1892. He received the Augustinian habit at the age of fifteen at the Mother House of the Augustinian Province. He made his religious profession a year later.

Ordained in 1917

He completed four years of philosophy before entering the Augustinian Theological Seminary of La Vid (Burgos). In 1917 he was ordained a priest and later sent to Colombia where he worked as the curate in the parishes of Soledad and Facatativa. Here he established many catechetical centers for his people. In 1924 he was transferred to the Augustinian College at Lima where he was an instructor of religion and natural science.

Following this he held the offices of Procurator, Sub-director, and Director of the School. The last named position he held for two years. In 1938, Bishop Pulgar was appointed to the position of Apostolic Vicar of the Missions of St. Leo of the Amazon but this he refused, only to receive notice in 1941 that the Holy See had ratified the appointment and insisted on his acceptance.

Continues As Vicar

The Augustinian was consecrated bishop by the Apostolic Delegate to Peru, Fernando Cento who was assisted by the Archbishop of Lima and the Bishop of Trujillo. He will continue to hold the title of the Apostolic Vicar of the Missions which he received in 1941.

Following the consecration ceremonies Bishop Pulgar conducted a three way long-distance call with his brother, Rev. Gregory C. Pulgar, O. S. A., stationed in the Bronx, N. Y. and his aged mother and three sisters in the town of Pajares del Puerto, Spain. The call was arranged by a friend of the bishop's, Edward McCann of New York City. After receiving their congratulations, he imparted his blessing by telephone to his brother and family.

ed was Father Walter Rafter; his task to unify all the work and establish proper norms for its control a difficult one.

"Father Rafter was succeeded by Father Sparrow, under whom the work continued to expand. In 1932 the present Dean, Father Bartley, succeeded to the office, and how well he has performed his work is seen in the wonderful smoothness with which the work is now conducted. His genius for organization, his sympathetic understanding of the needs of the communities, and his wholehearted dedication to the task at hand, prove him one of the finest deans we could expect to have."

SENIORS GET KEYS

Senior staff members of the VILLANOVAN received yesterday the gold keys presented annually by Rev. Edward B. McKee, O. S. A., moderator of the publication. Awarded in recognition of at least three years of faithful service, the keys are fashioned in the shape of a linotype matrix and are inscribed on the reverse side with the name and position of the recipient. Seniors not in the accelerated program will receive their keys at the staff banquet in January.

they have been successful in another point, and one which seems more important to us — that of gaining the approval of the student body.

Arouse Competitive Spirit

As most of us know, the Hale America program, inaugurated last March was not too successful, and hence "Clipper" and his aids did not have an easy job on their hands when they set out to make the present War-Conditioning program a success. However, as we all know now, they have come through with flying colors, and certainly have become familiar with the great majority of the student body. They have produced a competitive spirit hitherto unknown to those students who did not take part in varsity or intramural sports of their own initiative, and have made Villanovans much better men as a result of it.

Leo Zollo Signed For Summer Hop

Local Maestro Featured In Field House August 28

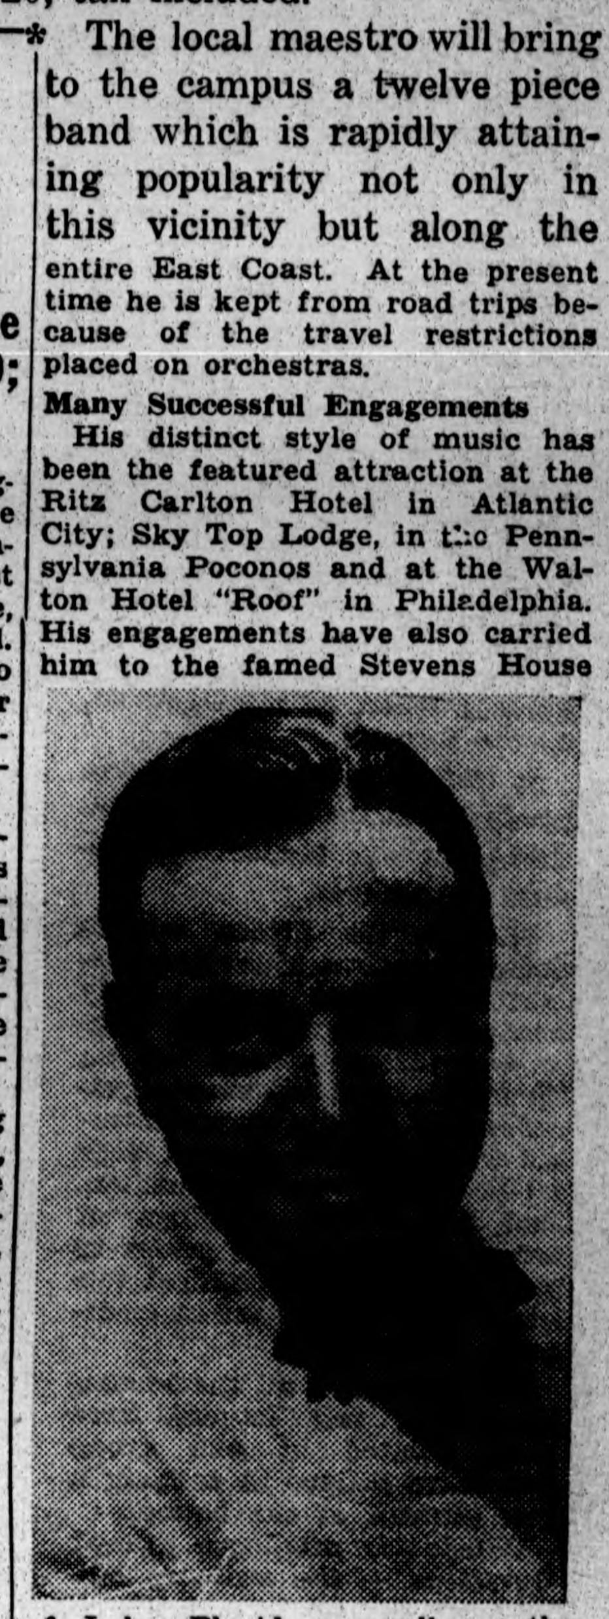
Council Signs Band Saturday; Last Minute Drive Saves Assessment Campaign From Falling Short of Goal

Leo Zollo and his orchestra have been signed to play for Villanova's first "Summer Hop," August 28 in the Field House. Final negotiations were completed late Saturday afternoon after the goal set by Student Council in last week's assessment drive was reached Friday. Tickets for the dance are on sale at $2.20, tax included.

The local maestro will bring to the campus a twelve piece band which is rapidly attaining popularity not only in this vicinity but along the entire East Coast. At the present time he is kept from road trips because of the travel restrictions placed on orchestras.

Many Successful Engagements

His distinct style of music has been the featured attraction at the Ritz Carlton Hotel in Atlantic City; Sky Top Lodge, in the Pennsylvania Poconos and at the Walton Hotel "Roof" in Philadelphia. His engagements have also carried him to the famed Stevens House of Lake Placid as well as the Miami Beach Casino in Florida. His "sparkling" music has been also heard at the nearby "Rainbow Terrace" of the Covered Wagon Inn in Strafford. He has played two successful seasons at the last named place.



The signing of the contract Saturday afternoon was completed only after a last minute effort by several of the members of Student Council. Friday noon, when the results of the week-long assessment drive were tabulated it was found that the amount collected was short of the total needed.

The Council found themselves faced with a situation of "get the

President Warns Student Body Of Excess Absences

Announcement Reduces Maximum Number to One Week Limit; Unexcused Cuts Barred By Fr. Stanford's Order

Responsibilities of college students under wartime conditions were repeated today by Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, in a second announcement concerning the revised system of "class cuts" which reduces the maximum number of absences permitted to one week instead of the former two week limit.

Fr. Stanford emphasized that in allowing students to continue in college rather than be inducted into military service, our government has assumed that such students will conscientiously devote all their energies to their studies.

The government believes that such a policy is necessary in providing trained men for service both in the armed forces and in war industry. The president pointed out that in keeping with this policy, regular attendance at class is an absolute requisite and that "absence from class due to negligence or personal whim is a serious matter and should be dealt with accordingly."

Complete Text Given

The complete text of Father Stanford's announcement is quoted below:

"Prevailing wartime conditions impose on all citizens, college students included, heavy obligations to devote themselves unstintingly to the war effort.

"College students are contributing to the war effort in a very real sense, provided they are endeavoring to fit themselves for service to country by intensifying, in every way possible, their preparation and training at college.

"The very fact that college students are being granted exception-

Council Offers Additional Stamps

Sale of War Stamps of higher denomination was announced this morning by John J. Quinn, acting chairman of the Student Council. "The additional capital placed at our disposal has made it possible for us to invest in stamps of any denomination up to $1.00," Quinn said.

The representatives of the Council, who are on duty at the Mendel Hall Stamp Stand every day at the lunch hour, will now be able to accommodate members of the faculty and members of the college personnel who wish to buy stamps of the higher brackets.

The Council will serve them in the same manner as students; that is, when sufficient stamps have been accumulated for the purchase of a bond, the Council will exchange the stamps for a bond of the proper denomination.

Drive to Continue

In reference to the sale of stamps thus far, Quinn remarked that it was "only fair." "A small percentage of the student body is still accounting for the greater percentage of purchases," he said. "Unless each and every student takes it upon himself to set aside some amount, however small, regularly each week, the sale will not be considered a success.

"A slight increase in the sale was noted in the second week, but when the novelty wore off sales dropped accordingly. The students must be made to realize that this is a war for every citizen."

One Way To Beat The Heat

No, it really didn't snow here over the weekend, but we just thought you'd be a little refreshed by a picture which appeared in the VILLANOVAN for March 4, 1941. Caption for the picture relates that ten inches of downy white flakes fell from Thursday evening until Friday morning. Looks cool, doesn't it?

The torrential rains of last week, which never seemed to fall in time to get us out of a Physical Training class, changed with a vengeance last Friday. While many students escaped to their homes by taking advantage of the long weekend, those who stayed sweltered near the radios or sought relief under the shade trees on the campus.

Typical of the last mentioned students are those comprising the group pictured below. Dressed for comfort more than for style, they are shown discussing lessons and—the heat.

Bulging (And Aching) Muscles Are Result Of Physical Training Class

People who merely struggle across crocodile-infested tropical streams are sissies. People who scale a mountain's precipitous side are cowards. People who ride bronchos, swim channels, box kangaroos, discover directionary poles, pierce thick jungles, bore holes under a river, sit on steeples, wear hair skirts, tame lions, argue with Mr. and Mrs. Gargantua, are all of them geraniums.

The real kind of devil-may-care heroes are people who attend M. J. Smith's classes in exhaustion. These are the noble of heart, these the glorious of deed! In the first place, they are tough; in the second place, they are durable; in the final analysis, they are tired.

Apex is Reached

No scheming Japanese torturer could devise more horrible ordeals than the "Clipper" can and does. No sadistic headsman could dream such psychological and mental torment; no professor could make threats more dire.

All there is to it is climbing things and crawling under things and jumping over things and tugging things and pushing things and scaling things and running around, between, and over things. All of these endeavors are innocent in themselves, if one successfully accomplishes them. Ah, but the dreadful result of failing to climb, jump, crawl, and scramble with the necessary agility and vigor

The G. A. R.

Oh, the deep dark lake of Stygian ooze that waits impatiently for a stumbling guest! Ow, the barbed and prickled wire that screams for fresh human blood! And that fate worse than all, worse than death, worse than being turned down by the Army or Navy, worse than missing lunch, the fate of being placed in the tottering and stodgy ranks of the "G. A. R."

This is the final blow, this the last lash, this the salt in the wounds. Sardonic messages are posted on the bulletin boards to mock the G. A. R. Sniggers are heard when a "Non-pore-stretching member of this select group" teeters across the field. And "Clipper's" tongue, oh, the misery that can bring, the cuts that can administer, the slurs that can coin.

One of these days we will have big, ugly muscles. One of these days we may get a shot at Louis. One of these days we may get the opportunity personally to rip Tokio to shreds.

About all we lack down on the football field now are slant-eyed Japs peering down the sights of a submachine gun. But then Clipper was seen with a cunning gleam in his eye the other day.

Well, what are we waiting for? "Good afternoon, Mr. Smith. Anything new today?"

Over 850 Enroll For War Courses

Nineteen Classes To Be Held Until September 30; New Subjects Planned

Preliminary reports on the figures of the Engineering, Science and Management Defense Training courses were released last week by J. Stanley Morehouse, dean of the Engineering School. The present courses, designed to supply technically trained men for the war effort, have been in progress since August 19 and will continue to September 30.

According to these reports Villanova has received 1500 applications for enrollment in the defense classes; 974 were accepted. At the end of two weeks 866 students were still attending class. It is estimated that students still present at the end of two weeks of school will remain for the entire course.

Because of the ever-increasing demand for women in industry, they constitute a good percentage of these classes. In all, 19 subjects were taught in 113 sections. The sum of student hours was 170,684. The maximum number of students approved by Washington for enrollment was 1856 and the total amount of money allotted for the expenditures entailed in training them was $74,798. The cost of these courses will be comparable to the $19,645 net cost of the Engineering Defense Training program which was the first of the programs offering courses in technical training.

Since the war, the E. S. M. D. T. has been changed to the E. S. M. W. T., defense training being substituted by war training. Courses under the supervision of the E. S. M. W. T. began on July 4 at Villanova and at Northeast and West Catholic High schools in Philadelphia.

In order to meet the needs of the Cramp Shipbuilding Co., a recently formed plan will soon start training about 100 men in Industrial Job Teaching. This plan proposes to instruct foremen and men exhibiting foremen qualifications in the technique of explaining to those under them exactly what their duties are.

Dean Morehouse has recently received two appointments from the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education, one making him a member of the committee on Instructional Methods; the other, a member of the Membership Committee.

Fr. Stanford Assists On Defense Commission

Methods by which colleges and universities of the country can more effectively cooperate in the work of civilian defense were discussed last Wednesday in Washington by the United States Commission on College and Civilian Defense.

Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, and approximately sixty other leading educators who comprise the Commission, met with James M. Landis, head of the Office of Civilian Defense, General U. S. Grant III, and several other officials of the Office of Civilian Defense to formulate the plans.

Altar Work Begun For Centennial Mass

Construction of an altar for the celebration of a Solemn Pontifical Mass of Thanksgiving by his Eminence Dennis Cardinal Dougherty on Sept. 20, is progressing in the Field House under the direction of Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O. S. A., Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A., and John T. Dever, college controller.

The Mass will inaugurate the ceremonies of the college's Centennial year. The celebration as originally planned has been altered considerably by the demands of the war-time program of the school.

A choir of sixty voices has been rehearsing for the Mass for some time under the guidance of Rev. Ralph J. Handran, O. S. A.

Chief attraction of the Centennial year in addition to the Mass will be the Academic Convocation on May 3, which is expected to draw the leading educators from the entire country.

Meet The Boys:

Bill Friel Has Many Opportunities For Showing His Tireless Spirit

By JACK DEERY

BILL Friel is action personified. If you see a student holding a microphone announcing the Villanova basketball games, pushing a pen in the Alumni office, studying accounting books, relaxing over a cup of Pie Shop coffee, it's probably Bill Friel. In fact, he might be mistaken for a college official. This mistake is pardonable, for he certainly is well suited for the part. His businessman's pose is always maintained.

Let us trace the history of dynamo Bill. He just missed being an "enfant de Noel" by fifty-five minutes. In the wee hourse of December 26, William Francis Friel became an argument for computing the birth rate for 1921. The city of Lancaster lays claim to him even though he left for Philadelphia six months later.

Busy In High School

His pre-Villanova education was completely Catholic. After attending the Transfiguration Parochial School, he entered St. Joseph's Prep. While at St. Joseph's he was a member of the stage crew, where he proved himself indispensible to the dramatics society. What Bill boasts about most though, is his perfect attendance as a member of the Knights of the Blessed Sacrament. To be a member of this organization the student devoted every Thursday afternoon to confession and Friday mornings to Communion. Bill considers this his most outstanding achievement while at Prep.

Studies Accounting

But what of his history here at Villanova? The tale of bill Friel is an action story. The opening chapter is not too exciting. Bill entered the Commerce and Finance school as an accounting major. Villanova was to act as a primary step to the securing of a Certified Public Accountant diploma. It is in the opening chapter, however, that the basis for the action in the next three is laid. Here Bill became acquainted with Bill Slaughter, N. Y. A. and Placement Director, and Rev. Ralph J. Handran, O. S. A. noticed his ability with a drumstick.

Enjoys Band Work

Chapters two and three saw Bill becoming Bill Slaughter's man Friday and drummer in the marching and symphonic bands. In chapter three, his junior year, Bill took up the microphone at the home basketball games. Ah, and during this period the annual Spring Concerts began. He enjoyed himself considerably during the practice sessions for the concert. (The Spring Concert is presented by a combined band of students from Immaculata College and Villanova.)

Such instances were sources of inspiration to Alfred Lord Tennyson when he wrote "In the spring, a young man's fancy . . ." But don't get Bill wrong, he has his Marie and is always ready, nay, proud to announce the fact.

Assumes Administrative Post

It is in chapter four, his senior year, that the climax is reached. As soon as Bill Slaughter entered the armed service, Bill acted unofficially in his ex-boss's manifold positions. As if this did not take up all his time, he still burns the midnight oil studying accounting.

But now the supreme question. What is Bill's draft board status? The Army has deferred him until January, the time of his graduation. He has attempted to enlist in the Supply and Ordinance department of the U. S. Navy; however, he was told that he must put on more weight. If he succeeds, preparation for this type of work will provide a six months graduate course at Harvard. This explains his increased reach at the dinner table.

Ex-Provincial Dies After Long Illness

The funeral of the Very Rev. Daniel A. Herron, O. S. A., former Provincial of the Augustinian Order, was held Friday, July 31 at the College chapel. Fr. Herron died at Misericordia Hospital after a prolonged illness. At the time of his death, he was rector of St. Mary's Parish in Waterford, N. Y.

After Fr. Herron's death, the body was taken to his home parish and a Solemn Requiem Mass was celebrated on July 30. It was then brought to Villanova, and the Office of the Dead was chanted the same evening, with the Very Rev. Henry A. Caffrey, O. S. A., presiding.

Requiem Mass Friday

At 10:00 A. M. on Friday the Solemn Requiem Mass was celebrated by the Very Rev. Joseph A. Hickey, O. S. A., fourth assistant general of the Augustinian Order, and a member of the Sacred Congregation of the Sacraments. Fr. Hickey is at present in the United States from his post in the Roman Curia.

The Very Rev. Mortimer A. Sullivan, O. S. A., the sole surviving ex-Provincial of the Province of St. Thomas, was the deacon of the Mass. The sub-deacon was the Rev. Edward J. Murtaugh, O. S. A., of Our Mother of Good Council parish, Bryn Mawr, a classmate of the deceased. The Rev. John E. Bresnahan, O. S. A., was master of ceremonies, and the minor officers were scholastics of St. Mary's Hall.

Choir Chants Mass

A choir of priests and scholastics, under the direction of the Rev. Ralph Handran, O. S. A., chanted the Gregorian music of the Mass. The Very Rev. John A. Regnery, O. S. A., of Staten Island, N. Y., delivered the sermon. Burial was in the monastery cemetery.

Villanova's Fighting Men

Jared S. Webre, a graduate of the School of Commerce and Finance in 1941, was recently appointed a Naval Aviation Cadet and was transferred to the Naval Air Station at Pensacola, Fla., for flight training, according to an announcement from the public reltions office of that station.

Webre received his B. S. degree here and was a member of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps prior to his elimination training course in Philadelphia.

CADET JARED WEBRE

Upon completion of the intensive course at the "Annapolis of the Air," he will receive the designation as a Naval Aviator with a commission as Ensign in the Naval Reserve or as a second Lieutenant in the Marine Corps Reserve, and will go on active duty.

Spanish Augustinian Consecrated Bishop In Lima Ceremony July 5

Word was received here recently that the Rev. Jose Garcia Pulgar, O. S. A., was consecrated Bishop at Lima, Peru, on July 5. Bishop Pulgar, an Augustinian ordained in Spain, will be stationed at Iquitos, the most important city of his diocese.

The newly consecrated bishop was born in Parajeo del Puerto, Spain, in 1892. He received the Augustinian habit at the age of fifteen at the Mother House of the Augustinian Province. He made his religious profession a year later.

Ordained in 1917

He completed four years of philosophy before entering the Augustinian Theological Seminary of La Vid (Burgos). In 1917 he was ordained a priest and later sent to Colombia where he worked as the curate in the parishes of Soledad and Facatativa. Here he established many catechetical centers for his people. In 1924 he was transferred to the Augustinian College at Lima where he was an instructor of religion and natural science.

Following this he held the offices of Procurator, Sub-director, and Director of the School. The last named position he held for two years. In 1938, Bishop Pulgar was appointed to the position of Apostolic Vicar of the Missions of St. Leo of the Amazon but this he refused, only to receive notice in 1941 that the Holy See had ratified the appointment and insisted on his acceptance.

Continues As Vicar

The Augustinian was consecrated bishop by the Apostolic Delegate to Peru, Fernando Cento who was assisted by the Archbishop of Lima and the Bishop of Trujillo. He will continue to hold the title of the Apostolic Vicar of the Missions which he received in 1941.

Following the consecration ceremonies Bishop Pulgar conducted a three way long-distance call with his brother, Rev. Gregory C. Pulgar, O. S. A., stationed in the Bronx, N. Y. and his aged mother and three sisters in the town of Pajares del Puerto, Spain. The call was arranged by a friend of the bishop's, Edward McCann of New York City. After receiving their congratulations, he imparted his blessing by telephone to his brother and family.

"Father Rafter was succeeded by Father Sparrow, under whom the work continued to expand. In 1932 the present Dean, Father Bartley, succeeded to the office, and how well he has performed his work is seen in the wonderful smoothness with which the work is now conducted. His genius for organization, his sympathetic understanding of the needs of the communities, and his wholehearted dedication to the task at hand, prove him one of the finest deans we could expect to have."

SENIORS GET KEYS

Senior staff members of the VILLANOVAN received yesterday the gold keys presented annually by Rev. Edward B. McKee, O. S. A., moderator of the publication. Awarded in recognition of at least three years of faithful service, the keys are fashioned in the shape of a linotype matrix and are inscribed on the reverse side with the name and position of the recipient. Seniors not in the accelerated program will receive their keys at the staff banquet in January.

they have been successful in another point, and one which seems more important to us — that of gaining the approval of the student body.

Arouse Competitive Spirit

As most of us know, the Hale America program, inaugurated last March was not too successful, and hence "Clipper" and his aids did not have an easy job on their hands when they set out to make the present War-Conditioning program a success. However, as we all know now, they have come through with flying colors, and certainly have become familiar with the great majority of the student body. They have produced a competitive spirit hitherto unknown to those students who did not take part in varsity or intramural sports of their own initiative, and have made Villanovans much better men as a result of it.

President Warns Student Body Of Excess Absences

Announcement Reduces Maximum Number to One Week Limit; Unexcused Cuts Barred By Fr. Stanford's Order

Responsibilities of college students under wartime conditions were repeated today by Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, in a second announcement concerning the revised system of "class cuts" which reduces the maximum number of absences permitted to one week instead of the former two week limit.

Fr. Stanford emphasized that in allowing students to continue in college rather than be inducted into military service, our government has assumed that such students will conscientiously devote all their energies to their studies.

The government believes that such a policy is necessary in providing trained men for service both in the armed forces and in war industry. The president pointed out that in keeping with this policy, regular attendance at class is an absolute requisite and that "absence from class due to negligence or personal whim is a serious matter and should be dealt with accordingly."

Complete Text Given

The complete text of Father Stanford's announcement is quoted below:

"Prevailing wartime conditions impose on all citizens, college students included, heavy obligations to devote themselves unstintingly to the war effort.

"College students are contributing to the war effort in a very real sense, provided they are endeavoring to fit themselves for service to country by intensifying, in every way possible, their preparation and training at college.

"The very fact that college students are being granted exception-

Council Offers Additional Stamps

Sale of War Stamps of higher denomination was announced this morning by John J. Quinn, acting chairman of the Student Council. "The additional capital placed at our disposal has made it possible for us to invest in stamps of any denomination up to $1.00," Quinn said.

The representatives of the Council, who are on duty at the Mendel Hall Stamp Stand every day at the lunch hour, will now be able to accommodate members of the faculty and members of the college personnel who wish to buy stamps of the higher brackets.

The Council will serve them in the same manner as students; that is, when sufficient stamps have been accumulated for the purchase of a bond, the Council will exchange the stamps for a bond of the proper denomination.

Drive to Continue

In reference to the sale of stamps thus far, Quinn remarked that it was "only fair." "A small percentage of the student body is still accounting for the greater percentage of purchases," he said. "Unless each and every student takes it upon himself to set aside some amount, however small, regularly each week, the sale will not be considered a success.

"A slight increase in the sale was noted in the second week, but when the novelty wore off sales dropped accordingly. The students must be made to realize that this is a war for every citizen."

Local Maestro Featured In Field House August 28

Council Signs Band Saturday; Last Minute Drive Saves Assessment Campaign From Falling Short of Goal

Leo Zollo and his orchestra have been signed to play for Villanova's first "Summer Hop," August 28 in the Field House. Final negotiations were completed late Saturday afternoon after the goal set by Student Council in last week's assessment drive was reached Friday. Tickets for the dance are on sale at $2.20, tax included.

The local maestro will bring to the campus a twelve piece band which is rapidly attaining popularity not only in this vicinity but along the entire East Coast. At the present time he is kept from road trips because of the travel restrictions placed on orchestras.

Many Successful Engagements

His distinct style of music has been the featured attraction at the Ritz Carlton Hotel in Atlantic City; Sky Top Lodge, in the Pennsylvania Poconos and at the Walton Hotel "Roof" in Philadelphia. His engagements have also carried him to the famed Stevens House of Lake Placid as well as the Miami Beach Casino in Florida. His "sparkling" music has been also heard at the nearby "Rainbow Terrace" of the Covered Wagon Inn in Strafford. He has played two successful seasons at the last named place.

The signing of the contract Saturday afternoon was completed only after a last minute effort by several of the members of Student Council, Friday noon, when the results of the week-long assessment drive were tabulated it was found that the amount collected was short of the total needed.

The Council found themselves faced with a situation of "get the

Who's To Blame?

THE United States is fast losing the war. It is so obvious that it has become almost a truism.

The enemy knows it. The public knows it. Worst of all — our government admits it.

In our frantic search for a scapegoat, we are all asking the same questions: Why are we losing the war? Who's to blame?

As usual our British allies come in for a large share of the blame. Some of us blame Congress, or President Roosevelt, or Churchill. Others tag the label of guilt on the hard-pressed Russians. Still others prefer to pass the buck to organized labor, or management, or the farmers.

It is true that each of these groups is liable, to varying degrees, for our blundering conduct of the war.

Witness the fifteen minute strike staged at a Wright Aircraft plant last week merely because a company milk wagon was fifteen minutes late on its rounds. And the short-sightedness of certain manufacturers who refuse to expand their factories for war production. And the tragic gropings of some politicians who prefer to protect their own political fortunes rather than enact emergency legislation.

But myriad as all the accusations are, few fingers have been pointed at one group which we believe is dodging a just amount of the blame.

Who is this privileged group? Ourselves — the ordinary citizens — the rank and file of America — this is the answer. Reveling in a sheltered existence, too many of us have built a hard shell of complacency about ourselves.

Nothing bothers us. If our morning newspaper announces the loss of a new battle; that the enemy has made new advances — many of us merely shrug our shoulders with a "What a bunch of incompetent generals! Now if I were running this war . . ."

Our generals can, and do make costly mistakes. But the sum total of our own individual failings may prove even more costly.

Our self-satisfied life of ease is seldom disturbed by thoughts that a few more War Bonds, or those precious minutes lost at the assembly line might have supplied enough bullets to win that battle; that that last gallon of gasoline we burnt up on a joyride might have kept our planes in the air a few hours longer — long enough to hit back harder at the enemy — if not to win the battle!!

What will it take to rouse us from our dreams? Shall we wait until the enemy is upon us, until our coastal cities are bombed or Alaska invaded?

Even the recent execution of the German spies caused but a temporary flutter in the public mind and then we went back to "business as usual."

This is war to the death, no quarter asked or given. The sooner each and every American realizes this and does something about it the more strengthened are our possibilities for victory.

—R. T. C.

No "Cuts"

THE recent communication from the president's office has caused considerable comment among the student body — some good and some bad.

Those who have received the information as they should — that is, in the light of the present war conditions — we admire for their ability to realize the seriousness of the situation and their obligations as college students during war times.

As for the others, we can only place them in the category of other Americans who wish to carry on as though the war was non-existent. If they will but take the time to analyze their objections they will see that the grievances are based upon their own selfishness.

To them we say that this is war. You are asked merely to attend classes faithfully while others are asked to die. You have been asked merely to control that lazy desire to cut classes, which can be controlled, while others have been ordered from normal life into armed combat.

Those men on the battlefield are permitted no cuts until victory is ours. Their only excuse from the front line is death or serious injury. To these men on the battle fronts of the world we have an obligation which we must fulfill.

When you want to take that next cut to catch up on some sleep, give a little thought to that soldier who is sleeping eternally because he believed that our way of life was worth dying for.

It's Your Dance

WITH the announcement of the signing of one of Philadelphia's most popular bands for the dance, the Student Council is swinging into high gear in preparation for the "Summer Hop" on August 28.

Consider the original decision to sponsor the affair. The Council recognized the need for at least one organized social event for the students during the summer months, but recognized also the serious obstacles in the way of staging a successful dance.

In the first place, it could count on the backing of no particular group within the student body, as can classes or fraternities. No class assessments or organizational dues could be requisitioned to meet initial expenses.

But a questionnaire circulated among the students indicated their willingness to pay an assessment of $1.00, even before the announcement of the band, to allow the orchestra committee to function more freely. That the response was satisfactory is indicated by the fact that the amount requested by the Council was exceeded in a last minute drive on Friday.

Several serious problems remain to be solved. It will require all the Council's ingenuity as well as continued student cooperation to overcome them. The Student Council has proved that it is functioning for the students; it cannot succeed unless it is also functioning with the students.

FACULTY COMMENTS

Mary, Patroness Of Our Nation

By FR. DUNNE

Last Saturday we celebrated as a holyday of obligation one of the two feasts of the Blessed Mother that are included in the days of obligation, besides the Sundays, within the United States. This feast was the Assumption of the Blessed Mother; the other is the feast of the Immaculate Conception which we celebrate on December 8.

The proximity of the feast of the Assumption, under which title we honored Our Blessed Mother last Saturday; the fact that we singularly honor Our Lady in this country as our Patroness under the title of the Immaculate Conception, and the trying times, for war, with all its exigencies, has descended upon us since we last celebrated the Feast of the Immaculate Conception should induce us to turn to her more than ever before. Her succour should be implored daily for our country, for the war efforts of the nation ,and, last but not least, for each one of us personally.

Honored as Heaven's Queen

Under many titles we honor the Blessed Mother of God, but under the title of the Assumption we honor her as Queen of Heaven, as the one human being so worthy in the sight of God that through God's special predilection she was to become the Mother of God, and, after her Divine Son, to enjoy the highest place in Heaven. Under the title of Immaculate Conception, we likewise honor her as the patroness of our country. There is yet another title under which, especially in these days, we should honor the Mother of God, and that is as queen of the Most Holy Rosary. It was under that title that through her intercession a pagan invader of Christian Europe was turned back at the famous battle of Lepanto.

Use of Rosary Urged

Under that title today we should honor her to gain for our great country Divine Assistance against the pagan hordes of Nippon, which so treacherously launched its attack against the United States on the eve of Our Lady's feast-day.

By the daily recitation of the Rosary we would bring down upon ourselves and our country the Blessing of God. By this invocation of the Blessed Mother through her special prayer we would gain victory for our nation and her protection for the boys in our armed services.

Power of Prayer

Only a few days ago the Catholic papers carried a reprint from an Australian newspaper in which the anecdote illustrates the power of Mary's prayer, the Rosary. At the same time it indicates the goodness of the Blessed Mother not only to those in the Faith, but also towards those outside the Faith.

Briefly, the story is the harrowing experiences of a group of Australians, who, vastly out-numbered in the Battle of Java managed to escape and, after six weeks, to reach Australia and safety.

Pursued by the Japanese, subject to all kinds of dangers and hardships; through tropical heat and jungle, the little group experienced what the narrator called a "glorious rescue." The writer, a graduate of one of Australia's Catholic Colleges, attributes the rescue to the power of prayer, especially the daily recitation of the Rosary.

Dies in Prayer

One of the avowed atheists in the group, who was to die before the rescue was effected and who was the last to join the group in prayer, succumbed to fever uttering the prayers he had learned one short week before.

The Catholic College graduate has this to say for himself: "For my own part, I am among the more fortunate—very weak from hunger and fever, but progressing well. Now that all is over, despite all the anxiety and hardships, I shall always thank God for the experience. If it has not made me a better man it should. While we tramped our way—men for the most part without health, without strength, and without hope—I found that prayer once again sustained my spirits as nothing else could do. It made me feel confident that some day, somehow, I should pull through to safety. . ."

Non-Believers Won Over

He then tells us how all in their desperation turned to prayer: "An open increase in prayer among our party was an interesting side of our trek. Five of us were Catholics. The remainder ranged from regular Protestant churchmen to avowed atheists. Early in the jaunt we Catholics began a daily Rosary. To our surprise a professedly casual Protestant soon joined us at our request. . ."

This gentleman afterwards, we are told, began instructions in the Catholic Faith. All the rest soon joined in public prayer, proving the truth of the observation in the recently-coined phrase: "There are no atheists in fox-holes."

Value for Students

The value of a sincere devotion for the Catholic college student of today can hardly be overemphasized. Faced as he is with the grim demands of total war he should beseech Mary's intercession that he will at all times be properly disposed for any eventualities. Mary in her scapular promise has indicated that devotion to her will be remembered at the hour of death. What more consoling thoughts could be offered to a soldier going to battle?

YES, the marks are in, the reports are out, and the students are down. For those students who are singing the blues, here's a song they can sing that just fits the situation. (Courtesy of the students at Gettysburg.)

"Do I worry, 'cause I'm flunking out?
Do I worry, 'cause I'm always in doubt?
Though my quizzies aren't right, do I give a bag of oats?
Do I stay home every night and read my lecture notes?
Am I frantic, 'cause my average sank?
Is there panic, 'cause my mind's a blank?
And when evening shadows creep,
Do I lose any sleep, just to cram,
Am I kidding? You know doggone well I am."

Sportorial

By BILL WALSH
Sports Editor

Intermittent showers, thunderstorms and steady downpours were about all we witnessed around this institution of learning last week, and as a result, there wasn't much athletic activity. The Intramural Tennis Tournament, scheduled to reach the semi-final round, remained at a standstill. On no day of the last week were the courts dry enough to permit the playing of any of the scheduled contests, and consequently the final match between the faculty and student champions, originally scheduled for the final week in August, will have to be postponed again. It is now hoped that the college champion will be determined by the first week in September.

Softball had its leanest week of the summer, as only two games were played in the Resident league, and none at all in the Dayhop circuit. Monday was the only day of the week on which the contests could be played without the use of bathing suits, and hence there isn't too much difference in the Resident league standings from those which appeared in last Tuesday's issue. The Dayhops, scheduled to begin the second half of their circuit, were washed out on three separate occasions and finally decided to wait until this week to inaugurate the second semester of their hotly contested league.

The biggest disappointment of the week, however, was the cancellation of the Villanova - Swarthmore hardball tilt, which was originally scheduled for last Wednesday evening on the Villanova diamond. This was the third time that Jupiter Pluvius has thwarted the plans of the All Stars, and the second occasion on which a contest had to be cancelled altogether. The return contest with Haverford, after being postponed once, was rained out a second time, resulting in the ultimate cancellation of the encounter, as no further dates were available. Likewise last Wednesday's game was erased from the books altogether, inasmuch as the Garnet squad had no dates open in the near future, and intend to start football practice within a few weeks.

After compiling a record of one win and one loss in two starts, it was extremely unfortunate that the hardball aggregation had to run into such hard luck with regard to the weather. Fathers McKee and Dunne did their utmost to make a going proposition of the Intramural All Star club and certainly deserved a better break for their efforts. However, even after only two contests, the popularity of such a squad could be seen throughout the student body, and there is no doubt in our minds that a team such as this will be a permanent fixture here at Villanova as long as the accelerated program is in existence.

Although it is only the middle of August, and there is still over a month of summer before the autumn season actually sets in, football has already crashed the headlines of sport pages all over the country. In the old days no word of football was mentioned until the middle or end of September, but in the present era where the motto is "Begin early and finish early," a few special games are held even during the month of August. The various All Star contests which have become a permanent fixture every autumn, have been the curtain raisers of the football season for the last few years, with this one being no exception .

In this area, the 1942 season will be inaugurated on Monday evening, August 31, when the best college players in the country last season, currently practicing as a group under the name of All-America All-Stars, will meet the Philadelphia Eagles in an Army and Navy War Relief contest at Municipal Stadium in Philadelphia. Previous to their engagement in the Quaker city, however, these same All-Stars will meet the Chicago Bears, champions of the National Professional League for the last two years, in another charity contest at Soldiers' Field in Chicago on August 28.

In no previous All-Star contest has such a galaxy of stars been together on one team, and Bob Zuppke, coach of this squad hopes to upset the dope and conquer the favored professional elevens in the two contests which will take place within a space of three days. Formerly, All-Star teams were split up into two groups, one squad being chosen from the schools to the west of the Mississippi, with the Eastern group being selected from colleges in the East.

VILLANOVAN SPORTS

Intramural All-Stars

Return Encounter With Swarthmore Is Cancelled

No Future Date Available for Contest Originally Scheduled for Last Wednesday Evening; 'Mural Stars Close With Record of One and One

Because of the lack of opponents, consistent inclement weather and a number of other varying circumstances, the Villanova Intramural All Star baseball team will bow out of intercollegiate competition for 1942 with a record of one victory and the same number of defeats. In the contests which were played, they defeated Haverford 8-3, in a twilight contest on the home diamond and lost another evening encounter to the Garnet aggregation of Swarthmore College, by a score of 5-0.

Return contests with both of these schools were scheduled, but were rained out on both occasions. In fact the return engagement at Haverford was washed out on two different occasions, and consequently was cancelled altogether in view of the fact that Haverford's schedule was filled for the remainder of the season.

Other Attempts Also Fail

Attempts were made by Rev. Edward B. McKee, O. S. A., and Rev. John R. Dunne, O. S .A., coaches of the team, to make arrangements with the authorities at Swarthmore to play the postponed game tomorrow night but could get no satisfaction in this endeavor, inasmuch as their schedule was filled for the next two weeks, and that they were dropping baseball early, in order to turn their attention to the coming football season.

Fathers McKee and Dunne, after these two disappointments, attempted to provide some further competition for their charges, by trying to secure games with Princeton and Pennsylvania Military College, but were also thwarted in this endeavor, as these two schools had no room for further engagements.

Pick-Up Games Arranged

So, in view of the lack of intercollegiate competition, Fathers McKee and Dunne decided on the next best arrangements—that of holding pick up games two or three afternoons a week. Two contests such as these were held last week in preparation for the Swarthmore tilt and proved to be so popular with the students, that they will be continued until the close of the summer session.

With the actual competitive schedule having been completed, however, the general student attention will be focused on the Resident and Dayhop Softball Leagues. The second halves of both of the competitive circuits have just begun, and interest is high as to what chances the other clubs have of upsetting the first half flag winners.

Stars To Be Chosen

It has also been announced that at the termination of the two softball leagues, an all star aggregation will be chosen from each, and meet in a three game series. All star teams have been chosen in the past, but never have they been operative as a unit. Previous selections have existed on paper only, but have never been seen in action.

It is also the ambition of Fathers McKee and Dunne to select one softball team to represent Villanova as a result of these three Resident-Dayhop contests, which will engage in outside softball competition.

3 Villanovans Named To Eastern All-Army Squad

Johnny Mellus, Dave DiFillippo, and Nick Basca, all holding the rank of Corporal at present, were recently named as members of Colonel Bob Neyland's Eastern All-Army football team, which will meet the New York Giants of the National Professional Football League in a three game series for army emergency relief in New York next month.

Mellus, probably the most famous of the three, graduated from college in 1938, and immediately thereafter signed with the New York Giants where he held down a first string tackle berth for the past three seasons. While at Villanova he gained national fame during his junior and senior years and was named on many All-American squads in 1937

Student Tennis Postponed Again

Rain Washes Out Scheduled Matches; Faculty Names Fr. Vrana Its Champion

Despite the fact that the contestants in the Intramural Tennis Tournament were "charring at the bit" to play their remaining matches last week, Jupiter Pluvius interfered once more, as he has during previous weeks, and as a result, the student tennis tourney is no further advanced now, than it was at this time last Tuesday.

Despite the fact that the Student matches were completely washed out since the last issue and there is no news from that competitive channel, word was received that the Faculty tournament has been completed, and that Rev. John Vrana, O. S. A., was the winner in this bracket of the current competition. Fr. Vrana was victorious in the final encounter, over Rev. Joseph Boyle, O. S. A., by the score of 6-2, 9-7.

Final Set Close

Fr. Boyle, the present coach of Villanova's varsity tennis aggregation was definitely off form in the first set, and offered his opponent little competition. In what proved to be the final set, however, he rallied strongly, and only after the score had wavered back and forth intermittently, was he overcome to the tune of 9-7.

Fr. Vrana, a very good tennis player since his first appearance at Villanova, reached his peak in this tussle, and after a rather easy path to the finals, arose to the tough competition offered in the second set by Fr. Boyle, and thereby proved his mettle as a capable opponent for the winner of the student tournament.

Await Student Champion

When this contest will take place cannot definitely be determined, but it is hoped that it will be held within the next two weeks. Three quarterfinal slots are still vacant in the student competition in view of many postponments, however, and as a result it may take a little longer to determine the "Villanova Champion." The final match for the championship will consist of five sets, as contrasted to the regular contests which require only three sets to be played. These three set encounters were agreed upon by the Faculty and students before the tournament began, inasmuch as it would save quite a bit of time in reaching the finals of the respective championships.

Fedigan Gains Undisputed Hold On First Place

Inclement Weather Last Week Permits Only Two Contests To Be Played; Alumni Drops To Second

By JOE DALY

Fedigan, by winning over Austin last week, forged its way into first place in the Intramural Softball League. Each club was limited to a single game due to the continuous downpour which flooded the fields for three of the four days on which contests were scheduled. The other encounter found the Frosh winning over Alumni, 6-2. This allowed the Redmen to gain a one game foot-hold on first place, although it had to be won the hard way, inasmuch as Austin overcame an early lead to go ahead 5-3 in the fifth inning.

Austin Scores Early

It all started when Art Lyness hit a hot liner past Forebaugh at third, for a clean single. Capt. Kazior then followed with another drive in the same direction. With men on first and second the Fedigan infield came in to play on the grass making it a comparatively easy mark for the Firemen to punch hits in the open spots, so that when the merry-go-round was finally stopped, Austin had scored four runs. They then added one more in the next inning when Consolation walked and Whitey Kempf blasted a long double to left, putting his club out in the lead by two runs. Although Fedigan scored in the following inning they went in for their last bats still trailing by one marker. Joe Szal, the first batter, responded with a single, however, and Labelle followed suit, to put two men on, with none away. This gave the Gigoloes the needed stimulus, for Barry drove the next pitch into center, scoring one run, and another counted when Marchica threw wild to third. This put the Barrymen back in the lead by a one run margin, which proved to be enough to win, for Barry retired the then helpless Austin club in order.

Frosh Defeat Alumni

The Frosh had little trouble downing the Greenies of Alumni Hall, for although they have lost three first-string men they were able to get away to an early lead in this contest. Jim Carbine drove a liner to the mound which glanced off Paruta's head allowing one tally to be made, and Daly then drove two more in with a lusty single to left. These three runs were enough to win, but the Gold Bugs continued to pound the ball, scoring three more runs to eventually win, 6-2.

Perhaps the gem catch of the year was made by Bud Quinn at third, when he dove parallel with the ground to spear with one hand, a line drive by Paruta which was definitely labeled "hit." He then threw to the initial sack to double dumbfounded Joe Paruta off first base. For the losers, Bob Pepperese, who is credited as being the fastest man in the league, seemed to be playing the entire outer garden, coming up with incredible put-outs. "Peps" has been playing great ball for Alumni all year, and along with Brinjac and Koval is the reason why Alumni is said to have the best offensive and defensive outfield in the league.

Meet The Boys:

Class Finances Hold No Terrors For Scienceman Reds McLaughlin

By LOU DE SIMONE

THE city of brotherly love has produced many noted personages—among whom is to be found the prominent scholar and biologist, Frank Joseph McLaughlin.

Not every stork has the pleasure of transporting such a priceless bundle as "Reds" McLaughlin. We visited the fortunate bird the other day and asked about the particular event. Mr. Stork said that it all happened on a bright sunny day—June 13, 1921—to be exact. "It was an honor," he added. "I delivered the little codger to 2017 N. Broad Street and I saw the little fellow grow up there," he said. "I've kept my eye on him ever since—a great boy."

At this point Mr. Stork sighed deeply and offered us a cigarette.

The Stork's Story

"What have you observed about Reds' character and ambition?" we asked.

"Well to start from the beginning, Frank began his scholastic career at St. Ludwig's parochial school. From the moment he entered the first grade till his graduation from this school, Frank was a consistent honor student. After school he spent a great deal of his time in building model airplanes and was noted throughout the neighborhood for his fine models.

A Versatile Scholar

"From St. Ludwig's Frank entered the portals of Roman Catholic High in an endeavor to discover certain truths for which he was earnestly searching. And he found them too. His name was always found at the top of the honor roll. The 'scientist in him' forever came to the fore and he easily won a chemistry award for brilliant service.

"To show his versatility, however, he also received an award as an outstanding student of French. But this was only the beginning. In addition he served as editor-in-chief of 'Purple and Gold,' the high school yearbook, and was awarded a four-year scholarship to Villanova."

At this point Mr. Stork looked at his watch and begged us to excuse him—another trip to make.

Charter KGS Member

Still eager to learn more about the remarkable Mr. McLaughlin we hastened out to Villanova and assembled a few of Red's pals. Here is what we learned. From his freshman year Frank has always been on the honor roll. As a member of the frosh he immediately "proved his salt" by being one of the founders of the K. G. S., physics society. He personally wrote the constitution for this organization and served as the first treasurer. He was also a regular member of the Research Seminar.

After dayhopping throughout his frosh days, heavy work caused Frank to become a resident in the middle of his sophomore year. He remained a faithful member of his frosh activities and had charge of a display on pollen grains at the Open House activities, assisted by Frank Reese, his roommate and best pal.

Elected Treasurer

Having acquired the poise of a treasurer in his freshman year, Frank was elected to this capacity for the Centennial Class in his junior year. He did a wonderful job as usual. During this year "Reds" didn't miss a dance or a social event. But hard work on the books was not neglected.

As a senior Frank is maintaining his sizzling pace. He is working harder than ever because of the war effort. He has pushed all social activities into the background, but is definitely going to the Summer Hop on August 28. His pals tell us that Mary will undoubtedly accompany him. She's Frank's "one and only."

Enjoys Modern Novels

Inquiring about hobby, we learned from Bill Walpole, a fellow Simpson resident, that Frank is a consistent reader. "He greatly enjoys modern novels," Bill said, and then added, "Reds leads a very prosaic life."

From one of Frank's professors we learned that he has made application to several Philadelphia medical schools. We were told that Frank intends to become a Research biologist, if all goes well. If the war is not over by the time he graduates from medical school, Frank wants to get right into the thick of things as an Army doctor.

Belle Air Meeting Called Tomorrow

An important meeting of the staff of the Belle Air, college year book, will be held tomorrow at 1:00 P. M. in the Belle Air office, room 51 Mendel, a spokesman for the annual announced.

A request was made that all old members be present at the meeting. Applications of all prospective members, both freshmen and upperclassmen, will also be accepted at this time, it was said.

First assignments for the 1943 annual will be given at the meeting. This book will be the first to be published under the accelerated program of the college. To appear in the Fall of 1943 ,the book will contain three separate sections of graduates, those seniors now in school, seniors who will return in October, and the juniors who are now in school.

cash or no band." Saturday had been set as the deadline for signing the band and after that date it was very probable that none could be signed.

A whirlwind drive of ninety minutes in which several members of the Council canvassed the campus for unpaid assessments resulted in meeting the quota.

Can't Stop Now

John J. Quinn, acting president of Student Council stated: "We are well pleased with the cooperation of the entire student body over this past week. We realize that the notice of the drive was almost too short but despite this you didn't let us down. The sale of tickets and the collection of assessments will, however, not end now. We have succeeded in our first goal but we have other expenses greater than this which must be met and can only be met by your cooperation. This is your dance and it is up to you, to see it through."

With the formal announcement of the orchestra, the other council-appointed committees will get into action this week. The patron committee, already well under way, will attempt to complete its campaign by early next week. Those handling the sale of tickets will enlarge their coverage in order that those students not attending the summer session will be able to attend.

New Committees Possible

Two new committees still in the formation stage will be announced some time this week. Their activities will be concerned with transportation and dates for those resident students who will need their services. If plans can be worked out, the committee members will be named shortly.

The publicity committee will carry out its program as soon as "flyers" and other material is received from the printers. The decorations and refreshments committees will make their plans together but will not begin actual work until the week of the dance.

Members of the publicity committee have consulted the printer for the placing of a contract for posters and floaters. Publicity in local newspapers is also planned.

Villanova's FightingMen

Bill Slaughter, former College Placement Director, has been commissioned a Lieutenant junior grade in the United States Navy. A graduate of the School of Commerce and Finance in the Class of 1938, Bill was employed by the college until last May when he was inducted into the army. Having applied for his Naval commission several months before, he was released from the army several days ago when his commission was approved by the Navy Department.

Bill lays claim to some sort of a record since he was a corporal in the infantry on Tuesday, a civilian on Wednesday, and a Naval Lieutenant on Thursday.

"Voluntary absence from regularly scheduled classes is not permitted. Two such absences in any course will be regarded as a serious irregularity.

"The 'Maximum Absence Rule' designed solely to cover sickness, accident or other emergencies, is to be interpreted under the new academic program to be one week instead of two weeks as formerly.

"Students with irregularities in class attendance should not expect to receive recommendations for commissioned rank in the armed services."

Seminar To Feature Brahms Symphony

Tomorrow at noon, Dr. E. L. Haenisch will feature the Brahms "First Symphony" in room 215 Mendel Hall, in response to several requests. This work is sometimes referred to as "Beethoven's Tenth Symphony" because it contains a semblance of the choral theme in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Representative excerpts from the musical comedies of Victor Herbert and Jerome Kern were presented last Wednesday. From the repertoire of Kern, medlies from "Sunny," "Roberta," and "Showboat" were played. The selections of Victor Herbert included medlies from "Princess Pat" and "Sweethearts" and also several orchestra compositions.

The Brahms First Symphony was written late in his career, only after friends had urged him to do so. Brahms considered the Beethoven Symphonies to be the greatest achievements of the symphonic form. He felt that nothing more could be accomplished in this form.

Bishop O'Hara To Deliver Sermon

Prelate of Savannah, Georgia, Will Speak at Centennial Mass Sept. 20

Most Rev. Gerald P. O'Hara, Bishop of Savannah, Georgia, will deliver the sermon for the Solemn Pontifical Mass of Thanksgiving to be celebrated on Sunday, September 20, 1942 at 9:30 A. M. in the College gymnasium, it was announced last week.

Bishop O'Hara has been prelate of the Savannah district since 1935 and is a former titular bishop of Heliopolis and Auxiliary bishop of Philadelphia from 1929 to 1935.

Ordained in Rome

Educated in Philadelphia schools and ordained in Rome, Bishop O'Hara formerly served as secretary to Cardinal Dougherty from 1926 to 1929 and is a past president of the American Catholic Historical Society.

His Eminence, Cardinal Dougherty will be the celebrant of the Mass which is being held in commemoration of the One Hundredth Anniversary of the founding of the College. Twenty-five Bishops and a large number of Monsignori and priests will also walk in the procession which is to precede the Mass.

Details of the ceremony were contained in a letter of invitation written by Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the College, to welcome the family and friends of every student.

"Almost three thousand seats will be provided in the gymnasium and no tickets will be required. A sufficient number of seats will be reserved for clergy and religious and then it will be a case of first come, first served," the letter said.

In the event that it proves necessary, there will be provisions outdoors on the east side of the Field House for an overflow attendance. Mass will be celebrated there and the ceremony in the gym will be carried through outdoor amplifiers.

Twenty-Two Get Tuition Awards

Scholarships having a total valuation of $20,400 were awarded to twenty-two recent high school graduates, according to an announcement made last week by Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college.

The local June high school graduates who received scholarships are: William F. McDermott, Northeast Catholic High; Edward A. Grostas, Roman Catholic High; Victor F. Rainsford, Southeast Catholic High; John J. Dempsey, West Catholic High; Robert J. Trainor, St. Thomas More High; Thomas P. Welch, Malvern Preparatory School; Robert C. McKibbin, Upper Darby Senior High, and Anthony G. Diotisalvi, of Bridgeport High School.

Other Recipients

Winners from other Pennsylvania cities and other states include; John A. Wallace, Camden Catholic High; William Fraind, Central Catholic High of Allentown, Pa.; John G. Dowling, of Harrisburg Catholic High; Thomas D. Baxter, Lancaster Catholic High; Francis J. Hinnenkamp, Harrisburg Catholic High; Edward J. Bacsik, Catholic High School of Trenton, N. J.; Donald E. Schmitt of Aquinas Institute, Rochester, N. Y.; John M. McGivern, Cascia Hall, Tulsa, Okla. John S. McGonigle, St. Thomas High of Rockford, Ill.; Robert F. Smith, St. Augustine's High, San Diego, Calif.; Bernard J. Borshke, St. Rita's High, Chicago, Ill.

Competitive Winners

Those who were winners of the annual Competitive Scholarship Examinations held at the college this summer are: Daniel A. Barron, of West Catholic High School; Louis G. Jakovic, of Harrisburg Catholic High; and Hugh Hart, of the Malvern Preparatory School.

Louis G. Jakovic, the winner from Harrisburg, is a brother of John J. Jakovic, who was graduated from the School of Commerce and Finance last year.

Army Reserve Procedure

Future status of those students now enlisted in the Army Reserve Program was explained yesterday by the Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O. S. A., liaison officer on the campus.

Fr. McQuade stated that a recent communication from the Headquarters of the 3rd Service Command, U. S. Army, in Baltimore, Md., disclosed the procedure students graduated January 31 will follow.

According to Fr. McQuade, seniors leaving school January 31 will be assigned to an active duty status, given a physical examination and will be allowed a two week vacation before reporting to a reception center for processing and classification.

Following their classification they will be sent to a replacement training center of the army in the service for which they best qualified. Upon the successful completion of the normal course of training, if otherwise qualified and selected they will be ordered to the proper officers' candidate school. The normal course of basic training and the officers training will extend for approximately six months.

Engineering Grad Pilots Fortress On Rouen Foray

Lt. Walter E. Kelly, of '40 Class, Is Member of One of Youngest Bombing Groups in Army Air Force

Among the huge American bombing planes which completed a routine and unscathed foray on historic Rouen last week were Flying Fortresses which "can do everything but cook." At least that's how Lt. Walt Kelly, engineering graduate of 1940 and a pilot on the raid, described the planes last month.

Lt. Kelly, a member of one of the youngest, if not the youngest, Flying Fortress groups in the Army Air Corps, was sent to England early in July as a member of a unit led by Captain William B. Musselwhite. Stationed at a hidden base in Britain, the American Air Force bombardment division chafed for action against Germany while they were acquainting themselves with England.

Wanted Action

Flying the big four-motored craft low over British countryside were the members of. Kelly's division, who a few short months before had been students, chemists, forest rangers, salesmen, and public accountants. An A. P. despatch quoted Kelly as saying, "These ships can do everything but cook. All we want is to get into action."

The huge fortress base at which the unit was stationed is so large that pilots and enlisted men stationed there use bicycles provided by the British to get from one part of the field to the other.

Joined Pennsylvania's 28th

After receiving his degree in electrical engineering here in 1940, Lt. Kelly served as a private in Company C of the 103d Engineers of Pennsylvania's 28th divisoin. He was the first soldier of the 28th to be named an aviation cadet.

LT. WALT KELLY

He reenlisted July 1 for 3 years of service in the regular Army after being discharged from the 28th Division. He reported to Missouri Institute of Aeronautics at Sikestown, Mo., for classes beginning July 16, 1941.

Romantic Interlude

Lt. Kelly broke into the news again on April 2, 1942, when he was April fooled a day late. Leaving McDill Field, Tampa, Fla., armed

New Council Committee To Solve Dance Transportation Problems

Since the outbreak of the war, transportation facilities have been noticeable by their absence. "S" cards are at a premium, the premium being a vocation absolutely necessary to national defense. Ships, in place of carrying the "joux d'esprit" hither and yon across the billows, have been dragging oil, and guns, and men to the battlefront of the world. Trains still chug around the country, but their activities are mostly directed towards the moving of necessary commodities to points of greatest need.

For these reasons, and because of the fact that vacation and travel money is being socked into war bonds, the travel agent is a thing of the past for the duration (Wilson Line please disregard). The centers of travel information have been converted into canteens, and dating bureaus, and "Y's."

Council to the Rescue

The Villanova Student Council, always ready with a new, a novel, or a sensational idea, plan, or innovation, has seen fit to take up where these agents and agencies of travel information have ceased doing their noble work. In order to assure the car-less and gas-less of the student body smooth riding to the Summer Hop, a Committee of Travel Information has been proposed and accepted and made up.

If you have a party of four planlaned for the dance, one of which number resides in Atlantic City, one in Quebec, one in Eastern Pen, and the other at an undisclosed address in Vermont, there are two ways of solving your impending transportation difficulties.

Take Easier Way

You may, if you wish, discover a new death-ray and procure an "S" card. This is by far the most desirable solution. But there are only three days left, and death-rays have a tendency to evade the searcher after them. The more practical method of solving your problem is not to attempt solving it. Present your case to the Student Council and let them do some work. Anything from road maps to train schedules, to the location of the best swinging vine route from Hazleton are available—and yours for the asking.

Ordinarily we drive along until we see a state cop and ask him where Hootnanny Road is. He scratches his head, muses a while, then condescends to tell us that if we drive for about five or ten miles we will see a Bull Durham billboard; we turn right at this (or is it left?) and it must be around there somewhere. He has never heard of it, but that is "our best bet."

The Honest Trooper

Possibly, however, we may chance to meet an honest sort of trooper who will not lie to save his badge. When we ask him for information he does not say aye or nay, but pierces all the members of our company with that "What-have-you-been-drinking?" stare. Then he demands our license, walks away with it to the vicinity of a road light where visibility is greater, sniffs a few derisive and cynical sniffs, returns our license and says, "No, I donno where 'at is at. Nope, don't b'lieve ain't ever heard of it, nossir." Then he plasters off on his motorcycle.

We know what these things are, and more than once we have weighed the insult of being arrested with the joy of attacking too innocent and seemingly ignorant direction-givers for no Christian cause except the damage to our nervous system.

It's Easy Now

But all that is changed now. No more stopping at farmhouses to beg directionary information, only to receive a reception fit for a man with six left feet and a pivot nose. No more small town speed-traps to worry about. No more speed to worry about. No transportation problems. No more of this trusting to luck and the whim of the front wheels. No more of those three-hour jam sessions with an inscrutable time table. No more asking total strangers for advice concerning our journey. No worry. No trouble. No brush. No lather. No nothing.

Just approach a member of the Student Council or one of the members of the new committee and say, "Can I get to Utah on an aquaplane?" or, "Would you take a brunette on the Twentieth Century Limited?" or, "Where's a good place around here to eat after the dance that is cheap and also not expensive?", or any other pertinent or impertinent question you may have.

Ask them about anything concerning transportation. Let them arrange your trip for you, figure travel expenses, etc. They are more than willing to help you. It makes them sleep a trifle more easily.

Early Registration Set For Students

Plans to have students now attending classes under the accelerated program to register for the second semester before leaving for vacation are being formulated by the administration, Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, revealed today.

Class schedules are now being drawn up for such students, the president revealed, and students may complete their registration, including details at the business office, the offices of their respective deans, and the chaplain's office before leaving after the final examinations on September 21.

Those who register at this time will receive the benefit of two extra days of vacation. Regular registration for freshmen and upperclassmen will take place on October 5 and 6. Early registrants will not have to report back until October 7.

College To Honor Saint Augustine Friday With Mass

Solemn High Mass will be celebrated this Friday at 9:00 A. M. in the college chapel in honor of St. Augustine, founder and patron saint of the Augustinian order. Very Rev. Henry A. Caffery, Prior of the Monastery, will be the celebrant.

The Mass Friday, for the first time in the history of the college, will be attended by the college students as well as the priests in the monastery, seminary, and the parish of St. Thomas of Villanova.

The Mass will be sung by the Schola Cantorum from St. Mary's Hall under the direction of the Rev. Ralph J. Handran, O. S. A., M. Mus. The Rev. Robert P. Russell, O. S. A., of the seminary faculty, will preach the sermon, Panegeric of St. Augustine.

Day students and residents alike will attend the Mass for the first time. In the past, the Mass was held on August 28 when neither the regular session or summer session of the college were in attendance. In 1930, the college commemorated the fifteen hundredth anniversary of St. Augustine's death by a similar celebration.

College Eagerly Awaits "Summer Hop" As Council Completes Final Plans

By WARD C. GUNCHEON

Last minute preparations are being completed this week to make Villanova's first Summer Hop next Friday evening in the Field House, a complete success. According to John J. Quinn, president pro tem of Student Council which is sponsoring the dance, the last week of the drive will be devoted to tickets, decorations and settlement of transportation difficulties. Tickets for the informal affair selling at $2.20 per couple, tax included, may be purchased from any member of Student Council or of the ticket committee. Favorable comment from the student body following the announcement of the signing of Leo Zollo and his band was explained as the reason for the increased ticket sale last week. Zollo will bring to the Field House a twelve piece orchestra which is well known all along the East Coast. Featured as vocalist is Buddy Harris who will add lyrics to "music of a different style" as played by Leo Zollo.

Zollo Vocalist

BUDDY HARRIS

Another Committee

To solve the transportation difficulty which is one of the most prevalent problems of residents and day-hops alike, Quinn announced the appointment of two commerce juniors, Robert T. Canfield and Paschal Russo, to aid students.

Those who are unable to find automobile transportation to the dance may obtain from this committee of two a list of transportation facilities thru which they may make connections. Time schedules of the various lines will also be supplied. This committee has also made arrangements for the Philadelphia and Western Railway to stop at the College Station across Lancaster Pike from the Field House.

Fans To Keep It Cool

In order that expenses be kept to a minimum, the Field House decorations will not be elaborate but will be similar to the informal dances held last fall. The tan curtains will be suspended from the ceiling of the Field House together with the indirect lamps which will supply the illumination for the dance floor. The 12 piece orchestra of Leo Zollo will be highlighted on two elevated platforms placed on the dance and stage floors. Electric fans will be spaced about the dance floor to make the evening cool for dancing.

Those who paid their assessment may obtain their tickets by presenting their receipts to any Council member together with the $1.20 balance. Tickets may also be purchased at the door. Those who have paid their assessments and have not received a receipt have been requested to obtain one before the evening of the dance in order that any confusion at the door may be eliminated.

The refreshment committee under the direction of Nicholas Eni will serve refreshments at the dance.

A Hopeful Sign

WANING HOPES that organized labor would prove vigorous enough to initiate its own reforms have gained new stimulus from the announcement that both the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L. are planning a joint peace conference.

Such a voluntary move for internal reform is laudable and certainly well timed. The troubled skies of a nation at war have shown repeated signs that the government would soon take the initiative in imposing severe regulations on unions for the war emergency should they fail to refuse to do so themselves. Strike-bound war production cried out for solution.

The move may yet justify the faith of the American public in the workingman, despite his strange susceptibility to the traitorous proddings of racketeering leaders.

We strongly urge the delegates to go a step further than outlawing wildcat strikes and jurisdictional disputes. This is a rare opportunity for them to prove their farsightedness by placing a voluntary ceiling on the skyrocketing wage level. Events have shown that, to be effective, price control must be all-inclusive, allowing no loopholes for protected interests.

The fact that the government is planning its own labor legislation should provide the determination needed for such a major reform.

Self-regulation is labor's just responsibility and is certainly preferable to any government regulation. This one conference contains the seeds for a new era in American social progress. But it will bear fruit only through the sincere cooperation of every workingman.

Russia And Communism

IT is distinctly possible that post-war Russia will not be the state Marx envisioned and Lenin made. It is our duty as American Christians to set the finest type of example, to show the Russian people the way to God, to common good, to happiness. So far we have not definitely discouraged Communism in our own land. Let us do it today.

The foresight of Mexican Bishops in halting an armed revolt is fast reaping new fruits for Christianity. The prayers of Russians will soon be answered in a like manner. The Russian people are not at fault for the condition of the state. They were "sold a bill of goods." They were told of the glories of the proletariat, but they got dictatorship.

The dictator tried to hamper religion, but found an undercover and unofficial clergy frustrating his desires at every turning. He has found that the prohibition of religion is impractical. War only increases its impracticability. People must fight for something as well as against something. The Russians had to pray as well as fight capitalism.

Our situation in Russia's trial is unique. We wish her to be victorious. We also wish her reformed. We supply her with the necessities of a military victory. Let us supply her with the necessities of a moral one.

—T. P. McF.

On Your Own

RECENT newspaper stories of General Hershey's statement to the effect that all able-bodied single young men would be in the armed forces by Christmas should bring home to the college student the imminence of that day when he will be torn away from the comparatively sheltered existence he has enjoyed thus far.

Despite all precautions to the contrary taken by military officials he will be subjected to severe temptations and internal trials the like of which he has never before experienced.

No longer can he appeal to a college professor or understanding parents for guidance; he's strictly on his own. But he will find in the camp chaplain an invaluable ally and a ready and interested counsellor.

The priests who have been accepted by the armed forces to serve as religious advisers are a courageous, understanding group. They realize the problems which beset America's soldiers and sailors and are always prepared to do their utmost to combat those forces which can destroy the strongest man or the strongest army.

But their scope of activity is seriously restricted unless they receive the intelligent cooperation of the men committed to their charge. Stay close to your chaplain; he's a friend, advisor, and pal. He's a fighting man, too!

—T. F. D.

Even Today!

THE celebration of Solemn High Mass next Friday morning in the college chapel is a fitting commemoration of a famous Doctor of the Church, St. Augustine.

To the Augustinian Order it is but a reminder of the way of life which they endeavor to follow; to the student it has an equally important meaning.

The life of St. Augustine is in itself an example which is repeated even today. His experiences with temptation and sin are found not only in that period of history but are comparable to the situations which the average college student faces now.

The materialistic philosophies, the attacks on moral living are even stronger today. But the solution, as St. Augustine found it, remains the same.

His recourse to prayer combined with the pleadings of his mother, St. Monica resulted in the salvation of his soul.

The young man of today faced with the physical problems of war and the moral problems of a modern philosophy based upon the saying "eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow you die" must find the courage necessary to maintain his ideals through recourse to prayer — the spiritual vitamin of the soul. Neglect of this can result only in spiritual decay and ultimate loss of man's future destiny.

The teachings of St. Augustine are far from being dated. Even today they are an integral part of Catholic teaching and education — appealing not only to Catholics but to those, not of this faith, who are seeking a true solution to their spiritual problem.

FACULTY COMMENTS

Suits — Mail and Zoot

By FR. HANDRAN

IT is a long way from the coat of mail to the zoot suit. And the days of old when knights were bold are far behind us.

The gentle courtesy of the young man toward the young lady — a mark of more idealistic ages — has it any place in our realistic, don't-be-a-dope day?

As we said, it is a long way back to the age of chivalry. A lot of things have been dropped on the way up — heroic devotion to God and loyalty to the King, fierce defense of womanly virtue . . . meticulous preservation of untarnished personal honour, perhaps. Just where, if at all, should the gentleman collegian pick up the thread?

Beat Him At Tennis

He doesn't go around nowadays picking fights for honour's sake. It just isn't being done any more. And his girl friends smoke his cigarettes, take Masters' degrees, and beat him at tennis. They don't take well as pictures of maidenly modesty, clinging dependence or defenseless virtue.

But here we bump into that bundle of contradictions loaded with fireworks — the modern girl. What goes on in her mind? What does she look for in the gentlemen of her acquaintance? What are her ideals?

Who Knows Women?

Any man who says he knows women is a liar or a fool. It is only on the strength of a little experience in the spiritual guidance of Catholic college girls that we dare to record the following observation.

The ordinary girl of today is worthy of a deep respect. True modesty, shorn of its militant attitude, loyalty without the brass band, unostentatious piety — she has something of them all. They come out when the going is rough.

But aside entirely from the present-day young lady's right to command respect is the gentleman's right, and duty, to respect her. Her dignity as a woman is something quite apart from her ability to dance well, listen encouragingly, or carry herself gracefully. It's intangibly bound up with — well, the Mother of God if you will. Something sublime, anyway—something which makes the gentleman collegian uneasily aware that there is something wrong with this back-slapping, how're-ya-doin'-kid attitude toward her. Something which makes the synonyms for the word "girl" which uncultured parlance offers seem just a bit degrading.

Looks For Courtesy

And make no mistake, the right kind of girl instinctively seeks a measure of deference to her sex. She may be a champion athlete, but she wants you to open doors for her. She may consider you a prince of a fellow, but she wants you to treat her as a queen.

Your college girl has some funny ideas about you. She wants you to dress well, but she doesn't want you to be a "sharpie." When you go into your routine she will listen to you, but she knows a "line" when she hears one. (Incidentally, a line dotted with I's is particularly abhorrent to her.) She doesn't want to know how many other girl friends you have, nor how prominent your father is in the old home town. If you give her the impression that you are a young millionaire she will help you spend your money, but believe it or not she wants you to lead the way, and if your bankroll is down to a couple of dollars she understands, and no apologies needed.

Wants Considerate Men

But above all, the young lady wants you to be courteous and considerate. And since she is devoted to the same ideals which you profess, she is glad to see in you a manly adherence to the code of conduct which your Faith demands.

The age of chivalry is dead, but the innate respect for womanhood which we seem half afraid to display — that will always be a part of the best of man.

And the measure of respect which a young lady finds in a gentleman is apt to be used as a gauge for his character, his breeding, and the standard of culture at his college.

Samuels Addresses Research Group On "Alpha Amino Acids"

At the last meeting of the Research Seminar Melvyn Samuels, a junior science student, delivered a lecture on the chemical structures and properties of the Alpha Amino acids. Samuels placed particular emphasis on the ten essential Amino acids which are unable to be synthesized by the body and which are requisites for normal health and growth.

After considering structure, Samuels discussed the work of Fischer, who spent a great portion of his life striving to discover a method of synthesizing proteins. The many linkages and the enormous number of possible structural arrangements show how tremendously difficult such a synthesis would be and also explain why science has not yet discovered a successful process of synthesizing in this field.

Samuels brought his talk to a close with a consideration of the oxidative and reductive reactions of Alutathione.

The Trading Post

By Lou Esposito

THE almost unbelievable is here at last. After ten weeks of accelerated schoolwork the students are looking forward to a socially enjoyable evening this Friday. The affair, our one and only for the term, is the Summer Hop; the site is the Villanova Field House; the orchestra is Leo Zollo's.

With conditions as they are at present it appears that the local bus and rail lines will be the chief source of transportation, but ample parking space for tandems, bikes, skates, etc. is available opposite the Field House. Ample grazing lawns are also available for horses.

Here's a pome from the Northeastern "News" that might act as a warning for some.

I was charmed by the look in her eye,
And her beautiful features, oh my . . .
By her nightingale voice I was smitten;
With her glorious curls I was bitten.
She's really the charmingest girl, you see;
In her arms one sure could find bliss, ah me . . .
But what struck me mostly, I do aver
Was her hand when I wanted to kiss her.

How Does He Live?

This patriot sets a good example for buying more bonds and stamps . . . he works for six cents a week.

The pay clerks at the Curtiss-Wright Co., St. Louis, scratched their heads and looked again when they spotted William C. Garrett's pay check. It was for six cents.

On investigation they discovered he had set aside $40 of his $41 weekly check for purchase of war bonds. The remaining 94 cents went for social security and insurance payments. Similar deductions had been taken out for the last few weeks.

Anvil Chorus:

"Deep in the Heart of Texas," now a smash song hit in England, has been put on the forbidden list by the British Broadcasting Company and for the darndest reason. It was found that when the tune was played, British workers engaged at war tasks, instead of going in manfully for that clap-clap-clap-clap obbligato, would tap their hammers on machinery, inflicting minor damage, but damage nevertheless.

Strange As It Seems:

It's been reported that the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps has actually trained its recruits to parade by a mirror and still keep their eyes straight ahead . . . Are they kidding?

A little old lady was being examined by the family doctor, having been sent there by her relatives for what they considered eccentricities.

"I just adore buckwheat cakes, doctor," the little old lady confessed.

"Well, there's nothing wrong about that," the doctor said with a smile, "I love buckwheat cakes myself."

The little old lady beamed. "Oh, goody, you must come over to my house soon. I've got seven trunks full of them."

With so many of our classmates in the service of our country, we think the following poem which has been circulating through many college papers is very appropriate.

A Soldier's Prayer

Heavenly Father up above,
Please protect the girl I love.
Keep her always safe and sound
No matter, with whom or where she's found
Help her to know and help her to see
That I love her and hope she loves me.
And then, Dear Lord, help me to be
That boy that she'd expect of me.

Residents Defeat Dayhops In All-Star Game 7-3

Teams Selected From Both Leagues Stage Contest Last Friday Evening; Barry and Paruta Excell

By JOE DALY

Behind the five hit pitching of Joe Barry, the Resident all stars defeated the best in the Day-Hop league last Friday night, 7-3. The score does not tell the whole story of the game, however, for although the Residents, captained by Tony Paruta, out hit the Commuters, ten to five, the game was tight all the way and created much tension until the final put-out was made by Barry.

DiLuigi hurled a great game for the Non-Residents, but Barry matched him pitch for pitch, causing the Dayhop batters to either pop-up or ground out to the infield.

The Residents were first to come to bat, and it was three up and three down. The Commuters could do little better, although Desimone reached first on an error.

Residents Draw First Blood

This didn't last long, however, for the Campus boys drew first blood in the second when, after Deblois singled and Brinjac was safe on an error, Labelle doubled down the right field foul line scoring Deblois.

The Dayhops came right back in their half to tie it up, when Edeikin, after reaching first safely on an error, scored on a double by Donikowski.

Pepperess, the second man up in the third inning, got the Resident's second hit off DiLuigi, and Paruta then advanced him to second. After Kazior grounded out, a wild throw to third, to catch Pepperess, enabled two runs to cross the plate.

But again the off-campus boys came from behind to tie it up, when with one out, DeSimone and Deery singled in order, and Edeiken brought both runners in with a hit to right field.

Score Two in Fifth

DiLuigi found the going a lot harder in the fifth, when successive hits by Barry and Paruta after Carbine had walked, made the score 5-3 in the Resident's favor.

The game was put on ice in the seventh, when the Boarders counted twice more, on a walk to Koval, singles by Barry and Paruta, and a passed ball.

Paruta led his team at bat with three for four, while both Barry and Kazior netted two. None of the Dayhops were able to gather more than one.

The gem plays of the game were made by the Carbine brothers, Jimmy and Joe. Jim stopped a hard liner at second, and then cut off a run at the plate, while brother Joe made a sensational play in right field when he caught Kempf's low liner on the dead run.

Box score:

Another all-star game may be played tomorrow evening at the same time. A tentative game has been scheduled between La Salle College and members of both all-star tams. If this is not played, the resident will again meet selected members of the day-hop league in another evening battle.

By BILL WALSH, Sports Editor

Quite a surprise to many readers, no doubt, was the softball game which took place last Friday night between an All-Star team selected from the Resident league and another aggregation chosen from the Dayhop circuit. Although in the wind for quite some time, the contest came about as a result of the scheduling of a softball tilt with the University of Pennsylvania for Wednesday, September 3. From the numerous players who took part in last Friday's contest a squad will be chosen which will represent Villanova in intercollegiate competition. In this game Dayhops and Residents will forget ther intensive softball rivalry and the best players from each of the respective All-Star squads will play together as one compact unit.

This softball engagement with Penn, the two hardball games which were played against Haverford and Swarthmore, and various other intercollegiate athletic contests which have taken place throughout the city of Philadelphia this summer, make us here at Villanova wonder why someone has not taken it upon himself to inaugurate some kind of a league for the various colleges in the immediate vicinity which are following the accelerated program. Of course, it is a little late to think of such a venture for this season, but it certainly is not too early to propose such a plan for next summer, provided that the accelerated programs are still in effect. We fervently hope, of course, as do all Americans, that the war will be over by next summer, and that accelerated programs will not be necessary. However, in view of the many predictions by prominent military officials of our country, it is quite safe to plan on the war's lasting until next summer anyway.

Pennsylvania, Temple, LaSalle, Swarthmore, Haverford, and Drexel, as well as Villanova, are all following the accelerated program this year and intend to do so until the cessation of the present crisis. Seven colleges, therefore, would be available for competition in the event of a formation of such a league, and ampie competition would be provided for the Philadelphia schools next summer.

Of course, it is true that numerous contests were prevalent among the above mentioned colleges this season, but in these contests there wasn't much save a ball game at stake, and it didn't really matter much whether a game was won or lost. The main thing was to provide exercise for the summer school students with a little competition thrown in, and it must be admitted that they were successful in this endeavor. The same holds true with regard to the various intramural programs which are in existence in the above mentioned institutions this summer. They were also a huge success, in that they certainly accomplished their purpose.

Think of how much more successful, however, an organized collegiate baseball or softball league would be here in Philadelphia next summer. This does not mean that we wish to abolish intramural athletics — definitely not. They are too essential to the well-being of every college to abandon. It is rather that we desire to have th inter-collegiate competition as well as the already popular intramurals, just as in the regular school year. Its true, of course, that there are not as many students taking advantage of the accelerated program as are enrolled during the fall and winter terms, but even so, each school is at the same disadvantage, and therefore will not be handicapped any more severely than the others.

For quite some time it has been the cry of baseball coaches in this area, that the spring seasons are too short, and that their early beginning necessitates too much competition before the weather conditions are favorable. Many practice sessions are held when the temperature is hovering around the freezing mark, and hence many pitching arms suffered as a result. In a setup such as we advocate, however, none of these hardships are prevalent, and the seasons are probably three times as long.

As for definitely deciding which would be more popular, a hardball or softball league, that is hard to say, inasmuch as both are apparently on an even scale at this point. One or the other would have to be selected, however, inasmuch as it has been proved on many occasions that the two don't mix, as softball ruins the timing necessary for hardball, and vice-versa. Aside from the softball or hardball aggregations, however, other sports i.e., golf, tennis, and swimming could also be patterned after a similar plan to that proposed for the baseball league.

Another favorable item relevant to the formation of such a league is the fact that transportation, such a problem in these times, will offer little hindrance to such a plan, in that all these above mentioned schools are within a radius of ten or twelve miles.

Muses Set Pace In Dayhop League

Win Two Contests While Tying One to Lead by One Full Game

With the welcome return of fair weather, the second-half of the Dayhop Softball League finally got under way last week. After the first six games of the new rivalry had been played, and the dust around home plate cleared, the Muses stood proudly in undisputed possession of first place. But every game was a closely contested battle and from the brand of ball displayed, it was apparent that new interest had arisen over the final outcome of the race for the league honors.

The Muse team gained its distinctive position by first defeating the Actors in a close 5-4 game, and then continued to maintain their margin by nosing out the Engineers, 3-2. Their third game with the Hybrids ended in a 4-4 tie. In these games the Muse pitcher, Lou DeSimone, adequately solved the team's nemesis during the first half.

Although the Hybrids were unbeatable in the first half of the circuit, they sorely suffered during last week as a result of the loss of three star players. They have finished their three games to date without a victory, their record being stained by a loss and two ties. However, with the acquisition of Tony DiLuigi, the Dayhop all-star pitcher, the team should show added strength.

Obstacle Course Revised Again

Despite the fact that Villanova's course has already gained the distinction of being one of the best in the country, Clipper Smith, dean of physical training, is still improving his famed barricade run.

His latest innovation is a rope swing, suspended from a crossbar twenty-five feet in the air. The student must jump from a three foot ramp and swing through the air for a total of twenty feet, before letting go or there is a pool of refreshing H2o waiting for him at the bottom. The record for this jump to date is held by Bob Quinn, a freshman, who landed 24 feet, 8 inches from the end of the ramp.

Time trials were held over the first 170 yards of the course last week for the freshmen, with Bob Kane, lanky Pre-Med student, carrying away first honors with the time of 39 seconds. This did not come very close to the record of 35 seconds held jointly by Bill Meely and John Bittig, but in view of the slippery underfooting which was prevalent during Kane's trial, the time was very good.

Fedigan, Mendel Deadlock For Lead In Softball Loop

Both Teams Have Records of Four and Three in Tight Race; Austin, Alumni Only Game Behind Leaders

By JACK KOVAL

Although seriously hampered by an incessant downpour of rain since the commencing of the second half over two weeks ago, the Intramural Softball League was finally blessed with fair weather last week, and the teams managed to play at least a majority of the scheduled contests. The only postponed game was on Monday, when a severe rain storm had completely inundated the playing fields and rendered them into such a condition that a postponement was inevitable.

Leading in the win column last week were the Mendel Frosh and Austin Firemen, each winning two games and losing one. The Greenies of Alumni and the Gigiloes of Fedigan ran into hard luck and were successful in only one of their three contests.

Kempf Spoils Shutout

On Tuesday Alumni Hall played the same brand of ball which enabled them to win the first half flag, and downed the Blue and White Austin club 5-1. Austin's lone tally came in the final stanza of the game, when first baseman "Chubby" Kempf clouted a smashing home run. Had Kempf failed in getting this round tripper, Joe Portali, Alumni hurler, would have made his first shut-out victory of the season. Earlier in the season, however, he did succeed in blanking the faculty team, but this game was not considered a league contest. Only one pitcher thus far has had the distinction of having hurled shut-out ball in a league encounter. He is Joe Barry, manager-hurler for the Fediganites.

Frosh Beat Fedigan

That same Tuesday night the Mendelites triumphed over Fedigan Hall 8-5. Scoring six of their eight runs in the first two frames, the Frosh held the upper hand throughout, and on only one occasion did the Gigiloes make it uncomfortable for the Mendel ball club. That was in the fifth inning, when Fedigan scored two runs to make the score 6-5.

The following evening, Alumni was beaten by a spunky Fedigan team by the score of 9-4. The Greenies staged a rally in the last inning when they scored four runs, but that wasn't sufficient to down the Brownies.

Austin Wallops Mendel

Austin, in the other contest on Wednesday, shellacked the Mendel nine by a 10-5 score. A five-run attack by Austin in the third inning was all the Firemen needed to win the game from their helpless opponents.

The final league games of the week, played on Thursday, found Mendel and Austin putting the Alumni and Fedigan nines into submission by the respective scores of 3-1 and 7-6.

In the former contest the frosh played heads-up ball and clipped the fast-sinking Alumni squad in what turned out to be a purely defensive game.

Austin gained its second straight victory by downing the Fediganites in a game that wasn't decided until the final inning. The Firemen pushed three runs across the plate in their last times at bat, which proved to be the winning margin.

Fedigan	4	3	.571
Mendel	4	3	.571

Basca Stars

Three former members of "Clipper" Smith's gridiron teams, Nick Basca, Johnny Mellus and Dave Di Filippo will see action in early Army and college all-star football games.

Basca, playing right-half on the Eastern Service eleven, was featured in local paper for brilliant work in that eleven's pre-season practice. Basca threw two touchdown passes as the Blues defeated the Reds in a full length scrimmage.

Mellus will team together with Di Filippo in the College All-Star battle against the Philadelphia Eagles next Monday.

A Hopeful Sign

WANING HOPES that organized labor would prove vigorous enough to initiate its own reforms have gained new stimulus from the announcement that both the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L. are planning a joint peace conference.

Such a voluntary move for internal reform is laudable and certainly well timed. The troubled skies of a nation at war have shown repeated signs that the government would soon take the initiative in imposing severe regulations on unions for the war emergency should they fail to refuse to do so themselves. Strike-bound war production cried out for solution.

The move may yet justify the faith of the American public in the workingman, despite his strange susceptibility to the traitorous [illegible] of racketeering leaders.

We strongly urge the delegates to go a step further than outlawing wildcat strikes and jurisdictional disputes. This is a rare opportunity for them to prove their farsightedness by placing a voluntary ceiling on the skyrocketing wage level. Events have shown that, to be effective, price control must be all-inclusive, allowing no loopholes for protected interests.

The fact that the government is planning its own labor legislation should provide the determination needed for such a major reform.

Self-regulation is labor's just responsibility and is certainly preferable to any government regulation. This one conference contains the seeds for a new era in American social progress. But it will bear fruit only through the sincere cooperation of every workingman.

Russia And Communism

IT is distinctly possible that post-war Russia will not be the state Marx envisioned and Lenin made. It is our duty as American Christians to set the finest type of example, to show the Russian people the way to God, to common good, to happiness. So far we have not definitely discouraged Communism in our own land. Let us do it today.

The foresight of Mexican Bishops in halting an armed revolt is fast reaping new fruits for Christianity. The prayers of Russians will soon be answered in a like manner. The Russian people are not at fault for the condition of the state. They were "sold a bill of goods." They were told of the glories of the proletariat, but they got dictatorship.

The dictator tried to hamper religion, but found an undercover and unofficial clergy frustrating his desires at every turning. He has found that the prohibition of religion is impractical. War only increases its impracticability. People must fight for something as well as against something. The Russians had to pray as well as fight capitalism.

Our situation in Russia's trial is unique. We wish her to be victorious. We also wish her reformed. We supply her with the necessities of a military victory. Let us supply her with the necessities of a moral one.

—T. P. McF.

On Your Own

RECENT newspaper stories of General Hershey's statement to the effect that all able-bodied single young men would be in the armed forces by Christmas should bring home to the college student the imminence of that day when he will be torn away from the comparatively sheltered existence he has enjoyed thus far.

Despite all precautions to the contrary taken by military officials he will be subjected to severe temptations and internal trials the like of which he has never before experienced.

No longer can he appeal to a college professor or understanding parents for guidance; he's strictly on his own. But he will find in the camp chaplain an invaluable ally and a ready and interested counsellor.

The priests who have been accepted by the armed forces to serve as religious advisers are a courageous, understanding group. They realize the problems which beset America's soldiers and sailors and are always prepared to do their utmost to combat those forces which can destroy the strongest man or the strongest army.

But their scope of activity is seriously restricted unless they receive the intelligent cooperation of the men committed to their charge. Stay close to your chaplain; he's a friend, advisor, and pal. He's a fighting man, too!

—T. F. D.

Even Today!

THE celebration of Solemn High Mass next Friday morning in the college chapel is a fitting commemoration of a famous Doctor of the Church, St. Augustine.

To the Augustinian Order it is but a reminder of the way of life which they endeavor to follow; to the student it has an equally important meaning.

The life of St. Augustine is in itself an example which is repeated even today. His experiences with temptation and sin are found not only in that period of history but are comparable to the situations which the average college student faces now.

The materialistic philosophies, the attacks on moral living are even stronger today. But the solution, as St. Augustine found it, remains the same.

His recourse to prayer combined with the pleadings of his mother, St. Monica resulted in the salvation of his soul.

The young man of today faced with the physical problems of war and the moral problems of a modern philosophy based upon the saying "eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow you die" must find the courage necessary to maintain his ideals through recourse to prayer — the spiritual vitamin of the soul. Neglect of this can result only in spiritual decay and ultimate loss of man's future destiny.

The teachings of St. Augustine are far from being dated. Even today they are an integral part of Catholic teaching and education — appealing not only to Catholics but to those, not of this faith, who are seeking a true solution to their spiritual problem.

FACULTY COMMENTS

Suits — Mail and Zoot

By FR. HANDRAN

IT is a long way from the coat of mail to the zoot suit. And the days of old when knights were bold are far behind us.

The gentle courtesy of the young man toward the young lady — a mark of more idealistic ages — has it any place in our realistic, don't-be-a-dope day?

As we said, it is a long way back to the age of chivalry. A lot of things have been dropped on the way up — heroic devotion to God and loyalty to the King, fierce defense of womanly virtue . . . meticulous preservation of untarnished personal honour, perhaps. Just where, if at all, should the gentleman collegian pick up the thread?

Beat Him At Tennis

He doesn't go around nowadays picking fights for honour's sake. It just isn't being done any more. And his girl friends smoke his cigarettes, take Masters' degrees, and beat him at tennis. They don't take well as pictures of maidenly modesty, clinging dependence or defenseless virtue.

But here we bump into that bundle of contradictions loaded with fireworks — the modern girl. What goes on in her mind? What does she look for in the gentlemen of her acquaintance? What are her ideals?

Who Knows Women?

Any man who says he knows women is a liar or a fool. It is only on the strength of a little experience in the spiritual guidance of Catholic college girls that we dare to record the following observation.

The ordinary girl of today is worthy of a deep respect. True modesty, shorn of its militant attitude, loyalty without the brass band, unostentatious piety — she has something of them all. They come out when the going is rough.

But aside entirely from the present-day young lady's right to command respect is the gentleman's right, and duty, to respect her. Her dignity as a woman is something quite apart from her ability to dance well, listen encouragingly, or carry herself gracefully. It's intangibly bound up with — well, the Mother of God if you will. Something sublime, anyway—something which makes the gentleman collegian uneasily aware that there is something wrong with this back-slapping, how're-ya-doin'-kid attitude toward her. Something which makes the synonyms for the word "girl" which uncultured parlance offers seem just a bit degrading.

Looks For Courtesy

And make no mistake, the right kind of girl instinctively seeks a measure of deference to her sex. She may be a champion athlete, but she wants you to open doors for her. She may consider you a prince of a fellow, but she wants you to treat her as a queen.

Your college girl has some funny ideas about you. She wants you to dress well, but she doesn't want you to be a "sharpie." When you go into your routine she will listen to you, but she knows a "line" when she hears one. (Incidentally, a line dotted with I's is particularly abhorrent to her.) She doesn't want to know how many other girl friends you have, nor how prominent your father is in the old home town. If you give her the impression that you are a young millionaire she will help you spend your money, but believe it or not she wants you to lead the way, and if your bankroll is down to a couple of dollars she understands, and no apologies needed.

Wants Considerate Men

But above all, the young lady wants you to be courteous and considerate. And since she is devoted to the same ideals which you profess, she is glad to see in you a manly adherence to the code of conduct which your Faith demands.

The age of chivalry is dead, but the innate respect for womanhood which we seem half afraid to display — that will always be a part of the best of man.

And the measure of respect which a young lady finds in a gentleman is apt to be used as a gauge for his character, his breeding, and the standard of culture at his college.

Samuels Addresses Research Group On "Alpha Amino Acids"

At the last meeting of the Research Seminar Melvyn Samuels, a junior science student, delivered a lecture on the chemical structures and properties of the Alpha Amino acids. Samuels placed particular emphasis on the ten essential Amino acids which are unable to be synthesized by the body and which are requisites for normal health and growth.

After considering structure, Samuels discussed the work of Fischer, who spent a great portion of his life striving to discover a method of synthesizing proteins. The many linkages and the enormous number of possible structural arrangements show how tremendously difficult such a synthesis would be and also explain why science has not yet discovered a successful process of synthesizing in this field.

Samuels brought his talk to a close with a consideration of the oxidative and reductive reactions of Alutathione.

The Trading Post

THE almost unbelievable is here at last. After ten weeks of accelerated schoolwork the students are looking forward to a socially enjoyable evening this Friday. The affair, our one and only for the term, is the Summer Hop; the site is the Villanova Field House; the orchestra is Leo Zollo's.

With conditions as they are at present it appears that the local bus and rail lines will be the chief source of transportation, but ample parking space for tandems, bikes, skates, etc. is available opposite the Field House. Ample grazing lawns are also available for horses.

Here's a pome from the Northeastern "News" that might act as a warning for some.

I was charmed by the look in her eye,
And her beautiful features, oh my . . .
By her nightingale voice I was smitten;
With her glorious curls I was bitten.
She's really the charmingest girl, you see;
In her arms one sure could find bliss, ah me . . .
But what struck me mostly, I do aver
Was her hand when I wanted to kiss her.

How Does He Live?

This patriot sets a good example for buying more bonds and stamps . . . he works for six cents a week.

The pay clerks at the Curtiss-Wright Co., St. Louis, scratched their heads and looked again when they spotted William C. Garrett's pay check. It was for six cents.

On investigation they discovered he had set aside $40 of his $41 weekly check for purchase of war bonds. The remaining 94 cents went for social security and insurance payments. Similar deductions had been taken out for the last few weeks.

Anvil Chorus:

"Deep in the Heart of Texas," now a smash song hit in England, has been put on the forbidden list by the British Broadcasting Company and for the darndest reason. It was found that when the tune was played, British workers engaged at war tasks, instead of going in manfully for that clap-clap-clap-clap obbligato, would tap their hammers on machinery, inflicting minor damage, but damage nevertheless.

A little old lady was being examined by the family doctor, having been sent there by her relatives for what they considered eccentricities.

"I just adore buckwheat cakes, doctor," the little old lady confessed.

"Well, there's nothing wrong about that," the doctor said with a smile, "I love buckwheat cakes myself."

The little old lady beamed, "Oh, goody, you must come over to my house soon. I've got seven trunks full of them."

With so many of our classmates in the service of our country, we think the following poem which has been circulating through many college papers is very appropriate.

A Soldier's Prayer

Heavenly Father up above,
Please protect the girl I love.
Keep her always safe and sound
No matter, with whom or where she's found
Help her to know and help her to see
That I love her and hope she loves me.
And then, Dear Lord, help me to be
That boy that she'd expect of me.

Residents Defeat Dayhops In All-Star Game 7-3

Teams Selected From Both Leagues Stage Contest Last Friday Evening; Barry and Paruta Excell

By JOE DALY

Behind the five hit pitching of Joe Barry, the Resident all stars defeated the best in the Day-Hop league last Friday night, 7-3. The score does not tell the whole story of the game, however, for although the Residents, captained by Tony Paruta, out hit the Commuters, ten to five, the game was tight all the way and created much tension until the final put-out was made by Barry.

DiLuigi hurled a great game for the Non-Residents, but Barry matched him pitch for pitch, causing the Dayhop batters to either pop-up or ground out to the infield.

The Residents were first to come to bat, and it was three up and three down. The Commuters could do little better, although Desimone reached first on an error.

Residents Draw First Blood

This didn't last long, however, for the Campus boys drew first blood in the second when, after Deblois singled and Brinjac was safe on an error, Labelle doubled down the right field foul line scoring Deblois.

The Dayhops came right back in their half to tie it up, when Edeikin, after reaching first safely on an error, scored on a double by Donikowski.

Pepperess, the second man up in the third inning, got the Resident's second hit off DiLuigi, and Paruta then advanced him to second. After Kazior grounded out, a wild throw to third, to catch Pepperess, enabled two runs to cross the plate.

But again the off-campus boys came from behind to tie it up, when with one out, DeSimone and Deery singled in order, and Edeiken brought both runners in with a hit to right field.

Score Two in Fifth

DiLuigi found the going a lot harder in the fifth, when successive hits by Barry and Paruta after Carbine had walked, made the score 5-3 in the Resident's favor.

The game was put on ice in the seventh, when the Boarders counted twice more, on a walk to Koval, singles by Barry and Paruta, and a passed ball.

Paruta led his team at bat with three for four, while both Barry and Kazior netted two. None of the Dayhops were able to gather more than one.

The gem plays of the game were made by the Carbine brothers, Jimmy and Joe. Jim stopped a hard liner at second, and then cut off a run at the plate, while brother Joe made a sensational play in right field when he caught Kempf's low liner on the dead run.

Box score:

Another all-star game may be played tomorrow evening at the same time. A tentative game has been scheduled between La Salle College and members of both all-star tams. If this is not played, the resident will again meet selected members of the day-hop league in another evening battle.

Seven colleges, therefore, would be available for competition in the event of a formation of such a league, and ample competition would be provided for the Philadelphia schools next summer.

Of course, it is true that numerous contests were prevalent among the above mentioned colleges this season, but in these contests there wasn't much save a ball game at stake, and it didn't really matter much whether a game was won or lost. The main thing was to provide exercise for the summer school students with a little competition thrown in, and it must be admitted that they were successful in this endeavor. The same holds true with regard to the various intramural programs which are in existence in the above mentioned institutions this summer. They were also a huge success, in that they certainly accomplished their purpose.

Think of how much more successful, however, an organized collegiate baseball or softball league would be here in Philadelphia next summer. This does not mean that we wish to abolish intramural athletics — definitely not. They are too essential to the well-being of every college to abandon. It is rather that we desire to have th inter-collegiate competition as well as the already popular intramurals, just as in the regular school year. Its true, of course, that there are not as many students taking advantage of the accelerated program as are enrolled during the fall and winter terms, but even so, each school is at the same disadvantage, and therefore will not be handicapped any more severely than the others.

For quite some time it has been the cry of baseball coaches in this area, that the spring seasons are too short, and that their early beginning necessitates too much competition before the weather conditions are favorable. Many practice sessions are held when the temperature is hovering around the freezing mark, and hence many pitching arms suffered as a result. In a setup such as we advocate, however, none of these hardships are prevalent, and the seasons are probably three times as long.

As to definitely deciding which would be more popular, a hardball or softball league, that is hard to say, inasmuch as both are apparently on an even scale at this point. One or the other would have to be selected, however, inasmuch as it has been proved on many occasions that the two don't mix, as softball ruins the timing necessary for hardball, and vice-versa. Aside from the softball or hardball aggregations, however, other sports i.e., golf, tennis, and swimming could also be patterned after a similar plan to that proposed for the baseball league.

Another favorable item relevant to the formation of such a league is the fact that transportation, such a problem in these times, will offer little hindrance to such a plan, in that all these above mentioned schools are within a radius of ten or twelve miles.

Muses Set Pace In Dayhop League

Win Two Contests While Tying One to Lead by One Full Game

With the welcome return of fair weather, the second-half of the Dayhop Softball League finally got under way last week. After the first six games of the new rivalry had been played, and the dust around home plate cleared, the Muses stood proudly in undisputed possession of first place. But every game was a closely contested battle and from the brand of ball displayed, it was apparent that new interest had arisen over the final outcome of the race for the league honors.

The Muse team gained its distinctive position by first defeating the Actors in a close 5-4 game, and then continued to maintain their margin by nosing out the Engineers, 3-2. Their third game with the Hybrids ended in a 4-4 tie. In these games the Muse pitcher, Lou DeSimone, adequately solved the team's nemesis during the first half.

Although the Hybrids were unbeatable in the first half of the circuit, they sorely suffered during last week as a result of the loss of three star players. They have finished their three games to date without a victory, their record being stained by a loss and two ties. However, with the acquisition of Tony DiLuigi, the Dayhop all-star pitcher, the team should show added strength.

Obstacle Course Revised Again

Despite the fact that Villanova's course has already gained the distinction of being one of the best in the country, Clipper Smith, dean of physical training, is still improving his famed barricade run.

His latest innovation is a rope swing, suspended from a crossbar twenty-five feet in the air. The student must jump from a three foot ramp and swing through the air for a total of twenty feet, before letting go or there is a pool of refreshing H2o waiting for him at the bottom. The record for this jump to date is held by Bob Quinn, a freshman, who landed 24 feet, 8 inches from the end of the ramp.

Time trials were held over the first 170 yards of the course last week for the freshmen, with Bob Kane, lanky Pre-Med student, carrying away first honors with the time of 39 seconds. This did not come very close to the record of 35 seconds held jointly by Bill Meely and John Bittig, but in view of the slippery underfooting which was prevalent during Kane's trial, the time was very good.

Fedigan, Mendel Deadlock For Lead In Softball Loop

Both Teams Have Records of Four and Three in Tight Race; Austin, Alumni Only Game Behind Leaders

By JACK KOVAL

Although seriously hampered by an incessant downpour of rain since the commencing of the second half over two weeks ago, the Intramural Softball League was finally blessed with fair weather last week, and the teams managed to play at least a majority of the scheduled contests. The only postponed game was on Monday, when a severe rain storm had completely inundated the playing fields and rendered them into such a condition that a postponement was inevitable.

Leading in the win column last week were the Mendel Frosh and Austin Firemen, each winning two games and losing one. The Greenies of Alumni and the Gigiloes of Fedigan ran into hard luck and were successful in only one of their three contests.

Kempf Spoils Shutout

On Tuesday Alumni Hall played the same brand of ball which enabled them to win the first half flag, and downed the Blue and White Austin club 5-1. Austin's lone tally came in the final stanza of the game, when first baseman "Chubby" Kempf clouted a smashing home run. Had Kempf failed in getting this round tripper, Joe Portali, Alumni hurler, would have made his first shut-out victory of the season. Earlier in the season, however, he did succeed in blanking the faculty team, but this game was not considered a league contest. Only one pitcher thus far has had the distinction of having hurled shut-out ball in a league encounter. He is Joe Barry, manager-hurler for the Fediganites.

Frosh Beat Fedigan

That same Tuesday night the Mendelites triumphed over Fedigan Hall 8-5. Scoring six of their eight runs in the first two frames, the Frosh held the upper hand throughout, and on only one occasion did the Gigiloes make it uncomfortable for the Mendel ball club. That was in the fifth inning, when Fedigan scored two runs to make the score 6-5.

The following evening, Alumni was beaten by a spunky Fedigan team by the score of 9-4. The Greenies staged a rally in the last inning when they scored four runs, but that wasn't sufficient to down the Brownies.

Austin Wallops Mendel

Austin, in the other contest on Wednesday, shellacked the Mendel nine by a 10-5 score. A five-run attack by Austin in the third inning was all the Firemen needed to win the game from their helpless opponents.

The final league games of the week, played on Thursday, found Mendel and Austin putting the Alumni and Fedigan nines into submission by the respective scores of 3-1 and 7-6.

In the former contest the frosh played heads-up ball and [illegible] the fast-sinking Alumni squad in what turned out to be a [illegible] defensive game.

Austin gained its second straight victory by downing the Fediganites in a game that wasn't decided until the final inning. The Firemen pushed three runs across the plate in their last times at bat, which proved to be the winning margin.

The Standings

	W	L	Pct.
Fedigan	4	3	.571
Mendel	4	3	.571
Austin	3	4	.428
Alumni	3	4	.428

Basca Stars

Three former members of "Clipper" Smith's gridiron teams, Nick Basca, Johnny Mellus and Dave Di Filippo will see action in early Army and college all-star football games.

Basca, playing right-half on the Eastern Service eleven, was featured in local paper for brilliant work in that eleven's pre-season practice. Basca threw two touchdown passes as the Blues defeated the Reds in a full length scrimmage.

Mellus will team together with Di Filippo in the College All-Star battle against the Philadelphia Eagles next Monday.

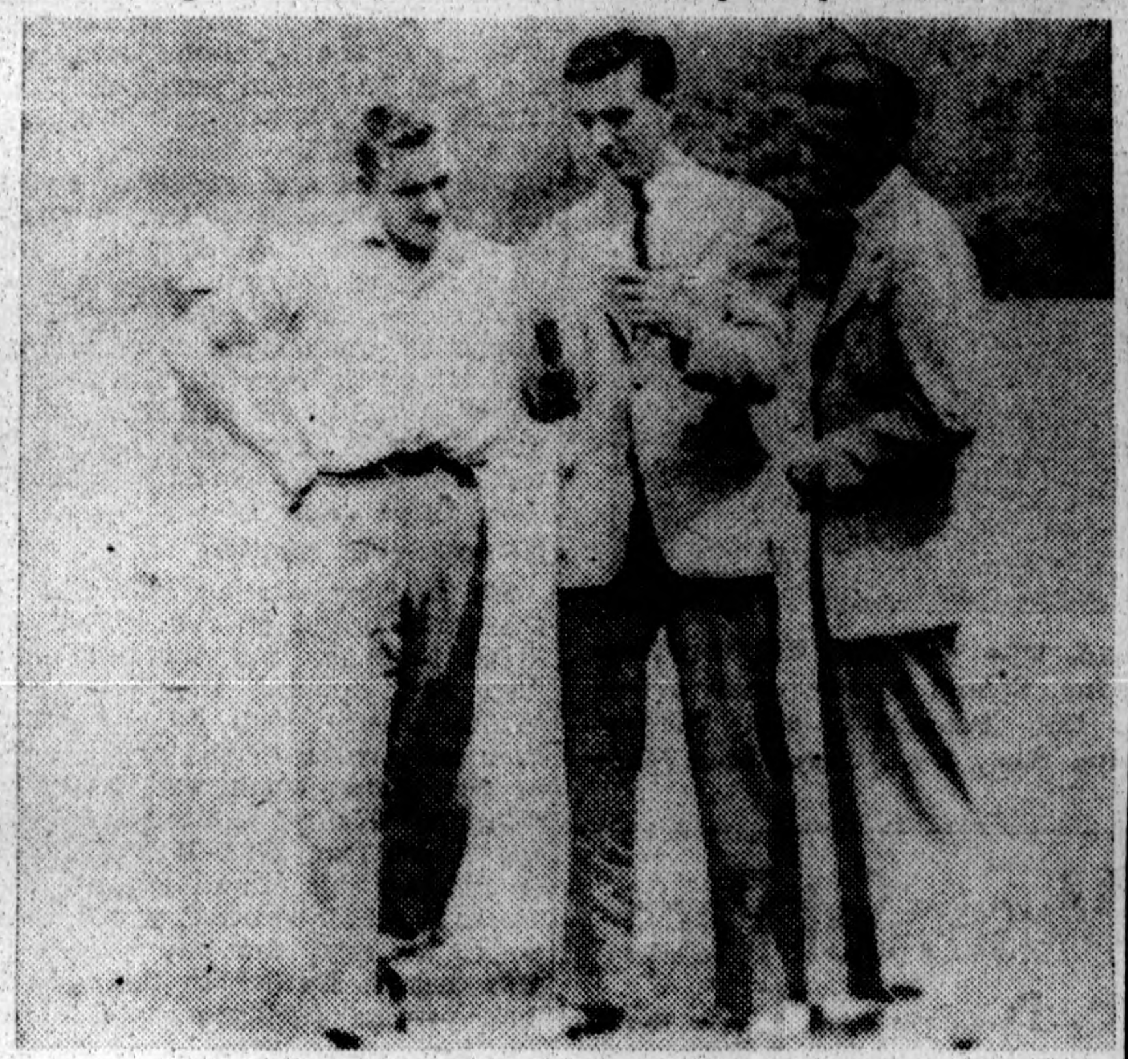
Meet The Boys:

To Analyze The Wavering Brains Is Among This Artsman's Aims

By TOM GOWEN

WHEN the Summer term of the Accelerated Program began softball sounds rumbled through the ground. A man put an ear to the ground to listen. He told others of the sounds. As a result the lunch-hour league was organized. The man who founded the first Summer Softball League for Villanova was George Harris, the entrepreneur of the School of Education.

As this interview opened, George was tensed and busy smoothing out the last details of every sportsman's dream, an all-star game. This game was especially important to George since it was his enterprise that brought about the lunch-hour league. Early in June, he heard talk in the Pie Shoppe for a softball league. He took up the question with Fr. McKee. The result was the organization of a four team league. Since the start of the season these four teams have battled one another for the championship of dayhopdom. Now the select men of the league are met with the residents' best for the championship of the college. Appropriately, George was picked to play on the Dayhop squad.



George Harris Checks Last-Minute Plans.

On the 14th day of December in 1920, George Albert Harris was born at Bridgeport, Pa. He spent his grammar school days in Saint Augustine's parochial school. At graduation he was the class valedictorian. George attended the Bridgeport Public High School where he took the straight academic course of studies and came out with the highest class standing for his four year effort. The National Honor Society awarded him membership at graduation in June of 1939.

George had little difficulty in selecting the right college for his next four years. From his youngest days he had been aware of Villanova. Since his home at Bridgeport is a short hop to the campus, he didn't wait until he entered school to come to Villanova. Many times he had come out to see the football teams coached by Harry Stuhldreher practice and play on the stadium grounds. Best remembered by George is "Whitey" Randour when he streaked around the ends with the bursts of speed that made him famous. With little persuasion, Anthony Differ, a lawyer alumnus, won him to this school in the fall of 1939.

Many Activities

For three years George has been a member of the dayhop squad of the intra-mural basketball league, and for two years a guard on the 150-pound football team. His interest in sports culminated this year with the organization of the softball league. Other activities in which he participated have been the Corsage Committee for the Junior Prom last year, membership in Epsilon Phi Theta, the arts and education fraternity, and freshman and varsity debating societies.

George has many pleasant memories of his debates. He remembers well the discussion of progressive as opposed to traditional methods of education with the young women of New Rochelle College. However, a velvet cloak of silence falls over these memories.

Psychology His Major

On the lighter side with the better halves George admits some attentions to Bridgeport's Edith Jane. Chestnut Hill is his favorite college. Jimmy Dorsey rates as the favorite band. He attends the movies regularly, although he professes more interest in his date than in the films displayed.

George Harris is a psychology major. His ambition is to become a school psychologist after the war. For the present he is a member of the Army Enlisted Reserve Corps. He will be graduated on January 31, and enters the Army on February 1. He intends to waive the two-week furlough offered.

He is a great believer in more complete psychiatric examinations for men entering the armed services as a guard against "washouts" under fire. George hopes to enter this branch of the service.

Romberg, Gershwin Featured At Seminar

Tomorrow at noon, the music of two American composers, George Gershwin and Sigmund Romberg, will be presented by Dr. E. L. Haenisch in room 215. Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" and selections from Romberg's "Student Prince" will be the featured works.

Last Wednesday, Brahms' First Symphony was presented to a small audience. It was played in answer to several requests by the patrons of the seminar. Frequent repetition of this work during the past few seasons has made it one of the more popular symphonies.

Next week, the long awaited "funeral program" will be featured. Dr. Haenisch warned that he would play the most solemn music he could find in his music library. This program was petitioned several weeks ago by the members of the Music Seminar.

with a two-day pass on an Eastern Air Liner ticket, he started for Philadelphia to see his family and fiancee. Arriving here a few hours later, he discovered that he had passed his fiancee, Miss Irene Gorman, on the way, and that his parents had left their Ocean City home to hasten to the bedside of his sister in a Philadelphia hospital.

After frantic telephone calls revealed nothing, Kelly was finally reunited with his family through the intervention of an aunt. But he had to hop the next Liner to Florida to see Miss Gorman.

Saturday's Heat Deterred Not These Cultists

That walking marathon staged on the campus back of Mendel Hall last Saturday afternoon found its explanation in a statement from Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O. S. A.

According to Fr. McQuade, six students, four residents and two day-hops, were so enthralled, exhilerated, etc., by the physical training program that they decided to continue it Saturday afternoon, in a broiling sun with the temperature knocking at the nineties. Fifteen laps about the field, totalling approximately four miles of walking formed the extent of their extra-curricular physical training program. One finished on hands and knees.

Post Hoc, Ergo . . .?

The fact that these enthusiastic and athletically inclined students were missing many a time from the regular physical training period was left unexplained by one of Fr. McQuade's meaningful smiles.

Whether the "marathon" will become a regular Saturday afternoon feature on the campus has not yet been decided. The only statement coming from Fr. McQuade was, "This is only the start."

As explained by him no cuts are allowed in the physical training program. If sickness or some other serious reason prevents the student from attending his regular class periods he should notify either Fr. McQuade, the college physician, or the infirmarian of his absence and the reason for it.

Villanova's Fighting Men

Publicity Combine "High Pressures" Foreign Students

Maybe its the heat or rain and again it might be the workings of an overenthusiastic promoter of Friday evening's Summer Hop. At any rate, it tops the bill so far this pear as the prize faux pas.

Seems that the publicity committee, of which this paper's editor is chairman, in order to publicize the informal to students not attending the summer session as well as to friends, sent out post cards imprinted with a fairly high pressure line.

Included in the "propaganda" was the following statement "No need to tell you how convenient the College is from the transportation point of view."

Additional Postage

The cards were sent out late last week. On Saturday morning three were returned to the Council for additional postage. The three cards bore the addresses of Armando Alvarez, Havana, Cuba; Charles Manderfield, Avalos, Mexico; and Gabriel Soranzo, Havana, Cuba.

True, the college is situated in a "convenient" position as far as normal transportation facilities are concerned but it seems to be stretching the "good neighbor policy" a little too far to ask our neighbors to ride the local lines all the way from Havana or Mexico just for four hours of dancing. Maybe the Council needs the money!

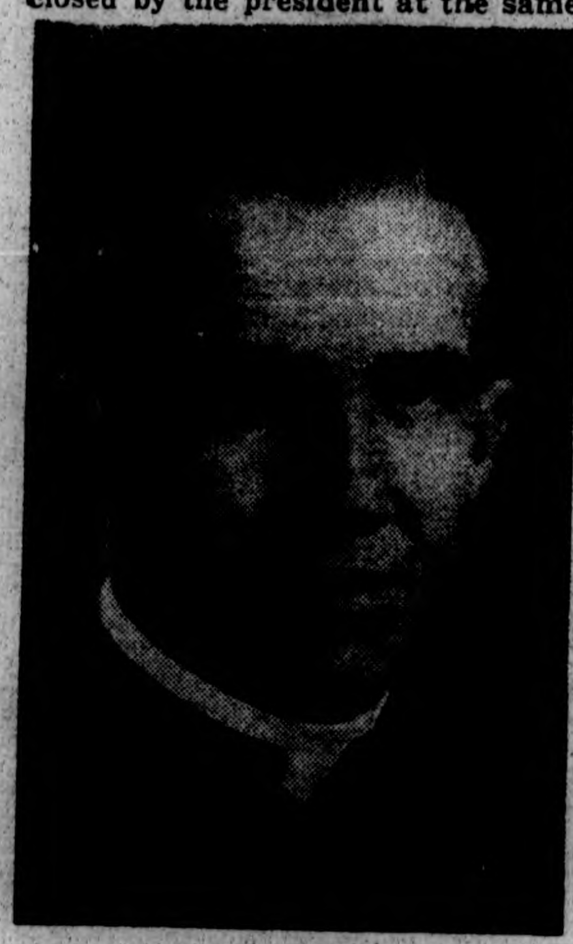
Fr. Boyle To Act As Coordinator Of Centennial Mass

Fr. Vrana Named to Assist; Five Committee Heads Listed to Arrange Plans for Sept. 20

Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O. S. A., has been named coordinator of the various committees planning for the celebration of the Pontifical Mass of Thanksgiving on Sept. 20, Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, revealed last week. Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A., will act as assistant coordinator.

Other committee heads were disclosed by the president at the same time. In charge of ceremonies for the Mass will be Rev. John E. Bresnahan, O. S. A. Fr. Bresnahan is preparing students of St. Mary's Hall to serve as minor ministers at the ceremonies.



REV. JOS. I. BOYLE, O. S. A.

Committee Heads Listed

Rev. Francis W. Ludwig, O. S. A., will direct the ushers and will provide for the parking of the cars of those attending the Mass. Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O. S. A., will be in charge of the reception of distinguished guests; Rev. John J. McMenamin, O. S. A., will arrange for their housing.

Directing the procession of bishops, monsignori, and priests which will precede the Mass is Rev. Thomas F. Gilligan, O. S. A.

A choir of sixty voices will sing the mass. This group has been rehearsing since May under the direction of Rev. Ralph J. Handran, O. S. A.

Assisting Fr. Boyle and Fr. Vrana in the preparation of the stage, the construction of the altar and throne, and the decoration of the Field House is John T. Dever, college controller. Fr. Vrana has also been in charge of the printing incidental to the Mass.

Construction of the altar and throne is nearing completion. The floor of the stage has been shellaced and the stand for visiting clergy awaits final decorations.

"Summer Hop" Aid Lauded By Quinn

Expressing himself as "more than satisfied" with the results of Friday night's "Summer Hop," John J. Quinn, acting chairman of the Student Council, extended his thanks to the students and graduates who contributed to the success of the affair.

"Although a complete accounting of the expenses has not as yet been completed, preliminary audits indicate that the dance was a financial as well as a social success," Quinn remarked, "There was some hesitancy on the part of the Council to undertake such a project because of the uncertainty of the times, but student response adequately justified the trust that the Council placed in them."

When the financial statement is completed, a copy will be submitted to the vice-president of the college.

Next Issue

There will be no issue of The VILLANOVAN next week because of the Labor Day weekend. Regularly scheduled classes will be held as usual, however.

The next issue of the paper will appear the following week on Monday, September 14 and will be the last to be edited by the present staff. It will feature the latest news of the Centennial Mass.

Civil Service Asks For Metallurgists

The United States Civil Service Commission in two recent releases has announced the recruiting of metallurgists under the two new examinations. The announcements were made in connection with the nation-wide mobilization of manpower for civilian war service of the government. Among the urgently needed replacements are metallurgists for work in connection with specific problems in the field of metallurgy—problems connected with some phase of the War Program.

The former requirements for such positions have been modified and college teaching in metallurgy is now accepted as professional experience.

Two Grades Open

The higher grade positions paying from $2,600 to $5,600 require the completion of a four year course with major study in metallurgy or closely allied subjects and a minimum of two years of professional experience which may include college teaching in metallurgy. Additional experience will be required for higher grades.

For the junior grade positions paying $2000 per year, the requirements include the completion of a four-year college course in metallurgy or metallurgical engineering, or the completion of a four year course in an allied subject supplemented by one of the three qualifications: One year of paid experience in metallurgy which may include college teaching; fifteen semester hours in metallurgy or metallurgy engineering or two War Training Courses in metallurgy.

Seniors at Villanova may have their applications accepted if they expect to compete the required courses within six months after filing. The applications will be accepted by the Commission until their needs have been met. No age limits have been imposed for these examinations and no written test is required.

Two More Added To Casualty List

Eusko Reported Missing and Donnelly Seriously Injured; McManus Home Uninjured

Villanova's sixth and seventh casualties of World War II were reported this week. Stanley Eusko, ex-'43 of the School of Science, and James E. Donnelly, ex-'42 of the same school, were the new names added this week. A possible eighth, J. Bradley McManus, graduate of the commerce school two years ago, was reported as a casualty but subsequent findings conflicted with the original story.

Eusko, a member of the Wildcat eleven until injuries forced him to the sidelines and coach of the 150-pound football team last year, was reported as missing in action, place unknown.

Reports are Confusing

Donnelly was wounded in early action at Pearl Harbor and according to the announcement made last week is now in critical condition at the Brooklyn Naval Hospital.

Reports heard last week listed McManus a victim of a plane crash somewhere in the Arctic region. It was stated that he was seriously injured in the crash. However, a call to his home in Drexel Hill, Pa., revealed that he was home on leave and in fine condition. The "plane crash" was confirmed but only as happening "somewhere in the United States." McManus, a lieutenant in the Army Air Corps, is believed to have been a member of the bomber ferry command.

During his four years at Villanova, McManus followed the accounting course of the commerce school. He was a four year member of the Belle Masque Dramatics Society. He was Business Manager of the organization and was included in the casts of all of their productions.

He served on the Student Council for two years, the last year as chariman. In his sophomore year he served on the Cotillion committee and in his junior year as chairman of Junior Week activities. He was also a member of the debating society, Beta Gamma.

In the athletic field McManus was equally as active. Although he failed to make the varsity football team he did make the 150-pound team. This he joined in his sophomore year. In 1938 he received mention as All-American candidate from the nation's teams of that class. In the track events, McManus starred in the pole-vaulting events.

Government Class

Attends Philadelphia City Council Meeting to See Practical Application of Theories

Twenty senior members of the municipal government classes accompanied Dr. Harold F. Hartman to a meeting of the Philadelphia City Council last Thursday.

Welcomed by the President of the Council, the students heard him explain the membership and duties of the group and then witnessed the legislative business transacted during the session of the Council.

After the reading of several messages from Bernard Samuel, Philadelphia's acting Mayor, which were referred to appropriate committees, the Council prepared to enact a law governing the activities of trailer camps located within the City limits. Before a vote could be taken however, a lawyer representing the trailer interests requested and was granted a suspension of action on the bill until further hearings were conducted.

Since this was the only new legislation planned on the Calendar of the Day, the students did not see any proposal enacted into law.

The president of the council presented each student with a copy of the City Council Handbook and extended an invitation to the class to attend future meetings of the council.

Fr. Stanford Named To Education Group

Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, arrived in the Nation's capitol yesterday to become a member of the newly organized Committee on the Relationship of Higher Education to the Federal Government.

Working in close cooperation with the War Manpower Commission and the Army and Navy Personnel Boards, the group will continue their conference today. At the present time the members are drawing up organizational plans for the coming year and expect to meet regularly from one to three days each month.

The twelve - man committee, which is headed by President Edmund E. Day, of Cornell University, is composed of the following nationally known educators besides Fr. Stanford: Chancellor Carmichael, of Vanderbilt; President Conant of Harvard; President Dykstra of Wisconsin; President Cowley of Hamilton; President Heald of the Illinois Institute of Tech.; President Hollinshead of Scranton-Keystone Jr. College; President McBride of Bryn Mawr; President Sproul of the University of California; and President West of New Jersey State Teachers' College.

Belle Air Plans Individual Photos After Labor Day

Esposito Named Temporary Business Manager; Details of Year Book's Six Sections Released by Staff

In two announcements made by the 1943 Belle Air staff this week, Louis J. Esposito, senior artsman, was assigned the duties of business manager pro tem, and plans for individual pictures for the 1943 Belle Air were revealed. Photos will be taken during the entire week following Labor Day.

The appointment to this position comes to Esposito after two years of work on the business staff. His other activities include a columnist post on the VILLANOVAN, membership in the arts fraternity, International Relations Club, and the Student Council appointed committee which sponsored last Friday's dance.

LOUIS J. ESPOSITO

New Plan in Operation

In explaining the plans for individual pictures, Robert Lind, commerce junior and photography editor for the annual, stated that all present seniors and juniors enrolled in the accelerated program will be photographed. The time and place of each student's photograph will be released later.

In the past only seniors have had their photographs taken for the Belle Air. But because of the accelerated program the usual procedure has been revised. Under the present plan the next edition will contain three separate sections of graduates, those seniors now in school, seniors returning in October, and juniors now in school.

Divided Into Six Sections

The book itself will be divided into six main headings. The first is the history of Villanova College. Here will be presented the entire history of the college beginning with its founding in 1843. Special emphasis will be given to the last

Fr. McQuade Attends Capitol Conference

Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O. S. A., was a delegate from Villanova to a four day conference which was concluded yesterday in Washington, D. C.

Arranged under the auspices of the United States Office of Education and the Wartime Commission of the Office, the conference was attended by presidents of a selected group of colleges. Fr. McQuade represented Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college.

The morning sessions were devoted to speeches by various government officials connected with the war effort.

In the afternoons a roundtable conference with these officials was conducted, at which time the problems encountered by the colleges in administering the campus programs of the Army Enlisted Reserve Corps, the Selective Service Board, and the Civil Service were discussed

Too Many ABC's

THE old adage "too many cooks spoil the broth" seems to fit the present situation of American war production and its relations with Washington.

Countless numbers of bureaus have been set up to organize the American war effort with the opposite result of disorganization. Disputes between the alphabetical bureaus have put American labor and management "on the ropes" wondering which order to follow and which official to believe.

As we see it there remains only one drastic step to be taken—that of one control—and the elimination of the ABC's.

Up to this time the government has been trying to wage a successful war with half its war effort devoted to coddling the American public!

The results are evident. Now is the time for a drastic shake-up which will result not only in increased efficiency but also in giving the American public that much needed "shot in the arm."

The Army and Navy commands know what they need and their needs should not be left unfilled because of red tape, whether it is of the political, management, or labor type. The time for unified action—unhampered, swift action is now! The necessities of war demand that any other "distractions" be laid aside for the duration and all effort be welded into a centralized control.

—W. C. G.

Have You Heard . . .?

NO, we haven't heard! And we don't want to hear! Rumors are ugly weapons of war — deadly and uncontrolable. Not only do they find their victims on the seas—you know "a slip of the lip may sink a ship"—but they are the greatest enemy threat against the nation's morale.

Mothers and fathers worrying about their sons in army camps because of some unfounded, and normally unbelievable rumor which their anxious minds have accepted as true and as a result have enkindled a strong distrust for the government. This is but one example of rumor poisoning.

Rumor mongers are far more deadly towards defeating our concentrated drive for victory than any enemy spy.

College students are not free of this menace. We usually know someone who is working in a defense plant, or in the army, navy or marines. Just to keep up with "George" in the evening "bull session" we take one of the remarks heard from our friend who is active in the war effort and exaggerate it beyond all bounds. It may be harmless but as it makes the rounds of other "sessions" it grows in its hideousness. Maybe we have it told to us but we don't recognize it as the "harmless" little incident we "harmlessly" told.

That slip of the lip may sink a ship but more important it may sink a fighting morale. That careless wagging tongue is more deadly than an enemy gun. Keep your mouth shut, fellow! The less said by you and others the better.

Shall We Never Learn?

THE plan for a beautiful peace ignores the nature and history of Germany. It is a rogue nation, so bad that it has forfeited its right to live and the rest of humanity should not feel called upon to take the risk and assume the task of reforming an incorrigible and incurable killer."

This stream of hatred is not the product of a propagandist of twenty-five years ago. It was published last week under the name of one of the country's foremost newspaper columnists.

Here Westbrook Pegler is calling down on Germany the wrath of the gods and urging the United Nations to so conquer its people so as to make the 1918 debacle a mere semi-final. In the same article he classes the Atlantic Charter and the Four Freedoms as just "good propaganda among the other races of the world and, as such, should not be argued too seriously here at home."

All in all, Pegler is asking us to make the same mistakes we made twenty-five years ago; to again render Germany so prostrate that she would welcome any saviour — even another Hitler.

The post-war Germany of 1918 saddled with reparations and war debts, overrun by foreign troops, a starving population, and a strangled export trade was a picture of tragic frustration. And the Allies refused to help her. Instead they added to her problems.

And Westbrook Pegler demands us once more to reduce Germany to a shambles; to choke off her political, economic, and spiritual reconstruction; to cause her to search for a new dictatorial saviour. No one can justify the Nazi disease, but neither can anyone justify the treatment Pegler prescribes.

Save The Family

AMONG the most important and insistent of the requests made by government officials during the prosecution of the war is that we retain the proper sense of values. Thus, the Selective Service system, in spite of its faults, has endeavored to effect an equitable distribution of men for the armed forces; long range planning boards have been established to prepare for post-war years.

And yet in an America so prudent in these matters seems to have lost its sense of proportions in dealing with one of its most important problems. Unheeded by officials, serious blows are being struck at the foundation of our nation — the American family.

The declining birth rate and the prevalence of divorce in pre-war days was shocking enough; but what stability can we expect for the American home in which the mother of young children leaves every day for her job in a factory? We are pledged to do all we can in aiding our country, but it is sheer national suicide to impair the basic institution on which the country is built.

FACULTY COMMENTS

Good Christians Are Good Soldiers

By FR. GILLIGAN

A few months ago, at a certain camp in the south, the soldiers were delighted to hear that a big-league ball team was to visit the camp and to play an exhibition game with the army team. Most of the soldiers were rabid fans, and eagerly looked forward to the big day. Unfortunately, the big-leaguers arrived on Good Friday, and the great event was marred by the fact that most of the Catholic boys went to the Three-Hours Service!

Similar accounts are told of many other units of our armed forces. The reports of chaplains regarding our own Catholic boys are most encouraging. It seems that for many of them, army life has served to make them more devout and God-fearing than ever. This is what we would like to call "Catholic Morale" — the spirit of Catholicity inspiring them to greater devotion to God and country.

Fallacious Assumption

Contrast this with the statement of a "prominent military authority" referred to in an article by the Catholic psychologist, Dr. Rudolf Allers, in the American Ecclesiastical Review. The brilliant brain-child of this military mind was expressed in the sentence: "To hell with morals; what we need is morale." What he meant was, we suppose, that, for the sake of morale, all attempts to control immorality among soldiers should be curtailed for the duration. His reasoning was based, again we suppose, on the assumption that men sacrificing their lives should not have to sacrifice their sensual pleasures, or that a tough soldier must be a tough liver.

A Serious Matter

If such a statement were limited in its effect to a few professional soldiers, or if it were the private opinion of one rather narrow specialist in an essentially narrow field, it would not deserve our consideration. However, it represents, we suspect, the views of certain hard and crusty Blood-and-Iron warmongers of all nations. Furthermore, it affects not just a few thousand tough and debauched mercenary troops. It purports to be a rule-of-thumb ethic for millions of the clean and decent sons of good American families. What a comfort it would be to the sorrowing, heartbroken mothers and fathers of our boys to know that their brave sons may enjoy the leadership of men of such mentality, may march to danger and death under such dirty banners!

Morale and Reason

Morale without morals is a contradiction in terms. Though we may quibble about what morale is, surely no one would think it possible to have it without some basis in reason. How can you fight for something, or how can you persuade others to fight for something, unless you believe in it? To say with one breath that we are fighting for order, for international ethics, for world morality, and, in the next, to condemn the very morality for which you are fighting, is the height of absurdity.

Quite possibly, the military man might avow his belief in world-morals, while denying their necessity or practicality for fighting men. Such thinking reduces morality to mere utilitarianism, and on that basis of argument, a really good case can be made out for Fascism, or wholesale murder, or the slaughter of the innocent, or anything that happens for the moment to be useful. Morality cannot be divided; it cannot be accepted piecemeal; it cannot be turned on and off like a stream of water.

Why Do We Fight?

The trouble is that war, like politics, makes strange bed-fellows. We are fighting with communists, but we do not believe in Communism. We are fighting with British imperialists without believing in Imperialism. Our cause is praised by decadent liberals, though we do not bless the liberals who a few years ago were bartering to sell our country to the Reds. A few of our leaders — very few, we hope, — are narrow and illiterate brass-hats; we admire their tactics while we deplore their ethics.

We Catholics are fighting because we love our country, because we obey our rightfully constituted leaders, because we have ingrained in us discipline, patriotism, service and all the civic virtues, because we believe in Justice, and Honor, and God and His Morality. We make war, as St. Augustine recommends, only that we may have a glorious peace. We have our own morale because we have our own morals. May God prevent that our boys should ever think it necessary to build up their morale by destroying their morals.

THE boys came through with all they had for their first screen test. Cameramen of the Fox Movietone News, Universal News, and News of the Day were present at the physical training class last Thursday to film the seniors in action. Clad in gridiron uniforms, the boys were in there for every shot. Isn't it amazing how inspiring cameras can be. Some of the boy who had not as yet been able to clear the eight foot wall, even with a ladder, almost hurdled the thing when the cameras were facing them, and—with such poise and ease that not one of us failed to notice, not even Clipper. . .

Fedigan Maintains Hold On First Place Easily

Has 1½-Game Advantage Over Alumni as Two Weeks of Competition Remain; Frosh Lose Three and Drop to Cellar

By JOE DALY

Fedigan Hall, behind the fine pitching of Captain Joe Barry, increased its hold on first place to one and a half games last week while Alumni, the first half champion, jumped up to second place from the cellar position. The hard luck group of the week were Mendel Freshmen who slipped from a first place tie to the bottom of the pack. Austin played five hundred ball, winning one, losing one, and tying another.

Fedigan opened the week with a bang as they scored eleven runs against the helpless Frosh while Barry, the work-horse of the league, held the Gold Bugs to four tallies. The Freshmen were never in the running after the first stanza, in which they scored twice to tie the score. In the second frame Captain Barry started things rollling when he hit the first pitch for a two bagger. Erickson then drove him home with a single. These two hits, plus a walk, a fielder's choice, an error, and two more base hits, counted for five big runs. The Fedigan men were hot, however, and didn't stop there, as they crossed the platter three more times in the fifth, when Joe Szal hit his second homer of the day. Joe has not only been hitting the ball hard, but he is also playing a great game for the league leaders on the right side of the infield, having gone through five consecutive games without an error.

Fedigan Defeats Alumni

The following night, the Fediganites were on the warpath again; although the score was much closer. The Redmen won by a two run margin, 10-8. Alumni, their opponents, were first to draw blood, when they scored once in the first inning. They couldn't keep Skipper Barry and his Gigoloes at bay long, however, as the league leaders went into a five to one lead in the third, which they never relinquished. Joe Szal was again the mainstay of the team both at the plate and in the field, getting three for four, as well as spearing two line drives off the bats of the Greenies.

Austin Thwarts Leaders

In their final encounter of the week, Fedigan was deadlocked by Austin, 5-5. The game had been handed to the Gigoloes in the fifth, when Austin committed three errors, allowing three runs to score, but the Firemen didn't give up so easily, coming from behind to score two runs in the sixth when Kempt and Lyness singled and Cahill drove both men home with a booming double. The game then had to be called because of darkness as neither team was able to net any runs in its next two turns at bat. The game will probably be replayed if an open date is available.

Alumni Wins Two

Alumni made the greatest gain on the top-flight Fedigan club, with two wins as compared to one loss. Their first victory was at the expense of the Austin Club, who went down 12-2 as Monteforte led the hitting parade with three for four. The following night they lost to Fedigan, but came right back in winning form Thursday evening, to romp over the Frosh by the score of 12-4. The Greenies started in the first, when Paruta got one of his three safeties and scored a moment later. This showed his team the way and they followed in grand style, with every man gathering at least one hit, with lead-off man Bob Pepperess getting three and also scoring the same number of runs.

Frosh Succumb Easily

In the other contest which was played during the last week the Frosh were trounced by the Austin Firemen to the tune of 10-4. The Golds Bugs got away to a good start when they scored twice in the first but Austin soon overcame this deficit when triples by Whitey Kempf and Stan Kazior accounted for four runs. Then Samartino drove two more in with a lusty clout to center which went for two bases.

Muses Near Title In Dayhop Circuit

Hold Lead of Two Full Games With Only Four Contests Remaining

By JOE CARBINE

Although temporarily halted by a stinging defeat suffered at the hands of the Actors last Wednesday, the Muses came back strongly in their final two games of last week and are now favored to win the second-half crown of the Dayhop Softball League. Trailing 2-1 in the first half of the final inning of this contest, the Muses managed to tie it up, only to lose out when Bob Kane caught the Muse centerfielder napping and sent a long drive over his head for a triple. Ed Czarnaski then delivered a clutch infield single to win the game.

Engineers Lose Close One

The previous Monday's games were easy victories for both the Muses and the Actors, as the former overpowered the Hybrids, 14-4, and the Actors routed the Engineers, 14 to 1. But on Tuesday, the Eng. battled the leaders all the way to the final out, finally succumbing to a one run, 6-5, defeat. This game was featured particularly by the stellar play of the flashy Muse shortstop, Joe Hagerty, who besides lacing out a home run and a double, also made two sparkling fielding plays at third base, cutting off potential winning runs. The other contest on Tuesday found the Hybrids knocking down the Eng., 11-1.

Muses Discover New Hurler

Thursday's encounters were the highlights of the week, chiefly because the stakes were high for both contests and thus it was only natural that both of the games were very hard fought and keenly contested. The Actors, who had been very hot the day before, suddenly became very cold under a barrage of hits fired by the Eng. infielders — and lost both the game, 7-6, and some ground in the league race. The Muses were not reluctant to help the Actors' cause, for they proceeded to uncover a new pitching sensation in John Quinn, who hurled his team to a 3-0 win over the Hybrids. The witty Muse held his opponents completely at bay throughout, and allowed only one hit — that a single by Tony DiLuigi. It was the first and only shutout of the entire noon-time season.

Deery Shines

Friday's contests were not quite as interesting from a spectator's viewpoint. The Hybrids were compelled to forfeit their game to the Actors, thus giving the latter's record a boost to 4 wins and 3 losses. Then in the one game played, the Muse team continued its terrific pace and turned on the power to completely overwhelm the Engineers, 14 to 4. It was Leftfielder Jack Deery's turn to shine this time, and he shone brilliantly by smashing out a double and a home run. The victory was a particularly noteworthy one for the league leaders since five of their players had participated in the Dayhop All-Star game the night before.

Thus, as the Dayhop teams race into the home-stretch, we find that the Muses must win three of their four remaining games to clinch the second-half. But if they should win only two of these games, the Actors can tie for honors by winning all of their last four games, two of them being with the league leaders.

The Standings

Team	W.	L.	T.
Muses	6	1	1	.850
Actors	4	3	1	.571
Eng.	2	5	1	.285
Hybrids	1	4	3	.200

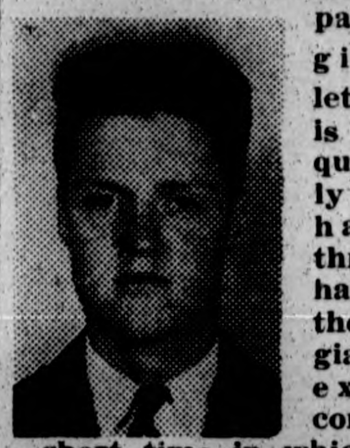
In view of the chaos which exists throughout the entire world today, there seems to be little hope that the Olympic games, recognized as the symbol of freedom and good will throughout the world, will be held again in the near future. Having already been cancelled in 1940 for the first time since 1916, they definitely will not be held in 1944, and it is doubtless that they will be resumed by 1948 or even 1952. Not that we think the present state of affairs will continue until that time, but rather that it will take more than a few years for a country to put itself back on its feet after the numerous peace treaties have been negotiated which will officially end the war.

After World War I the Olympics were held as scheduled, in Antwerp, Belgium, less than two years after the Armistice had been signed. Whereas this may seem to be sufficient time to prepare for such a gigantic athletic carnival, it is very inadequate, especially after just having been through a long hard war. Although the Belgians did do an excellent job, considering the short time in which they could prepare for the 1920 games, it was generally felt that a much better effort could have been made, had the Olympics been held over until 1924. With more destruction being reaped in the present conflict than in the 1918 battle, it is the consensus of opinion, that, provided the Olympics are held again, they should not take place until at least five years after the close of the present war.



There are quite a few Americans, however, who believe that the Olympic games should never be resumed, in that they have failed in their primary objective — that of promoting good will and friendly relations. Among these individuals who would do away with a custom that has been prevalent since the days of the Spartans and Athenians, is Lawson Robertson, coach of the 1936 American squad, which cleaned up at Berlin.

While it's true that the present state of affairs may have led many to believe that they have failed in their initial purpose, we still feel that they are an excellent means of international competition, and should be resumed as soon as the countries which have served as battlegrounds for the last few years can adjust themselves to something besides besides war. These games would certainly be a vital stepping stone toward fraternalizing relations which are now in a very dire state.

Despite the fact that Europe is enveloped more deeply than the rest of the world in the present conflict, it is still possible that two European athletes will journey to the United States in the near future. Both from Sweden, they answer to the names of Gunder Haegg, and Arne Andersson, and have been setting the world on fire with the many existing track records which they have broken in the last two months. Coming out of comparative obscurity after an eight month's susupension because of expense account irregularities, Haegg, probably the better of the two, inaugurated his record-breaking spree by hurrying through the mile in 4:06.2. This mark, two-tenths of a second below the accepted standard held by Sydney Wooderson of England, was tied by Andersson at a later date.

A mere two days after his mile performance, Haegg ran twice that distance in the record breaking time of 8:47.8, eight and two tenths of a second below the accepted world mark held by Greg Rice. Also among the achievements of the astounding Mr. Haegg is his stepping through the 1500 metre distance in 3:45.8, two seconds faster than New Zealand Jack Lovelock's international effort of 3:47.8.

So, in view of the fact that these two men have performed so sensationally during the summer, all American track followers fervently hope that they will be able to reach the U. S. in time for the coming indoor season.

Selected Softball Team Engages Penn Wednesday

Squad Chosen From All-Star Aggregations of Both Intramural Leagues Meets First Opponent Tomorrow Night on Mendel Field

By JACK KOVAL

Tomorrow night, for the first time in the history of intramural softball at Villanova, an All-Star team chosen from both the Resident and Day Hop All-Star squads by Rev. Edward McKee, O. S. A., and Rev. John Dunne, O. S. A., will encounter a powerful University of Pennsylvania ten on Mendel field at 6:15 P. M. This game will initiate the first of a series of contests with nearby colleges, probably among which will be La Salle, Haverford, Swarthmore, and a few others yet to be decided upon.

Other Contests Planned

Earlier this summer Fathers McKee and Dunne organized a hardball team which aroused a considerable amount of attention even though only two games were played. Several other contests might have been played, but inclement weather necessitated the postponement of all of them.

In like manner the chosen All-Star softball team will encounter other squads in the vicinity, with plans being made to have as many games played as possible.

Barry to Hurl

Representing the Blue and White in tomorrow evening's contest with the Quakers will be an All-Star aggregation, all of whom originate from the Resident team. However, substitutions for any position on the squad may be made before game time or during the game.

Assuming the mound duties for the Wildcats will be Joe Barry, winning pitcher against the Dayhops in the two games that were played. If Joe performs as he has in the Resident softball league and All-Star games, the Wildcats shouldn't have much trouble in defeating the Red and Blue.

DiLuigi Also on Squad

In case Barry should show signs of weakening, however, Fathers McKee and Dunne have a very capable replacement in "Tony" DiLuigi, outstanding hurler in the Dayhop league. Both pitchers are speedball artists, and Penn undoubtedly will have difficulty in making any headway against these two experienced moundsmen.

Behind the plate will be Charlie LaBelle, competently assisted by Walt Donakowski, small but mighty backstop, who hails from the Dayhop All-Star team.

In the infield will be Wildcats "Whitey" Kempf at the initial sack, Jim Carbine at the keystone bag, Stan Zazior at third, and Tony Paruta at shortstop.

The outfielders will include All-Stars "Peps" Pepperess in short field, Jack Koval in left, Frenchy" DeBlois in the number nine spot and Jack Brinjac in right. Utility outfielders are Carmen Graziano and Joe Carbine, while Jack Deery is a very capable substitute at any one of the infield posts.

This is not the first game of this type for the Red and Blue team. Throughout the summer the Penn team has engaged the La Salle College ten in scheduled games. The last encounter between the two at River Field resulted in a victory for Penn. Whether such contests will be continued this fall and in other sports has not as yet been decided.

Residents Defeat Commuters Again

Erase Opponents' Early Lead to Win Second Game of Series 7-6

Supporters of the well-known baseball proverb that "it takes only one run to win a ball game," the Resident All Star softball aggregation handed the cream-of-the-crop in the Dayhop league their second straight setback last Thursday evening by the score of 7-6 in a game that wasn't decided until the very last inning. It was then that "Jack" Brinjac, slugging right fielder of the Residents, sent a sharp single into center field, scoring "French" DeBlois from second base with the seventh and winning run.

Great Rivalry

Since extreme rivalry existed between both All Star teams and each squad consisted of ten scrappy ball players working in unison, the game was very exciting and well played. The situation at times appeared to be an exact carbon-copy of a hective Dodger-Giant game, with sarcastic tongue lashings and strategical moves on the part of coaches and players being quite prevalent. Even the fans, along with the boos and cheers that go with them, contributed an Ebbett's field atmosphere to the contest.

Dayhops Score Early

While the game was still in its embryonic stage, it appeared as though the revengeful spirit of the Commuters was materializing, for in the second inning the Dayhops succeeded in scoring three runs on the same number of hits. This sudden offensive outburst momentarily dejected the spirits of the Residents, for right then and there it appeared as though the Dayhops were on the road to victory.

The first three innings found the Non-Residents holding the upper hand by the score of 3-0. "Tony" DiLuigi, hurler for the Dayhop squad, prevented any resident scoring during that time, although he was continually under extreme pressure.

Residents Tie It Up In 4th

Another Dayhop tally in the fourth gave them a comfortable 4-0 lead. The fireworks began in the Residents' half of the same inning. However when they put the game into a 4-4 deadlock as a result of a smashing double by LaBelle, and singles by Kempf, Brinjac, and Koval. Two more runs in the fifth put the Residents ahead, 6-4. The Dayhops, however, intensely eager to win the ball game, pushed two runs across in their last times at bat and once more tied the score at 6-6.

Brinjac Gets Three Hits

The Resident All-Stars finally put an end to the nerve-wracking contest in the final inning when Brinjac came through with his smashing bingle to score the winning run.

EUSKO MISSING

Word was received last week at the Registrar's office that Stanley Eusko, former halfback and more recently coach of Villanova's 150 lb. football team, was missing in action. Eusko was a substitute halfback in his sophomore year at which he achieved much fame as a passer, and was prepared to fill the vacancy left by Nick Basca's graduation.

He suffered a severe back injury in the interval between his sophomore and junior years, however, and was forced to the sidelines. It was at this time that he accepted the post left by Tam Casper as coach of the 150 lb. football eleven. After a successful season he enlisted in the Armed Forced last spring.

Smith Holds Pentathalon

A new feature was introduced into Villanova's Physical Fitness Program last week when "Clipper" Smith held a Pentathalon event in order to provide little more individual competition for his charges. All the students have not participated in this competition as yet, but the records which now stand seem capable of withstanding the onslaughts of those members of the student body who did not perform last week.

Lou Carideo, a junior, set the water-jump record with a leap of twenty-two feet, while Charley Rini climbed over the eight foot wall faster than anyone else in the remarkable time of 1.4 seconds. Jim Cahill won first honors in the comparatively new rope-swing event when he came to earth twenty-six feet from the end of the ramp. Sophomores Ed McGovern and Ben Paradee are the present record holders for the 12 foot ladder and balance run events, as a result of their performances of 2.5 and 1.7 seconds respectively.

Too Many ABC's

THE old adage "too many cooks spoil the broth" seems to fit the present situation of American war production and its relations with Washington.

Countless numbers of bureaus have been set up to organize the American war effort with the opposite result of disorganization. Disputes between the alphabetical bureaus have put American labor and management "on the ropes" wondering which order to follow and which official to believe.

As we see it there remains only one drastic step to be taken—that of one control—and the elimination of the ABC's.

Up to this time the government has been trying to wage a successful war with half its war effort devoted to coddling the American public!

The results are evident. Now is the time for a drastic shake-up which will result not only in increased efficiency but also in giving the American public that much needed "shot in the arm."

The Army and Navy commands know what they need and their needs should not be left unfilled because of red tape, whether it is of the political, management, or labor type. The time for unified action—unhampered, swift action is now! The necessities of war demand that any other "distractions" be laid aside for the duration and all effort be welded into a centralized control.

Shall We Never Learn?

THE plan for a beautiful peace ignores the nature and history of Germany. It is a rogue nation, so bad that it has forfeited its right to live and the rest of humanity should not feel called upon to take the risk and assume the task of reforming an incorrigible and incurable killer."

This stream of hatred is not the product of a propagandist of twenty-five years ago. It was published last week under the name of one of the country's foremost newspaper columnists.

Here Westbrook Pegler is calling down on Germany the wrath of the gods and urging the United Nations to so conquer its people so as to make the 1918 debacle a mere semi-final. In the same article he classes the Atlantic Charter and the Four Freedoms as just "good propaganda among the other races of the world and, as such, should not be argued too seriously here at home."

All in all, Pegler is asking us to make the same mistakes we made twenty-five years ago; to again render Germany so prostrate that she would welcome any saviour — even another Hitler.

The post-war Germany of 1918 saddled with reparations and war debts, overrun by foreign troops, a starving population, and a strangled export trade was a picture of tragic frustration. And the Allies refused to help her. Instead they added to her problems.

And Westbrook Pegler demands us once more to reduce Germany to a shambles; to choke off her political, economic, and spiritual reconstruction; to cause her to search for a new dictatorial saviour. No one can justify the Nazi disease, but neither can anyone justify the treatment Pegler prescribes.

Save The Family

AMONG the most important and insistent of the requests made by government officials during the prosecution of the war is that we retain the proper sense of values. Thus, the Selective Service system, in spite of its faults, has endeavored to effect an equitable distribution of men for the armed forces; long range planning boards have been established to prepare for post-war years.

And yet in an America so prudent in these matters seems to have lost its sense of proportions in dealing with one of its most important problems. Unheeded by officials, serious blows are being struck at the foundation of our nation — the American family.

The declining birth rate and the prevalence of divorce in pre-war days was shocking enough; but what stability can we expect for the American home in which the mother of young children leaves every day for her job in a factory? We are pledged to do all we can in aiding our country, but it is sheer national suicide to impair the basic institution on which the country is built.

FACULTY COMMENTS

Good Christians Are Good Soldiers

By FR. GILLIGAN

A few months ago, at a certain camp in the south, the soldiers were delighted to hear that a big-league ball team was to visit the camp and to play an exhibition game with the army team. Most of the soldiers were rabid fans, and eagerly looked forward to the big day. Unfortunately, the big-leaguers arrived on Good Friday, and the great event was marred by the fact that most of the Catholic boys went to the Three-Hours Service!

Similar accounts are told of many other units of our armed forces. The reports of chaplains regarding our own Catholic boys are most encouraging. It seems that for many of them, army life has served to make them more devout and God-fearing than ever. This is what we would like to call "Catholic Morale" — the spirit of Catholicity inspiring them to greater devotion to God and country.

Fallacious Assumption

Contrast this with the statement of a "prominent military authority" referred to in an article by the Catholic psychologist, Dr. Rudolf Allers, in the American Ecclesiastical Review. The brilliant brain-child of this military mind was expressed in the sentence: "To hell with morals; what we need is morale." What he meant was, we suppose, that, for the sake of morale, all attempts to control immorality among soldiers should be curtailed for the duration. His reasoning was based, again we suppose, on the assumption that men sacrificing their lives should not have to sacrifice their sensual pleasures, or that a tough soldier must be a tough liver.

A Serious Matter

If such a statement were limited in its effect to a few professional soldiers, or if it were the private opinion of one rather narrow specialist in an essentially narrow field, it would not deserve our consideration. However, it represents, we suspect, the views of certain hard and crusty Blood-and-Iron warmongers of all nations. Furthermore, it affects not just a few thousand tough and debauched mercenary troops. It purports to be a rule-of-thumb ethic for millions of the clean and decent sons of good American families. What a comfort it would be to the sorrowing, heartbroken mothers and fathers of our boys to know that their brave sons may enjoy the leadership of men of such mentality, may march to danger and death under such dirty banners!

Morale and Reason

Morale without morals is a contradiction in terms. Though we may quibble about what morale is, surely no one would think it possible to have it without some basis in reason. How can you fight for something, or how can you persuade others to fight for something, unless you believe in it? To say with one breath that we are fighting for order, for international ethics, for world morality, and, in the next, to condemn the very morality for which you are fighting, is the height of absurdity.

Quite possibly, the military man might avow his belief in world-morals, while denying their necessity or practicality for fighting men. Such thinking reduces morality to mere utilitarianism, and on that basis of argument, a really good case can be made out for Fascism, or wholesale murder, or the slaughter of the innocent, or anything that happens for the moment to be useful. Morality cannot be divided; it cannot be accepted piecemeal; it cannot be turned on and off like a stream of water.

Why Do We Fight?

The trouble is that war, like politics, makes strange bed-fellows. We are fighting with communists, but we do not believe in Communism. We are fighting with British imperialists without believing in Imperialism. Our cause is praised by decadent liberals, though we do not bless the liberals who a few years ago were bartering to sell our country to the Reds. A few of our leaders — very few, we hope, — are narrow and illiterate brass-hats; we admire their tactics while we deplore their ethics.

We Catholics are fighting because we love our country, because we obey our rightfully constituted leaders, because we have ingrained in us discipline, patriotism, service, and all the civic virtues, because we believe in Justice, and Honor, and God and His Morality. We make war, as St. Augustine recommends, only that we may have a glorious peace. We have our own morale because we have our own morals. May God prevent that our boys should ever think it necessary to build up their morale by destroying their morals.

THE boys came through with all they had for their first screen test. Cameramen of the Fox Movietone News, Universal News, and News of the Day were present at the physical training class last Thursday to film the seniors in action. Clad in gridiron uniforms, the boys were in there for every shot. Isn't it amazing how inspiring cameras can be. Some of the boy who had not as yet been able to clear the eight foot wall, even with a ladder, almost hurdled the thing when the cameras were facing them, and with such poise and ease that not one of us failed to notice, not even Clipper. . .

Fedigan Maintains Hold On First Place Easily

Has 1½-Game Advantage Over Alumni as Two Weeks of Competition Remain; Frosh Lose Three and Drop to Cellar

By JOE DALY

Fedigan Hall, behind the fine pitching of Captain Joe Barry, increased its hold on first place to one and a half games last week while Alumni, the first half champion, jumped up to second place from the cellar position. The hard luck group of the week were Mendel Freshmen who slipped from a first place tie to the bottom of the pack. Austin played five hundred ball, winning one, losing one, and tying another.

Fedigan opened the week with a bang as they scored eleven runs against the helpless Frosh while Barry, the work-horse of the league, held the Gold Bugs to four tallies. The Freshmen were never in the running after the first stanza, in which they scored twice to tie the score. In the second frame Captain Barry started things rollling when he hit the first pitch for a two bagger. Erickson then drove him home with a single. These two hits, plus a walk, a fielder's choice, an error, and two more base hits, counted for five big runs. The Fedigan men were hot, however, and didn't stop there, as they crossed the platter three more times in the fifth, when Joe Szal hit his second homer of the day. Joe has not only been hitting the ball hard, but he is also playing a great game for the league leaders on the right side of the infield, having gone through five consecutive games without an error.

Fedigan Defeats Alumni

The following night, the Fediganites were on the warpath again, although the score was much closer. The Redmen won by a two run margin, 10-8. Alumni, their opponents, were first to draw blood, when they scored once in the first inning. They couldn't keep Skipper Barry and his Gigoloes at bay long, however, as the league leaders went into a five to one lead in the third, which they never relinquished. Joe Szal was again the mainstay of the team both at the plate and in the field, getting three for four, as well as spearing two line drives off the bats of the Greenies.

Austin Thwarts Leaders

In their final encounter of the week, Fedigan was deadlocked by Austin, 5-5. The game had been handed to the Gigoloes in the fifth, when Austin committed three errors, allowing three runs to score, but the Firemen didn't give up so easily, coming from behind to score two runs in the sixth when Kempt and Lyness singled and Cahill drove both men home with a booming double. The game then had to be called because of darkness as neither team was able to net any runs in its next two turns at bat. The game will probably be replayed if an open date is available.

Alumni Wins Two

Alumni made the greatest gain on the top-flight Fedigan club, with two wins as compared to one loss. Their first victory was at the expense of the Austin Club, who went down 12-2 as Monteforte led the hitting parade with three for four. The following night they lost to Fedigan, but came right back in winning form Thursday evening, to romp over the Frosh by the score of 12-4. The Greenies started in the first, when Paruta got one of his three safeties and scored a moment later. This showed his team the way, and they followed in grand style, with every man gathering at least one hit, with lead-off man Bob Pepperess getting three and also scoring the same number of runs.

Frosh Succumb Easily

In the other contest which was played during the last week the Frosh were trounced by the Austin Firemen to the tune of 10-4. The Golds Bugs got away to a good start when they scored twice in the first but Austin soon overcame this deficit when triples by Whitey Kempf and Stan Kazior accounted for four runs. Then Samartino drove two more in with a lusty clout to center which went for two bases.

The Standings

Fedigan	6	3	.667
Alumni	5	5	.500

Muses Near Title In Dayhop Circuit

Hold Lead of Two Full Games With Only Four Contests Remaining

By JOE CARBINE

Although temporarily halted by a stinging defeat suffered at the hands of the Actors last Wednesday, the Muses came back strongly in their final two games of last week and are now favored to win the second-half crown of the Dayhop Softball League. Trailing 2-1 in the first half of the final inning of this contest, the Muses managed to tie it up, only to lose out when Bob Kane caught the Muse centerfielder napping and sent a long drive over his head for a triple. Ed Czarnaski then delivered a clutch infield single to win the game.

Engineers Lose Close One

The previous Monday's games were easy victories for both the Muses and the Actors, as the former overpowered the Hybrids, 14-4, and the Actors routed the Engineers, 14 to 1. But on Tuesday, the Eng. battled the leaders all the way to the final out, finally succumbing to a one run, 6-5, defeat. This game was featured particularly by the stellar play of the flashy Muse shortstop, Joe Haggerty, who besides lacing out a home run and a double, also made two sparkling fielding plays at third base, cutting off potential winning runs. The other contest on Tuesday found the Hybrids knocking down the Eng., 11-1.

Muses Discover New Hurler

Thursday's encounters were the highlights of the week, chiefly because the stakes were high for both contests and thus it was only natural that both of the games were very hard fought and keenly contested. The Actors, who had been very hot the day before, suddenly became very cold under a barrage of hits fired by the Eng. infielders — and lost both the game, 7-6, and some ground in the league race. The Muses were not reluctant to help the Actors' cause, for they proceeded to uncover a new pitching sensation in John Quinn, who hurled his team to a 3-0 win over the Hybrids. The witty Muse held his opponents completely at bay throughout, and allowed only one hit — that a single by Tony DiLuigi. It was the first and only shutout of the entire noon-time season.

Deery Shines

Friday's contests were not quite as interesting from a spectator's viewpoint. The Hybrids were compelled to forfeit their game to the Actors, thus giving the latter's record a boost to 4 wins and 3 losses. Then in the one game played, the Muse team continued its terrific pace and turned on the power to completely overwhelm the Engineers, 14 to 4. It was Leftfielder Jack Deery's turn to shine this time, and he shone brilliantly by smashing out a double and a home run. The victory was a particularly noteworthy one for the league leaders since five of their players had participated in the Dayhop All-Star game the night before.

Thus, as the Dayhop teams race into the home-stretch, we find that the Muses must win three of their four remaining games to clinch the second half. But if they should win only two of these games, the Actors can tie for honors by winning all of their last four games, two of them being with the league leaders.

The Standings

Team	W.	L.	T.
Muses	6	1	1	.850
Actors	4	3	1	.571
Eng.	2	5	1	.285
Hybrids	1	4	3	.200

In view of the chaos which exists throughout the entire world today, there seems to be little hope that the Olympic games, recognized as the symbol of freedom and good will throughout the world, will be held again in the near future. Having already been cancelled in 1940 for the first time since 1916, they definitely will not be held in 1944, and it is doubtless that they will be resumed by 1948 or even 1952. Not that we think the present state of affairs will continue until that time, but rather that it will take more than a few years for a country to put itself back on its feet after the numerous peace treaties have been negotiated which will officially end the war.

After World War I the Olympics were held as scheduled, in Antwerp, Belgium, less than two years after the Armistice had been signed. Whereas this may seem to be sufficient time to prepare for such a gigantic athletic carnival, it is very inadequate, especially after just having been through a long hard war. Although the Belgians did do an excellent job, considering the short time in which they could prepare for the 1920 games, it was generally felt that a much better effort could have been made, had the Olympics been held over until 1924. With more destruction being reaped in the present conflict than in the 1918 battle, it is the consensus of opinion, that, provided the Olympics are held again, they should not take place until at least five years after the close of the present war.

There are quite a few Americans, however, who believe that the Olympic games should never be resumed, in that they have failed in their primary objective — that of promoting good will and friendly relations. Among these individuals who would do away with a custom that has been prevalent since the days of the Spartans and Athenians, is Lawson Robertson, coach of the 1936 American squad, which cleaned up at Berlin.

While it's true that the present state of affairs may have led many to believe that they have failed in their initial purpose, we still feel that they are an excellent means of international competition, and should be resumed as soon as the countries which have served as battlegrounds for the last few years can adjust themselves to something besides besides war. These games would certainly be a vital stepping stone toward fraternalizing relations which are now in a very dire state.

Despite the fact that Europe is enveloped more deeply than the rest of the world in the present conflict, it is still possible that two European athletes will journey to the United States in the near future. Both from Sweden, they answer to the names of Gunder Haegg, and Arne Andersson, and have been setting the world on fire with the many existing track records which they have broken in the last two months. Coming out of comparative obscurity after an eight month's suspension because of expense account irregularities, Haegg, probably the better of the two, inaugurated his record-breaking spree by hurrying through the mile in 4:06.2. This mark, two-tenths of a second below the accepted standard held by Sydney Wooderson of England, was tied by Andersson at a later date.

A mere two days after his mile performance, Haegg ran twice that distance in the record breaking time of 8:47.8, eight and two tenths of a second below the accepted world mark held by Greg Rice. Also among the achievements of the astounding Mr. Haegg is his stepping through the 1500 metre distance in 3:45.8, two seconds faster than New Zealand Jack Lovelock's international effort of 3:47.8.

So, in view of the fact that these two men have performed so sensationally during the summer, all American track followers fervently hope that they will be able to reach the U. S. in time for the coming indoor season.

Selected Softball Team Engages Penn Wednesday

Squad Chosen From All-Star Aggregations of Both Intramural Leagues Meets First Opponent Tomorrow Night on Mendel Field

By JACK KOVAL

Tomorrow night, for the first time in the history of intramural softball at Villanova, an All-Star team chosen from both the Resident and Day Hop All-Star squads by Rev. Edward McKee, O. S. A., and Rev. John Dunne, O. S. A., will encounter a powerful University of Pennsylvania ten on Mendel field at 6:15 P. M. This game will initiate the first of a series of contests with nearby colleges, probably among which will be La Salle, Haverford, Swarthmore, and a few others yet to be decided upon.

Other Contests Planned

Earlier this summer Fathers McKee and Dunne organized a hardball team which aroused a considerable amount of attention even though only two games were played. Several other contests might have been played, but inclement weather necessitated the postponement of all of them.

In like manner the chosen All-Star softball team will encounter other squads in the vicinity, with plans being made to have as many games played as possible.

Barry to Hurl

Representing the Blue and White in tomorrow evening's contest with the Quakers will be an All-Star aggregation, all of whom originate from the Resident team. However, substitutions for any position on the squad may be made before game time or during the game.

Assuming the mound duties for the Wildcats will be Joe Barry, winning pitcher against the Dayhops in the two games that were played. If Joe performs as he has in the Resident softball league and All-Star games, the Wildcats shouldn't have much trouble in defeating the Red and Blue.

DiLuigi Also on Squad

In case Barry should show signs of weakening, however, Fathers McKee and Dunne have a very capable replacement in "Tony" DiLuigi, outstanding hurler in the Dayhop league. Both pitchers are speedball artists, and Penn undoubtedly will have difficulty in making any headway against these two experienced moundsmen.

Behind the plate will be Charlie LaBelle, competently assisted by Walt Donakowski, small but mighty backstop, who hails from the Dayhop All-Star team.

In the infield will be Wildcats "Whitey" Kempf at the initial sack, Jim Carbine at the keystone bag, Stan Zazior at third, and Tony Paruta at shortstop.

The outfielders will include All-Stars "Peps" Pepperess in short field, Jack Koval in left, Frenchy" DeBlois in the number nine spot and Jack Brinjac in right. Utility outfielders are Carmen Graziano and Joe Carbine, while Jack Deery is a very capable substitute at any one of the infield posts.

This is not the first game of this type for the Red and Blue team. Throughout the summer the Penn team has engaged the La Salle College ten in scheduled games. The last encounter between the two at River Field resulted in a victory for Penn. Whether such contests will be continued this fall and in other sports has not as yet been decided.

Residents Defeat Commuters Again

Erase Opponents' Early Lead to Win Second Game of Series 7-6

Supporters of the well-known baseball proverb that "it takes only one run to win a ball game," the Resident All Star softball aggregation handed the cream-of-the-crop in the Dayhop league their second straight setback last Thursday evening by the score of 7-6 in a game that wasn't decided until the very last inning. It was then that "Jack" Brinjac, slugging right fielder of the Residents, sent a sharp single into center field, scoring "French" DeBlois from second base with the seventh and winning run.

Great Rivalry

Since extreme rivalry existed between both All Star teams and each squad consisted of ten scrappy ball players working in unison, the game was very exciting and well played. The situation at times appeared to be an exact carbon-copy of a hective Dodger-Giant game, with sarcastic tongue lashings and strategical moves on the part of coaches and players being quite prevalent. Even the fans, along with the boos and cheers that go with them, contributed an Ebbett's field atmosphere to the contest.

Dayhops Score Early

While the game was still in its embryonic stage, it appeared as though the revengeful spirit of the Commuters was materializing, for in the second inning the Dayhops succeeded in scoring three runs on the same number of hits. This sudden offensive outburst momentarily dejected the spirits of the Residents, for right then and there it appeared as though the Dayhops were on the road to victory.

The first three innings found the Non-Residents holding the upper hand by the score of 3-0. "Tony" DiLuigi, hurler for the Dayhop squad, prevented any resident scoring during that time, although he was continually under extreme pressure.

Residents Tie It Up In 4th

Another Dayhop tally in the fourth gave them a comfortable 4-0 lead. The fireworks began in the Residents' half of the same inning. However when they put the game into a 4-4 deadlock as a result of a smashing double by LaBelle, and singles by Kempf, Brinjac, and Koval. Two more runs in the fifth put the Residents ahead, 6-4. The Dayhops, however, intensely eager to win the ball game, pushed two runs across in their last times at bat and once more tied the score at 6-6.

Brinjac Gets Three Hits

The Resident All-Stars finally put an end to the nerve-wracking contest in the final inning when Brinjac came through with his smashing single to score the winning run.

EUSKO MISSING

Word was received last week at the Registrar's office that Stanley Eusko, former halfback and more recently coach of Villanova's 150 lb. football team, was missing in action. Eusko was a substitute halfback in his sophomore year at which he achieved much fame as a passer, and was prepared to fill the vacancy left by Nick Basca's graduation.

He suffered a severe back injury in the interval between his sophomore and junior years, however, and was forced to the sidelines. It was at this time that he accepted the post left by Tom Casper as coach of the 150 lb. football eleven. After a successful season he enlisted in the Armed Forced last spring.

Smith Holds Pentathalon

A new feature was introduced into Villanova's Physical Fitness Program last week when "Clipper" Smith held a Pentathalon event in order to provide little more individual competition for his charges. All the students have not participated in this competition as yet, but the records which now stand seem capable of withstanding the onslaughts of those members of the student body who did not perform last week.

Lou Carideo, a junior, set the water-jump record with a leap of twenty-two feet, while Charley Rini climbed over the eight foot wall faster than anyone else in the remarkable time of 1.4 seconds. Jim Cahill won first honors in the comparatively new rope-swing event when he came to earth twenty-six feet from the end of the ramp. Sophomores Ed McGovern and Ben Paradee are the present record holders for the 12 foot ladder and balance run events, as a result of their performances of 2.5 and 1.7 seconds respectively.

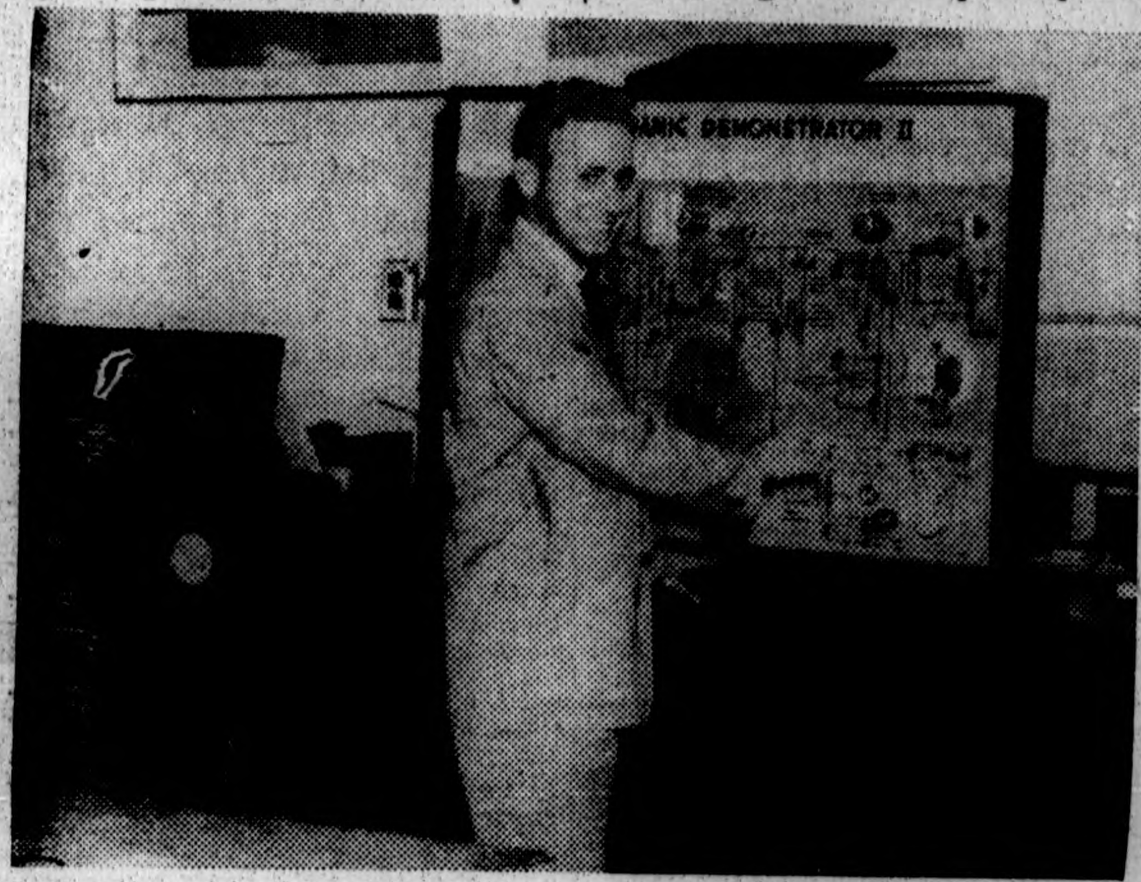
Meet The Boys:

Art Smith Excells In P. T. Class As Well As In The Engineering Lab

By HARRY BINDER

JOURNEYING to room 109 in Fedigan Hall last week, we found ourselves in the presence of Art Smith, our senior under the miscroscope this week. Art was preparing for an afternoon session with "Clipper" and in between the hurly-burly and commotion of four engineers in one room, we managed to uncover a few facts about Mr. Smith.

Art was born 14th day of January in 1919 at Patterson, N. J. Spending his early years there, he later took up his abode in Rutherford, N. J., which happens to be his home residence at present. His grammar school days took him to Maryland, where he attended Tome Preparatory School. After leaving Tome he started his secondary schooling at Rutherford High School. While he was there, Art excelled as an outstanding athlete, participating in football, track, and several other sports.



...Art Smith in engineers' paradise.

A Chemical Engineer

Enrolling in Villanova in September 1939, Art chose chemical engineering as his course of study. Finding the going rather rough, Art had to give most of his time to studies, to the detriment of his athletic career, although he managed to find time to participate in a few intramural games.

As a "Frosh," Art joined the engineers' fraternity, Phi Kappa Pi, and has been an active member ever since, taking part in the organization of the social events the brothers of P. K. P. planned.

In line with his studies, Art devoted part of his time to the American Society of Chemical Engineers and through active participation was elected vice president of that society last year by fellow chem engineers. The Sanctury Society also claims his membership.

Excels in P. T. Course

On many of our numerous journeys to Shibe Park to see the Wildcats engage the opposition in their brand of football, among other things, we noticed Art leading the 'Cat rooters in cheering the team on to victory. Art became a cheer leader in his sophomore year and intends to make it three years active duty come this season.

Despite spending a large part of his time in classes and labs, Art has always kept in the best of physical shape here at Villanova. As proof of this, Art's name is most always displayed on the Field House bulletin board for being one of the leaders of the time records set on the obstacle course of the War Conditioning Program.

Rita's the One

There is a definite lack of news of an informative nature in the case of Art Smith and the opposite sex, at least as far as Art himself was concerned. However, through unofficial sources believed to be reliable, we hear that Art is currently interested in a certain brunette by the name of Rita. Rita, as we gather, lives in Malvern, and attends Chestnut Hill College, where Art was seen quite frequently last semester. It is believed that Art will resume his visits to Chestnut Hill as soon as classes start there.

Armed Service Next

Art's hobby is fishing and photography. In the summers prior to the accelerated program, Art spent most of his time fishing and enjoying nature in general (which includes human). He has a rather large amount of photographic equipment in his home, including various developers, enlargers and cameras.

As to the future, Art does not intend to go immediately into the engineering field, as the United States has a little matter to settle with Hirohito, et al. When he will be graduated in January, Art expects to go into the armed services.

Group Discusses Blood Structure

Last Thursday evening, John Cremens, senior science student, addressed the Research Seminar on blood and its components. The description, use, and development of each component, the primary divisions of blood, and the relation of blood to connective tissues, constituted the body of this discussion.

The group learned that the primary divisions of the blood are the formed elements and the plasma. Cremens outlined the histological components of all the formed elements, where they are found, and the chemical composition of the plasma. A description of the abnormal and the normal blood cells was also given and a comparison was made between them. Cremens next described the appearance of the blood cells in a blood smear. In order to see these blood cells Wright's stain must be used.

After having thus explained what the blood is, he proceeded to disclose its functions in general and the function of each component part. Those blood functions particularly stressed were its carrying of oxygen, its carrying of hormones and waste matter, the protection it serves against disease, and the task of the phagocytic cells within it.

Following this there was a comparison of the blood cells and the intracellular material of the blood to the cells of the connective tissue and its intracellular material.

Cremens brought his talk to a close with a discussion of the histogenesis of blood in both theories of development, which are the monophyletic and the diophylectic views.

twenty-five years of the college's history.

The second division will be devoted to a brief history of the development of the faculty. It will begin with an introduction of the present faculty followed with highlights on famous professors of the past.

History of Four Schools

The history of the four schools, arts, commerce, science, and engineering, together with the chief contributors during their many years of service will make up the third section. The student body, including individual photographs of the graduates and group pictures of both graduates and underclassmen, will be the subject of the fourth division.

Under the fifth general heading of social functions will appear many of the great social events of the century of history together with recent events. Also included will be the history and work of the various college clubs and fraternities.

The final section of the annual will be devoted to the history of sports at Villanova. The four major sports, football, baseball, basketball and track, together with the minor sports, tennis, golf, and swimming, will fill a major portion of this section. Intramural athletics, their history and development, will also be included in this section.

Although no formal appointments have been made to chief editor position, the present staff has already begun work. Assignments were given out to the various students two weeks ago and progress has been made already. The need for cooperation from the student body in both individual and group pictures was stressed. The yearbook staff, operating under strained conditions and new plans, has asked for this cooperation in order that the 1943 edition may equal and surpass, as the Centennial Edition, the previous issues which have been rated by national associations as among the best of the nation's colleges and universities.

Cardinal Here For Mass Sunday

HIS EMINENCE DENNIS CARDINAL DOUGHERTY

Pontifical Ceremony To Inaugurate Official Centennial Celebration

Official opening of the 100th Anniversary Celebration of the founding of Villanova College will be commemorated by a Solemn Pontifical Mass of Thanksgiving on Sunday, Sept. 20, in the college Field House.

His Eminence, Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, Archbishop of Philadelphia, will be celebrant, while the Most Rev. Gerald P. O'Hara, Bishop of Savannah, will deliver the sermon.

Several members of the Hierarchy and a large number of priests and religious have indicated their intention to be present. Among the priests who will serve in official capacities at the Mass are: Very Rev. Joseph A. Hickey, O. S. A., D. D. and Very Rev. John T. Sheehan, O. S. A., D. D., as the Deacons of Honor; and Rt. Rev. Msgr. J. Carroll McCormick, Chancellor of the Philadelphia Diocese, as the Assistant Priest. Very Rev. Henry A. Caffrey, O. S. A., will be the Deacon, and Very Rev. James A. Griffin, O. S. A. will serve as Subdeacon.

Rev. James M. Corr, Master of Ceremonies, will be assisted by Rev. Cletus Benjamin, and Rev. John E. Bresnehan, O. S. A.

Gym Decorated

Decorations of the Field House Stage for the ceremony have almost been completed, it was announced last Friday by the Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A., and Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O. S. A., who are in charge of these plans.

The emphasis of the decorations has been placed on simplicity, they said. Construction of the altar, throne, and speaker's table is completed; all are furnished in cardinal red in honor of Cardinal Dougherty. The blue backdrop provides a striking contrast to cardinal red and adds to the simplicity of the setting. Indirect lamps hidden behind the canopy will light the altar.

Stand for Clergy

A visiting clergy stand, erected in front of the stage, is finished in maroon to tone neutrally with the altar and backdrop. Blue and white festooning is being put along the rails of the gym stands. Ceiling girders are to be draped with American flags and Villanova banners. At the back of the Field House, a large drape with the newly-adopted school coat-of-arms is to be displayed.

Arrangements for seating about 4000 guests have also been completed. In the event that an overflow should occur, another Mass will be celebrated on the East lawn of the Field House and the sermon will be carried to the outdoors by amplifiers.

First in Pennsylvania

Villanova College was the first Catholic college founded in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. It traces its lineage back directly to the colonial foundation at Old St. Augustine's Church in Philadelphia, where the Augustinian Fathers had established their first church and convent after their arrival in this country in 1784.

It stems also from St. Augustine's Academy, opened in 1811, the first educational venture of the Augustinians in the United States and the first Catholic High School in Philadelphia.

Almost a half century after the first foundation of the Augustinians in Philadelphia, Villanova College actually came into being. On January 5, 1842, the Fathers of St. Augustine purchased a two-hundred acre tract of land and buildings which made up "Belle Air," the former country estate of John Rudolph.

Rapid Growth Noted

The new college was placed under the patronage of St. Thomas of Villanova, a learned Augustinian educator of Spain who died while Bishop of Valencia, in 1555. The institution and its surrounding countryside soon became known by its present name—Villanova.

Bell And Cruet Table To Be Used Sunday Date To Colonial Times

An interesting feature of the Centennial Mass on Sunday will be the use of two historic relics of the past: a bell and cruet table, both having played important roles throughout Villanova's one hundred years.

Dating from colonial times, the bell was among those that tolled the message of liberty to the people of Philadelphia on July 4, 1776. It was then hanging in the tower of the Strato-House from which it was removed when steeple began to decay. It was then placed in an open belfry to toll the hours and to sound the alarm for fires.

When the city became interested in the restoration of the Strato-House steeple, a new bell was cast and the old "Liberty Bell" was sold to the Roman Catholic Church of St. Augustine for $650. It remained there for 14 years—until May of 1844—when the Know Nothing riots caused many Philadelphia churches to be despoiled, and St. Augustine's to be burned—including this bell from the shrine of liberty.

Bell Recast

Thereafter, the metal was sent to J. Bernard of Philadelphia and was recast in 1847. It was subsequently sent to Villanova College where it served as the "Old College Bell" for more than 50 years. When the present buildings were erected, the bell became antiquated and was retired. But after a new church was opened by Augustinian Fathers in Jamaica, L. I., the bell was moved there to summon the faithful to Divine Services. As the congregation grew and the parish developed, a new bell was ordered and the old retired once again.

With the Centennial Celebration approaching, the historic bell was returned to Villanova and will be sounded during the Mass of Thanksgiving for the One Hundredth Anniversary of Villanova College. After the Mass the bell will follow the same path of its predecessor, the "Liberty Bell," into emeritus retirement on the campus of Villanova.

Table Dates to 1774

The other relic that will be used at the Mass and which is of unusual interest is an ancient cruet table dating back to 1774. It was constructed by Robert Carson, the grandfather of Mrs. Mary Jane Rudolph whose Belle Air Mansion was the original site of present day St. Mary's Hall. It is constructed with wooden pegs rather than nails and is just as sound as the day it was built.

It has been used from time to time — whenever the priests from old St. Augustine's came out to Villanova to say Mass. It will be used at the Centennial Mass as a Credence Table.

Centennial Mass Data

President States Registration Days

Students May Complete Arrangements on Wednesday, Thursday, Before Vacation

Students currently enrolled at the college will be enabled to complete their registration for the coming fall term on Wednesday and Thursday of this week, it was announced last week by Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college.

Those who register at this time will not be required to return on the regular registration day in October but may wait until Tuesday evening, Oct. 6, to be ready for classes on Oct. 7.

In order to take advantage of this early registration for the Fall term students must first report to the Business Office to settle all financial accounts with the college and to obtain their matriculation cards.

Complete Registration

Students now paying their tuition semi-annually will be expected to settle for the balance owed on the bills rendered to them in June. Those paying on the deferred payment basis will be expected to make the October payment. Those paying on the annual basis must visit the Business Office to receive a matriculation card.

Resident students are also required to complete all room arrangements in the Office of the Dean of Men. A complete schedule of classes for the Fall term must be filed at the Registrar's Office by each student.

In the event that a student should be inducted under Selective Service before returning for the second term full refund will be granted under the regular college policy.

In the case of students who may be called under Selective Service after the beginning of the term, pro rata refunds will be granted as determined by the Business Office.

Young Appointed Editor-In-Chief; New Staff Named

McWilliams, O'Connor, Binder, and Peters to Assist Junior Commerce Student; Senior Editors Return

Robert F. Young, junior commerce student, has been appointed Editor-in-Chief of the VILLANOVAN for the coming scholastic year, it was announced today by Rev. Edward B. McKee, O. S. A., moderator of the publication.

Seniors Return

Also resuming duties on the new staff are those who held editorial positions last year but did not attend the summer semester. The latter include Jacques E. Mauch, senior artsman, who will return as Sports Editor; Raymond G. Amicone, senior engineer, as Photography Editor; and Thomas C. Muraski, senior engineer, Literary Editor.

ROBERT F. YOUNG

The new Editor-in-Chief served on the staff since his freshman year and was appointed College Editor last year. He is also an active member of the Beta Gamma Debating Society, the Spanish Club and Delta Pi Epsilon, commerce fraternity. Also an honor student, Young was awarded a tuition schol-

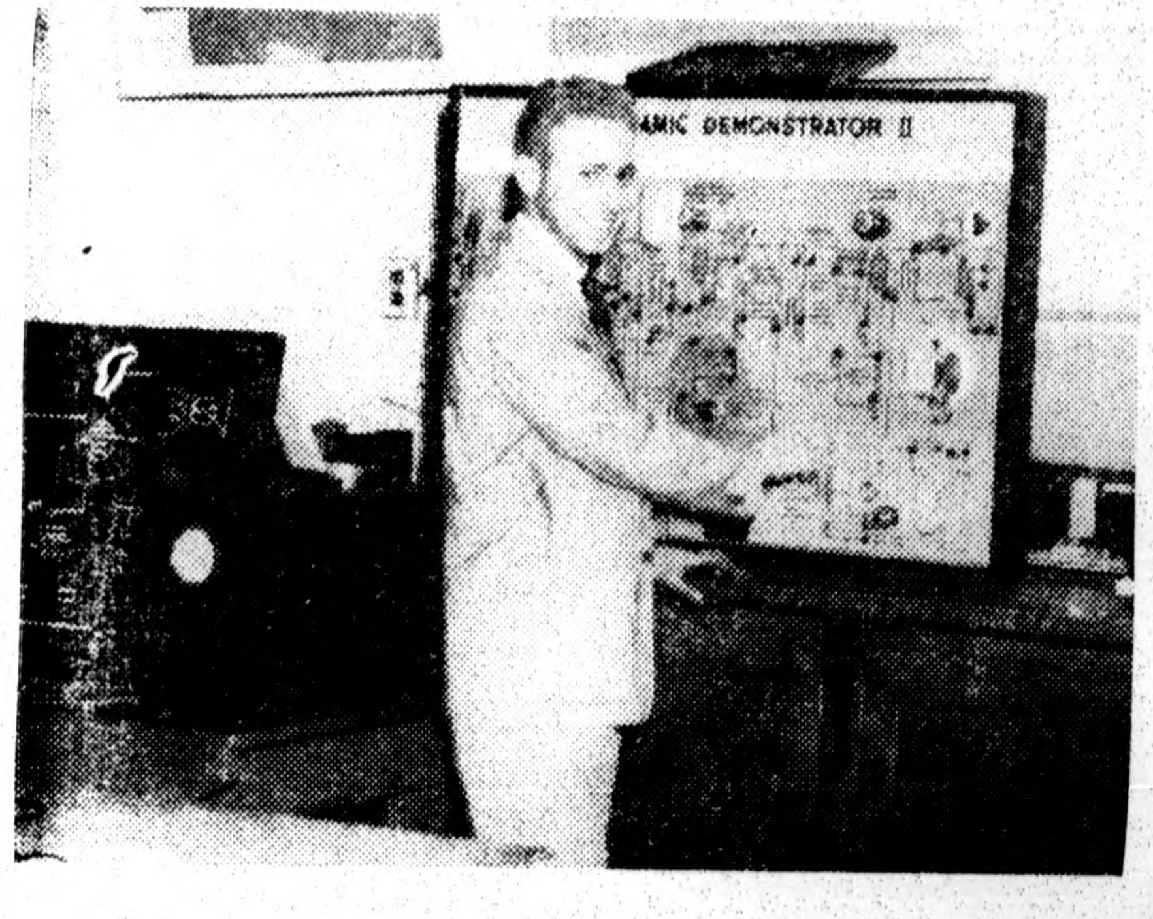
Meet The Boys:

Art Smith Excells In P. T. Class As Well As In The Engineering Lab

By HARRY BINDER

JOURNEYING to room 109 in Fedigan Hall last week, we found ourselves in the presence of Art Smith, our senior under the miscroscope this week. Art was preparing for an afternoon session with "Clipper" and in between the hurly-burly and commotion of four engineers in one room, we managed to uncover a few facts about Mr. Smith.

Art was born 14th day of January in 1919 at Patterson, N. J. Spending his early years there, he later took up his abode in Rutherford, N. J., which happens to be his home residence at present. His grammar school days took him to Maryland, where he attended Tome Preparatory School. After leaving Tome he started his secondary schooling at Rutherford High School. While he was there, Art excelled as an outstanding athlete, participating in football, track, and several other sports.



. . . Art Smith in engineers' paradise.

A Chemical Engineer

Enrolling in Villanova in September 1939, Art chose chemical engineering as his course of study. Finding the going rather rough, Art had to give most of his time to studies, to the detriment of his athletic career, although he managed to find time to participate in a few intramural games.

As a "Frosh," Art joined the engineers' fraternity, Phi Kappa Pi, and has been an active member ever since, taking part in the organization of the social events the brothers of P. K. P. planned.

In line with his studies, Art devoted part of his time to the American Society of Chemical Engineers and through active participation was elected vice president of that society last year by fellow chem engineers. The Sanctury Society also claims his membership.

Excels in P. T. Course

On many of our numerous journeys to Shibe Park to see the Wildcats engage the opposition in their brand of football, among other things, we noticed Art leading the 'Cat rooters in cheering the team on to victory. Art became a cheer leader in his sophomore year and intends to make it three years active duty come this season.

Despite spending a large part of his time in classes and labs, Art has always kept in the best of physical shape here at Villanova. As proof of this, Art's name is most always displayed on the Field House bulletin board for being one of the leaders of the time records set on the obstacle course of the War Conditioning Program.

Rita's the One

There is a definite lack of news of an informative nature in the case of Art Smith and the opposite sex, at least as far as Art himself was concerned. However, through unofficial sources believed to be reliable, we hear that Art is currently interested in a certain brunette by the name of Rita. Rita, as we gather, lives in Malvern, and attends Chestnut Hill College, where Art was seen quite frequently last semester. It is believed that Art will resume his visits to Chestnut Hill as soon as classes start there.

Armed Service Next

Art's hobby is fishing and photography. In the summers prior to the accelerated program, Art spent most of his time fishing and enjoying nature in general (which includes human). He has a rather large amount of photographic equipment in his home, including various developers, enlargers and cameras.

As to the future, Art does not intend to go immediately into the engineering field, as the United States has a little matter to settle with Hirohito, et al. When he will be graduated in January, Art expects to go into the armed services.

Group Discusses Blood Structure

Last Thursday evening, John Clemens, senior science student, addressed the Research Seminar on blood and its components. The description, use, and development of each component, the primary divisions of blood, and the relation of blood to connective tissues, constituted the body of this discussion.

The group learned that the primary divisions of the blood are the formed elements and the plasma. Clemens outlined the histological components of all the formed elements, where they are found, and the chemical composition of the plasma. A description of the abnormal and the normal blood cells was also given and a comparison was made between them. Clemens next described the appearance of the blood cells in a blood smear. In order to see these blood cells Wright's stain must be used.

After having thus explained what the blood is, he proceeded to disclose its functions in general and the function of each component part. Those blood functions particularly stressed were its carrying of oxygen, its carrying of hormones and waste matter, the protection it serves against disease, and the task of the phagocytic cells within it.

Following this there was a comparison of the blood cells and the intercellular material of the blood to the cells of the connective tissue and its intracellular material.

Clemens brought his talk to a close with a discussion of the histogenesis of blood in both theories of development, which are the monophyletic and the diaphyletic views.

Bell And Cruet Table To Be Used Sunday Date To Colonial Times

An interesting feature of the Centennial Mass on Sunday will be the use of two historic relics of the past: a bell and cruet table, both having played important roles throughout Villanova's one hundred years.

Dating from colonial times, the bell was among those that tolled the message of liberty to the people of Philadelphia on July 4, 1776. It was then hanging in the tower of the Strato-House from which it was removed when steeple began to decay. It was then placed in an open belfry to toll the hours and to sound the alarm for fires.

When the city became interested in the restoration of the Strato-House steeple, a new bell was cast and the old "Liberty Bell" was sold to the Roman Catholic Church of St. Augustine for $650. It remained there for 14 years—until May of 1844—when the Know Nothing riots caused many Philadelphia churches to be despoiled, and St. Augustine's to be burned—including this bell from the shrine of liberty.

Bell Recast

Thereafter, the metal was sent to J. Bernard of Philadelphia and was recast in 1847. It was subsequently sent to Villanova College where it served as the "Old College Bell" for more than 50 years. When the present buildings were erected, the bell became antiquated and was retired. But after a new church was opened by Augustinian Fathers in Jamaica, L. I., the bell was moved there to summon the faithful to Divine Services. As the congregation grew and the parish developed, a new bell was ordered and the old retired once again.

With the Centennial Celebration approaching, the historic bell was returned to Villanova and will be sounded during the Mass of Thanksgiving for the One Hundredth Anniversary of Villanova College. After the Mass the bell will follow the same path of its predecessor, the "Liberty Bell," into emeritus retirement on the campus of Villanova.

Table Dates to 1774

The other relic that will be used at the Mass and which is of unusual interest is an ancient cruet table dating back to 1774. It was constructed by Robert Carson, the grandfather of Mrs. Mary Jane Rudolph whose Belle Air Mansion was the original site of present day St. Mary's Hall. It is constructed with wooden pegs rather than nails and is just as sound as the day it was built.

It has been used from time to time — whenever the priests from old St. Augustine's came out to Villanova to say Mass. It will be used at the Centennial Mass as a Credence Table.

President States Registration Days

Students May Complete Arrangements on Wednesday, Thursday, Before Vacation

Students currently enrolled at the college will be enabled to complete their registration for the coming fall term on Wednesday and Thursday of this week, it was announced last week by Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college.

Those who register at this time will not be required to return on the regular registration day in October but may wait until Tuesday evening, Oct. 6, to be ready for classes on Oct. 7.

In order to take advantage of this early registration for the Fall term students must first report to the Business Office to settle all financial accounts with the college and to obtain their matriculation cards.

Complete Registration

Students now paying their tuition semi-annually will be expected to settle for the balance owed on the bills rendered to them in June. Those paying on the deferred payment basis will be expected to make the October payment. Those paying on the annual basis must visit the Business Office to receive a matriculation card.

Resident students are also required to complete all room arrangements in the Office of the Dean of Men. A complete schedule of classes for the Fall term must be filed at the Registrar's Office by each student.

In the event that a student should be inducted under Selective Service before returning for the second term full refund will be granted under the regular college policy.

In the case of students who may be called under Selective Service after the beginning of the term, pro rata refunds will be granted as determined by the Business Office.

Our Proudest Boast

LIKE too many other phrases in the English language, the words "Anniversary Celebration" have lost their original significance in the minds of many of us. Hardly a day passes that we do not hear of an anniversary being celebrated for anything from a cut-rate drug store to a bargain basement.

And then along comes an occasion like September 20, and we are once more reminded of the solemn significance which the words "Anniversary Celebration" were intended to convey. For on this day, Villanova College marks the beginning of its hundredth year as an institution for the higher education of Catholic young men.

Flexibility has been the keynote of Villanova's progress. Since its first class of ten men, Villanova has survived the merciless strain of three wars, economic depressions, and godless philosophies until today she stands unshaken, ready to graduate a Centennial Class of 300 men.

From the modest beginnings of an Arts School housed in a single building, Villanova has grown to an institution of twelve major units comprising, in addition to Arts, Schools of Engineering, of Science, and of Commerce.

And now on the very eve of her first Centenary, she is confronted with what may be the most severe emergency she has yet been forced to weather. For the second time within the short space of twenty-five years, Villanova is again engulfed in the everwidening whirlpools of another World War. But, true to her characteristic flexibility, the college has accepted the challenge, and has already revised and expanded her educational facilities to meet the new demands.

In adjusting herself to the cyclic upheavals which have marked the doubtful progress of the last hundred years, however, one fact stands out in her proud history—a fact that we as her present students, are justly proud.

For no matter how perplexing the problem, nor how serious the emergency which Villanova has ever been called upon to solve, never once has she swerved from those sound Christian principles laid down over a thousand years ago by Saint Augustine, founder of the Augustinian Order, whose priests have guided her and her students through each and all of her problems.

In the realm of education, to which the Augustinian Fathers have been dedicated since their founding, there stands out a vital principle which our so-called modern civilization has seen fit to abandon. This principle holds that the process of education is three-fold: physical, mental, and moral. It is the last of the three which has suffered the most from the present day theories of agnosticism and philosophies of materialism.

While the so-called "progressive" educators of today have followed us in placing a high degree of emphasis on the physical and mental aspects, they have grossly erred in minimizing to an even greater degree the need of moral training.

We are proud that Villanova has emphasized all three, while minimizing none, in the belief that each is but part of an integral whole.

During the few months set aside for this Anniversary let us not turn to honor Villanova's modern buildings, nor the well-equipped laboratories, nor the spacious campus. Though these too merit a degree of admiration, they are after all, but material things, the mere externals of Villanova.

But rather shall we probe into the very heart and soul of Villanova in a sincere effort to discover and show our appreciation for the true essence of all that is and ever will be Villanova—the teacher-priests of the Augustinian Order.

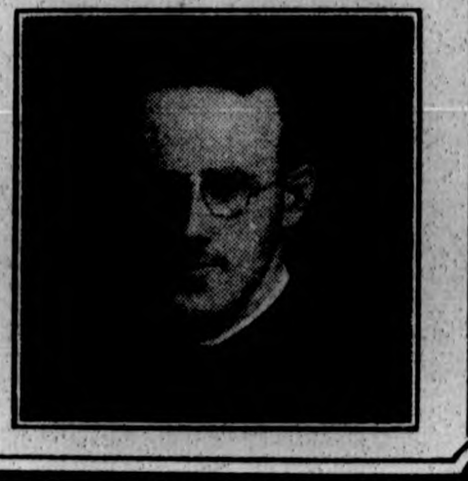
Centenary Mass Ceremonies Explained

By FR. BRESNAHAN



THE Mass with which Villanova will formally begin to celebrate its centenary year is going to be a solemn Votive Mass offered to the honor of the Holy Ghost in thanksgiving for the blessings which Villanova has enjoyed throughout the past century. The Cardinal Archbishop of our Philadelphia archdiocese is going to celebrate the Mass, and it therefore will be what is called a Solemn Pontifical Mass.

Solemn Pontifical Masses are not of such frequent occurrence that the details or even the general plan of their ritual is well known to the general laity. The following account should for that reason prove instructive to many readers of the VILLANOVAN who plan to attend this Mass.

Resembles Low Mass

As a basis of understanding, one would do well to remember that the somewhat elaborate spectacle which will be witnessed on Sunday, September 20, is only a more articulate utterance of the same sacrificial prayer which is offered to God in the ordinary Low Mass of every Sunday of the year. In the course of the centenary Mass, the choir in its turn, and the Deacon and Subdeacon in theirs, will sing aloud parts that would only be voiced in a reading tone by the priest celebrating a Low Mass; but the Cardinal himself will read those parts as they would be read in the Low Mass and will sit waiting for one or ones singing to come to an end, in order that the Mass may proceed from that point on in its usual sequence.

Any person who knows the ritnual of a Low Mass ordinarily well, therefore, will be able to see the usual continuity of the Mass in what would otherwise seem to them a rather disjointed series of actions.

Difference Noted

An even greater appreciation of the Pontifical Mass, however, is possible to a person who is fairly familiar with a "Solemn" High Mass. This type of Mass is common enough on more solemn occasions where there are available the three priests needed to fill the offices of Celebrant, Deacon and Subdeacon of the Mass.

In this kind of Mass, there are the incensations which occur in the Pontifical Mass, the Deacon and Subdeacon also sing the Gospel and Epistle aloud, and the chalice is on the altar only from the time the Subdeacon brings it at the Offertory of the Mass up to the Communion, when he again carries it away.

The one big note of difference between the Solemn High and the Solemn Pontifical Mass is the fact that in the latter the whole first half of the Mass takes place, not at the altar, but at the Bishop's, or Archbishop's, throne, which stands off to the Gospel side of sanctuary.

Wears Red Robes

On September 20, the Cardinal will be wearing his red robes in the procession which will proceed from the sacristy to the sanctuary for the beginning of the Mass. On arriving in the sanctuary, he will proceed to the throne and there be divested of his red processional cape (cappa magna) and will be clothed in the vestments of the Mass, which will be brought to him from the altar by a number of servers.

When vested, he will approach the altar, stand at the foot of the steps for the prayers usually said in that position at the beginning of Mass, and will then ascend the steps to incense the altar. When the incensing is finished, he returns to the throne and there remains throughout the process of the Mass up to the end of the singing of the Credo by the choir. He then goes to the altar for the rest of the Mass, which is easily recognizable from comparison with the procedure of Low Mass.

Vestments Described

A Bishop or Archbishop has some vestments peculiar to his office: these are called his pontificals. But, more than otherwise, his vestments are those of any priest saying Mass. The most striking difference is the wearing, by the Pontifical celebrant, of all three outer garments that worn separately by each of the participants — Celebrant, Deacon, and Subdeacon—of the ordinary Solemn High Mass.

The ones worn by the Bishop or Archbishop are, of course, made of a much lighter cloth so as not to cause discomfort. The reason for wearing all three is to symbolize the fulness of priestly office possessed by the Bishop or Archbishop.

Mitre and Crosier

Of the other pontificals, the mitre (head-dress) and crosier (staff) are more in evidence, and signify, respectively, dignity and power. The mitre is worn when the Bishop or Archbishop is not actually engaged in prayer. It is a cloth-of-gold mitre when he is stationary and a white one with filigree adornment when he is in transit or about to be.

The crosier is borne in transit or when the Pontifical celebrant is standing at attention or giving a blessing. An Archbishop has his own special Cross, and he bows to this rather than to the Cross of the Altar when giving a blessing to the people.

Another notable difference of the Pontifical Mass will be the number of washings of the Celebrant's hands. There are four washings in all, and all are symbolic of purity as desirable in the one undertaking to offer the Holy Sacrifice.

ONCE again I'm at the keys of my weary typewriter, but this time with a feeling of gloominess and remorse, as the school term is coming to a close. It's almost like the feeling that one has when he loses his best friend. After today I will have lost my job of writing this column, for this is the last issue. And as the New York taxi driver says: "It's not my work I like so much that makes it interesting, it's the people I run into." I can also honestly say this for myself; for if college life here at Villanova has taught us anything, it certainly has taught us that the association with our fellow students together with the friendships we have gained in college are worth as much as all the textbooks we have read.

MELLERDRAMMA:

Two faces were close together; the man's, grim, and tense; the other face was small and white, with two slender hands pressed against it. It was those frail hands that riveted the man's horrified gaze. "Heavens," he moaned, still staring, and in his voice was hopeless, stark tragedy. For that other face was the face of his watch, and those little hands told him he had missed the last train home.

We have here from the Northeastern "News," a tale of what happened when a former college staff writer got a job on a prominent New York paper. (Please refrain from underrating our own staff writers, without considering the editor.)

The editor took the reporter aside for a few words of advice on his first assignment.

"Never write anything as a fact unless you are absolutely sure about it," said the editor. "If you do you'll get the paper in wrong. If you're not sure of an item being a fact, say 'it was alleged,' and make ample use of words like 'claimed, reputed, rumored'."

Came the first assignment, and came the story:

"It is rumored that a tea party was given yesterday by a number of reputed ladies. Mrs. Jones, it was said, was hostess, and the guests, it was alleged, were society people, with the exception of Mrs. Smith, who says she is fresh from Wheeling. Mrs. Jones claims to be the wife of Mr. Joseph Jones, who is rumored to be the President of an alleged bank."

CAN'T HAPPEN HERE!

Prof: "Mr. Higler, what is meant by the honor system?"

Higler: "Its an educational custom, whereby the professors have the honor, and the students have the system."

In the "Columns of Fairmount State Teacher's College, they give forth some very clever literature:

You try to be clever and what do you get.
You're marked down forever as strictly all wet.
You try to be witty, and what's the reward?
A few laughs of pity in some minor chord.
You try to be humorous and strive as you may,
The slams will be humorous and they'll all come your way.
The moral is clear. . .
If your life would be sunny don't try to be funny.

SELF-DEFENSE:

Little boy: "Say, Dad, why do the umpires keep walking back and forth?"

Dad: "It's harder to hit them with pop bottles when they're moving."

SWAN SONG:

And in the words of Shakespeare . . ."Parting is such sweet sorrow." So the time has come when we must bid you farewell. To those long-suffering souls who have read this column during the past year, here's looking forward to many more and better columns from our new Exchange editor and columnist, Harry J. Binder. Congratulations and best of luck, Harry.

Fedigan Wins Resident Intramural Championship In Playoff Last Week

Barry's Team, After Winning Second Half, Defeat Paruta's Aggregation in First Two Games of Scheduled Two Out of Three Series; Barry Hurls for Victors

Fedigan Hall, under the brilliant leadership of Joe Barry, won the Intramural softball title last Friday as they rallied behind the superb pitching of their captain to take three straight games from Alumni, the first half champions. Finishing second to the Greenies in the first semester of the season, the Gigoloes managed to get away to a good lead in the second half, only to let it slip away as the final stretch was reached and fall into a tie for first with Alumni.

With the last game of the schedule being played on Wednesday, the softball circuit was all tied up in typical National League fashion, with the two leaders booked to meet each other.

Barrymen Score First

Fedigan came out of the contest with flying colors, winning over the competent Alumni club, 9-6, thus copping the second half flag. Fedigan took the lead in the first frame by a two run margin as Paruta was greeted with three solid hits which, together with a walk, accounted for the double tally.

The peppy Greenies then back with two counters of their own in the second to knot it up at two all. Doc Coll, Alumni's steller backstop, singled, advanced to third on Corcillo's double to right, and then scored ahead of his team mate on Yeager's safety.

The big bats of Fedigan began to talk again in the fourth when they pushed across three more runs. But again Alumni came back to even the score with three runs in the last of the sixth. In the first half of the seventh, Joe Silva singled to right, and then Ryan doubled, to place runners on second and third.

Bill Forebaugh then stepped into a fast ball, and drive it out over second for two bases, two more runs scoring on the play. Charley Labelle then hit two more runs in, to bring Fedigan's total up to nine. This put the game on ice for the Redmen, for even though Alumni did manage to score one in the last of the seventh, Joe Barry coolly struck the last batter out to win a very close game as well as a very tight pennant.

Fedigan Wins First

On Thursday night, the first game of the playoffs went to the Barrymen by the score of 6-4. Alumni started off with a bang, as lead-off man Bob Pepperess singled to right. Peps tried to go all the way home, but was caught at the plate by a perfect throw from Harry Fontanova, who played an exceptional game in right field. In the second frame, the Greenies went into a one run lead as Portali went to second on a passed ball after taking first via a walk. When Corcillo drove a liner past Szal at second the Alumni pitcher scampered home. Fedigan tied it up in their half of the third when Forebaugh secured his second hit of the game and Ryan pushed him around with a deep single to center.

The Paruta-men again made a bid for the victory in this see-saw battle as Pepperess poled a long home run to right field. But this was to no avail as Fedigan piled up a four run lead in the sixth. This was a slugfest stanza which saw every man come to bat.

The second game of the series, which proved to be the last saw Barry win out, 6-5 in a very hotly contested battle. Joe took the mound for the fourth time in as many days and yet he allowed only five hits. The first inning saw the Greenies jump away to a one run lead. Corcillo reached third on a walk and a single by Koval, and then came home on a wild throw to first by Forebaugh. In the third the Gigoloes took the lead away from Alumni when they scored three times.

Paruta, with his "never say die" spirit, personally tied the score at three all in the last of the fourth, as he singled Pepperess to third, stole second, and then both runners scored on Koval's third hit of the game.

In the sixth, Fedigan won the championship, when they scored three times. Joe Silva came through with a timely single with the bases loaded, to score two team-mates, and another run came in on a sacrifice to make the score 6-3. Alumni almost tied it up again as they managed to score twice in the last of the seventh, but could not get the tying run across.

Gavin Defeated In 'Mural Tennis

Quigley Turns Tables on Tournament Favorite in Semi-Final Match Played Last Week

Villanova's long drawn out Intramural Tennis tournament finally drew near its conclusion last week. Two matches still have to be played before a champion can be named, however, these contests taking place today and tomorrow, provided weather conditions are favorable. The first of these two contests will find Jim Daly, surprising freshman who is now in the semi-finals, pitted against Lou Carideo, another surprise, who has won his way into a semi-final bracket. The winner of this match will engage Tom Quigley, who defied all predictions last week, when he ousted Austin Gavin, seeded number one and favorite to win the tournament in a bitterly contested three-set match, 6-3, 3-6, 6-4.

New Favorite

Quigley's victory did not come as a great surprise to many of the followers of the competition up to this point, as his smashing play in earlier matches proved that he was at the top of his game, and would at least give Gavin a good match, with an excellent possibility of defeating him. Naturally after turning the tables on the tournament favorite, Quigley is now expected to come through with another victory in his final encounter. Both Carideo and Daly, however, are capable of giving him a good battle, and the final match may prove to be quite a bit closer than the general consensus of opinion would indicate.

Daly Defaults

Previous to his victory over Gavin in the semi-finals, Quigley had gained the right to meet the highly-touted Californian when Charley Labelle, his opponent in the quarterfinal round, defaulted the match as he was unable to play it before the deadline was reached. Labelle, Joe Daly defaulted to him for the in turn, had gained the right to oppose Quigley, when second-seeded same reason.

Gavin's opponent in the match preceding the contest with Quigley was sophomore Jim Bradley, whom he easily defeated 6-0, 6-2. Jim Daly reached the semi-final round as a result of his victory over classmate Jim Carbine by the scores of 6-3, 3-6, 7-5. Carideo won a spot in the other half of the bracket when he won by default from Hugh Wells. Wells, in a quarterfinal contest, had scored a minor upset when he defeated Bill McDonald in a three-set match, 7-5, 4-6, 6-3. McDonald was seeded third in the draw and was not expected to be put out of the competition at such an early date.

Chisick, Former Center, In Gilbert Island Raid

Andy Chisick, former center on the Villanova football eleven is now seeing action as a United States Marine. A native of Newark, N. J., where he played as centre on the Good Counsel High School eleven, he was recognized by friends last week as appearing in a group picture of Marines which had been snapped after the raid on the Gilbert Islands.

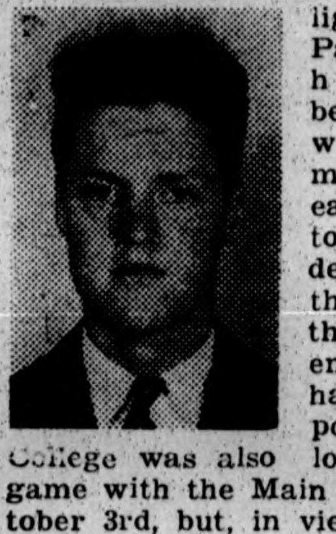
After graduating from Villanova, Chisick played for the Chicago Cardinals of the National Professional Football League for two seasons, after which he enlisted in the Marines. At college he gained wide reputation at the center position, and it came as not too great a surprise when he was signed by the Cardinals, as he had received four or five offers from other professional elevens.

Sportorial

By BILL WALSH
Sports Editor

IN this, the final issue of the VILLANOVAN during the summer semester, it is only fitting and proper that we should discuss football, in that the season, for most colleges, will be well under way by the time this publication again goes to press. Here at Villanova, the curtain is being raised much later than usual this year, as a result of the accelerated program. Formerly, practice sessions were begun immediately after Labor Day, and the football season was usually inaugurated on the first Friday night or Saturday afternoon in October. With classes being held until September 21st, however, September 22nd has been listed as the starting date for football practice this fall.

Florida First Opponent



October 16th has been set for the inaugural of the '42 season, when a determined Wildcat eleven will tackle the Florida 'Gators under lights at Shibe Park. A game had originally been scheduled with Fort Monmouth a week earlier, but due to some misunderstanding over the schedule of the Service eleven, this contest had to be postponed. Boston College was also looking for a game with the Main Liners on October 3rd, but, in view of the late date on which practice will start here at Villanova, Coach Clipper Smith had no alternative but to refuse the offer.

Pezelski, Sullivan in Reserves

At this time it appears as if many of last season's stalwart underclassmen will be in the starting lineup next month. Joe Pezelski and Bill Sullivan, roommates, and halfback and end respectively, will be rarin' to go next month, inasmuch as they have both enlisted in Reserve programs, and will therefore be permitted to complete their college educations before entering the Armed Forces. Joe chose the Marines, while Bill is in the Navy's V-7 program. These two men, as sophomores last year, showed great promise while seeing much action, and Clipper is looking for them to come through with flying colors this fall.

Postus Back

Good news was received last week, when it was announced that Al Postus, another star sophomore halfback of last season, would, in all probability, return to college this fall. Al dropped out of school last winter, and, although he did miss the practice workouts last spring, he will still be a great asset to a team whose number will be considerably less than that of the squad which represented Villanova on the gridiron last autumn. Al's roommate, Ziggie Zamlynski, another coming junior who saw a great deal of action last season, will also be on hand to resume his fullback duties next week. Also expected to appear for the initial drill next Tuesday are Tom Gildea, George Smith, Johnny Dzitko, Joe McCarthy, Mike O'Connor, Bill Lillienthal, Jim Narcum and numerous others.

While we don't have space enough here to mention all the candidates for the '42 squad, we have named a few who performed very notably last fall, and who appear certain of seeing more than their share of action during the coming campaign. However, this is not intended as a criterion of what the starting lineup will be, as only time and numerous practice sessions can unveil this important evidence.

—V—

While on the subject of football one cannot help but wonder as to what transportation difficulties will arise throughout the country this fall. The east will suffer most, of course, as gasoline rationing is in full swing all along the Atlantic coast. The west, however, which has not as yet felt the effects of the gas-rationing program will have only trains and busses to worry about for their transportation.

At a recent meeting attended by high football officials it was agreed that this year the games would have to be carried to the crowds, rather than to expect a large attendance at a contest held in some rural district. Hence, most of the more important '42 engagements will be held in large cities, where automobiles are not a necessity.

"Specials" To Be Abandoned

Due to the many demands on rail and bus facilities, colleges will also have to abandon chartered cars and busses and reduce their squads to fit limited space available in public carriers. Special trains obtained during the past few years by colleges and universities so that the student body might attend games in distant cities will also have to be abandoned.

And so, with this issue we sign off for a while, and hand the reins to Jacques Mauch, regular Sports Editor, who will return on October 7th to assume the post which he vacated during the summer months.

All-Star Softball Team Overwhelms Penn, 6-0

By JACK KOVAL

Making their debut in intercollegiate softball competition on Wednesday, September 2, the Villanova Intramural All-Stars succeeded in defeating a highly-touted University of Pennsylvania ten by the score of 6-0. Even though the Quakers defeated such teams as Temple, Swarthmore, Princeton, La Salle, and Haverford throughout the summer, they failed to exhibit any signs of a winning ball club in their engagement with the Blue and White, and were an easy prey for the Wildcats.

Mainly instrumental in the Wildcat victory were Joe Barry, Frenchy DeBlois, and Jim Carbine. Barry, assigned to take over the mound duties for the All Stars, was in rare form, and a constant thorn in the side of the Quakers. He allow but two hits, a double in the third inning, and a single in the fourth. From then on the pitched hitless ball and at all times had everything under control. DeBlois and Carbine performed brilliantly at the plate and were responsible for three of the six Wildcat runs.

Score Two in Second

The All-Stars went into an early lead in the second inning of the game, when, as a result of a single, double and triple, two runs were scored to give them a 2-0 advantage. Penn, on the other hand, found it hard to get its offensive started, and it wasn't until the third frame that the Quakers finally managed to get their initial hit of the contest. With one out at the time, Hale, tall lanky catcher for the Red and Blue, hit a double into right field. He failed to complete the circuit, however, as Barry retired the next two batters in short order on infield outs.

Kettl Replaces Halit

A letup in the Wildcat offensive occurred during the third and fourth innings as a result of good pitching on the part of Halit, starting hurler for the Penn squad. But he and his cohorts couldn't keep up this defensive pace, for the Wildcats garnered two more runs on the same number of hits in the fifth frame, and consequently made their lead more secure. At this stage of the game, the Penn coach, because of the extreme offensive spurts of the All Stars, made a replacement on the mound. This strategical move proved to be in vain however as the Wildcats immediately started to hit Kettl, the second Penn hurler.

Brinjac Hits Triple

Brinjac, first man to face Kettl, made a smashing triple. He was followed by DeBlois, Kempf and Carbine, all of whom made singles. The fruits of this seeming manslaughter turned out to be another pair of runs, thus boosting the Wildcat lead to 6-0.

Penn's second and last hit came in the fourth frame when shortstop File sent a sharp single into center. For the rest of the game, however, it was just a matter of no runs, no hits, and no errors for the unimpressive Penn aggregation.

Muses Gain 2nd Half Title Easily

Artsmen Finish With Three Game Lead; First Game of Playoff a Deadlock

By JOE CARBINE

It was rain that prevented the playing of the first week's games in the second half of the Dayhop Softball League—and it was rain that again prohibited the playing off of the finals last week.

The Hybrids, winners of the first half, and the Muses, second half champs, were scheduled to decide the issue in a best out of three series, but they were not able to take the field until Friday, thus limiting the series to one game. As luck would have it, the game ended in a 1-1 tie. Because of examinations this week, it will be difficult for the two teams to get together.

Muses Score First

Indicating the type of ball that was played is the fact that the game was a no-decision contest. Both teams were under terrific pressure throughout, for it was clear that one miscue would mean the game. The Muses drew first blood by scoring as soon as they came to bat. Lou DeSimone was safe on a close play at first after one out, he stole second and third, and then raced home after Joe Hagerty drove a deep fly to right field.

Martin Stars in Field

The Hybrids tried in vain to tie it up in their half, but even though they loaded the bases with none out, the Muses came up with some flashy fielding plays to cut off all of the potential runs. The gem play of this inning was third baseman Art Martin's leaping catch of Graziano's drive over the hot corner. The contest continued to rage hot and heavy, featured by the stellar pitching of the Hybrids' Tony DiLuigi, and the Muses' Lou DeSimone.

Finally, in the fourth inning, the Hybrids managed to get men on second and third—and Johnny Mezzanotte knocked a Texas Leaguer over second to bring Jake Edelken home with the tying run. Thus, the game stood at 1-1 when the bell sounded to end the contest.

League Great Success

The Muses and the Hybrids have been sharp rivals during the entire functioning of the softball league, and it was more or less expected that the two teams would meet in play-offs. The science men easily won the first leg, while the Muses improved tremendously during the second half to make it a runaway race. They faltered during the last week of the regular season, but they had enough strength to make the final spurt to the top spot.

Every team in the league played smart, heads-up ball, but it was the fate of the Actors and the Engineers to be lacking in material at many weak spots. It is to the credit ofevery team that the Dayhop League, organized for the first time in the history of the school, was a complete success. Much credit of every team that the Day-Edward B. McKee, O. S. A., and to Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O. S. A., who showed a continued active interest in the league's welfare.

Elliott Wins NAS Golf Tournament

James "Jumbo" Elliott, former track coach at Villanova, as well as star on the track and golf teams here during his collegiate career, won the Naval Air Service golf tournament at Corpus Christi, Texas, last week. Now a Lieutenant (j.g.) in the Naval Air Corps, Jumbo defeated Ensign Bill Stages, former end for the Texas Aggies, in the final round by a score of 4 up and 2 to play. Playing what was probably the best golf of his career he toured the Oslo Beach Golf and Country Club layout in 68, three strokes below regulation figures. His sub-par round consisted of four birdies and two eagles, the only times he went over par being when he three putted four greens.

"Jumbo" was also the medalist in this tourney, when, after being tied with Ensign Dick Wright at the end of the regular qualifying round, he shot a par 71 to Wright's 73 in the playoff.

Former Teammates Clash

In the New York Giants-Army All-Star game played at the Polo Grounds last Saturday afternoon, two former Villanova teammates appeared in opposing lineups. Corporal Nick Basca, '41, played at halfback for the Service eleven, while Paul Stenn, who graduated last May, saw action at the left tackle post for the Giants.

Meet The Boys:

Charlie Callahan, Demon Award Winner, Heads For Naval Career

By JACK DEERY

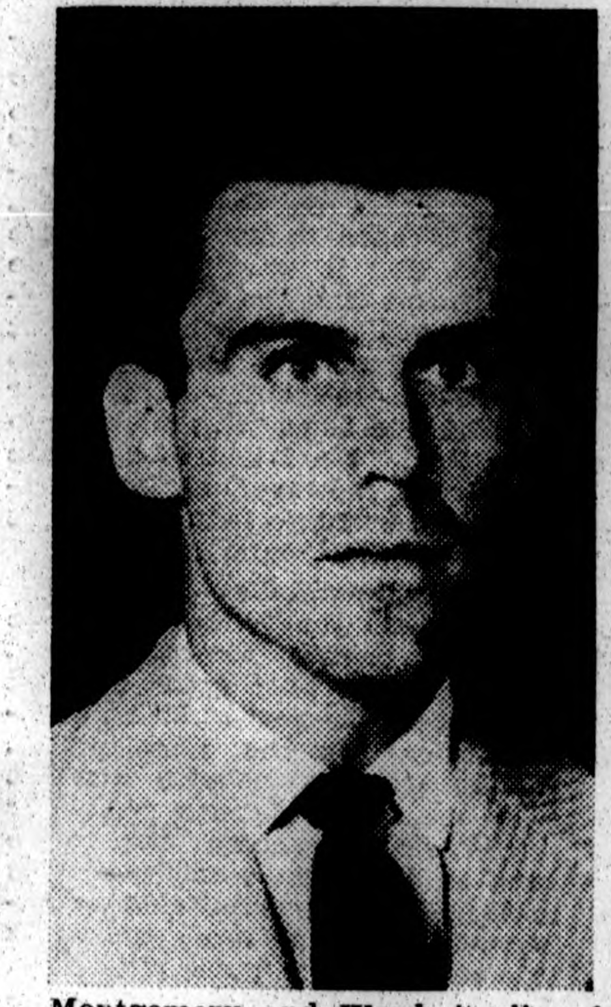
TO begin to introduce Charles Joseph Callahan would be to tell the life of a camper, a super Eagle scout, a trumpeter, and soon a deck officer. But let us assign ourselves to the classical method of introducing a celebrity — the chronological method.

C. J. was born in Schenectady, New York, in 1919. In 1932, Charlier became a Boy Scout. In 1934 he was made an Eagle Scout, an honor which demands 21 merit badges. He held the distinction of arriving at this title in record time. Before retiring from the Scouts he had compiled some 55 merit badges in various phases.

During these years in junior and senior high school, Charlie held many diverse jobs. He was waiter, butcher, A. & P. clerk, painter, and head of the stock and loading department of the Coca Cola plant in his home town.

Fate Steps In

He had no intention of entering college after graduating from St. Columba's Academy; however, an accident to his small finger changed the course of events. One day while loading a huge crate at Montgomery and Ward, it slipped and mangled that finger. Soon after, he spoke with a graduate of Villanova, who evidently persuaded him to come here. So he did, in the late summer of 1939. He entered as a commerce and finance student.



To relate his life here at Villanova is but to list all of the extra-curricular activities. To name a few: he obtained an NYA position, he was a member of the Delta Pi Epsilon, Sanctuary Society, Holy Name Society, freshman debating, the Band, the Choral Society, the Symphonic Band, the History Seminar, the Music Seminar, International Relations, the Book Club, the Belle Air, the VILLANOVAN and several others he could not recollect.

Cops Merit Awards

In his sophomore year, he participated in the greatest number of extra curricular activities. They numbered nine, two more than his nearest competitor. Perhaps his greatest achievement in these activities was his being elected vice-president of the Middle Atlantic Division of the Catholc Peace Federation. He was especially active in the position.

But for the intimate side of Charlie, the side the students know. His favorite hobby is camping, meaning that he is the outdoor type. During the peaceful summers, he would always spend considerable time in the woods of the Fulton Chain. He maintains his greatest achievement was the building of a complete folding camp trailer. This consists of a double bed and a canvas compartment 7 feet by 4 feet. It took several summers to complete at a cost of $40, This, according to Chuck, is 10% of its retail price.

His social life is directed to several cities. He has one in Philadelphia, New York, Boston, and Schenectady. One what? Why one girl of course. His room is a confine of their pictures. Several other objects decorate his and roommate Ed Cutbler's room. Several antique bottles which once might have held precious liquids rest peacably on an upper shelf.

But to write the final chapter. This January will end and begin two different styles of life for Charlie. He will leave Villanova as an Accounting Major and practically a Marketing Major. From the Belle Air estate, he will accompany the boys in blue to Notre Dame for a one month's training in his V-7 status. He will then train for two months at Northwestern and become an Ensign in the U. S. Navy.

News Briefs

Edward Seidenglanz, senior mechanical engineer, won the musical quiz held last Wednesday, Dr. E. L. Haenisch, moderator of the Music Seminar, announced today. Lawrence Belz, junior engineer, was second.

In the last music seminar for the summer, the winner recognised twenty-seven titles out of a possible thirty. The runner-up named twenty-six. Nine other students tied for third place at twenty-four.

To name the composition required a very diversified knowledge of music. Dr. Haenisch played fifteen compositions and the contestants were required to name them and their composers. Compositions from Porter's "Night and Day" to Seblius's "Findlandia" made the contest as comprehensive as possible.

To senior and junior students who have not had their pictures taken for the Belle Air, Photography Editor Robert Lind made the following announcement: "The remaining student pictures will be taken at the beginning of the fall term, probably the week of October 12. We are sorry that all could not be accommodated now , but we were rather pressed for time.

"Proofs will be returned as soon as possible for those who have been photographed."

Last Tuesday evening, Richard Yensel, a Junior science student, delivered a lecture entitled "Triumph Over Pain" to the final meeting of the Research Seminar for the current semester. His talk traced science's struggle to alleviate human suffering, from primitive man's first confused idea of pain up to modern man's decisive triumph over it through his use of anesthesia.

After explaining the nature of the pain and anesthesia, Yensel stated that early man's notion of pain was strongly flavored with superstition. This accounted for the popularity of the ancient witch doctor and the widespread belief in charms. The group learned that as man's idea of pain grew clearer he began making use of the healing herbs which nature had put at his disposal.

Ceremonies

They may be considered in groups of two: those two which precede and follow the donning or removing of the Cardinal's gloves, and the two administered immediately before and after the sacrificial part of the Mass. The pontifical gloves themselves symbolize: purity from sin, good works, and care of procedure.

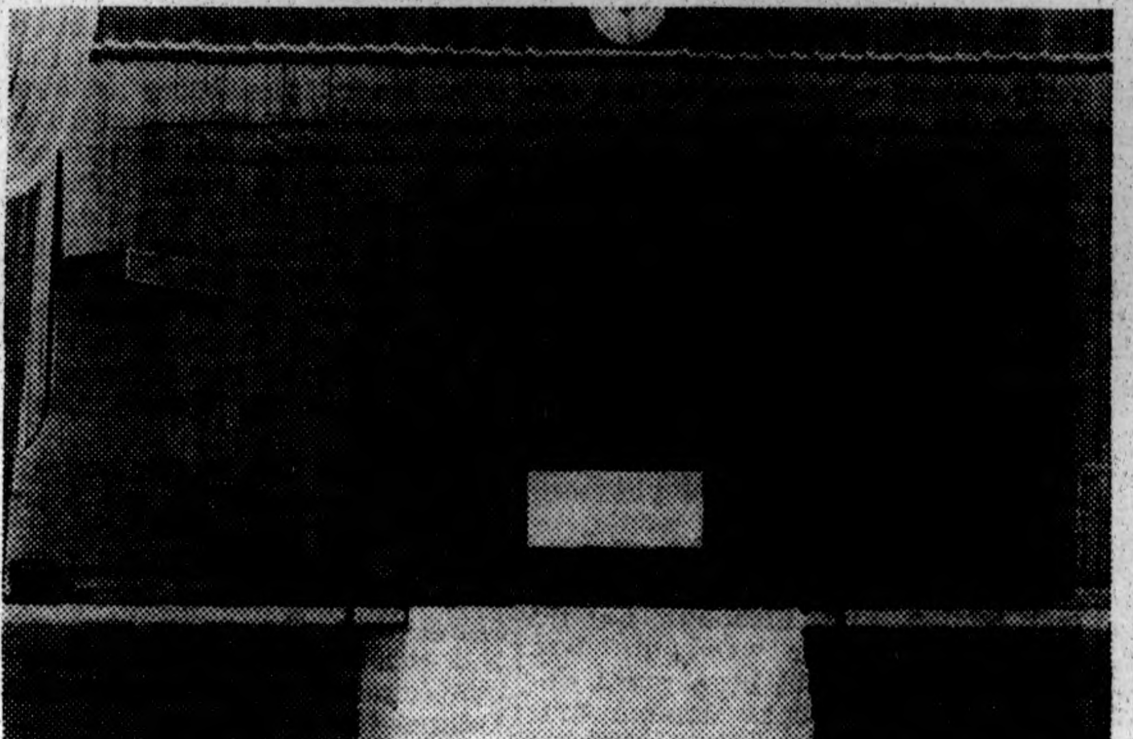
Lesser Functionaries

Before bringing this account to a close, it would be well to note those additional and less familiar functionaries who will administer directly to the Cardinal during the Mass. These are the two Deacons-of-Honor and the Assistant-Priest. The Deacons-of-Honor are in direct attendance on the Cardinal all during the part of the Mass which takes place at the throne, making the presence of the regular Deacon and Subdeacon of the Mass unnecessary there. But during the part of the Mass which takes place at the altar, the Deacons-of-Honor are in secondary position to the Deacon and Subdeacon of the Mass.

The Assistant-Priest is vested in a cope, a vestment known to all by reason of its use in the Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament. The main function of the Assistant-Priest is to be of help at the Book throughout the Mass.

There will be many servers active in the sanctuary, and these will be at the beck of the three priests acting as Masters-of-Ceremonies. Many Bishops, monsignori, priests and religious are expected to grace the occasion. Not the least in the color of regalia and in kindness of bestowing their presence will be some of the local laymen who have been knighted by the Pope. These will be in close attendance upon the Cardinal during the procession and by the throne in the sanctuary throughout the Mass.

Centennial Mass Offered Here



Pictured above is the specially constructed altar on the Field House stage on which His Eminence Dnnis Cardinal Dougherty will offer a Solemn Pontifical Mass of Thanksgiving on Sunday. The altar, throne, and speaker's stand were erected by college workmen under the direction of Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A., Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O. S. A., and John T. Dever, college controller. The huge Field House has been made immaculate for the event.

Receive Honors

This issue of the VILLANOVAN is the last for the present staff, and the new Editorial Board will assume their posts with the first issue of next semester on or about October 27.

The annual staff dinner, at which the new appointments are usually announced, will be held in January.

Efforts of the retiring staff of editors and writers were recently rewarded when the publication received an All-Catholic honor rating from the Catholic School Press Association. This is the highest honor offered in the survey. Out of a possible 3300 points the judges awarded the VILLANOVAN a score of 2790.

VILLANOVA COLLEGE

1842-1843 1942-1943

The One Hundredth Anniversary of the founding of Villanova College will be observed during the academic year 1942-1943. The present campus of Villanova College was acquired by the Order of St. Augustine under an agreement of sale dated October 13, 1841. The deed was legally recorded on January 10, 1842, and the year following, the new institution opened its doors to students. In grateful commemoration of this event which marks the foundation of the first Catholic institution of higher education in the area of the present great Archdiocese of Philadelphia and the first, likewise, in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, a Solemn Pontifical Mass will be celebrated at Villanova by His Eminence, Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, Archbishop of Philadelphia at 9:30 A. M. on Sunday, September 20, 1942. This observance will usher in our Centennial Year. It is our earnest hope that the Right Reverend Monsignori, the Very Reverend and Reverend Fathers and the Reverend Brothers and Sisters of the Archdiocese and all our friends and co-workers will join with us in returning thanks to God for the One Hundsed Years of service that have been permitted to Villanova College.

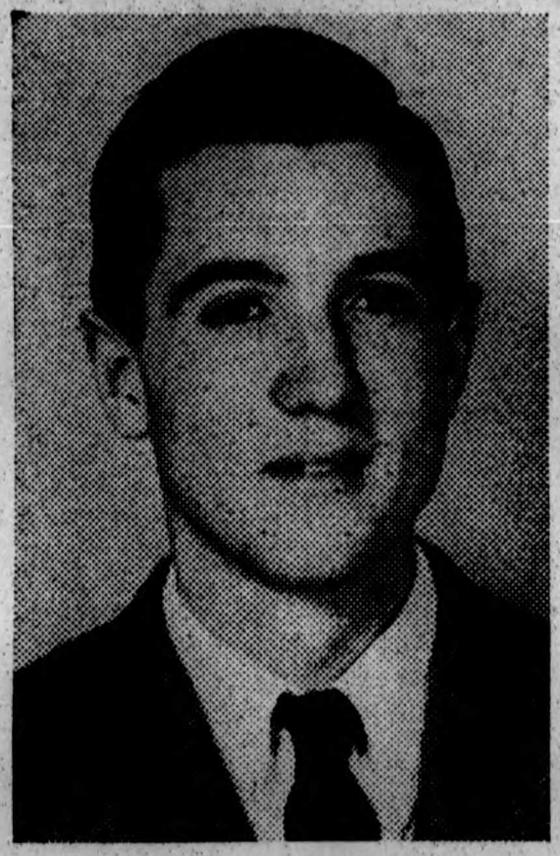
Social Calendar Curtailed By Accelerated Course; Sophomore Cotillion Date Set For Friday, Nov. 13

Student Council to Direct Social Activities as Annual Frat Dances and Dinners are Eliminated

Speaking before the members of the Student Council at a recent meeting, Rev. Francis X. N. McGuire, O. S. A., vice-president, announced, "We shall have to limit social activities this year at Villanova with respect to the abnormal circumstances and to the social necessities of the present campus life."

The activities that will be affected most by this rule will be those sponsored by the various fraternities. In place of the numerous fraternity dances there will be one combined inter-fraternity dance that, in all probability, will be held in the spring of the year.

Council President



JACQUES E. MAUCH

Whereas in other years each fraternity on the campus held smokers, initiations and dinners throughout the year, under the present plan all of these functions will, of necessity, be eliminated. Speaking of fraternity banquets, Fr. McGuire said, "It would be unpatriotice and uncharitable to place demands upon hotels and restaurants for service and food in such times."

A large formal prom is being planned for this winter. This affair will be held sometime before final examinations and graduation in February.

Under the present circumstances with the college under an accelerated program with three graduations a year, the class organizations would not be able to handle the various social and financial duties. For this reason the Student Council under its president, Jacques E. Mauch, senior artsman, and with its various members will be the guide to the social activities in the coming year.

Centennial Retreat Scheduled Nov. 2

Rev. Edwin T. Grimes, college chaplain, has announced that the Annual One Day Retreat will be held on All Souls Day, November 2, and will be given by Rev. Thomas E. Rogers of the Augustinian Mission Band.

Retreat exercises will begin for the resident students on Sunday evening, November 1, at 8:30 P. M., and will close with Mass and the Papal Blessing on Tuesday morning.

The students are urged to make use of this opportunity to promote their own spirituality.

The object of the Retreat, Fr. Grimes stated, "is to get to know oneself better. To do this effectively let us Stop! Look! and Listen! Stop the routine work to say a few extra prayers. Look not at others but into our own souls. Listen to what God has to say to us."

"This is the highest form of patriotism; to bring God's blessing on our Nation by leading good lives. To be a good Catholic is to be a good American."

Physical Training Plan To Continue For All Students

Alumni Hall Also To Be Used In Extended Program

During the summer semester,, college authorities inaugurated a physical training program designed to prepare students for service; to help them fulfill the requirements of reserve programs; and to keep them in condition to meet the demands made on them by the accelerated program of studies.

Such was the success of this program that it has been continued and greatly expanded in order to embrace all the students who returned for the current semester. This number is much greater than in the summer term.

Necessary arrangements for handling the increased number have already been made by Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O. S. A., moderator of the program. In order to accommodate all students it will be necessary that only freshmen and sophomores have their training at the Field House. Other classes will be held in the Gymnasium of Alumni Hall.

As before, calisthenics, followed by competitive games, will form the essence of the program. When weather conditions are favorable, the outdoors will be used according to the discretion of the instructors.

Fr. McQuade expressed the hope that all students will make use of the swimming pool, and added that plans are under way to provide swimming instruction for those who desire it.

The much-publicized obstacle course which played such a large part in the summer exercises has been moved from its present position to a place between the 150-lb. football field and the baseball field. This, too, will be used according to the discretion of the instructors.

Since the program has been designed for the benefit of the students, Fr. McQuade expects that no one will be absent from the class without properly being excused.

Increase Shown In Registration

This year's registration, as announced by Paetrus F. Banmiller, Registrar, shows an increase of 20 students over last year. In spite of abnormal conditions, 991 students are enrolled this year, as compared with the previous total of 971.

In first place is the Engineering School with a total of 375 students. The Commerce and Finance School ranks second showing an enrollment of 275. The Science School, and the Arts and Education School, have a total of 221 and 120, respectively.

Although the upperclasses lost a number of men to the services and war industries, the incoming Freshmen offset this drop by showing a gain of 26 over last year's group.

C. & F. Drops

One hundred and sixty-five freshmen have registered as Engineers. Eighty are enrolled in the Commerce and Finance School, and as in the total registration, the Science and Arts Schools hold third and fourth place with 76 and 30 students respectively.

Mr. Banmiller has not yet arranged the geographical distribution figures, but it is not expected to deviate much from last year's. Tabulations already show enrollments of the freshmen from California, Michigan and Oklahoma. The complete table which has been held up by the enrollment of unexpected freshmen will be published shortly.

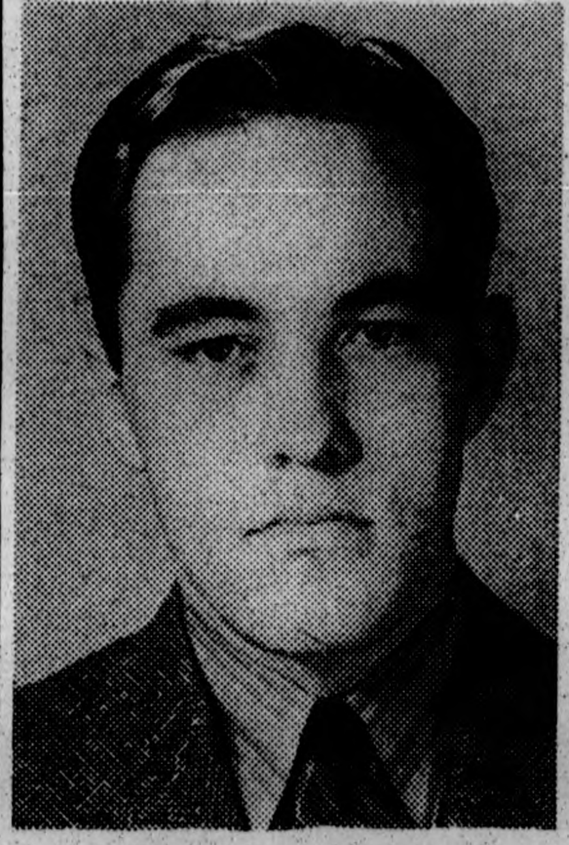
Quigley Chosen as Chairman of Soph Dance To Be Held in Field House

By BILL SWAN

The social year of Villanova will be ushered in this semester by the annual Sophomore Cotillion which is to be held on Friday evening, November 13, at the Field House.

Thomas J. Quigley, sophomore Arts student, has been appointed chairman of the dance. A consistent member of the honor roll, Quigley has also taken active part in the International Relations Club, the band, Glee club, and acts as sacristan for the Sanctuary Society.

Dance Chairman



THOMAS J. QUIGLEY

Because this is the only social event that the sophomore class sponsors, the Student Council has decided that it would be only fitting that the affair should be conducted by the group. Speaking for the Council, Jacques E. Mauch, the president, said, "Circumstances will permit this event to be handled by a class group. We feel, therefore, since this is the case, the sophomores should be allowed to conduct the cotillion."

The names of the various committeemen will be posted tomorrow on all bulletin boards together with an announcement pertaining to a general meeting of the students appointed, it was stated by Quigley.

Musim for the dance will be provided by the Villanovans and admission price has been set at $1.65, tax included.

Concerning the affair the chairman also said, "This is the only dance that will be held at Villanova before the Christmas holidays; thus, with the cooperation of both the members of the committee and the sophomore class, the Sophomore Cotillion of 1942 will equal or even excel those of previous years regardless of the present war situation."

Electrical Engineers Attend Convention

At the recent American Institute of Electrical Engineers Convention of the Student Branch of District Two held at the University of Pittsburgh, Villanova was represented by George Baird, Mal Boyle, Sam Burruano, John Chamberlain, Henry Kirchner and Charles Naylis. Professor Bueche, counselor of the college branch of the Society, also attended.

The group attended several conferences, including one on lighting and one on "The Plan of the Engineer." On Saturday, the members visited the laboratories of the University of Pittsburgh and Carnegie Institute of Technology and attended the football game between Pitt and Indiana.

At the first meeting of the student branch on Thursday, arrangements were made to attend a joint meeting at the University of Pennsylvania on October 30

President Discusses Students' Obligations In Wartime Program

By TOM SCHUBERT

Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, in an address at the formal opening of the centennial academic year of Villanova on October 6, urgently appealed to the students to realize their obligation in a world at war. The address marked the conclusion of the exercises which began with the celebration of Solemn High Mass by the president.

Passing over the solemn occasion of Villanova's century of achievement, Fr. Stanford confined his remarks to the relation of college students to a chaotic world. He recalled that during the first several months of war he had entertained open admiration for conduct on the campus, but stated that "the attitude of Villanova students, in my opinion, has not kept pace with the rapidly changing tempo of events."

Sacrifices Of War

Accelerated studies, interrupted college careers, and postponed vacations, he considered happenings which should bring a deep realization of what this war means to the students and what it will require of them for years to come.

Since he, himself, during recent weeks, has come in frequent contact with men returned from the battlefronts and government officials whose nights and days are filled with the tremendous problems of a country at war, Fr. Stanford finds it exasperating to see in the students a seeming utter lack of comprehension of the magnitude of the struggle.

Reorientation Of Thought

"You young men," he insisted, "must completely reorientate your manner of thinking and your acting in accordance with the realities of a world at war."

Manifestation of a proper student attitude will only be realized to Fr. Stanford in "an upward swing in academic grades . . . more attention to the details of necessary campus discipline . . . more spontaneous thronging to the chapel and a seek-

Students To Meet For Service Plans

Military Leaders to Discuss New Programs; All Branches To Be Represented

Tomorrow at 1:30 P. M., a joint committee of armed representatives will present the reserve program to the faculty and student body in the Field House. Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O. S. A., assistant to the president, is in charge of arrangements.

Officers of the Army, Army Air Corps, Navvy, Naval Air Corps, Marines, and Coast Guard will offer the latest programs concerning the college student and the war.

Following the assembly, separate rooms in Mendel Hall will be assigned to the various speakers where students may meet for further discussion of the service plans. During this visit there will be no actual recruiting, but application blanks and appropriate literature giving specific information about the programs, will be distributed to interested students. First hand information of the numerous service reserves will be given by the men who have been appointed by the government to supervise these plans.

After an interval of about two or three weeks, a combined recruiting party will return to interview interested students and actually enlist successful applicants. Provision

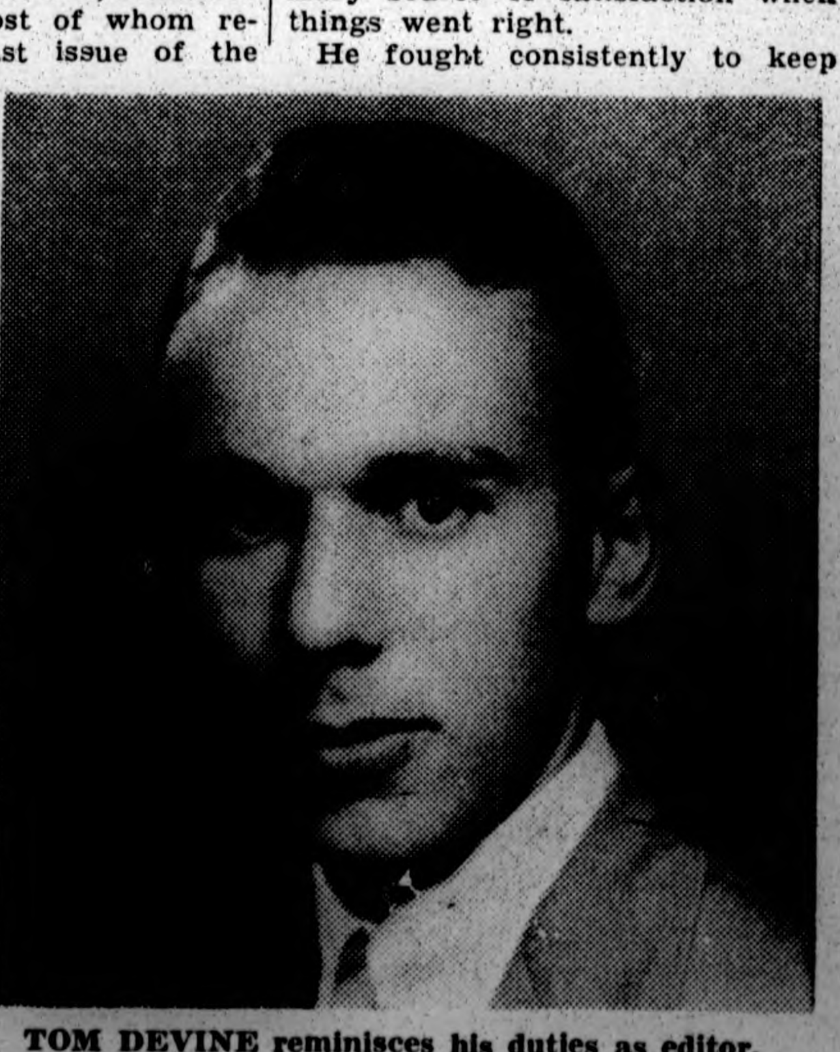
Retired Editor Relaxes In Reverie Upon Past Newspaper Experiences

By T. F. DEVINE
(Former Editor-in-Chief)

A SCHOLASTIC year ago, Tom Doyle, in writing an article similar to this one, reminded his successors, most of whom retired with the last issue of the summer semester, that theirs would be the duty of articulating Villanova's actions and aspirations in a world at war. The manner in which his charge has been carried out remains open to judgment, but at least the effort has been made.

Those of us seniors who have now retired after taking over our duties only last January had the distinction of publishing the first summer issue of the VILLANOVAN. Our regret that it was only a four-page affair was assuaged by the knowledge that we were in some small way bearing the torch which Tom Doyle had handed on to us.



TOM DEVINE reminisces his duties as editor.

Under Tom, most of us — even though it was our third year on the staff—were still learning. A thorough student of journalism, he devoted himself to the task of editing a prize-winning newspaper. It was his consuming passion and primary source of satisfaction when things went right.

He fought consistently to keep the United States out of war, and when Japanese aggression decided the issue for all, his editorials were invaluable for a student body

A Sincere Thanks . . .

YES, the accelerated program has brought about a few changes at Villanova. One of these, though perhaps minute in comparison to other innovations, is the partial changing of staffs of this publication.

The duties of Editor-in-Chief have been relinquished by Tom Devine after a year of endless labor to produce a paper worthy of former honors obtained. We believe that he has succeeded in this accomplishment and even more. His able assistants on the editorial board, Ward Guncheon and Bob Canfield, have also left; but, their tireless efforts will not soon be forgotten by us who are striving to fill these positions with similar aims of success in mind.

Former managers, Gene Smith of the business staff, Nick Eni of the circulation staff, Loring Jones of the advertising board, and Lou Esposito, exchange editor, have given up their jobs to successors who are flattered with the opportunity to produce a paper which carries the tradition of Villanova.

To these students together with the many writers who have also retired, the new staff extends a very sincere word of appreciation and thanks, not only for their excellent work produced but also for their training and patience with us. We give our word that with the help of God we shall do our utmost to continue on where you left off. —R. F. Y.

Are You A Villanovan?

THIS paper that you are now reading is a part of the College which is working for an end. That end is "to offer you a helping hand to foster and to advance your spiritual well-being while giving you the opportunity for a first class college training." So writes Rev. E. V. Stanford, O. S. A., in his booklet "The Best Thing Villanova Can Offer You."

Villanova accomplishes this end by keeping you constantly in a Catholic atmosphere. This paper is Catholic literature. Evening chapel and the omnipresence of Augustinian priests are the primary maintainers of the atmosphere. Evening chapel proves your faith, not for the College's knowledge of your faith, but to God Himself. Villanova is offering these opportunities to the student to Villanovanize him. Try to extend your opportunity of becoming a Villanovan. To be such, you must fully absorb and partake of Villanova. —J. D.

No Initiative

UNFORTUNATELY, much of the criticism which has been hurled at our war-harried Congress has been well-earned. The bungling manner in which Congress handled price control and rationing are cases in point. Partisan bickering and yielding to the selfish demands of pressure groups marred the debating of every major issue.

And all this despite the tons of protesting mail from the electorate, and the daily complaints of newspapers and radio speakers. Congress refused to follow the will of the people by enacting emergency legislation, whether it meant a sacrifice to capital, labor or any other private interest. Congress was too preoccupied with November elections to impose sacrifices on the electorate. Our representatives stubbornly held to the pre-war philosophy that voters would never reelect a Congressman who tripled their taxes and rationed their gasoline. Congress lost all confidence in the people's determination to win the war at any cost.

For six months this wavering prevailed in Washington. Then the President gave a fire-side chat warning Congress. Immediately every Congressman rushed panic stricken back to their tables. Within a week, legislation which had been hanging fire for months was pushed through half finished. What the will of the people had failed to accomplish, was achieved by a heart to heart presidential chat.

What kind of government is this? Must the people push and the President pull every piece of legislation through Congress? Can't we have a Congress that is willing and able to move under its own power as the Constitution intended? Such Congressmen have stifled the people's voice in government. —R. T. C.

Glories For Frosh

HELLO Frosh! This expression is significant of a new year and a new class. It is Villanova's welcome to those who are to become Villanova gentlemen.

Frosh! Villanova really welcomes you, but we can not give you all the glories of freshmen.

Why?

We can not give you those little things that make your freshman year so glorious, because your efforts and our efforts are to be expended entirely to our part in the National Crisis.

You came to Villanova in a year which was to be traversed with the celebration of Villanova's Centenary. Now, however, those celebrations which will be held, will be modest.

You came to Villanova to be faced with an accelerated program. A program which gives very little time for your orientation.

These glories, and many more, we can not give you; but they are not lost. If you truly want to be part of Villanova, you can obtain a great number of these glories on your own initiative.

You, as freshmen, have been given a set of rules to follow; rules that were an integral part of Villanova many years before you came; rules that will be an integral part of Villanova many years after you have gone. Every rule you "break" makes you that much less a part of Villanova. Every rule you break takes a glory away from you.

You all know that you are here because of someone's sincere interest in you. Your success here at Villanova depends not on that interest alone, but primarily on your appreciation of that interest by serious and conscientious work and recreation. —T. C. M.

FACULTY COMMENTS

First Things First

By FR. GRIMES

VILLANOVA is vitally interested in you, her students. True to the Catholic traditions and ideals of her one hundred year history, Villanova is particularly interested in the spiritual development of you, her sons. This is as it should be. Indeed it could not be otherwise; for Villanova being an integral part of the Institution founded by Christ, has the same end to achieve: the spiritual happiness of her children.

In our present international crisis, Villanova has no need to change the spiritual direction of her course or the tempo of her pace. In this year, the beginning of her second century of existence, it is sufficient that she continue to travel the same path that helped her weather the trying days of Civil Conflict, the Hispanic-American struggle, and the cruel days of 1917. Not so, however, with all educational institutions.

Steadfast Principles

Villanova's century of existence is contemporaneous with the century of Materialism in education. During these years her story was not one of mere development but a struggle for very life. Because her vocabulary did not contain the word "compromise" in the essential things of life, Villanova, along with all Catholic institutions, had to be content with a second rate label in more "progressive" circles. The intellectual movements of the nineteenth century that substituted agnosticism for religion, ultra-realism for art, extreme nationalism for a well-balanced government, the materialistic interpretation of history for that, grounded on the moral law, found no response in her Catholic classrooms. With the patience that is proverbial of Eternal Rome, Catholic education held her ground and waited. She held fast to the soul of all intellectual life waiting for the return of the prodigal.

Realization of Spiritual Values

Under the pressure of suffering, privation and bitter anguish of soul, both men and institutions are beginning to feel the void that an education bereft of spiritual values has left in their lives, and in the life of the Nation. The radio is giving more time to religious programs; journalism is making greater effort to feature and to be more sympathetic in news releases. Both religious and lay leaders outside the Church are stressing the importance of the spiritual values of life.

In the last days of September the International Council of Religious Education sponsored a nation-wide Religious Education Week. As part of the program, the N. B. C. net-work broadcast an appeal for a spiritual revival as the best means to help win the war. Leaders both at home and abroad participated. Bishop Wallace T. Conklin of the Protestant-Episcopal diocese of Chicago told his audience that "We cannot hope to win now, nor build a better world, unless we are spiritually prepared."

Religion Is Not Fanciful

Francis B. Sayre, former high school coommissioner of the Philippines, remarked that "True religion is not a frill or a mere intellectual adornment of life. It reaches deep down to fundamental realities and if it be real shapes, qualifies all life." John D. Rockefeller holds that "We have woefully failed in love of God and love of man. Human greed and selfishness have brought us to our present sorry plight. — Now we see the material world which we have been so busily and blindly building on foundations of sand tottering for lack of adequate spiritual undergrading."

These pronouncements are not sounding to the ears of Villanova's men. Oft spoken in her class rooms they almost seem trite, if divine truths could be called trite.

Men of Villanova, your heritage of Catholic education is a noble one. Founded as it is on the indestructive rock of Truth it helps you to preserve a calm on the sea of today's disturbances. It gives you an unbiased viewpoint of the horizon of our world's difficulties.

Your Faith has taught you to put First Things First; It has nurtured in your hearts a reverence for Authority, both civil and ecclesiastical; It has given you a deep love for order as Heaven's first law; It has given you an abiding interest in the problems of your fellow men. These are the qualities needed for the Crusade in which we are engaged. Yes it is a Crusade, God wills it. We are out to call men

Threshold To A New Century - by MAHONEY

By Ed Reardon

On the 6th of October in '42 ....
The boys returned to the White & Blue
Another year; another issue
And so to press in this old tissue.

With the dawn of a new semester the time has come to report to you the social shananagans of all students, both dayhops and residents and, oh yes, engineers. Be it known that this column will be conducted in a spirit of goodwill and fun and with no malice aforethought. We hope no one will take offense to our reportorial snoopings.

With this thought in mind we urge you to bear with us for the next few months while we attempt to present to you a panoramic view of Villanova's casanovas.

DOT AND DASH:

Joe Mahoney never knew the Rosemont campus was so beautiful until last week at the freshman tea-dance, with Ann for a guide. It seems the orientation committee did better than the frosh. Chestnut Hill likewise played host to the first year men last Sunday at a "punch" dance. Among the upperclassmen prominent in the wolf-pack were Jim Bonner, Dick Shinners and George McElwee.

Jim Finegan took in a week-end party in West Chester last week. We hear it was quite an affair. . . "Scotty" Boyle featured a lovely blonde thespian from Harcum at the Coast Guard game. "Jarrin" John Sutton with Marion and "Dutch" McCarthy with Elveta were prominent on the fifty yard line. Most of the dates seemed to have been rained out for last week's game including "Windy Bongiovanni who motored to the shore for his date.

And then there was the draftee who was put in 4-F because his seeing-eye dog had flat feet.

GLIB-GAB:

Bill "Glamor Boy" Carey is back with us after a year's sojourn in the business world; welcome back Bill. Congratulations are in order for big Harv Satenstein who has announced his engagement to Lylia from Bryn Mawr. . .Let's hope this is not just a passing fiancee. Ed Milde, a member of the "pigeon division" of the Signal Corp "Resolve," has left the ranks of the bachelors' club by going steady with a Brooklyn beauty. Joe Elward, is it true that your girl has beautiful eyes?

Vince Bradley has finally established himself in the win column after two losing bouts with D. Cupid, by renewing acquaintances with Helen, ex-checker of the cafeteria. Two frosh were almost hit by a speeding car on Lancaster Pike the other day while waiting in the dining-hall line. Gene Pinto plays the pin-ball machines so much, every time he rolls his eyes his nose lights up. Al Corcillo is currently courting a neighborhood lass that answers to the name of Ann Sheridan —not the "Juke Girl"?

Height of something of other—We hear that an ardent prohibitionist has called on fellow-arids to refuse to ride on tire made of alcoholic rubber. When things get that bad, we'll all re-tire.

Overheard in the pie shop:
"Say, who you shoving?"
"I dunno. What's your name?"

ODDENDA:

Bill "Soft-soap" Swan, Joe Daly and Bill Walsh are laying siege-plans for a certain M. M. across the tracks. As the saying goes, "fore - warned is four - armed". DeBlois was seen pursuing his botany on Immaculta's campus at the open-house last week, with the able assistance of Eleanor. Lou Carideo, John Surmount, Tony Paruta and "Irish" Donohue were a few of Villanova's representatives in attendance.

Tom Delehanty, also among the visitors, was attracted by a lovely lass in the Campie Shop. Just before his departure, he was surprised by the discovery that she was not a member of Immaculata student body but a visitor from one of the local high schools.

In closing we would like to mention that Ed Bennis, who formally held down this column, is now a member of the Army Air Force. Good luck, Ed.

By STAN ZEEMAN

Boyle might be a characteristic Irish name, but don't ever make the mistake of calling Dennis Andrew Boyle an Irishman. He is one of the most pugnacious fellows in the senior class, and if he considered this error an affront against bonnie Scotland, well, you might find yourself waking up in the middle of next week.

But he hasn't picked fights all his life. For example, when he sailed at the age of nine from Glasgow, Scotland to America he was a rather meek little fellow. His family settled in Ithan, Pa., a small town up the pike, and enrolled him in St. Catherine's Parochial School, where he graduated first in his class, was captain of the basketball team, and served as president for two years.

A Boxing Vice-President

Malvern Prep came next, where he had an equally successful record, followed in 1939 by Villanova which he entered as a chemical engineer. As a senior, Scotty can look back on a fruitful campus career. He is a two year member of the student council, serving as vice-president at the present time; he belongs to Phi Kappa Pi engineering fraternity, of which he was a vice-president in his junior year; he is a member of the chemical society; and this year he is chairman of the orientation committee.

Active intramurally, he plays regularly for the Mendel day-hops in the basketball league. Scotty hasn't missed an intra-mural boxing meet in his entire college life, and up to last year, when he fought to a draw with Ben Paradee, has always emerged victorious. He is eagerly looking forward to a return match with Ben this year.

When put to the inevitable question, he answered with his rolling Scotch bur, "Women don't interest me." But even the freshmen know about the blonde from Harcum Junior College who, it is said, has won no less than six cups at beauty contests.

Most of the old timers can remember how Scotty and his closest pal, Bill Hooper, made life miserable for almost any college character they considered in need of chastisement. One of the pranks that is still being talked about is how the duo eliminated competition for the affections of a Main Line beauty in whom Scotty was particularly interested. The hapless Romeo was simply "invited" to a formal dinner-dance at the girl's home. Imagine his surprise and confusion when he arrived unheralded and unexpected, all dressed up in his monkey suit.

Scotch Merits ..

Since Bill has gone to Temple Medical School, however, Scotty has confined his excessive energy to impassioned arguments on the relative merits of the Irish and the Scotch. "I never saw a smart Irishman," he says, "that didn't pretend he was Scotch."

There is hardly any job that Scotty hasn't tackled. He has been everything from a bartender to a technician with the Gulf Refining Company. As to the future, he is looking forward to the biggest fight of his life. He has a 2-A deferment now on account of his engineering studies, but it won't be long before he is in the uniform of the Chemical Warfare Division.

In this half of our weekly feature we find still another day-hop engineer, perhaps not quite as pugnacious as Scotty, but equally active.

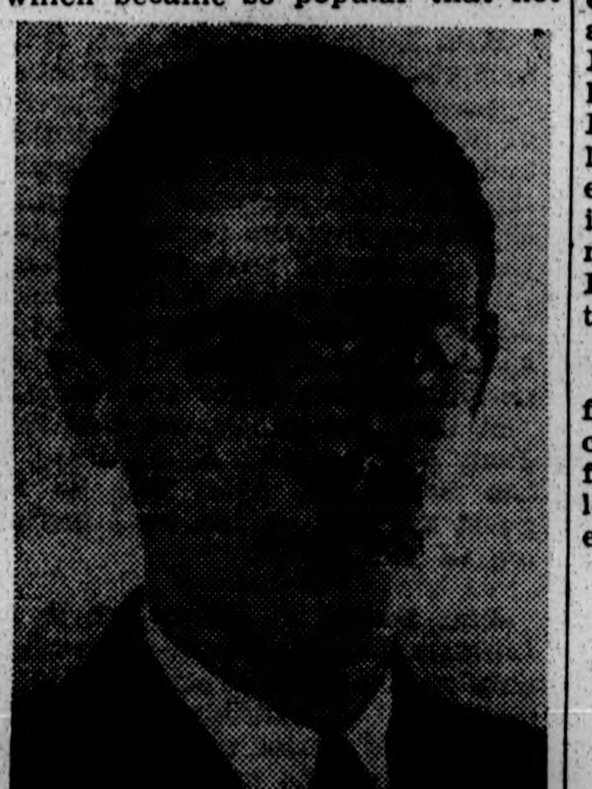
Robert H. Simpson, or simply Bob as he is known on the campus, is a resident of Drexel Hill, having migrated at the age of three from his birthplace in South Philly. He attended St. Andrew's Grade School in Drexel Hill, where, upon graduation, he was presented with the coveted American Legion Award, given each year to the best all-around students from schools all over the country.

Then came West Philadelphia Catholic High School, where Bob distinguished himself once again both academically and extra-curricularly. Although he was quite active in intramural athletics, his most valued achievement took place on the football field, not as a participant but as a cheer-leader. It was here that Bob learned the fundamentals of keeping the enthusiasm of a student body at a high pitch, a knowledge that was to serve him in such good stead when he came to Villanova in 1939.

Cheer Caller

While only a freshman Bob began to carve a notch for himself in college activities. Not only did he earn a place for himself on the cheerleading squad, (quite a feat for a freshman) but he was accepted into Phi Kappa Pi, the honorary mathematics fraternity, and played intramural basketball with the Mendel day-hop aggregation. Last year he was elected secretary of Phi Kappa Pi ,and as a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, served on the committee for the large convention this organization held at Villanova last year, attracting representatives from colleges all over the East.

The chief claim, however, which Bob has to fame lies in his organizing ability. Recognizing the need for a kind of all day-hop intramural set up that would provide the commuters with some of the college life they ordinarily miss, he decided to do something about it. By hard work and careful planning he worked out a touch football league which became so popular that not enough teams could be formed to accommodate all the prospective players. The noontime games of the "grapefruit" league, as it came to be called, soon attracted scores of spectators to the Mendel playing field. Incidentally, Bob received a merit award for his part in the organization of the league.



Kegler ..

Likewise, with the aid of two fellow juniors, Don Cryor and Joe O'Donnell, he built up a well organized bowling league for Phi Kappa Pi. Largely through his efforts the Charles Butera Trophy was secured which is awarded to the team with the highest average. The Connelly Individual Sweepstake Trophy was also introduced. This award, donated by Bill Connelly, a Villanova alumnus, is given to the highest scorer in the club's annual handicap tournament. No mean bowler himself, Bob was a member of the championship team and had the second highest individual average.

Bob is already a commissioned officer in the naval reserve with a rank of ensign E-V- (P), having served three and a half months on active duty this summer. He is chiefly interested in power plant work, and after the war is won, he would like nothing better than to remain in the navy, and work in that field of endeavor.

Ex-Student Commended At Annapolis For Saving Life Of Shipmate At Sea

"Midshipman Jenkins, by his heroic act, has exhibited extreme coolness, promptness, and rare courage which measures up to the high standards of naval service."

With these words, Rear Admiral J. R. Beardall, superintendent of Annapolis Naval Academy, commended William Jenkins, Jr., midshipman third class, and former member of the Villanova class of 1944, for his gallant rescue of a shipmate on the night of September 24.

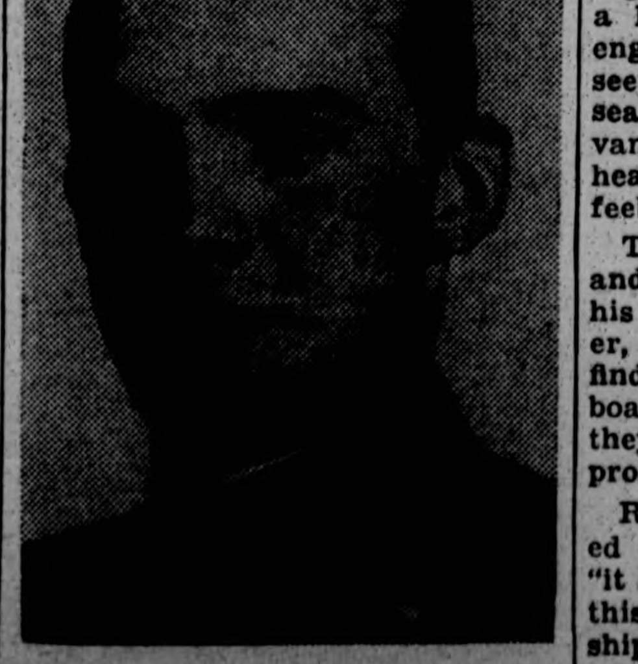
Amid the congratulatory cheers of his assembled classmates at Annapolis on October 14, Jenkins was informed by naval authorities that he had been recommended to be awarded the Life Saving Medal, a rare distinction for midshipmen, for his exceptionally brave act.

At his home in Germantown, his mother received a letter of congratulation from his commanding officer at the academy. She gave the dramatic details of this feat to his uncle, Rev. Edward F. Jenkins, O. S. A., assistant professor of Chemistry at Villanova.

On September 24, the "Crocodile," a navy ketch, sailed up the Chesapeake Bay on maneuvers. Towards evening it began raining very heavily with a violent wind blowing from the south-east.

From reports of eye-witnesses, it appears that at about 11:30 P. M. Midshipman C. W. Blythe, then below deck, slightly nauseated by the pitching and rolling of the ship, felt the need of some fresh air.

As he came out on deck, he found that the small gale of the evening had grown to immense proportions. There was now a wind of forty miles an hour blowing, and violent waves breaking eight feet had the boat tossing like a cork. While he stood there, an exceedingly high wave struck the ketch and washed him overboard. Because of the stormy weather he was clad in midshipman's rain clothes, and the heavy cape attached made him unable to use his arms for swimming.



WILLIAM P. JENKINS

Cries of "man overboard," by the lookout, brought a number of Blythe's shipmates to the deck, but he had disappeared in the darkness. Immediately the ketch put about, and after a short search, the stricken midshipman was spotted struggling in the water about twenty-five yards off the side, and his helpless condition noted.

Displaying the "coolness, promptness, and rare courage" that Rear Admiral Beardall mentioned in his commendatory address, Midshipman Jenkins dived overboard carrying in his teeth a line attached to a life ring. Before the darkness engulfed him completely, he was seen swimming through the raging sea toward Blythe, who again had vanished in the night, but could be heard above the roar of the water feebly calling for help.

The ketch turned a second time and Jenkins was located holding his exhausted shipmate above water, and desperately attempting to find his way back to the ship. A boat was immediately lowered, and they were both taken aboard in a prostrated condition.

Rear Admiral Beardall announced further that from all evidence "it appears that had it not been for this heroic act on the part of Midshipman Jenkins, his classmate would certainly have lost his life."

INTRODUCING the 1942-43 column of intercollegiate news, jive, and nonsense—the formal dedication of this section of the paper is made to anyone who will flatter me by reading it.

By scanning the headlines of other college publications I find that all are definitely war-conscious. Nearly every weekly published lists of the "grads" in the service. Even the colleges devoted to enlightenment of femmes have turned all-out. Several of these socialites have engaged in the hitherto masculine job of "spot-welding" at Bendix during the summer vacation.

In order to get off on the right foot with my reading public (I couldn't find any word in Webster's for the singular of public) the following poem taken from the Hawk explains the situation:

It's quite a job to think up jokes
But we go on undaunted,
The ones you want, we cannot print—
The ones we print aren't wanted.

This little dittie, taken from the Fordham Ram is dedicated to all the students in Father Crawford's Physics Class, past and present:

I think that I shall never see
A "D" as lovely as a "B"—
A "B" whose rounded form is pressed
Upon the records of the blessed.
A "D" comes easily—and yet,
It isn't easy to forget:
"D's" are made by fools like me,
And how a fool could use a "B"!

Heard in an Engineering Class:

Prof: "Are you smoking back there, young man?"

Bewildered Frosh: "No sir, that's just the fog I'm in."

An isolationist Senator's relection speech:

"Fellow Americans! The Administration has forced us into a long and horrible war. If my policy had been adopted we would not be in this war today. I just want the Administration leaders to answer this one question: Just what was Pearl Harbor doing out there in the Pacific Ocean, anway?"

Modern Children:

Tommy called at a farmhouse and was asked if he would like something to drink.

"A cup of tea, perhaps?"

"No tea for me, thank you."

"Coffee then?"

"No coffee for me, thank you."

Then the old farmer whispered, "Whiskey and soda?"

"No soda for me, thank you," Tommy answered.

Our own "Major" McDonnell was telling about his summer job in a cemetery:

"What a layout! I had five hundred men under me. People were just dying to get in."

Also from the Fordham Ram:

Soph: "What is your ambition, Frosh?"

Frosh: "To die a year sooner than you do."

Soph: "What's the reason for that?"

Frosh: "So I'll be a Sophomore in hell when you get there."

"What do you do when all the world is dark and gloomy?"

"I deliver milk."

Fan Mail:

The Tomahawk presented this letter received by the "All American Boy":

Dear Jack Armstrong:

Since I started to eat your "Breakfast for Champions" I've crushed seven fountain pens and broken two typewriters trying to write a letter home. I didn't mind so much when I opened my closet door and tore it off its hinges; and it wasn't too bad when I swung the revolving door in a department store so fast that I killed four people. But when I tried to kiss my date last night and broke her neck, that was going too far. I'm going back to Grape Nuts

Group To Begin Community Mass

Fr. Coffey Will Teach Ancient Church Custom to Sanctuary Society

Last Tuesday evening, at its initial meeting for the current semester, the Sancutary Society planned to incorporate into the spiritual life of Villanova an ancient Church custom, the Dialogue or Community Mass. This Mass is a Low Mass at which the responses ordinarily made by the server are spoken aloud by the congregation in general.

After chapel, on Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday evenings, the Rev. John J. Coffey, O. S. A., will give instructions for this to the Sanctuary group. Then, every Friday morning at the 7:15 mass, its members will participate orally in the mass.

In addition to the Dialogue Mass, Fr. Coffey will likewise teach those students who do not already know, how to serve an ordinary mass.

Two Fold Purpose

The Rev. Edwin T. Grimes, O. S A., moderator of the Sanctuary Society, stated that the purpose of this innovation is twofold: first, that the students may memorize the Latin of the mass accurately, so as to become better servers; and secondly, that in the event of his finding himself in a parish seeking to introduce the Community Mass, the Villanovan may take the lead in bringing about its adoption.

This is in keeping with the Church's program of Catholic College Leadership. The Society learned that its action is merely a part of a general liturgical movement throughout the United States fostering an active participation of the laity at the mass.

In a summation of the aims of the Sanctuary Society for the coming year, Fr. Grimes stated, "The Sanctuary Society should be a nucleus about which the spiritual life of the student body should be built."

About a hundred students signed up for the society last Tuesday. Those elected last May, Thomas Muraski, a senior Engineering student, as president, William Walsh, junior C. & F., as vice-president, Edward Gregory, sophomore C. & F., as secretary, and Thomas Quigley, sophomore Arts, as Sacristan, will remain in office for the current semester.

Due to the pressing demands of the accelerated course, the society has also decided to abandon its procedure of semi-weekly meetings and agreed to a general meeting only once monthly.

Tid-Bits Of CAMPUS NEWS

All service men who did not receive the current issue of the Alumni magazine, which was distributed last week, are requested by William Friel of the Alumni Office, to send a postcard to him and a copy will be sent immediately.

Students are also asked to bring in the names of service men who formerly were enrolled at Villanova in order that they might be added to the list of those to receive the monthly magazine.

The first meeting of the Spanish Club was held last Thursday noon in the auditorium of the Commerce and Finance School.

Rev. Lorenzo Lozano, O. S. A., moderator of the organization, opened the meeting with a speech of welcome to the new members and gave a brief talk concerning the aims and purposes of the club. Following this the regular meeting was conducted with the new officers, William Swan, William Walsh, John Brennen and Joseph Lopez speaking briefly upon the various activities planned for the future.

It was also announced that Rev. John F. Burns, O. S. A., Dean of the School of Arts, will be the guest speaker at the next gathering of the group.

Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, O. S. A., Librarian, has accepted membership on the editorial staff of "Books on Trial," a monthly literary review. This periodical, designed as a guide for the consistent reader, is published in Chicago, Illinois.

Tomorrow at noon, Tschaikowski's Fifth Symphony will be featured by Dr. E. L. Haenisch at the meeting of the Music Seminar in room 215 Mendel Hall.

STAFF MEETING

There will be an important meeting of the entire VILLANOVAN staff this afternoon at 1:00 P. M. in the VILLANOVAN office.

All new members and anyone desiring to try out for the staff are requested to be present.

Dean Announces New War Classes

Courses To Be Held in Philadelphia High Schools and Navy Yard

J. Stanley Morehouse, Dean of the School of Engineering, and Director of the Engineering, Science, and Management War Training Program of Villanova College, has announced that the following courses have been started this month: Elements of Engineering, Machine Design, Elementary and Advanced Physical Metallurgy, Fundamentals of Electronics, Basic Heat Power Engineering, and Marine Power Plant Calculations.

At Northeast Catholic High School and West Catholic High School, in Philadelphia, classes have commenced in Elements of Engineering and in Machine Design. The former course is also given here on the campus, along with Elementary, Advanced Physical Metallurgy, and Fundamentals of Electronics

Two of the courses previously mentioned, namely Basic Heat Power Engineering, and Marine Power Plant Calculations, are being taught at the Philadelphia Navy Yard.

Other centers will be opened in Philadelphia and in Chester shortly, to begin training of 200 men who have applied for basic training as a preliminary to a Steam Power Plant Course. Plans are also being considered for a course in Naval Architecture, under the U. S. Maritime Commission, to be given at some center located in Philadelphia.

In Memoriam

John J. Parson (ex. 42)

No, not in vain intrepid boy,
You turned your eyes from earth and joy
And beat your wings beyond the sea
That looks upon eternity,
Where love is long and does not cloy.

How may we mix with base alloy
The white crown of your days, still boy?
Ah, not in vain the agony!
No, not in vain!

When we, the earth-bound, whom a toy
Distracts, whom petty heats annoy—
When we, the wingless, think of thee,
Dare we shirk death for Victory?
No, no! lest thy bright doom destroy!
No, not in vain.

Eight Former Villanovans Sacrifice Lives In Present World Conflict

Sorrowfully but proudly Villanova salutes the eight former students who have given their lives in the service of the armed forces.

There is sorrow when we remember the grief of their relatives and friends, who have, however, the consolation that they died in defense of their country. But there is pride, because they lived and died according to Villanova's traditions of courage and honor. Although not all of them were killed in action, the one who died from sickness was every bit a hero as his comrades who went down fighting. They are men of whom Villanova and America can indeed be proud.

These men are: Second Lt. J. Benedict Maloney, former Editor-in-Chief of the VILLANOVAN, and a graduate of 1937, who was killed when his Army Air Corps bomber crashed while approaching March Field in the vicinity of Cajon Pass, California. He was a graduate of the Commerce and Finance school and had been active in the alumni affairs of his hometown, Waterbury, Conn., before joining the Air Corps.

Second Lt. Dennis J. Dowling, former member of the class of '42, was killed on Feb. 24, when the pursuit plane, which he was piloting, plunged into Massachusetts Bay, near Scituate. In 1938 he enrolled in the Science school at Villanova. In June, 1940, he was admitted to the Civil Aeronautical School at Farmingdale, L. I., and as a result, did not return to school. He was transferred to Turner Field in April, 1941, and received his commission in December. While at Villanova he was a member of the 150 lb. football team and the swimming team. He had been married only 13 days before the time of his death.

First Lt. John J. Parson, a pilot in the Army Air Corps, was killed in the crash of a bomber near Berksdale Field, La., on Sept. 23, 1942 He lived in Ardmore and graduated from Haverford High School in 1936. He became a radio announcer and worked for stations WIP and WIBG before entering Villanova. While here, he was a high-jumper on the track team and chairman of the well-remembered 1941 Junior Prom. He enlisted in the Army Air Force in July, 1941.

Staff Sergeant Walter A. Lang, Jr., of the Marine Corps, was killed in an airplane collision on June 19. He entered the Science school of Villanova in 1938, but enlisted in the Marines after his freshman year. Three years later he graduated from the Naval Air Training Station at Pensacola, Fla.

Ensign James P. Mulroy, U. S. N., of Quincy, Mass., was killed in action. A graduate of Villanova and of Hyannis Teacher's College, he was a letter man in boxing, football, golf and tennis during his collegiate career. He enlisted in the Navy as an aviation cadet, receiving his preliminary training at the Naval Air Station, Squantum. Receiving his advanced training at Jacksonville, he was commissioned last August.

Ensign Joseph A. Hirsch, U. S. N., of Harrisburg, Pa., was killed in an airplane crash in June, 1941. He entered the Civil Engineering course at Villanova in 1936 but enlisted in the Navy before graduating.

Pvt. James F. Gallagher, a Commerce school graduate of 1933, and a native of Ridley Park, died in Camp Meade, Md., on August 9, 1941, from spinal meningitis. Before his enlistment in the Army he was a lawyer with Edwin McLaughlin, of Chester, Pa. caught in the first throes of war hysteria.

When he handed the editorial reins over to us—to return in a few weeks to produce a special victory issue, a masterpiece of campus reporting—we stated our aims and can now honestly say that we never consciously deviated from the path we had marked out for ourselves.

The year saw many changes in campus life. A military reserve program placed a new emphasis on the physical sciences—and on physical fitness. Quick to recognize their added duties because of their position, students added special subjects to their curriculum that might better serve their nation when such services were required.

Summer sessions brought further new experiences. Most of us looked with some misgivings on the prospect of sweltering classrooms but the semester was surprisingly devoid of too many unpleasant occurrences.

Summer sessions meant also the splitting of a staff; many members worked during the summer to gain the funds necessary for the continuance of their education. It meant that Bob Young would have to assume the editorial duties with only half the training usually required.

It meant that we would finish our newspaper work in what seemed an astonishingly short time, left with recollections of long hours of work on weekends which didn't seem to have enough hours in them to get the job done. Memories of the summer in which Bob Canfield worried the rest of us into accomplishing something, while he pounded out trenchant comments which made him a superior editorial writer.

Astonishment at Ward Guncheon's ability to ferret out facts on a seemingly inconsequential story, at his tireless pursuit of even the most uninviting leads

But as we dream, members of a new staff are busy making the stuff of dreams, forfeiting their leisure time, expressing once more the determination of Villanova to play her part in preparing its students for the chaotic struggle that lies before them

'Cats Raging For Manhattan Clash Sunday

Sportorial

By JACQUES MAUCH
Sports Editor

On returning to the campus this fall we learned that we had missed quite a bit of activity while on vacation during the summer. With two softball leagues in operation, a baseball league, a tennis tournament, and several outside ball games things must have been busy.

But the summer session has nothing on the present season. The Villanova sports program has finally shifted into high gear. The gridiron stalwarts have bitten into the meaty part of their schedule, Al Severance is already whipping his courtmen into shape, the cross-country outfit, minus coach Jim Elliott, has been scurrying over the surrounding hills, the lightweight footballers opened their season last Friday, and the intramurals are going full blast. The physical training program seems to have gotten under way too, as evidenced by the limps and groans of some of the physically unfit.

—V—

In regard to the 150 pounders' game with Princeton at the stadium on Friday we wish to make a few comments. First, we noticed that the crowd had improved over last season's attendance, but could have been a lot better. The majority of the students were freshmen. Where were their upperclass brothers?

Secondly, as the score mounted against the Wildcats the spirit of the students faded. Where cheers of encouragement rang across the field in the first quarter, moans, criticisms, and derisive shouts echoed forth during the remainder of the contest. A fine display of school spirit and team interest! To some of these grandstand quarterbacks, one of the more loyal students drily remarked: "There are plenty of empty suits in the locker room."

Thirdly, we wish to commend four sturdy members of the club for their fine play. Hats off to quarterback Tony Paruta, for his defensive tackling, to center George Famiglietti for his fine line backing, to halfback Jack McManus for his long booming punts, and to tackle Joe Carbine, game captain, for his crashing line play which stood out all afternoon.

Paruta, playing safety, averted certain scores on several occasions with desperate lunges for the smooth-running Tiger ball carriers. McManus' kicks pulled the Wildcats out of several holes while Carbine played his usual "all-out" game, throwing himself past enemy blockers and making half the tackles on line plays.

The overwhelming score of the Tiger Lightweights may be attributed to the fact that our lads had only practiced for two weeks. The boys mentioned and a few more have what it takes. If coach Doc Jacobs and his assistant, Father Sullivan, can fill in with a little more polished material, and mould some capable substitutes, during the next two weeks scrimmage, the little fellows will make the gripers close their big mouths.

—V—

If the freshmen who take physical training under basketball coach, Al Severance, enter the army, tough top sergeants will hold no worries for them. Al spices his calithenics classes with sharp invectives hurled at those students who ease up in their exercises to catch their wind, and he keeps everyone on edge with his constant chatter.

At the completion of the course the boys will be either ideal physical specimens or complete nervous wrecks. However, we think Al has the right idea if not the correct system. Getting boys into shape to face the trials of this present crisis is no joke. Whereas some are inclined to treat it lightly, a stern and determined attitude on the instructor's part will awaken them to the duties and responsibilities for which they must prepare themselves.

AL POSTUS . . . another Basca??

Auburn Bests Gridmen With Early Scores, 14-6

The Southern jinx continued to haunt Clipper Smith and his Villanova gridders last Friday night in Montgomery, Alabama, as the Plainsmen of Auburn pacified the Wildcats with two quick touchdown thrusts in the first half to win 14-6.

Led by Monk Gafford, Wildcat nemesis, whose rapier-like line thrusts caused the Main Liners' defeat last year, the Plainsmen tabbed their first score on six plays after the opening kickoff.

Gafford ran Konopka's kickoff back to his own 30. Finney picked up six yards and Reynolds swallowed up sixteen on two smashes through the line. This set the stage for Gafford's touchdown run which covered 48 yards. The agile halfback ran wide around his own right end, escaped the clutches of the Wildcat secondary and outraced the safety. Lou Chateau converted for the extra point.

Reynolds Scores

Auburn roared back a minute later but their offensive was slowed by Villanova just in time.

Coach Jack Meager's boys scored their second touchdown in the second quarter when the Plainsmen's quarterback, Gendusa, recovered Al Postus' fumble on the Wildcat 25. Here the burly fullback, Jim Reynolds, went to work and did most of the work to set up his plunge for the Southerner's final score. Chateau again added the point from placement.

Deceptive Play

The Blue and White tightened up in the second half and geared their offensive but the damage had been done. Their lone score resulted from the trickiest, most finely executed play of the entire contest. With the pigskin on the midstripe, Zig Zamlynski took the ball from center handed it to Johnny Dzitko, who in turn lateraled it to Postus. Postus rifled a beautiful pass to freshmen wingman, Milt Anderson, who speared it on the Auburn 25 and loped for the goal. The deception was so effective that Anderson was completely in the clear when he caught the ball.

Gafford Shines

Twice more the Wildcats infiltrated within the Plainsmen's 20 yard line. Once George Smith, who played his usual bruising game, crashed through the center and raced 24 yards to Auburn's 25, then added six more on a plunge. But a fumble lost eleven and Auburn held. They reached the Plainsmen's seven on another occasion but couldn't gather the momentum to push across the goal.

Gafford completely dominated the play. He ran the ball 20 times for a net gain of 113 yards and added

Runners Engage In Fall Workouts

Despite the loss of their coach, Jumbo Elliott, to the Navy, the Wildcat trackmen began the long gruelling hours of cross-country practice last week in preparation for the indoor campaign this coming winter.

There never has been a schedule for the fall track sport and there is none this year. However, attempts are being made at this late date to arrange some program so that the team may benefit from the competition.

Have Job to Perform

Workouts were started under the direction of John DiCarlo, senior sprint and hurdle star, around the latter half of course. Bushes and long grass are too heavy to permit the boys to negotiate the first half.

The runners also have a job to perform. They take some of their workouts by leading the physical training students over the course several afternoons a week.

Frosh Distance Men

Besides seniors DiCarlo, Harry Keefrider and Jake Mauch, juniors, Bob O'Sullivan and Dutch McCarthy, sophomores Tom Kiley, Jim Rooney, Buck Coleman, and Bill Baer, two freshmen have reported. One, Bob Regan, Belmar, N. J., star, ran a 4 minute, 28 second mile in high school last year. The other, Tom Fitzgerald, was the distance star of St. Thomas More High, Philadelphia. Both should be assets to the team if the fall meets are scheduled.

Villanova-Temple Game Nov. 28

The annual Villanova-Temple game will be played on November 28 in Temple Stadium.

The affair had been scheduled for this date but was changed to December 5 so as not to conflict with the Army-Navy game which was to be played that Saturday.

With the shifting of the service game to Annapolis last week by the President, college authorities agreed to return to the original date.

Seek To Avenge Upset By Jaspers Last Season

Fresh From Surprise Victory Over Strong Duquesne, New Yorkers Will Be Tough; Employ New Deceptive QT Formation

By BILL WALSH

Deeply chagrined over their failure to upset a strong Auburn eleven last Friday evening, Villanova's fighting football forces will attempt to get back in the win column on Sunday afternoon when they tackle the Manhattan Jaspers at Shibe Park.

No Villanova follower can forget the stunning upset which was handed the Wildcats last year in New York by these same Jaspers, when they nosed out the favored Blue and White eleven by the score of 9 6. This was the first time that Manhattan had beaten Villanova on the gridiron since 1900, the pigskin rivalry between the two schools having been inaugurated way back in 1897.

Green Starts Poorly

The Kelley Green, although not too successful against Georgetown and Detroit, rose to great heights last Saturday afternoon, when they upset a highly touted Duquesne eleven by a score of 10-7. This win, together with the Jaspers' opening victory over Muhlenburg, gives them a percentage of .500 in four starts.

In seeking a victory over the Wildcats on Sunday afternoon, Herb Kopf's boys will be after their second win over the Main Liners in forty-two years. Although Manhattan was rated the underdog in the contest up until last Saturday evening, its stunning upset over the "Dukes" boosted its chances considerably. The two elevens will now enter the fray on practically even terms.

Use New QT Formation

Rated one of the better teams in the Metropolitan area at the start of the season, the Jaspers were rather disappointing while obtaining only one victory in their first three contests. Their main difficulty, it seemed, was in mastering the new QT formation taught by Coach Herb Kopf this fall. This new system includes all the essential strength of the T formation as ministered by George Halas of the Chicago Bears, and Clark Shaughnessy. Against Duquesne, however, the New Yorkers had complete control of the new formation, and will be a hard team to stop in their remaining contests.

Eleven Lettermen

Their squad, considering the war conditions, is surprisingly large, consisting of forty-one men. From last season's team, Coach Herb Kopf has eleven lettermen returning, along with five reserves and twenty-five sophomores.

Of the returning regulars, two are ends, while a third wingman, Don Binder, was lost to the team after the Georgetown fray. A six foot four-inch sophomore, however, Paul Dromgoole by name, and a fine pass receiver is expected to see plenty of action against the Main Liners. Sal Marone, captain and guard of the '41 eleven has been a tough man to replace, but sophomore Bill Kepner seems to have the inside track to that position, and will undoubtedly start against the Wildcats.

Kiesecker Returns

Replacing Charlie McNulty, the tailback who was a thorn in the side of the Blue and White throughout the entire contest last season, will be either Earl Lambert

Courtmen Begin Intensive Drills

Last week preparations were made to inaugurate the Centennial basketball campaign and practice got under way. Coach Al Severence, now in his sixth year as head coach, has quite a problem on his hands.

Dick Gray and Fred Gerland were lost by graduation, but fortunately no key players went via the draft. Sorely missed will be "Red" Klotz who will not return to the lineup this year. The latter was expected to be a big gun in local collegiate circles this season. However, Mr. Severance will endeavor to build the nucleus of his team from five veterans of the 1941-42 campaign.

Reynolds Bolsters Hopes

Bob Kelty and Billy Woods, returning veterans of two seasons, will lead the court attack. Major MacDonald, Joe Lord and Chuck Drizen give definite indications that they will be looking for first call assignments. The new man, who shows great promise and has a faculty which will stand the Wildcats in good stead, namely getting the ball off the backboards, is sophomore Lou Reynolds. Before the season is over he may prove to be a powerhouse for this year's team.

Another solution to the obstacle of replacements will be the eligibility of freshmen. From the initial workouts it appears that a great deal of work has to be done. The fast, pick system which the Blue and White employ calls for poise and alertness and plenty of split second thinking and timing. Fight and spirit has always been a key note of the basketball team's style of play. With the freshmen grasping the system and supplementing the experienced men, future practice sessions should give a definite idea of the potential strength of the team.

Those who reported for practice were: Kelty, Woods, MacDonald, Drizen, Reynolds, Gene McGoldrick, Art Baron, Ray Kodish, George Burns, Frank Frascella, Harry Connelly, Jimmy Kelly, Bob Fitten, Charley LaBelle, Joe Lord, and James Finegan.

Wildcat 150's Overwhelmed By Princeton

Villanova's ambitious and highly spirited 150-lb. football team failed to uncover any other elements of football success, and received a decisive 44-0 licking by the gridiron machine of Princeton's Lightweights last Friday.

Running and passing with all the efficiency of a high-geared professional team, the Tiger lightweights completely outclassed the little Wildcats in every department. After the first five minutes, there was no doubt left regarding the eventual winner of the game — for Princeton needed only that period of time in which to push over its first score.

Waste Little Time

The men of Orange and Black received the opening kickoff, and immediately launched a sustained drive of 65 yards to score. Three first downs and a pass from Eley to Adamson put the ball on the Wildcat 6 yard line. Willis then drove over in two tries and Coddington kicked the extra point.

Villanova elected to receive, and on the second play from scrimmage travelled twelve yards, only to have the play nullified by an offside penalty. Jack McManus punted to safety man Jesse Couch, and the Tigers again started a goalward drive. With Couch, Willis, and Eley each

Austin Tops Mural Court League; Mendel D. H., Alumni Game Behind

Firemen Undefeated in Four Contests While Defending Champs and Frosh Have Three and One Apiece; Decisive Games This Week Between Leaders

Austin Hall with four wins in as many games are now the undisputed leaders of the intramural basketball league. Their margin of lead, however, is very slight. In second place only one game behind the leader are the last season champions, the Mendel day students and the sparkling freshman team from Alumni. Each of these teams have won three of their ties while dropping only one.

The Firemen got away to a good start in their first game when they nosed out the Gigiloes of Fedigan by two points, in a game which was forced into two overtime periods. Their next three games were won going away, as they easily topped the Commercemen, Alumni and the Mendel day students. Leading Austin's drive are two sharpshooting seniors, Art Martin and Red McFadden. Both have an average of ten points per game. The team as a whole has a net average of thirty-four points for each encounter. Their largest margin of victory was over the lowly frosh from Mendel last Thursday.

McFadden, Koval Star

This latter game saw Austin draw blood as McFadden and Jack Koval rang up four points in the first minute of play. The Gold Bugs came right back to tie the score with two goals, one by Ed Quinn, the other by Englehart. However, following this the frosh were never in the game, as Martin, McFadden and Cheppa registered point after point on sharp breaks and pivot shots while Koval kept the defense open with long shots from midcourt.

In their other game of the week the Fremen downed the second place Alumni squad which is composed of five former high school basketball captains. The defense of each club was the feature of the game with Austin pushing in 24 points while Alumni only netted 17. Alumni grabbed the lead at three to two, however, they were unable to stop McFadden as he paced his team to a 14-11 halftime lead from which they were never headed.

Mendel D. S. Strong Again

This was Alumni's first and only defeat to date. They easily won their first two games and last Thursday they trampled the C & F team 57-33 in an afternoon engagement which saw McGinnis, the Greenies very aggressive forward ring up 20 points, the highest individual score to date.

The Mendel day students also boast a fine record of victories with only one defeat suffered at the hands of Alumni. They won their first game in a one-sided tilt over the C & F brothers, 51-20. Their third and fourth attempts also gave them victories. On Tuesday they overpowered the Mendel residents, 31-27. Curreri who replaced Powers at forward led the way with four field goals and two free shots giving him a total of 10 points. Thursday night they downed the pre-season favorites, Fedigan, 47-27. Graziano, who led the day hops to the intramural championship last year, again headed his club to victory. He scored a total of 12 points and played a beautiful defensive game. For the losers Tigani and Charlie Labelle took the limelight with a total of 18 points.

Fedigan was unable to take the ball off the backboards because of a lack of height with Ken Breitske and Jack Fitton out of the game. This factor probably accounted for a great deal of the difference in the score.

Gigiloes Lost Three

Fedigan with only one victory and three losses will, however, give the leaders quite a bit of competition in the coming games as indicated in their opener with Austin in which they forced the leaders to go into two extra periods.

This afternoon will see the Commercemen go into action with the Mendel residents. Tonight Austin and the Mendel day students will fight it out for first place, while the second tilt will see Fedigan take the floor with Alumni as the competition.

Auburn Defeat

another 100 on punt and kickoff returns. His teammate Reynolds, carried 30 times for 114 yards.

Auburn totalled 15 first downs to Villanova's 4 and gained 264 yards to the Main Liners' 127.

Fullback George Smith gained most of the Wildcat yardage with his smashes through the center and his cross bucks. He earned the admiration of the partisan crowd with his driving play.

Freshman Art Alois played the entire sixty minutes at center and performed steadily throughout.

New Job For Howlett

Buzz Howlett, Wildcat backfield ace on two of Clipper Smith's undefeated teams, has been named assistant football coach to John Orsi at Penn Charter School in Philadelphia. Last year he assisted Walter (Babe) Marshall at his alma mater, North Catholic High.

Howlett also coaches the Magnolia A. A. eleven, member of the Eastern Pennsylvania Conference.

OLDEST RIVAL

Manhattan College, whom the Wildcats meet this Sunday, is Villanova's oldest grid rival. The first contest played between the two schools took place in 1897. After being discontinued in 1900, the gridiron competition was resumed in 1933 and has been in existence for the past nine years.

taking turns, Princeton put the ball on the three yard line, from which point Eley bucked it over. The try by Coddington was wide and the score read 13-0.

Score Piles Up

Princeton's second team then entered the game, and not to be outdone by their predecessors, also scored, before the half ended, on a pass from Furman to Jessup. The same two combined for the extra point, and the score became 20-0.

Princeton elected to receive the kickoff at the start of the third period and were stopped at midfield by improved Villanova line play. But Couch's punt was fumbled by Tony Paruta on the three yard line. McManus recovered, only to be tackled behind the goal as he attempted to run the ball out. This safety was combined with another Tiger touchdown when Couch and Willis ran to the 11. Then Willis went to the three with Eley plunging over. Coddington again converted, making it 29-0.

Small Consolation for 'Cats

The remainder of the game was a story of adding up the score as Barthmaier centered over Jack McManus' head to give Princeton another safety, and the Tigers, really pouring it on, scored twice more to make the final score, 44-0.

The Wildcat lightweights had high hopes of avenging last year's defeat by Princeton, but they just didn't have the ability to stop the Tiger juggernaut. In all fairness, however, it must be recognized that the lack of practice, and the inexperience of many of its players aided in the team's setback. The play of quarterback Tony Paruta and halfback Jack McManus was the oniyy bright light of consolation for Villanova.

Tadley Conditions Villanova Athletes

The new trainer of the Wildcat grid machine this fall is none other than Jim Tadley, Philadelphia Athletics conditioner. He replaces Jim Elliott, now a lieutenant in the Navy.

Tadley has kept the A's in shape for the past six years. Prior to this he was the trainer for the U. S. Davis Cup team for three seasons.

Jim has been doing a fine job and his efficiency both on the field and in the rub down room is excellent. He will return to the A's when they begin spring training.

Coast Guard Aerials Ruin Wildcats; Second Half Explosion Beats Florida

Pug Vaughn, Ex-All-American Leads Servicemen to 20-13 Victory; Postus, Zamlynski Score Touchdowns in Blue and White Rally That Beats 'Gators 13-3

Saturday night, October 10, saw the U. S. Coast Guard from Manhattan Beach nose out a game and fighting Villanova team, 20-13. The following week they took the Florida Gators into camp, 13-3.

Led by Pug Vaughn, ace passer of the servicemen, and Spotts, his principal receiver, they passed the 'Cats to defeat. Villanova kicked off in the first quarter and the Coast Guard took over on their thirty. On the first play Vaughn tossed a perfect strike to Spotts who went fifty yards before being downed. After three unsuccessful tries through the line Vaughn tossed another to Spotts who went over for the six pointer. The try for point was blocked.

Lopez Scores

At this point Lou Lopez came into the game and sparked a drive that culminated in his going over for a touchdown. The conversion was good and the Wildcats went ahead 7-6. But Vaughn and company roared back and put over another touchdown to go ahead 13-7. The Coast Guard was completely stalled on the ground and were forced to take to the air. Late in the third quarter the Vaughn to Spotts combination clicked again and the Coast Guard increased their lead to 20-7.

In the last two minutes Al Postus went over from the six for the final Wildcat tally. The point was missed. Coast Guard 20; Villanova 13.

Postus' Kick Blocked

Villanova's Wildcats roared back under the arcs at Shibe Park to take Florida into camp 13-3. The game was changed from Friday to Saturday because of a washout which delayed the Florida team in Richmond, Va., for twenty-four hours.

The 'Gators scored early when their line broke through and blocked a quick kick attempted by Al Postus. They took over on the nine yard line. The Wildcat forward wall rose up and threw them back three successive times for no gain. At this point Florida sent in their placement specialist who split the uprights for a three pointer.

Pritko's Kick Fine

Postus took the kickoff and went to the Florida 40 yard line before being stopped. Held for three downs, 'Cat wingman Steve Pritko got off one of his many sensational punts which went out on the three yard line. Corry got off a beautiful kick to center field. The ball hit Postus and Florida recovered. That ended the Wildcat's only threat of the half.

In the second half Villanova looked like one of the explosive teams of the past. Midway in the third quarter their offensive started to click. They drove to the 'Gator 21. Here Florida was penalized fifteen yards for roughing to their six. Postus took it to the one. George Smith was stopped cold, and on the last down Postus cut off tackle and went over for the touchdown. Konopka missed the conversion as Villanova went ahead 6-3.

In desperation Florida started to pass. Dzitko intercepted and went to the 'Gator thirty before being pulled down. Pezelski broke through and went to the one. The play was called back and Villanova penalized fifteen yards for clipping. Three plays later Zamlynski broke through and tallied. The conversion was good as the game ended. Score: Villanova 13, Florida 3.

FROSH ON VARSITY

There are thirteen freshmen members of the varsity football team. Guard and fullback are the only positions not represented.

The first frosh to play varsity ball since the new freshman rule was adopted was Ed Kolnaski, end from Stamford, Conn.

"Block-Buster" Smith Smashes Enemy Lines

By BILL CAREY

Crashing opponent lines with reckless abandon and making life miserable for Wildcat enemies seems to be George Smith's greatest pleasure in the fall. The "Block-buster", as he is appropriately nicknamed is one of the hardest plunging fullbacks Villanova ever had.

Coming to Villanova as a three letter man from McKeesport High, Pa., he brought a personality that is as subdued as his athletic achievements are spectacular. After starring in football and basketball, he topped off his high school days by captaining the track team. One of his greatest high school thrills was playing in the prep school North-South game in Miami, Fla.

Scorer Against Detroit

An old Villanova great, Ray Stoviak, was a great influence in Smitty's choice to come to Villanova. Choosing the Education School, as his background and preparation for teaching, the "Block-buster" is majoring in biological study.

In his freshman year, he caught the eye of Clipper Smith (no relation) with his brilliant play at right half. Noted for his strong and reckless defensive play, he was also able to grab off some nice yardage by pulverizing enemy lines. In his sophomore year, he understudied Joe Behot, while last year, he and Joe Yednock pulled their sister act. It was Smitty who scored the lone Wildcat touchdown to beat Detroit, 7-6.

Silent Type

This year brings still a greater outlook for the 195 pound line crusher. He has been switched to fullback, and this is where he likes to play. Judging by his record so far this season, it looks like his best year.

Smith, who has managed to keep his private life as private as possible had to give way to his room mate, Ben Danik, when it come to his social interests. At present our Mr. Smith is unattached, but Danik accuses him of a being a girl stealer, and lady killer.

Outside of athletics, the "Block-buster" spends quite a bit of his time in the movies. He'll talk for hours about Lana Turner. Being a rabid sports fan, he follows the doings of all Pittsburgh teams and remains true blue through victory and defeat.

Of course George's life is far more eventful than he would have you believe, but his quiet mannerisms will not let him go into detail. Feeling that this year's squad has more spirit than those of recent years, he's hopeful of a very successful season. His greatest hope is to top Duquesne. This is an ambition that he feels certain in achieving this season.

Craves Action

Among Smitty's bests rank Detroit's Al Ghesquire for individual honors and the Dukes for the team prize. He's a constant reader, and puts Damon Runyan in number one position of favorite authors.

Not having much to say about the war, George believes our day is soon to come. Choosing the Marines for his part in the war, he will go into officer's training immediately after graduation, and maybe before. Asked why he decided on the Leathernecks, Smitty said he craved action, and he knows where to get it.

Forsaking the accelerated course for summer work in a steel mill, our rugged fullback will be graduated in the May class. Here's hoping he cracks those Japs like he smashes Wildcat opponents.

Future Opponents Fall On Week-End

Two of Villanova's remaining five opponents were successful in their gridiron ventures over the past week-end, but the other three suffered defeat.

Two of the losing teams were buried by their opposition. On Friday night Temple was beaten by Jim Crowley's powerful North Carolina Pre-Flight outfit 34-0. The Owls' usually strong defense crumpled before the Cadets attack while their offense did not get moving at all. Iowa State was thumped by Missouri 45-6 on Saturday.

Detroit Continues Unbeaten

The other defeat was handed to Duquesne by Herb Kopf's unpredictable Manhattan club. The Jasper's Jim Worst kicked a field goal with 45 seconds remaining to humble the Dukes for their second defeat in three years, 10-7.

Gus Dorais' Detroit aerial artists continued as one of the few unbeaten teams in the country when they downed Georgetown 6-0. The other win was recorded by Manhattan whom the Wildcats play Sunday.

'Cats Seek Revenge

or Tom Donovan, both sophomores, while a third second-year man, Bill Vellante, may also see action at the left halfback post. Ed Finkoski, star passer of last year's team, is now heaving footballs for the Iowa Pre-Flight School aggregation. Although no passer of Finkoski's calibre is on hand this fall, Joe Fesko and Steve Kostynick have been alternating at the right halfback position.

At fullback, Kopf has one of his few first string veterans of last season, in the person of Captain Frank Kiesecker, pile-driving runner.

So, with the new QT formation, a number of seasoned sophomores, and plenty of confidence, Manhattan will enter Shibe Park Sunday afternoon, determined to trim its arch rival from the Philadelphia area for the second year in a row.

HERE and THERE

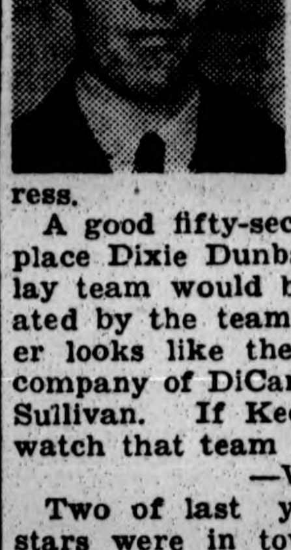
By JACK DUDLEY

WE'RE back here after spending a profitable summer there, ready to bring you news about here and there, gathered from here and occasionally there. Enough of the double talk—introductions being made we'll get down to the business at hand.

—V—

Our "Life Returns to Villanova" Department informs us that Bill Carey, former track star, is back to complete his senior year in the Commerce School. The erstwhile timber-topper is at the present time working out with the hundred and fifties. It appears that Doc Jacobs has found a capable addition to his backfield.

—V—



Villanova has the distinction of being the only school whose track team gets its coaching by a correspondence course. In touch regularly with his former proteges, Lt. Jim Elliott now stationed at Corpus Christi, Texas, keeps check on their progress.

A good fifty-second man to replace Dixie Dunbar in the mile relay team would be deeply appreciated by the team. Harry Keefrider looks like the boy to join the company of DiCarlo, Guida, and O'Sullivan. If Keef comes through watch that team go!

—V—

Two of last year's intramural stars were in town not long ago. Second Lieutenant Fred Clark, on leave from the South, and Art Conner, about to enter the Marines, were here for the week-end of the Florida game.

Clark, a baseball and basketball star for Fedigan Hall, conducted this column about a year ago. Conner was Fedigan's top tennis star in his senior year.

There's a friendship for you. Arthur and Fred went to school together for eight years in Brooklyn and at Villanova. Art's enlisting in the Marine Reserves must have been a blow to Lt. Fred of the Infantry, but they haven't started swinging as yet. It looks like everything will be settled amicably.

—V—

The Intramural basketball season is well under way by now. Last year's champs, the Mendel Dayhops, have taken second place. They lost few players by graduation or otherwise, and their new stars have made them top choices for the first half crown. The team which may cause trouble is Austin Hall; John "Red" McFadden is a team in himself. The "Blues" will be hard to stave off.

A traditional second half winner is the C. & F. Dayhop team. For obvious reasons the Dayhops have a more acute problem of organizing a team than do any of the resident teams. The material is there this year, but it may not show to advantage until the second half begins. Watch the Whites develop.

—V—

Most stories bearing the title, "Missing in Action," carry an ominous tone to them. Here's one that had an interesting and amusing climax. Stan Eusko, who would have been a senior this year, had been listed as missing by the War Department. A later statement on Eusko brought relief to his friends. He had been sent to a West Coast training camp, and for some reason or other, the army didn't know just where he was. It just goes to show that some war stories have a happy ending.

—V—

When the one-fifties took the field against Princeton last Friday, they had only four regulars from a preceding year. Jack McManus and Tony Paruta, backs, and Joe Carbine, a tackle, were starters from Stan Eusko's team last year. George Famiglietti, formerly a guard, returned after a lapse of a season to hold down the center spot. Despite what might be termed greenness, this team looks as though it can go places.

Six Students Win Perfect Averages

C. & F. School Lead Summer Session Honor Roll With Twenty-Three

According to figures released by Paetrus F. Banmiller, college Registrar, six students made an average of 4.00, which is equal to a perfect scholastic record, for the past summer semester.

The students to obtain this rating in the School of Arts were: Raymond L. Baldwin, sophomore, and Thomas F. Devine, a senior.

William P. Walpole, senior in the commerce school, and George L. Mathews, sophomore engineer, were the only students to obtain a perfect rating in their respective schools. Two science school freshmen, Stanley Green, and Louis G. Jakovic, also received a perfect average.

In the School of Arts Joseph A. Hagerty, senior; Louis A. DeSimone, Joseph J. Carbine, John M. Quinn, juniors; Thomas J. Quigley, sophomore, and James T. Carbine, freshman, were awarded places on the honor roll by maintaining an average of 3.00 or higher. Two education juniors, Hugh A. Wells, and David T. Blake, ranked as honor students.

In addition to Walpole, seniors in the Commerce and Finance School to make the honor roll were: Robert T. Canfield, Leo F. Hin, Ward C. Guncheon, Jess Blatstein, Paschal A. Russo, Eugene P. Smith, George W. Famiglietti, William R. Cabrera, William F. Friel, and William R. Menseck. Business school juniors with an honor average were William T. Walsh, Vincent D. Bradley, and Richard J. Ryan.

Sophomores, Charles G. Gallagher, Edward A. Fanelli, William J. Forebaugh, William D. Kelley, Francis J. Bassler, Natale Fazzini, and freshmen Frank M. Perna, Edward C. Quinn, Walter J. Wentling finished the summer session with a rating on the honor roll in the same school.

Engineers credited with a high average were: James P. Shelley, James F. Schultes, Carlos A. Martinez, Norbert G. Knapp, Robert F. McCadden, Arthur R. Smith, James F. Higgins, and Edward Manderfield, all seniors; juniors, Lawrence H. Belz, William M. Theodosia, Victor J. Borejko, George E. Giacchino, and George A. Temple; of the sophomores, Paul V. Simpson, Robert J. Casey, Carlos E. Villafane, and Harry Apoian; and John Belletti and Bradford W. Johnson, freshmen.

Seniors in the Science School making the honor roll were: Angelo Macchia, Peter Lebischak, Francis McLaughlin, Jose Silva, Anthony Di Benedetto, and George Eriksen. William Hadfield, Louis Fares, Wallace Redner, Lester Mann, and Horace Cutrone, juniors; Albert Nemez, Salvatore Carfagno, Albert Resnick, Jack Ediken, Stephen Vassalotti, Angel E. Salazar, and Edwin Mszanowski, sophomores; and freshman James Daly.

President Discusses

ing of the helps and consolation of religion."

Aids To Student

College action, he said, has been in advance of student thought throughout the period of emergency. Programs such as the voluntary physical training program last spring and the accelerated program last summer have enabled many to complete their college education and meet the requirements laid down by the various reserve courses.

New regulations of campus discipline only serve to help prepare the student for service. The physical training program not only meets the requirements of the reserve courses but also keeps the student in the excellent health necessary for bearing his increased burden of studies.

Since the imminence of new selective service legislation has brought about the proximity of military service for all students, the president considers it apparent that a student must increase his efforts to obtain good grades if he is to continue his education.

No Educational Deferments

In line with this, Fr. Stanford referred to the newspaper account of Brig. Gen. M. G. White of the General Staff who testified before the Senate Military Committee that the army was developing plans for sending its brightest soldiers to college for technical training.

General White's plan was to grant no educational deferments. But men with special aptitudes would be permitted by the Army to attend existing colleges as part of a definite program. The Army would select from the ranks the men to be trained, plan their courses, accelerate them as much as possible, and provide a steady flow into the Army of specially educated men, with a margin for the essential industries.

The scheme involved a constant "screening," the General said, so that "if a man fell down in his studies, out he would go."

Many Changes Improve Campus

Austin and Alumni Halls Renovated; Field House Gets New Stage

With world conditions changing constantly, college authorities decided to keep abreast of the times by making a few changes of their own around the campus.

Fr. Falvey, college librarian, started the movement last spring by inaugurating some improvements down at Austin Hall. This work was continued through the summer until now the west wing on the first floor is the site of a new library workroom. This improvement was made immediately following the conversion last year of the east wing into a reading room.

Another innovation, designed especially for the benefit of newcomers and visitors, was the placing of numerous directional signs around the campus. Gas and tire rationing make it difficult to account for the necessity of the speed limit signs. But we presume that this is the beginning of the administration's far-sighted reconstruction program which is to follow the conclusion of war.

Alumni Hall, oldest building on the campus, has been treated to a thorough reconditioning process. Painting and renovating which was started on the inside during the last Christmas vacation, is being completed. The outside, too, is receiving a beauty treatment consisting in the planting of many trees and shrubs around the building. The gymnasium, which will be the scene of many physical training classes this year, is being put in top condition.

Austin Hall has another important addition besides the new library room. According to the latest rules of campus discipline, students will be spending more time at home. Telephone calls will probably increase as wanderings decrease. The new telephone booth on the second floor is expected to take care of this increase.

The magic hand of the improver even wandered as far as the Field House. At the time of the solemn celebration of the Centennial, a new stage was constructed to hold the altar at which the Cardinal celebrated Mass. This new stage is now a permanent fixture at the Field House.

will be made for individual interviews by Fr. McQuade, college liasion officer.

The time between the announcement of these programs, and the enlistment is given so that students who wish to qualify will have ample opportunity to procure birth certificates, parental consent, and make other arrangements necessary for enlistment.

Depending upon the number of students that apply for interviews the number of officers returning will be determined.

In light of the developments now taking place, Fr. McQuade urges all students to attend the meeting tomorrow, and suggests they give careful consideration to the matter.

Following the program in the Field House, motion pictures concerning life in the service will be shown in Room 215 Mendel Hall.

Anyone wishing to discuss particulars about the reserve programs are invited to see Fr. McQuade.

Military Leaders Explain Students Reserve Plans

All Branches of Armed Services Represented at Meeting in Field House; Students Urged to Enlist Immediately

Students who have not yet joined one of the reserve programs offered by the armed forces should do so at the earliest possible time, urged five representatives of the services who spoke before the faculty and student body in the Fild House last Wednesday.

"Voluntary enlistments will soon be curtailed," said Capt. Deveraux of the army, "and those men who are not in a reserve at the time of the curtailment will be subject to immediate draft. After December 31, opportunities to enlist in any reserve will be open only to the incoming class."

Ushered in by the college band, under the direction of drum major John Scola, the students were led in an opening prayer by Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O.S.A., faculty liaison officer, who explained the purpose of the assemblage and introduced Capt Seymour.

Training Course Outlined

Capt. Seymour reviewed the requirements for the Army Enlisted Reserve, and outlined the training course leading to a commission. "A standing," he stated, "and this is to be decided by the authorities at the college. Students who have been sworn in may not transfer to another college if that institution is not recognized by the War Department or if credit is lost in the transfer.

"The army has lowered its standards both physically and mentally,' he said. Under the present system no knowledge of mathematics or physics is required for the mental examination which is given at the end of the sophomore year; however, he strongly urged students to take these subjects if they possibly could.

Student Must Remain In School

"The army feels college training fits you better for a commission," he said. "Therefore, the first order you are given after taking the oath is to remain in school. When the army needs you, you are sent to a replacement center where you get preliminary training and take an aptitude test. If you are qualified you are sent to Officers' Candidate School, where you are allowed to state a preference for one particular branch of the service. Upon graduation you are commissioned a second lieutenant in the Army reserve."

Capt. Seymour then introduced the remaining four officers, who in turn explained the requirements and training periods of their respective services.

Rigid Physical Test

Speaking for the Army Air Corps, Capt. Deveraux implored all students who think they could qualify, to apply for enlistment in an air army. "Due to the nature of the war it is imperative that we have a large number of fliers; however, the Army and Navy Air Corps are both faced with a shortage of manpower as only relatively few can pass the rigid physical requirements."

Capt. Deveraux stated that even if a man is "washed out" of flight school he is still eligible for Officers' Candidate School. He also explained the training procedure and the requirements for a commission as a ground officer either as an engineer or as a meteorologist.

Requirements Lowered

Lieutenant Dean then spoke for the Navy's V-1 and V-7 programs. He advised men who have previously failed the physical examination for this reserve, to make another attempt as the requirements have recently been lowered. Men who desire service with the Coast Guard should first enlist in the Navy and then apply for transfer to the Coast Guard Academy.

He also counseled pre-medical and pre-dental students who have enlisted in V-I to take the mental examinations, even though they are not required to. In case of the failure of the student to get accepted into graduate school, the student would then be eligible for a com-

ASME Plans For Annual Smoker

Behnke Appoints Various Committees; Freshmen to Be Admitted As Honorary Members

Villanova's chapter of the American society of Mechanical Engineers has already held three meetings this semester and has laid the foundations for the activities of the coming year.

In former years the A. S. M. E. held two important social affairs: the annual smoker and the annual banquet. Since the new rules provide for only one social function for each society on the campus, it has not yet been stated definitely that both events will be held. Plans are being made for both activities, however, in the hope that permission will be granted by the college authorities.

President Herman Behnke has published a list of committees for the various activities.

Members of the smoker committee are: Donald P. Croyor, Arthur A. Lyness, James E. Cashin, John L. Allen, Arthur J. Roth, and Edward C. Brennan.

The program committee consists of Vincent Quinn, Edward Elman, Harry Bansbach, and Francis Quinn.

The membership committee is made up of Eugene Barry, Edward Elman, Harry Bansbach, John Allen, Charles Donohoe and George Matthews.

The senior A. S. M. E. has invited the Villanova chapter to attend one of its banquets in the near future. Several prominent engineers will give instructive speeches. Plans are also being made to invite the society to visit the campus.

President Bemhke also announced that the society will accept freshmen into the A. S. M. E. as honorary members. They will not have the status of full-fledged members but will be permitted to attend the meetings and will be eligible for officership in their Sophomore year.

One of the first acts of the new year was the bringing up to date of dues.

Part-Time Jobs

Placement Director William F. Friel announces that three establishments are offering part-time positions for the approaching Christmas season.

Students desiring positions in the Post Office from December 19 to the 25th at sixty-five cents an hour are requested to leave their names in the Placement Office. Interested students should apply in room 306-A at the Post Office off 30th and Market Sts., for positions as temporary clerks for the Philadelphia Terminal Railway Post Office. The clerks will receive seventy-five cents an hour plus ten percent between six P. M. and six A. M.

Positions are also open for students in the packing department of the Ardmore branch of Strawbridge & Clothier. Applicants are interviewed at the office of Mr. Hutchinson on the mezzanine floor of the Ardmore store.

All further notices concerning part time positions will be posted on the Alumni Bulletin Board outside of the Registrar's Office.

Former Dean To Be Honored By PKP Trophy

VILLANOVA COLLEGE LIBRARY VILLANOVA, PA.

Plaque Displayed in Mendel Hall; Name of Outstanding Freshman To Be Ingraved Each Year

The Carl T. Humphrey Trophy, subsidized by the engineering fraternity, Phi Kappa Pi, will be put on display today in the reception room of Mendel Hall for three days.

The Trophy was purchased this summer by Malachy Boyle, president of the fraternity and it is planned that the name of the outstanding freshman engineer shall be engraved on it each year. It is posthumously dedicated to Dr. Carl T. Humphrey, former Dean of the Engineering School.

Freshman Honor

Each year the P. K. P. presents a medal to some freshman engineer in recognition of the abilities he displayed during the scholastic year in engineering. The P. K. P. now intends to record the name of the recipient on the Trophy as well as bestowing the medal.

Dr. Carl T. Humphrey was Dean of the Engineering School previous to Professor J. Stanley Morehouse, the present Dean. Dr. Humphrey's sudden death in 1938 was mourned considerably by the fraternity after he had shown much interest in its functioning.

Most Active Frat

The Phi Kappa Pi is the oldest fraternity on the campus, having been inaugurated in 1907. It has always shown interest in rewarding the achievements of students in the Engineering School as well as providing social opportunities for its members.

Rev. Francis F. N. McGuire, O. S. A., vice-president, by his recent announcement that "the initiations and banquets of all fraternities must be combined" affected the P. K. P. severely. This group had always been the most active socially: banquets, initiations, and dances fullfilling its extensive plans.

Number of Dances Cut

This year an initiation for new members and a banquet will be combined on November 30. The dance usually held in the Spring will be included in the intra-fraternity dance being planned for next Spring.

The intra-fraternity dance, necessitated by war conditions involving transportation, was accepted by all the fraternities on Father Maguire's suggestion. Since the P. K. P. is one of the largest fraternities on the campus, its number of dances will be conditioned the most by the proposal. Mal Boyle warned future fraternity members that the initiation would be very concentrated, since the members of the fraternity realize the scarcity of such opportunities.

Student Council Sells War Bonds

Under the supervision of Student Council, the sale of War Bonds and Stamps opened yesterday at 1:00 P. M., in Mendel Hall. Following last summer's successful plan, stamps of ten and twenty-five cents, and five dollars are being offered by the committee in charge.

Bonds of any denomination may also be purchased. Although the council does not plan to keep any savings bonds on hand, any student desiring to buy them may leave his name and money, and a member will procure it.

Jacques Mauch, president of the Student Council, urges that all students take advantage of the opportunity being offered to help the nation's war effort. "We are looking for the full co-operation of the students in this important work," Mauch said, "because this is solely for their convenience. If the students get behind us, we can easily surpass the total of the past summer's sale."

Thomas Muraski, secretary of the council, announced that the sale during the summer session totaled much more than was expected.

1942 Belle Air Judged Nearest Perfect for Second Successive Year; Junior Artsman Succeeds Schubert As Head of '43 Staff

Under the editorship of William E. Schubert, Jr., the 1942 Belle Air became the second consecutive Villanova yearbook to be judged nearest perfect in its class by the National Scholastic Press Association.

Schubert's achievement also marked the fifth successive year in which the college annual has been rated All-American in this nation-wide critical service. This is the highest rating offered by the N.S.P.A.

The respective merits of the various books so honored are determineded by their individual scores.

This year, of the several hundred yearbooks throughout the country judged by the service, only eight in Villanova's class were rated All-American. None approached the Belle Air in excellence, according to the survey.

Model of Excellence

In the individual criticisms of the various parts, the Villanova yearbook was judged either "excellent" or "superior" in nearly all of the many departments. Only in two instances did the rating fall as low as "very good."

The text of the book was singled out for special honors. The judges mentioned specifically that the writing matter seemed to be excellently written and edited.

The critic who examined it was so impressed that he added a note of his own to the regular form of the scorebook, in which he stated that "The 1942 Belle Air is a model of excellence for others in its class to shoot at."

Difficult Task

Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, O. S. A., moderator of the publication, in announcing the rating, stressed the fact that too much credit cannot be given to the staff whose task was rendered even more difficult than usual by the unsettled conditions on the campus and at the printing house. With so many students busy at new wartime tasks, much work formerly performed by staff writers was done personally by last year's editors.

At the same time, Fr. Falvey announced that H. Christian Kiefer, Junior Artsman, has been chosen to succeed Schubert as Editor-in-Chief of the college yearly.

The new editor comes from Brooklyn, N. Y., and is a graduate of Chaminade High School. He entered the Engineering School here three years ago, and after one semester transferred to the School of Arts, where he has been ever since. Both as an Artsman and an Engineer, Kiefer has been consistently on the honor roll, and has found time besides to engage in many extra activities.

This is his third year on the

Fr. Rogers Leads Annual Retreat

Last Sunday evening Villanova's hundredth annual retreat was formally opened with a conference and benediction given by the very Rev. Henry A. Caffery, O. S. A., Prior of the Villanova Monastary.

Fr. Caffery urged the student body to apply to their one day retrreat the thoughts conveyed by Christ's parable of "The Sower of the Seeds." The retreat, he stated, was designated to afford a rest from the distractions of the world so as to consider such questions as man's origin, nature and destiny, to give each one time to examine his past spiritual life, and through a knowledge of its weaknesses to fortify it for the future.

Purpose Outlined

Monday Retreat exercises began with a Mass celebrated for the students of the college, and in particular for those who have lost their lives during the past year in the service of their country.

Retreat Master, Rev. Thomas E. Rogers, O. S. A., outlined in his first conference the purposes of the retreat, which are to mend the past, to mind the present, and to meet the future. Throughout every conference stress was placed on putting first things first, on attending to our soul's life, and vividly recalling how by our sins we have betrayed Christ but how through His goodness and mercy, we may be forgiven by Confession, that Sacrament He instituted in knowledge of our weakness.

Three Duties

Specifically Fr. Rogers expostulated the Catholic man's duty now, that he should be a man of character, a man knowing his religion, and a man of filial piety. He also dwelt upon the relations of a Catholic young man with others whether in the service or at home.

Parting thoughts expressed by Fr. Rogers consisted in beseeching the student body to heed the lessons taught by women, of whom the Blessed Virgin Mary is the perfect example.

The retreat was brought to a solemn close this morning with a Mass celebrated for the liv-

Advice To Catholic Recruits

A list of the following twelve points has been given to Catholics going into the Armed forces. In particular they are meant for soldiers, sailors and marines. In general they are meant for every Catholic. Read them over and think about them. They embody principles which you should follow, starting today.

1. Be a good soldier. You can serve God and country best by being true to yourself.

2. Seek out a Catholic chaplain at once: offer your services to him for any assistance he may require.

3. Find your friends at the Communion rail. Some soldiers are daily communicants; others go as often as they can. You are sure of good companionship if you spend your time with frequent Communicants.

4. Obey commands promtly and with good will. No officer is likely to command you to do anything contrary to good conscience. If any officer should do so, consult your chaplain on the matter.

5. Seek wholesome amusement in recreation hours. The chaplain can advise you where to find it. Don't gamble. Most gamblers become "moochers" — and the moocher is an army pest.

6. Carry a medal and a rosary; keep a prayer book in your kit. Use them. Join the Holy Name Society.

7. Join a discussion group or study club. If there isn't one in your outfit, help the chaplain organize one.

8. Write home frequently; write occasionally to your pastor. If the chaplain has cards to certify attendance at the Sacraments, send them home.

9. Give a good example of a Catholic gentleman. To men who have never known Catholics before, you represent the Catholic Church. Help others to be such representative Catholics.

10. Don't get married before you leave; don't marry in the Army. A year of separation now may save years of separation later on.

11. Offer your sacrifices every day in union with the sufferings of Our Blessed Lord in His Passion and Death. In this way you supernaturalize your sacrifice, turning it to eternal advantage.

12. Look upon your years of training as a special opportunity God has given you to develop a strong body and a rugged character. Your country needs men of character — particularly men whose vision of eternity is clear. A man whose eyes are fixed on God as his Last End has no temptation to seek his heaven on earth. Subversive doctrines promise you heaven on earth; such a promise can never be fulfilled.

Forgotten Visits

PRIVACY of the individual has been overdone, in this land of ours, to such an extent that most family men, ensconced in the castles they call home, isolate themselves from their fellows, and become, during the space between dinner and breakfast, confirmed recluses. Not that we advocate night life or such things; nor do we feel that privacy is something to be done away with. No. Privacy is an explicit principle of democracy. It can, however, be carried too far. One of the surest signs that privacy has been overdone is the low esteem of the practice, age-old and laudable, of visiting friends.

Now, only older people visit, or at least that was the case before the war. The war seems to have aroused in countless democratic breasts the old hunger for communion with the human specie. John Public, after the whistle blows at the defense plant, shaves the day's growth and sets out, with Mary and the twins, for Aunt Martha's. This is a pleasant situation. When people love their fellows, they desire to see them; so they go "a-visiting." Surely, this is a good omen.

One of the demi-gods among visitors is Mr. Willkie. Mr. Willkie drank tea with China's first lady, vodka with Russia's boss, and his plane drank a considerable amount of gasoline on the way around the allied world. Mrs. Roosevelt, that standard-bearer for the cause, has recently added her name to the guest books of the King and Queen of England, their Majesties' troops, talkers, and prime ministers. The purpose of her visit to Britain was, according to Bob Hope, to return to the Queen some towels Mr. Willkie had taken from Buckingham.

By far the most novel democrat to stage (a pretty word) a visit, is Mussolini. Of course he made the usual speeches and spoke the ordinary headline sensations, but he seemed a trifle lost for words. It is to be hoped that he will have a better oration in hand when he and a certain paperhanger visit a warmer clime.

Yes, visiting is a revivified custom; it has seen some rough weather; has suffered greatly; but has again become a healthy and strong national tendency. Your Pastor will attest to this.

—T. P. McF.

Freshmen Beware!

LOOKING through the Student's Handbook one will find a section entitled, "Traditional Freshmen Regulations." After reading these regulations one will realize that the fifteenth regulation is the most important.

Regulation fifteen enables the orientation committee to disbar any freshman from extra-curricular activities if he fails to obey the fourteen preceding pronouncements. It is the severest penalty that can be inflicted. Next to scholastic advancement, extra-curricular activities are the most beneficial opportunities a college career can offer.

When your orientation began, you were informed of these rules and your responsibility toward them. You were also given a chance to live up to these regulations, but you failed.

Now the Orientation Committee has resolved to make you live up to them or suffer the consequences. Speaking in the vernacular, this is no joke. The Orientation Committee means business.

FACULTY COMMENTS

A Letter To A Soldier Alumnus

By FR. CRAWFORD

November 3, 1942

Dear Johnny:

Thanks for your letter. It is the first piece of V-mail I have received, and judging from the San Francisco postmark, I gather that you are somewhere in the South Pacific. You are one of the many whom I call my boys, who are now in the armed forces of our country. Some of them have written to me and a few of them have told me of their experiences as soldiers, sailors, marines. All of them agree that they look back to their days at Villanova with a lot of satisfaction, and yet with some regret; satisfaction because of a job well done, regret because it was not done better.

You tell me in your letter how much it has meant to you that there is a Catholic chaplain with your outfit, and how easy it was for you to become friendly with him because you knew priests so well while you were here. I am glad that you have the privilege of serving Mass so often. That must bring you back in spirit to the days when you served so well, and so faithfully in the college Chapel.

An Aid to Fighting Men

You say that you realized now as you never did before, the importance of prayer. The experience at which you hint, and of which I hope I will one day hear from your own lips, must have been a harrowing one. And with the faith that you learned first from your good mother, and later from the Sisters, Brothers, and Priests, as your education progressed, you attribute your rescue to prayer. Your experience parallels that of hundreds of other brave men who are fighting our nation's battles on many fronts. You probably have not heard the story of the hard boiled sergeant and the colonel on Bataan peninsula. They were lying in a shell hole at a point where the enemy attack was terrific. The colonel heard the sergeant calling on God for assistance. "Are you praying?" he asked. The sergeant replied: "Sir, in the fox holes of Bataan there are no atheists."

Rescue Through Prayer

There is another story of three Navy fliers who took off from an aircraft carrier and were unable to find their way back. The pilot landed the ship on water and it sank almost at once. The three men were able to gather only their raft, a gun, some ammunition, a pocket knife, and a pair of pliers. With this meager equipment, these three men spent thirty-four days on the raft, finally reached land, and were saved. All three agree that they were saved through prayer, and after the first few days aboard the raft, their "evening prayer meeting" as they called, it was a part of their daily routine.

War Not In Vain

God, in His divine providence, is able to bring good out of evil. There is no question in your mind, Johnny, about the evil of war; out of this evil God is bringing men back to Himself. If, through the war, we become men of prayer, the war will not have been in vain.

The men here at Villanova are learning this same lesson, the absolute need of prayer in our daily lives. The war has made the present Villanova men more serious than I have seen them in all my years here. And this attitude shows itself in many ways and in many places, in the classroom, on the campus, and most of all, in the Chapel. In their frequent visits they are praying that God will guide them to do their best, that He will guide our leaders both at home and on the battlefront, and that He will protect the men of Villanova wherever they may be. The more than forty priests here beg God daily in the holy Sacrifice of the Mass to bring our boys back to a peaceful world, safe and sound in mind and body. That is my daily prayer for you, Johnny. God bless you and keep you from harm.

Sincerely in Christ,
FR. CRAWFORD.

INVEST IN VICTORY!

Help your Government to put the tools of war into the hands of our soldiers by purchasing War Savings Bonds and Stamps. And remember . . . just one Bond can't lick the Axis any more than just one gun! It takes millions of Americans buying War Savings Bonds and Stamps every pay day!

FINDING the fellows to interview them is one of the jobs of this column, but getting them "to talk" is really where the trouble begins; especially when they are as modest as Joe Halpin and Lou Block. Here we have two Senior Football Managers, two all-around good buys, and two Villanovans who actually have plenty to talk about; and yet when the questions start "popping," "Mum is the word." Now if that isn't modesty, what is? Finally with the help of a few "pressure boys" (Thanks to Gene Smith, and Carlos Martinez) the boys were really put on the spot, and gradually began to break down under our "third degree."

Little Joey arrived at the Halpin household some 20 years ago, February 16, 1922, to be exact. It was indeed a gala event in the family that cold winter day, but yet little did mama and papa Halpin then realize that their "heavenly gift" would grow up to be one of the boys behind the Villanova Wildcats! This all took place back in Brooklyn, New York (youse guys have hold of Brooklyn, ain't cha??? Remember the Dodgers), and so right from the beginning, "our man Joe" seemed to be a marked man!

Even at the tender age of ten, while still learning his "reading, writing, and 'rithmetic" at Our Lady of Victory Grammar School, Joe still showed no definite symptims of being destined for the Villanova "Water Brigade." But time marched on, and so did Joey!

Enters C. & F. School

Next came St. John's Prep, also in Brooklyn, where our hero excelled in Intramural Basketball and Swimming (and also in the "art" of tilting a pin-ball machine, so he tells me!) Those four years at Prep rolled by fast, and before long Joe was on his way to Villanova, following in the footsteps of his brother Jim, who graduated last year.

It was back in September '39, when Joe registered in the C. & F. School as an accounting major, and since then this New York lad has really gained prominence here on the campus. Through four seasons he has proven himself more than capable of managing a football team, ever since he took over the position of freshman manager at the beginning of his college career.

Villanova Blue-Blood

While a Sophomore in Austin Hall he participated in Intramural Basketball, and also displayed his talents in the annual Amateur Night Program. It was at this time that Joe also became a member of the Delta Pi Epsilon Fraternity. In his Junior year he changed his college address to Room No. 6, O'Dwyer, and thus joined the ranks of the true "Villanovan Bluebloods." After two years of such luxury, and "all the comforts of home," Joe finally has become known as the Mayor of O'Dwyer (officially and unofficially!)

Quite a Card Player

As regards to the fair sex Joe still claims to be a "free man." He believes in that old saying "Variety is the Spice of Life" and tries his best to steer clear of the same woman twice! (I have my doubts though for it's this "definitely Bachelor" type that you really have to watch out for! ! !

When not busy in the Field House with the team, Joe spends his leisure moments reading (his favorite is "Superman" at La Dow's Pharmacy) or else writing to his ex-Villanovan pals who are now serving in the armed forces of their country. He has a list of Army, Navy, and Marine addresses that would even give the War department records some keen competition. Our boy also has quite a reputation as a "card shark," and if you're interested in a good game of bridge, just drop in Room No. 6 O'Dwyer some time (purely for enjoyment however!)

His C. & F. training was put to practical use during his first two summer vacations, while working in the office of the Long Island Lighting Company. No doubt this position was again waiting for Joe this past summer but the accelerated program kept him more than busy here on the campus.

In the Navy Next

After graduation this January, Joe is looking forward to a three months training period at Harvard University for the U. S. Naval Supply Corps. From then on he's out to help the U. S. "moider dem bums"! Who knows Joe, maybe Brooklyn will win this war??????

WHEN it comes to handling a football team we must not forget the other half of that "Two-Man Power" Department; namely Lou Block. Lou is a Jersey boy (no place like it, is there Lou?) whose home town is a wee spot on the map called Dunellen. Here he attended St. John's Parochial School until the completion of his grammar school education.

Starts Managing

His next stop was Holy Trinity High School in Westfield, New Jersay where Lou became Manager of both the basketball and football teams. It was here that our victim gained so much exeperience in the managing of teams; something Villanova should thank Holy Trinity High School for! Towards the end of his high school days, Lou went dramatic for a brief period of time, when he was given the leading role in his Senior Class Play.

He soon gave up the idea of a stage career, however, and turned all of his attention towards the business world.

Before coming to Villanova, Lou operated a small store of his own in Dunellen. Business must have been very good those days, for it was then that he definitely decided to continue his education at Villanova.

Turns College Dude

Villanova welcomed Lou in the Mendel Hall, just as "green" as all the other Frosh of his class. Those frequent trips into 69th St. that year with the Mendel boys seemed to develop our prodige into quite the college dude, and before long he lost all of that "Irish Color" that usualy characterizes a Freshman. Like Joe, Lou likewise started out as freshman football manager, and has remained there ever since as "the man behind the men behind the football."

Although his job as football manager has occupied most of his time for these past four years, Lou still managed to find some time for other extra-curricular activities. He is a member of the Delta Pi Epsilon Frat, and has also served on the Sanctuary Society. In his Junior Year, he was appointed to the Ring Committee.

Lou is probably one of the most popular and well liked fellows in the Senior Class. You'll always find him with a smile on his face, and a joke to go with it. If you don't believe it, ask any fellow who's the best storyteller in Simpson Hall.

Those trips to Alabama, Florida, Detroit, etc. are by no means a vacation for either of these two boys, whose work is consistent from the time the team leaves Villanova till the moment they return. Lou knows what it is to have everything run smoothly while the team is on the road, and it takes fellows just like him and Joe to see that it does. So if you have any ideas of becoming a football manager, remember that it's no racket.

At the present time Lou is living in Simpson Hall (when he's not at the Field House. He spent his past summer here under the accelerated program, and the summer before that he worked in the Dunellen office of the MacFadden Publications.

Graduates in January

If you want to see a nice roseyred blush (no kidding) just mention the name "Barbara" when you're around Lou. It seems that he lost his heart to this certain Miss during his first three years at Villanova, but all of a sudden things became very complicated! ! ! Now when ever you see that light in his eye you'll know that it's due to a Latin Beauty named "Nicky." I admit this is all rather confusing, but after all fellows, you can't be too inquisitive!

Lou will receive his degree in Accounting from the C. & F. School this January, and after that he's going to let his Uncle Sam buy his new khaki suit. After the war he's looking forward to a business of his own, and if I know Lou, it will take more than a war to stop him!

Posi Office Proves Itself Popula: Place For Students Seeking Soothing Letters

"Hey, you, stop shoving." "Got anything for Jones?" "Lemme have that package!" "What's the combination to my mail box?"

These exclamations and many more drift from the swinging door of Villanova's diminutive post office between the hours of 8 A. M. and 6 P. M. It is during these hours that four mail trains unload their bags marked "Villanova" and it is during this time that 500 resident students throng into the small but important structure to see if someone from way back home has remembered to drop them a line.

Varied Expressions

It is a candid-camera fiend's Utopia to catch the varied expressions upon the mail-seekers' faces as they leave with or without those postmarked epistles. Some reading an absorbing bit from the "girl they left behind" walk nonchalantly into a post or railing; but without missing a line they stumble on rubbing a bruised shin with one hand and clenching the perfumed stationery with the other.

When an exceedingly boisterous group come out together, it is a sure sign that one of their friends (newly made or otherwise!) has received a likely looking package obnoxiously marked "PERISHABLE"—it is an almost certainty that the brown wrappings conceal some delectible bits of victuals which some thoughtful mother sent along for her son's in between meal snack. That fellow will be exceedingly fortunate if he can even reach the sanctuary of his room safely.

Reimbursement

The next type to be seen running joyously from Uncle Sam's place of delivery will very likely be waving a green rectangular piece of paper over his head. Looking real close the observer might catch a glimpse of a monetary sum written upon its surface — "Yep, it's a check — a big one!!" This gay student has just received an answer to his desperate "Special-delivery, Air-mail" which his father had undoubtedly received with a slight frown — but with soft-heartedness enough to send an almost immediate answer to the five page plea for pecuniary reimbursement caused by the advent of some "I-just-can't-miss-it" dance.

Disappointment

But every visitor to this place-across-the tracks doesn't leave with a carefree laugh or dreamy stagger. There are many who fail to find any token of family or friendly remembrance in their mail box or their names upon the list of those who have packages awaiting them. To the yet homesick freshman it

NEWS from the local colleges seems to be confined to several fall dances. La Salle College had their annual Harvest Dance last Friday, and from a few reports received, it went over with a bang! For the Villanova "anglemen", Chestnut Hill has engaged the services of Leo Zollo on November 20. For anyone who is interested, their Courtesy Bureau will arrange blind dates to a limited number of applicants. St. Joe's Junior Prom is scheduled for Nov. 25 at the Ben Franklin. The orchestra is as yet unannounced.

The draft has hit the La Salle Collegian — Lawrence Dondero, Editor-in-chief, found his number up one day, and his duties have been taken by George Gradel.

By the way, the Tatler is a smart and peppy publication, as all those gentlemen (?) who take them from my desk will tesify.

Our closing line of the week was purported to be uttered by John Barrymore before his death last summer.

When asked to attend a dull party by one of Hollywood's smart set, Mr. Barrymore said: "I would like to attend your gala affair, but I am prevented from accepting as I have a previous engagement, which I will surely make as soon as I hang up."

Discussing The Reserve Program

Music Seminar To Feature Classics

The music seminar at noon tomorrow will feature two Grieg compositions in room 215 Mendel Hall, the Per Gynt Suite and the Piano Concerta in A minor. Both compositions are standard classics whose more melodious strains have been profitably used for popular songs.

At the last meeting of the seminar, Tschaikowski's Fifth Symphony was presented in answer to Louis Merlini's perennial request. Attendance at the concert was largest during the playing of the second movement of the Symphony whose melody was transcribed into "Moon Love" several years ago.

The three "love" transcriptions based on Tschaikowski's themes, "Moon Love," "Our Love," and "Tonight We Love" brought about the extreme popularity of his Fifth Symphony, the Romeo and Juliet Overture, and his Piano concerto in B Minor respectively.

Many familiar medolies

Both compositions tomorrow have received diverse treatment by modern orchestras. In the Per Gynt Suite are many well known melodies: "In The Hall of The Mountain King," "Anitra's Dance," and "Aise's Death" being the most popular. The Suit is based on the heroic legend of Per Gynt.

The Piano Concerta in A Minor was popularized by Freddie Martin's orchestra who previously aided the music lovers in discovering Tschaikowski's Piano Concerto. The theme Freddie Martin used was from the first movement of the Concerto.

Dr. Haenisch declares that many of the requests he receives for classical compositions are determined by the solicitors' knowledge of the popular rendition of the work, not of the original itself. For this reason, Dr. Haenisch must keep track of popular recordings so that he might play the original at some future seminar. He owns a huge library of semi-classical records or "pre-exam material" as he refers to them.

Two Former Students Promoted In Air Corps

According to press-releases forwarded to the VILLANOVAN office from the Public Relations department of the various army camps, the following informations has been received concerning two former Villanova students.

Richard Heckler, former member of the class of '43 and at present an aviation cadet, will graduate this week to the upper class of flying students at the Greenville Basic Flying School, Texas.

While enrolled at Villanova, Cadet Heckler won a varsity letter as a standout performer on the swimming team.

From Atlantic City, N. J., Heckler is one of the first class of student pilots to begin basic training at Texas' newest flying school.

Second Lieutenant Raymond J. Harter, graduate of the class of '37 arrived at the New Orleans Army Air Base today to join in an expanding training program for ground forces of the Army Air Corps.

After receiving his B. S. in Economics from the Commerce and Finance School, Lieut. Harter attended Harvard University. At present, he is serving as Finance Officer of an Air Depot Group.

mission. Otherwise he would have to enter the Navy as an apprentice seaman.

Nine Months Training

Lieut. Lincoln spoke next for V-5, the Naval Air Corps Reserve. "Training lasts nine months," he said, "at the end of which you are given your choice of a commission as an ensign in the Naval Air Corps or as a second lieutenant in the Marine Air Corps. When you graduate you are given an opportunity to switch to the regular Navy and make your life's work that of a Naval flying officer."

Major Stetson of the Marine Corps concluded the talks by describing the position the Marines hold in the armed services. "For 156 years, Marines have used commando practices in landing on foreign shores," he stated. "To be a marine you need 'a flexible mind' with the ability to adapt itself to varying conditions," he said. "The Marine Corps wants men who can accept responsibility. Students who are members of the Marine Corps Reserve," he announced, "are now subject to 24 hour call."

Following Major Stetson's speech, a general question period was held in which students were able to ask any one of the officers pertinent questions. Promptly at 3 o'clock the officers adjourned to respective rooms in Mendel Hall where they helped individual students solve their problems.

Names Requested

Fr. McQuade has also stated that all students desiring to enlist in one of the Reserve Programs should hand in their names at the Registrar's Office at their earliest convenience.

Tid-Bits Of CAMPUS NEWS

Today and tomorrow between 1:00 and 1:30 P. M., the October issue of the "Villanova Engineer" will be distributed to all engineering students.

Under the editorship of Thomas Muraski, '43, this issue will feature an interesting essay on the "Growth of the Soybean Industry," by Francis Quinn, freshman. Another excellent article is supplied by Edward L. Manderfield, '43, entitled "The Gyroscopic Compass."

William A. Hadfield and Wallace J. Redner, coeditors of the Mendel Bulletin, announced that the next issue of the Quarterly will appear in December.

The last issue was published in September by the members of the Science school taking the accelerated course. The feature articles were "Mein Kampf," written by George Salzman, a senior science student, which concerns man's battle against the insect world and "Photoelectric Colorimetry."

The Villanova College Chapter of the American Association of University Professors has elected its officers for the coming year. Former vice-president Dr. William H. McHugh was elected president, replacing Dr. Gilbert Macbeth. Dr. Leo F. Brown was elected vice-president and Professor William C. Henry was retained as secretary-treasurer.

At the last meeting of Lambda Kappa Delta, Science school fraternity, Angelo Macchia, the president of the organization, announced that initiation of new members will take place on the night of December 14. This announcement is in accordance with a statement by Rev. Francis X. N. McGuire, O. S. A., Dean of Men, who said that this date had been set aside on the social calendar for the L. K. D. initiations.

Application forms for the freshmen will be issued within the week.

Macchia also stated that he would like all seniors who desire fraternity keys to place their order with him as soon as possible.

Holding their first meeting of the the school semester, Delta Phi Epsilon, commerce and finance fraternity, under James Meehan, senior, as president, has announced that all former activities of the group will be limited to one affair.

This will be in the form of a smoker to be held some date not yet definite but before the Christmas holidays.

It was also planned that nominations for a vice-president will be held at the next meeting. This position was not filled during the elections which took place last spring.

Sophomore Dance Committee Picked

Callahan, Ehart, Albano, Hitchell Appointed Chairmen; All Schools Are Represented

With Thomas J. Quigley, an artsman, presiding, the first meeting of the committee which is in charge of the management of the Sophomore Cotillion was held last Friday. At that time it was voted that the committee be divided into four groups: ticket, publicity and program, decoration, and refreshment.

At this meeting, the chairmen of each of these groups were selected also, with students from the Science, Engineering, Commerce and Finance and Arts schools receiving the nominations.

Committee Chairmen

James W. Callahan, a Commerce and Finance student, was named chairman of the ticket committee. He will be assisted by Angel Salazar, James Bradley and Salvatore Carfagno of the Science school, George Matthews and John Masson, engineers, Charles LaBelle, commerce and finance student and James P. McWilliams, artsman.

Daniel N. Ehart, of the Arts school, was selected chairman of the Publicity and Program committee, with Charles Gallagher, Commerce and Finance student, John Dolphin, scienceman, and John M. Lafferty, an engineer, as his aides. They will place posters in Mendel Hall, the dormitories, and at various advantageous points outside the campus to advertise the dance and will have charge of the printing and distribution of the programs.

Meeting Today

A science student, Nicholas Albano, was chosen to be chairman of the Refreshment committee. He will be aided by James P. Rooney of the School of Education, William D. Kelly, a commerce student and Nicoli Tripician, of the engineering school.

The decorations committee is headed by Thomas Hitchell, an Engineer, who is assisted by John Brennan and William Butler, Commerce and Finance students, and John Mezzanati of the Science School.

Today there will be a meeting of all the committees in room 110 Mendel Hall at 1:00 P. M. At that time tickets will be distributed for sale.

Gasoline Provision Made For Commuters

Of particular interest to the day students is the following information concerning gasoline rationing and the college student received from William M. Griest, State Rationing Officer:

"Under Section 1394.151 (22) of the Gasoline Rationing Regulations, the pursuit of a regular and recognized course of study is considered an "occupation," and therefore college students regularly pursuing such studies are eligible for the allowances of occupational mileage under Section 504 of the Regulation providing the requirements with respect to ride-sharing arrangements are met or showing the absence of reasonably adequate means of transportation.

"In no event, however, may the Board grant occupational mileage in excess of an average of 470 miles per month for travel of a student to and from college."

Advent of Winter Requires Word Of Caution to Natives of Milder Terrain

By TOM McFARLAND

Last Saturday the old girl in the wingless pursuit plane partially eclipsed a late Autumn moon, and cast a weird shadow on the Villanova campus as she swept on her chilly way. When the flying scullery-maid finally did an "off-to-Buffalo" Northward, we were absolutely certain that the first days of the new term were over and the season of bloody toil had already begun.

Winter, that crystal spectre who rains work, fogs brains, ices socialites, and snows under all the spare time, (It says here) is, at present, peering with cold eyes around the corner of the field house. He waits for a night when the guard, in the person of a man still wearing gabardine, is drowsy. When the moment of his choosing arrives he will dash up the road with a cloud of flurrying snow at his heels and overwhelm the entire acreage with one blast of his particularly frigid breath.

To Philadelphians this will mean nothing; they have been hardened to the climate, but to those who were born and reared somewhat below the Mason-Dixon it will mean a deal of discomfort. The best advice to Freshmen is this: right under the Varga calendar, in the bottom right-hand side of your trunk, there is a surprise waiting for you Mother slipped your "longies" into the baggage while you were on that last minute shopping trip with dad — remember? — the time you went out to buy the razor.

You may find, friends, that these snuggies will be very useful, that is, if you are not yet as rugged in constitution as life-long residents of this community are. This P. T. in the Winter can become a hazardous thing if a little common sense concerning such things as dressing warmly after exercise, is not employed. However, such drastic measures as long underwear are usually not warranted; but, like a little coin, it does no harm being around the bureau.

Of course, we are not allowed to guess about the weather to come, but we do not think it unpatriotic to say that tomorrow we may have a little (CENSORED) and that the rest of the week may be (CENSORED). Other than that, we may say with reasonable certainty that for the duration of the month we may expect some (CENSORED).

When a man speaks of the weather you know that he is lost for a topic that is universally pertinent. We have a subject of that ilk, but it begins with a "W" and rhymes with jerk, so we have decided not to mention it at all. Suffice it to say that there is plenty of it and that it is all hard and that it is a trifle better than lying in some fox-hole at Guadalcanal, and that it is a duty to Uncle S., Pop and Mom. Nothing more.

The C. & F. boys have settled down for their hibernation, and the annual change of their building's name will soon capture popular interest. Last summer it was known to all as "Holiday Inn"; this winter it will be called "Shangri-La." There are a few complaints about the course this year, and the campus is startled at the report that some of these men have felt the necessity to stay home and study during weekends!

The Spanish clan has stored in Diosa Costello recordings to alleviate the chill that will soon settle upon Villanova, and when the sky is descending in small white flakes, they expect to restore circulation by engaging in a trifle of la Conga. Of course, if it really gets bad they intend to feast on those little green, innocent-looking peppers that the unconscious nibbler has found to possess quite a wallop.

All this discourse is a twelve inch way of saying that Autumn is an awful topic, especially since it may be Winter before the development of it reaches the printer.

Autumn

A break of the bluest Autumn sky and a thousand floating leaves
Swim and swirl to foreign heights,
Curl gracefully under the eaves;
Scurrying, hurrying scattering,
O'er the roll of the hill they fly
Rustling and whispering into the glen
And fall 'gainst the wall to die.

The leaf that crinkles in my hand,
If I press it to the root
Of yon stark oak—in the glow of Spring
Will I recognize the shoot?
For the brown, bent leaf that erst is dead
Will cloak the world in green.
Life from Death, firm, quiv-ring
Life,
And midwife Death is Queen.

Where the crisped leaves lie lifeless
Shall in Spring be verdant with clover,
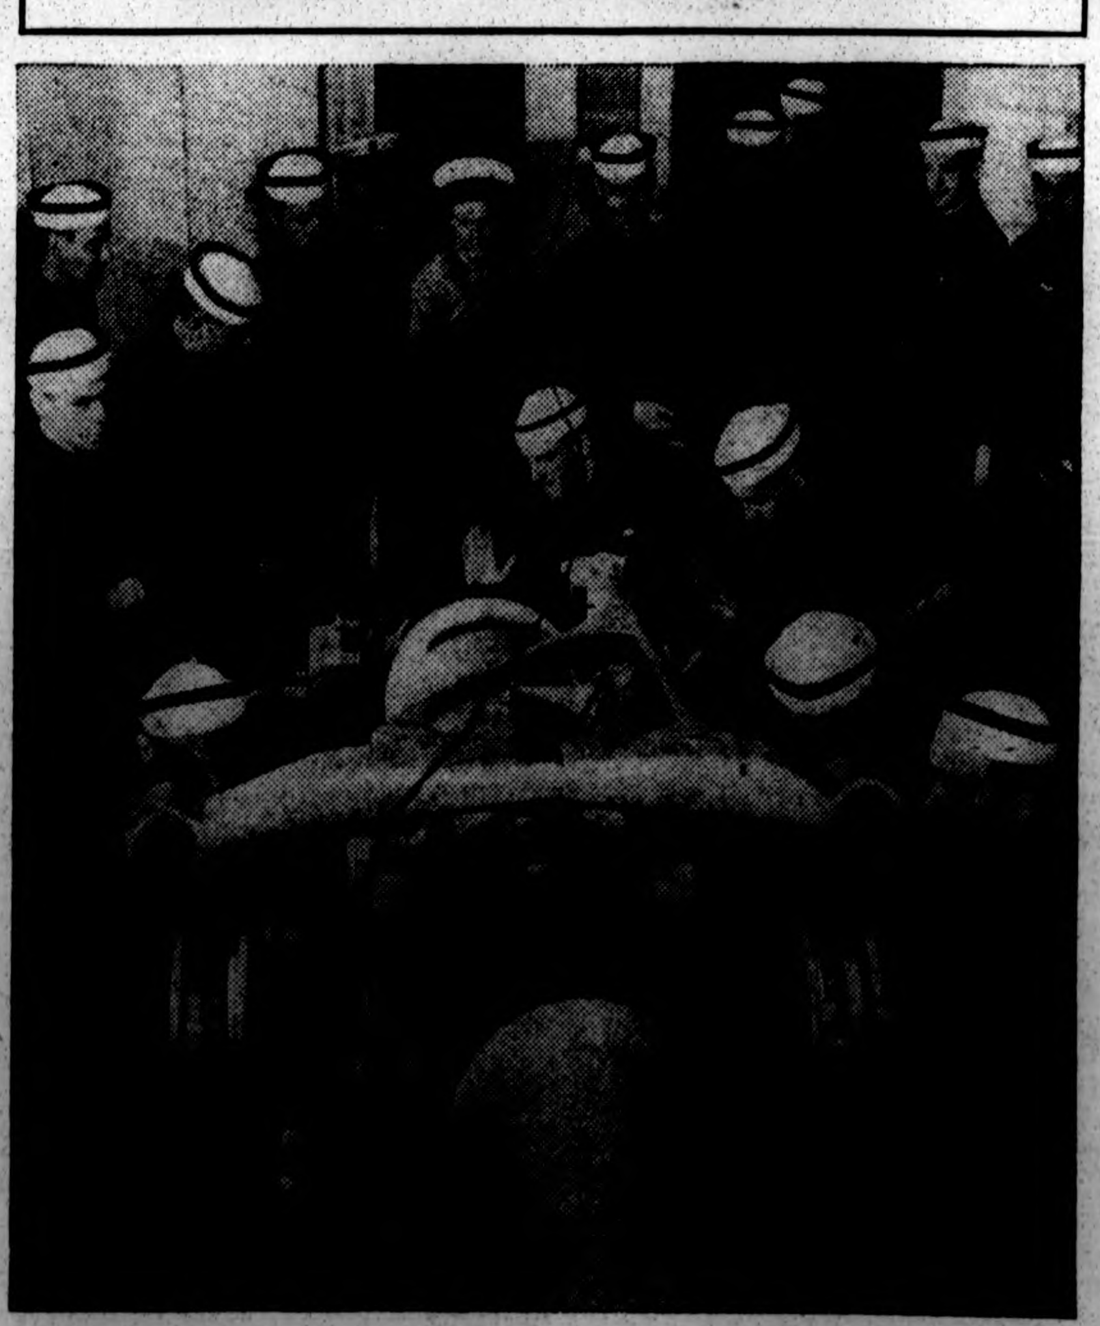
Tangling vines, sun-splashing trees;
For Life is Death—warmed over.

MIDSHIPMEN GIVEN ORDNANCE INSTRUCTION ABOARD U.S. NAVY TRAINING SHIP



The Navy's V-1 Accredited College program serves as a feeder for deck or engineering officers (V-7) and for aviation officers (V-5). Freshmen and Sophomores who enlist in the Navy's Class V-1 and qualify for deck or engineering officers training will be sent to a training school as midshipmen and will receive an intensive course in seamanship, ordnance and navigation.

Midshipmen, who can be identified by the dark band on their hats, are pictured here as they receive ordnance instruction aboard the U.S.S. Prairie State

THE BEGINNING OF THE END FOR MANHATTAN

Al Postus (60) starts out on 79 yard touchdown jaunt for Villanova's first score.

Sportorial

By Jacques Mauch

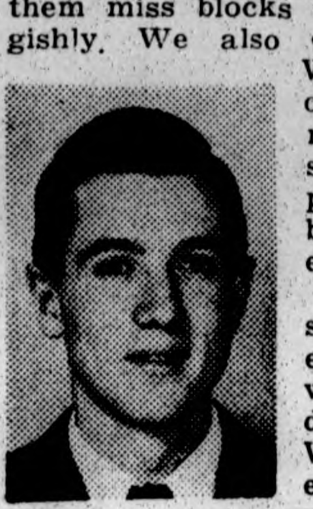
In the short span of sixty minutes Sunday afternoon at Shibe Park we saw our Villanova Wildcats play all kinds of football, from the type that causes coaches to get gray to the type that forces praise from the lips of even the most partisan opponent rooter.

We saw the Wildcats pushed around so much in the first period that they looked like a blocking machine the Chicago Bears had just knocked around the practice field; we saw the Jaspers open wide holes in their defense; we saw them miss blocks and drive sluggishly. We also saw Blue and White backs record the longest runs of the season; we saw passes click and blocks knife enemy defenders.



But what we saw that pleased us most were fighting, determined Wildcats. Eleven resolute men playing as hard as they knew how. After those two magnificent goal line battles in which they withstood the hopeful Jasper attack for eight downs within the six yard line we knew the men in blue would rise in victory.

Postus' dazzling 79 yard run was only the beginning. The swivel-hipped junior had been threatening to do something like that for a season and a half. Now that he's done it once the fans will expect to see it every game.

Steve Pritko was determined to boost his kicking average even if it mean bouncing them off the north wall and he did just that in the final period when he stood on his own forty-five and sailed one completely over the end zone.

Frosh pivotman, Art Alois, must have thought he did something wrong when the Clipper removed him with nine minutes and forty seconds remaining. Art played all but fifty seconds of the two previous games.

* * *

Johnny Dzitko did his best to see that George Smith could score his first touchdown of the year when he gave him the ball four times on the one yard line. But Manhattan had something else to say about it. That's all right George, those boys from New York know that you can smash a line. Besides, you violated all rules last year when you scored three time and you were only supposed to do the blocking!

'Cat Second Half Drive Blasts Manhattan 32-0

Postus Scampers 79 Yards, Pezelski 56 for Scores; Milt Anderson Tallies Twice on Pass and Recovery of Blocked Kick

By BILL WALSH

After being kept in check for three games this season, Villanova's offensive strength exploded all over Shibe Park Sunday afternoon and the Wildcats overwhelmed a highly touted Manhattan eleven by the score of 32-0.

Despite the fact that they were on the defensive throughout the entire first stanza and most of the second, the Blue and White gridmen began their scoring spree near the end of the first half, when halfback Al Postus crashed off tackle on his own twenty-one, and twisting his way through the entire Jasper secondary, crossed the New Yorkers' goal line after a seventy-nine yard jaunt, to start a very successful day for the Main Liners.

Jaspers Repulsed On Two

After the opening kickoff went out of bounds, the Kelley Green took possession of the ball on the thirty-five, and from that point began an uninterrupted march which was stymied on the Wildcat two. It was at this point that Villanova made a heroic goal line stand, as they held the Jaspers for four downs without permitting them to reach pay dirt.

After kicking from the end zone the Main Liners gained 24 yards on the exchange of punts as captain Frank Keisecker, fullback for Manhattan, got off a poor kick from midfield which went out of bounds on the Wildcats' 22. After Postus had gained 18 yards off tackle, he quickkicked to the Jaspers' 20, and the first period ended with no score.

Postus Scores

Still pushed around in the beginning of the second quarter Villanova again repulsed a Jasper attack on the seven, and after a field goal attempt by Jim Worst went wide, they took posession of the pigskin on their own 20. A buck into the center of the line was good for a yard. Then Postus reeled off his sensational run amid the cheers of 17,000 spectators. Pezelski's try for the extra point was good, and the half ended a few minutes later with Villanova out in front by the score of 7-0.

Ericson Stars In New Role

Picking up where they left off, the Blue and White stalwarts started things rolling immediately after play began in the second half, when, after kicking off to the Kelley Green, they got possession of the ball through the alert interception of a Jasper pass by Roy Ericson. Ericson, a guard, played a new role on defense Sunday afternoon, as he played immediately behind the scrimmage line as an important

Runners Improve With Heavy Work

The Villanova trackmen swung into their third week of practice yesterday as the workouts became more intense and the boys showed signs of good conditioning for the first time since last spring.

The squad has been bolstered by the return of George Guida, sprint star of last year's cinder team. Guida has been engaging in the football scrimmages with the varsity. He was a member of last year's crack relay combination that gained nation-wide acclaim. He ran with John DiCarlo and Bob O'Sullivan, who are returning this season again.

Dunbar Missing

Dixie Dunbar, fourth member of this powerful quartet, left school to enlist in the merchant marine. His replacement is the main problem now facing the 'Cat runners. Senior Harry Keefrider and junior Dutch McCarthy are the best possibilities for the fourth spot.

As yet there have been no meets scheduled for the fall season. The regular indoor session does not begin until January. Meanwhile, the runners continue to condition themselves by loping over the outdoor course.

Freshmen Report

The weather was so warm last week that most of the boys retired to the cinder track to complete their workouts by running wind sprints or dashing through several straight-a-ways to make sure they do not lose any of their speed.

A number of freshmen candidates reported last week and began practice with last year's members. They, along with Bob Regan and Bob Fitzgerald, should bolster the strength of the usually small squad.

No reports are forthcoming on the acquisition of a new track mentor to replace Jim Elliott, now a lieutenant (j.g.) in the Navy.

Iowa State Pits Speed Against Wildcat Power

Mediocre Cyclone Team Gunning for First Major Victory Friday Night; Depends on Fast Back and Aerial Threat to Win

Coming into Philadelphia with a record that is none too impressive, the Cyclones of Iowa State under mentor Mike Michalske will tackle Clipper Smith's Wildcats under the floodlights of Shibe Park this Friday night.

Michalske, former Penn State guard who only recently was appointed head coach, succeeding Ray Donels, has however put new life into the boys from Iowa. With a few minor changes in system, he has developed a fast charging line, backed up by an impressive aerial system.

It will be remembered that Michalske himself did quite a bit of footballing in his day. After starring at Penn State, he moved around with various professional teams, most recently with Green Bay. He was named All-Professional guard no less than six times. Only a few weeks ago the famous Benny Friedman was quoted as calling Mike Michalske the greatest guard he ever saw.

Depend on Speed

Finishing last in the Big Six conference last year, Iowa State makes up in spirit what it lacks in power. With a team weight average of 185, the men from Ames are hoping that their speed will be too much for Villanova.

Losing to Nebraska, Marquette, Missouri and Oklahoma, the Cyclones managed to win over Denver and score impressively over Drake. Of course running into the competition of the Big Six, the Westerners have been the victims of a tough schedule.

Lohry Offensive Threat

Hampered by injuries that have cropped up at unexpected moments, the Mid-Westerners' starting lineup has changed almost every game. Two regular starters, however, are fullback Paul Darling and halfback Royal Lohry, captain of the Cardinal and Gold. These two speedsters are the spearhead of Coach Michalske's attack.

Often outgained but never outfought, the Iowans have improved as the season has progressed. Banking on a high percentage of pass completions they are expected to give the Wildcats plenty of anxious moments. In the pass defense department the Smithmen have not shown too much strength, so there's no doubt Clipper will have to concentrate on it.

Use New Plays

Besides Lohry's passes, the Cyclones have a new set of plays devised by Michalske to bolster their scoring power. With their offense as their best defense, the Cardinal and Gold will pit their speed against a strong Villanova line, in fact one of the strongest Blue and White lines in recent years.

Star Kicker

Also slated for plenty of action are the ends, George Harville and Maurice Ryan. These boys have

Blue Lightweights Bolster Defense For Rutgers Tilt

The stunning defeat that Villanova's 150-lb. team received in its first game against Princeton has produced some good as well as naturally bad effects. Although the self-confidence of the team was considerably undermined by the size of the score, the loss has served to increase the determination of all members of the squad to forge themselves into a winning combination. Both the coaches and players feel that they have in possession the potentialities of a successful team, and thus they are diligently endeavoring to convert these possibilities into realities.

Several Changes Made

The schedule has benefited Villanova by giving the 150's a two week interval before meeting Rutgers this Friday afternoon at New Brunswick. The additional time was very efficiently used last week, with special emphasis being placed on the fundamentals and the conditioning of the players. There was a scrimmage every day, and with the addition of many new freshmen candidates, the drills were long and hard.

Doc Jacobs, the head mentor, was unable to attend the practice sessions last week because of previous commitments, but his able assistant, Fr. Sullivan, made many changes in the line in an endeavor to improve the weak defensive play.

McGovern to Play Halfback

Among the newcomers was Walt Young, who played on last year's Valley Forge Military Academy team. He is making a strong bid for the right guard berth.

A surprise move found Ed McGovern, sophomore from St. Benedict's Prep, leaving his familiar right end spot to take over the blocking back duties. McGovern is tall and fast, and should be very valuable in catching the right half passes. He will be assisted in the backfield by Dick Breen, a hard plunging fullback who was unable to play against Princeton.

McManus Lost

In general, the team is very much improved but the lightweights have been further handicapped by the loss of their star running back,

Mendel Day Hops Overcome Austin; Alumni Wins Two

Firemen Drop First Game of Season to Defending Champs 40-35; Alumni Joins Them in Tie for League Lead

By JIM CARBINE

Austin Hall, leaders of the intramural basketball circuit, a week ago, and usually strong contenders for the championship crown, found themselves none too secure when the last shot had been taken in last week's final game.

Right at the top of the heap with the Firemen were the Mendel Day Hops and Alumni Hall who had drawn even by winning two games while Austin dropped a crucial contest to the aggressive day students on Tuesday, 40-35.

Day Hops Rally

This was the week's big battle and the future fortunes of both clubs depended heavily on it. Ausin started out with a heavy attack and led at halftime 21-17, mainly through Art Martin's proficient ball handling.

The Day Hoppers came back strong, and after matching point for point most of the period, they burst forth with a barrage in the final minutes that sent the Firemen reeling under an attack that they were never able to overcome. Gianquilio was the mainstay of Mendel's team as he racked up 18 points, while Martin paced the losers with 13 markers.

C. & F. Wins

In Tuesday's other two games the C. & F. defeated the Mendel residents, 53 to 49, and Alumni won from Fedigan, 43 to 24. The Commercemen, however, did not have an easy go of it as is indicated by the score. The lead raged back and forth between the two teams intermittently and was not decided until the final minutes. Flaherty was outstanding for the C. & F. team with a total of 15 points. Alumni with their smooth offense and tight defense won easily from Fedigan with Corkle's 7 points high for the team.

Austin Regains Stride

On Thursday the three leaders won with ease. The Mendel day students defeated the C. & F. boys 60 to 42. Gianguilio again led the Gray Shirts with 10 points; Flaherty had 12 points for the C. & F. club.

Cheppa was Austin's high scorer with 13 points, as they defeated Fedigan Hall 38 to 23. Smart ball handling was the feature of this game with Jack Koval and Red McFadden moving the ball like varsity material.

Mendel Residents Lose Again

The close game of this series was the Alumni contest with the Gold Bugs of Mendel Hall in which the Greenies won out 35 to 29. The Mendel team came out at the half leading 17 to 13, ready to do or die to break their string of defeats, but they lacked the final spurt that often means the ball game and in this case it did. With five minutes to go they still led 27 to 25, but then Father Dunne's team, with the pressure on, found their eyes again and collected ten points to win the ball game. Savage paced the winners with 8 points, as Jack Miller of Mendel registered 12 points.

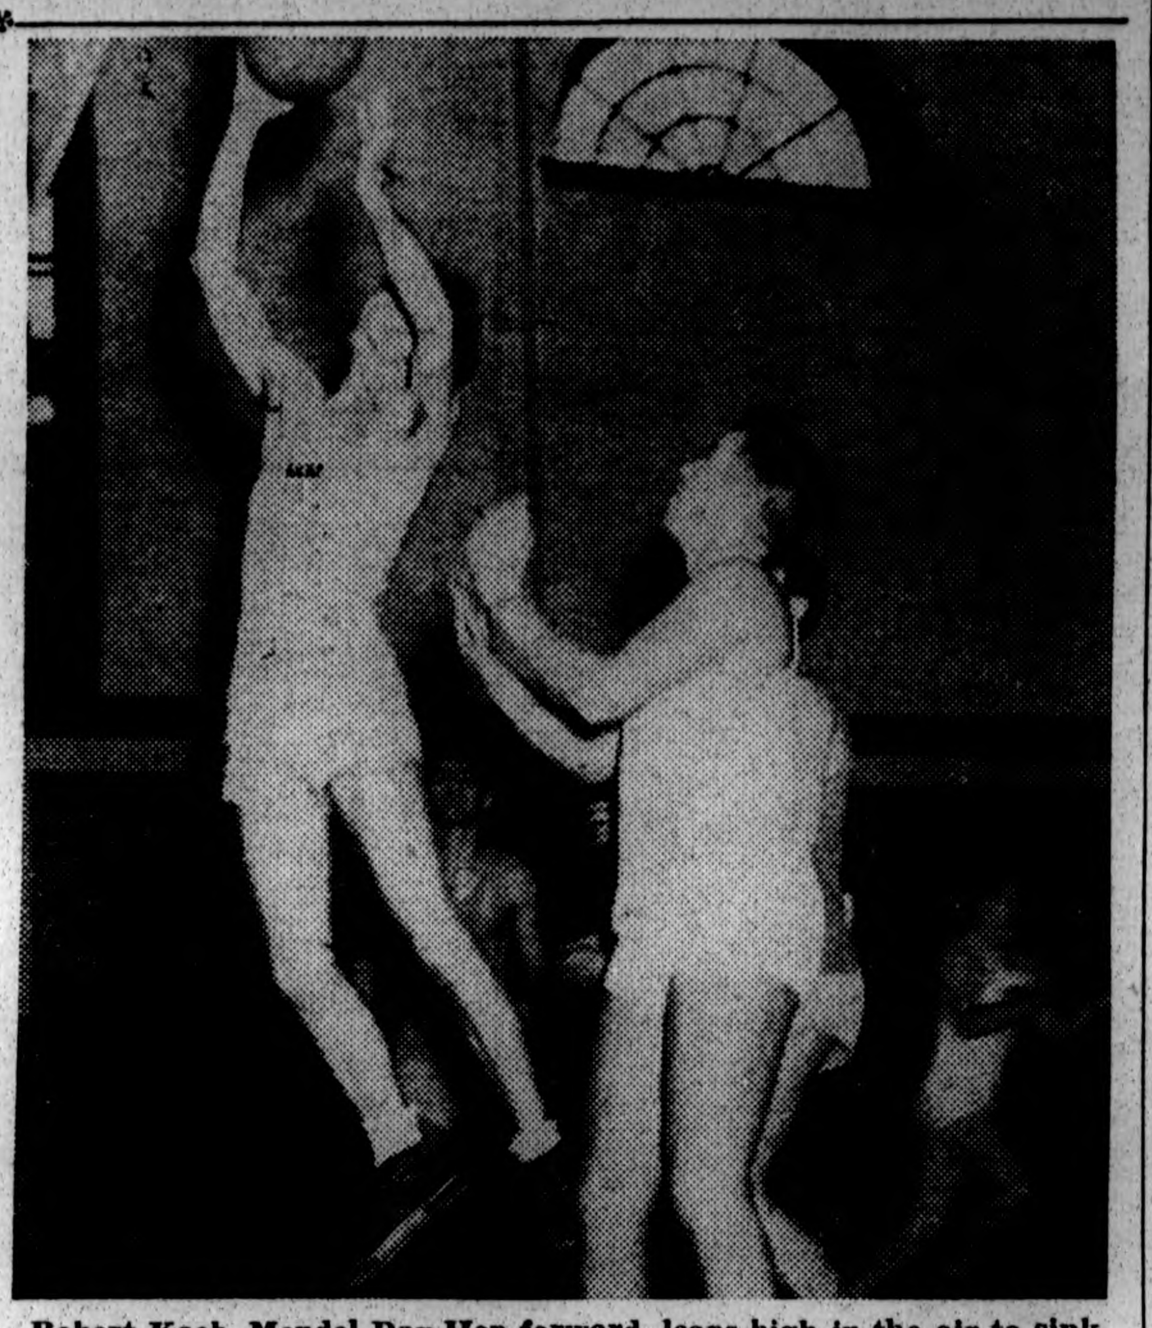
Key Games This Week

Today Alumni locks horns with Mendel day students in a game which undoubtedly will supply many a thrill and spill. Austin will meet the C. & F. team which will not be any pushover for the Firemen. In the finale the Mendel residents in an attempt to break their losing streak take on Fedigan Hall. The three-way tie has to be broken this week as Alumni is slated to meet Austin on Thursday.

Whitey Kurowski Remembered By 'Cats

Villanovans were in intimate contact with Whitey Kurowski, rookie star of the past World Series before the ill-fated Yankees ever thought of their nemesis.

Kurowski, attended Muhlenberg College, in Allentown where he was quite an all-around athlete. In 1938 Whitey scored the lone Mule touchdown against Villanova on a 98 yard gallop. In all, he played two seasons against the 'Cats.



Robert Koob, Mendel Day Hop forward, leaps high in the air to sink a field goal in Mendel's victory over the Commerce and Finance commuters. The Mendel team is in a three way tie for first place in the Intramural League.

cog of a 5-3-2-1 defense, something new in Clipper Smith's defensive formations.

Postus Throws Perfect Strike

From the 40, immediately after Ericson's interception, Postus passed to John Dzitko for nine, and Pezelski, on a double reverse, went around left end for 13 more, putting the ball on the 18. At this point Postus took the ball from center and started to the right on what looked like an end run, and fooled the entire Manhattan secondary when he threw a running pass to freshman Milt Anderson in the end zone, for Villanova's second touchdown. Pezelski's kick for the extra point was wide, and Villanova was ahead 13-0.

Harkins Tallies Third

After Konopka's kickoff was returned to the 29, the Jaspers were penalized 15 yards for holding, and when a bad pass from center went into the end zone, Jim Harkins fell on the elusive pigskin to give the Main Liners their third touchdown.

Villanova kicked off to the Jaspers, and the ball was returned to the 25. On the first play Ericson intercepted his second aerial of the day on the 34, and from that point Pezelski went off tackle to the 19. Smith then went through center to the eight but was repulsed on his next three attempts, and Manhattan took possession on the ten, as the quarter ended.

Anderson Scores Again

After an exchange of kicks, Postus faked a pass and went from his own 36 to the 47. On the fourth down, Pritko, angling for the coffin corner, was slightly off line, and the ball went into the end zone. Manhattan took over on the 20. Keisecker then attempted to punt, but his effort was blocked by Carlesimo, who crashed in from his tackle position, and Anderson recovered the loose ball in the end zone for another Wildcat touchdown. Postus 'kick was wide and Villanova led 25-0.

Pezelski Goes 55 Yards

Konopka's kickoff went out of bounds once again, and the Kelley Green took over on the 35. After a trio of incompleted aerials the Jaspers punted to the Blue and White 30. After going off tackle to the 44, Pezelski on the second play went around left end, reversed his field, and amid beautiful blocking crossed the Manhattan goal line standing up, to make the score 31-0. Danik's kick was good and Villanova led by 32 points.

The play for the rest of the game was staged almost entirely in Manhattan territory, and Villanova had more than realized its ambition to defeat the team from New York which upset them last year.

shown up well on the offensive, and will bear watching. Another Cyclone Ace is Sophomore Ronnie Norman, who understudies Captain Royal Lohry at the running half. Norman has gained his fame as a talented punter. He's by far the longest kicker on the squad, and has pulled the Cyclones out of more than one tight spot. Besides coffin corner accuracy Norman has booted a few 70 yard punts from scrimmage, and this gives him long distance honors also.

Don Siebold, fast charging guard, and Bill Barger, 207 pound tackle, provide plenty of power on the right side of the Iowan's forward wall, and are a hard pair to eliminate on plays through that side.

"Goal Line Stand Was Big Factor In Our Eventual Victory" -- Smith

The outstanding feature of our victory over Manhattan Sunday was the great stand the boys made on the two yard line in the first quarter. It was a defensive accomplishment as good as any we've seen a Villanova team make since we've been here. By this feat the boys showed that they didn't want to lose and were not going to lose even though the odds were against them.

Best Team in Seven Years

This Manhattan team was the best we've faced during our seven years here. Their running game hurt us more than any we've met this season with the exception of Auburn.

The score does not indicate how tough the victory was. To me a 30-0 score is the same as a 13-0 win. When a team gets two touchdowns behind they become reckless and take chances. The result is that they make physical mistakes they wouldn't ordinarily commit which lead to scores for the other team. Army did the same thing against Penn Saturday by passing deep in their own territory and Penn intercepted and later scored. After we got a lead our boys just capitalized on Manhattan's mistakes.

Several Standouts

The defense was working fine after the first period. They covered on all but two passes which was a good feature. The boys were not able to contemplate the Jasper's tricky maneuvers in the beginning. Running plays the way they did with three different men in motion it was difficult to ascertain what might happen.

Anderson's all-around alertness was the outstanding phase of the line play. Vin Carlesimo played his best game to date blocking those two kicks. Johnny Dzitko's play calling was fine and George Smith's defensive work and one series of line bucks stood out.

Offensive Blocking Weak

As a unit, however, the offense wasn't good. Postus' and Pezelski's breakaway runs were pieces of individual brilliance. They should have had more blocking. We were playing individually most of the afternoon and we must get together if we are to do well later.

We have to brush up on our offensive blocking. We lacked polish that we must have if we are to be successful in our remaining four games.

In general the play was satisfactory and we all got a much needed lift which should help us in our remaining contests.

The local boys on the team really flashed the Pepsodent smiles when the game was over and they dashed across the field to be congratulated by former high school chums and girl friends. Lou Lopez spread the niftiest set of pearls, and who wouldn't with all that femininity hanging around.

Captain Hank Christman, another local boy, strode across the field with the game prize pigskin tucked under his arm, like Grant marching on Richmond.

Al Barker was having his own private duel with the Jaspers' Ventuolo. They were just starting the third round when the game ended.

A ninety millimeter projectile wouldn't have had any more effect on Vinnie Carlesimo's broad bosom than those two punts of Captain Kiesecker's which he blocked.

The Clark Gables of the team turned out to be Joe Pezelski, Leo Jagoe, and Roy Erickson. The grins they produced for the man with the movie camera stretched halfway across the field. Be seeing you in the newsreels boys!

Touch Football To Get Underway

Fathers McKee and Dunne, intramural mentors, announced last week that the Touch Football League will get under way soon. This popular form of intramural competition, which has gained rapid interest in the past has been somewhat delayed by the accelerated program and will start as soon as the physical training classes are fully organized.

Intrahall Competition

The present plan is for the various enthusiasts to form teams, on their own initiative, for the purpose of intrahall relations. From this will develop the leading or all-star team to represent the hall in the Intramural League. This has been accomplished in the past and is expected to meet with success again this year.

The golf and tennis tournaments usually held in late September had to be postponed due to the present emergency. They will be resumed in the spring, however.

Blue Lightweights

Jack McManus, whose heavy engineering schedule will prevent him from competing any more this year. McManus has distinguished himself throughout the last two seasons by his fast, shifty running and exceptional punting ability. He has always been a team player, and it will be difficult for the coaches to refill his left halfback position. There is a possibility that veteran Jim Cahill will move over from his fullback duties to do the running and passing.

Two Members Withdraw

Most of the other positions will find the same starters that participated in the Princeton fracas. A capable end to take over McGovern's vacated position is still desired by the coaches.

Because war-time difficulties have caused Lafayette and Yale to withdraw from the League, the Wildcats will only play four games this season. After meeting Rutgers on Friday, Cornell will be played on November 14 at Villanova. The lightweights will play their final game on the following Saturday against Penn at River Field.

HERE and THERE

By JACK DUDLEY

Gridiron coaching talent among varsity and one-fifty performers is being uncovered at Villanova this season. Currently directing intramural athletics at Valley Forge Military Academy is a quartet of Main Liners. Last week one outfit coached by Jack McMahon ran roughshod over a team headed by Bill Marchese, winning easily 18-0. Frank Chaplar and Doug Boyd matched their coaching abilities, the result of being a scoreless tie.

The Wildcat stars have given a hand to varsity coaching at the Academy, helping out in the scrimmages. What they would like to do is to send an all-star intramural team against the varsity. A victory over the first stringers would be an achievement for Frank, Doug, Jack, and Bill.

—V—

Probably the most famous name in Villanova boxing history is that of Bill Duffy. Bill was able to go places as a pro after he graduated. Last year he added color to the intramural boxing show by acting as referee.

Latest word to reach the campus about Duff is that he is stationed with the Navy at Dutch Harbor, Alaska, as a Chief Petty Officer. As a Navy boxer Bill has been undefeated. Recently he whipped the Pacific Fleet's welterweight champ.

—V—

Bucky Coleman, promising sophomore track star, is grateful to be back this fall. Buck spent the summer working as a lifeguard at a suburban Philadelphia swimming pool. He divided the duties with another guard, each one working a shift of a few hours. Tragedy, in the form of a bolt of lightning, struck the pool last August killing the guard on duty. Bucky had been relieved but a few minutes when the accident occurred.

—V—

Nothing was more welcome than an open date over last weekend for Doc Jacobs' reviving one-fifties. The skirmish with Princeton showed plenty of room for improvement in the play of the lightweights. One thing definitely brought out by that game was if we had seven Joe Carbines on that forward wall, Villanova would be right up on top of that old league. We think that between them, Carbine and Tony Paguta made ninety percent of the Wildcats' tackles. Not many plays went past Joe, but if one did, there was Tony to break it up.

Workouts since the opener have been encouraging. George Famiglietti is adapting himself to the center position, one that he had never played before. Herm Behnke, playing football for the first time in his life is developing rapidly as a guard. Dick Ryan, a late arrival, is looking like a better prospect at guard every day.

We think the results of the coming Rutgers game will be far more cheerful than was the opener.

Also, it's an afternoon well spent watching those boys out there really giving everything they have to win some games.

—V—

It's been a long time since we last stuck out our neck, so with some interesting football contests coming up this weekend we think we'll look over the situation and make some predictions.

Friday night, Villanova meets Iowa State at Shibe Park. Not that we think we'd be disloyal in not picking Villanova, but because we think the 'Cats are definitely on the way to a successful season, we'll stick by Villanova.

Philadelphia teams in action Saturday are:

Pennsylvania, who will avenge its defeat last year by Navy; Temple, travelling to take on Boston College; and Swarthmore, going up against undefeated Delaware.

Looking at some of the bigger games throughout the country — Army-Notre Dame.

We're going to string along with All-American Hank Mazur.

Georgia Pre-Flight-Auburn.

Close, but the conquerors of Penn should come out on top.

Georgia-Florida.

Bulldogs rank with the top five in the country.

Louisiana State-Fordham.

Strictly on past performances.

Manhattan-Marquette.

Mississippi State-Tulane.

Both teams weaker than usual this year. Rebels should stagger through.

Southern Methodist-Texas A. & M.

Mustangs must win to keep in the running for Conference title.

LEADS SCORERS

Milt Anderson, frosh end, leads the Wildcat scorers with three touchdowns. He scored two Sunday against Manhattan and another the previous week in Montgomery, Alabama, in Villanova's 14-6 defeat by Auburn.

Two Opponents Win Grid Games As Detroit Falls

While Villanova was running up an impressive margin over Manhattan this past week-end only two of her 1942 grid opponents were able to record victories while another got past with a tie.

The Temple Owls were tied by Michigan State, conquerers of Great Lakes, 7-7, in the final minutes of their contest. It was the third deadlock for the offenseless North Philadelphians.

Lost 10-0

Gus Dorais' Detroit Titans, one of the few unbeaten, untied elevens in the nation last week, after racking up four straight victories, bowed to a powerful Marquette team 10-0. The Golden Avalanche scored a touchdown in the third quarter after a wild first half and sewed up the contest with a field goal in the final minutes.

The two victories were hung up by the Coast Guard eleven from Manhattan Beach, which beat the 'Cats in their opener, and Duquesne University who toppled a game St. Vincent's team 14-0. The Bearcats gave the Dukes one of their bitterest struggles last season in maintaining their perfect record and they had no easy time of it again this year.

Florida Upset

Iowa State, next foe of the Blue and White, lost their fourth game of the current campaign to Oklahoma, 14-7, while Auburn was humbled by Mississippi State in the final period 6-0.

Florida's fighting 'Gators were upset by Clark Shaughnessey's Maryland eleven in a second half spurt that netted the Terrepins' two scores and gave them a 13-0 victory.

LONGEST RUNS

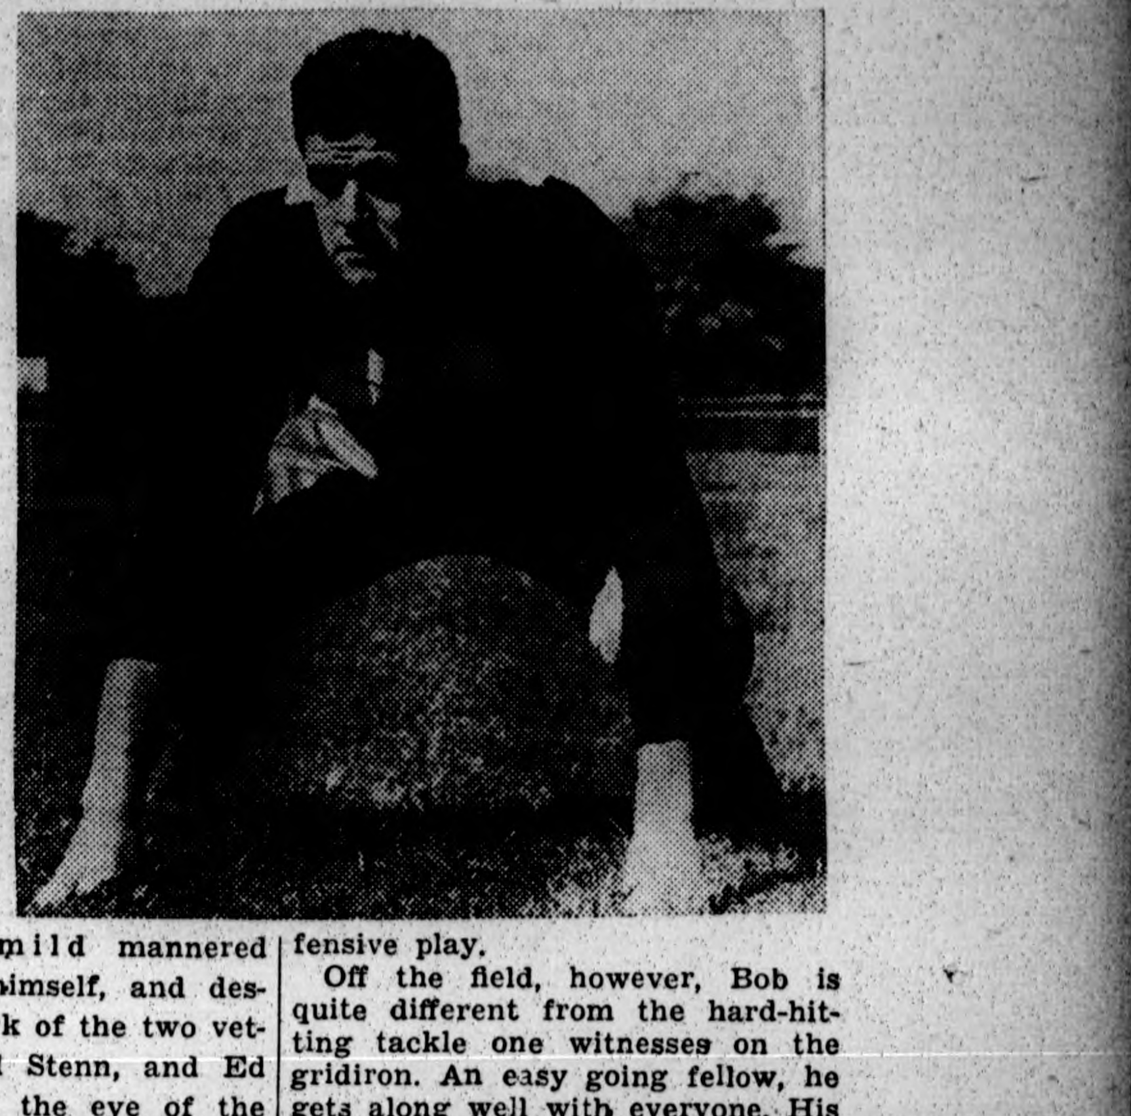
Al Postus' seventy-nine yard run for a touchdown against Manhattan Sunday was the longest run from scrimmage made by a Villanova back in the last five years. Joe Behot ran seventy-five yards against Arkansas in 1939 as a Sophomore when the Wildcats defeated the Razorbacks 7-0.

Joe Pezelski's fifty-six yard run ranks with the longest scampers in the past three seasons.

Bob O'Connor Rewarded For Steady Hard Work

The much used phrase, "tall, dark, and handsome" very aptly describes this week's six foot, two inch, two hundred pound subject who projects himself into the Villanova gridiron limelight. This big fellow, Bob O'Connor by name, is a product of Bayonne, N. J.

At Bayonne High School, Bob began to develop his football abilities. Three years of the gridiron sport laid a good foundation for the lanky tackle and enabled him to catch the eye of Wildcat scouts.



Bob played a lot of freshmen ball for the Wildcats, then for one season dropped out of the limelight. He rode the bench for most of the games but in the daily gruelling practice sessions he worked hard and stubbornly.

His junior year started out like his second year had ended. But in mid-season the mild mannered Irishman found himself, and despite the noble work of the two veteran tackles Paul Stenn, and Ed Kasky he caught the eye of the fans and critics. Needless to say he saw plenty of action from that time on.

Gets Under Punts Quickly

This year, senior Bob is one of Clipper Smith's mainstays in the fighting Wildcat forward wall, as those long hard hours of faithful practice are showing results. When Steve Pritko goes into kick formation for the Blue and White, turn your gaze down field toward the opponent's safety man. When he receives the ball, notice that the first thing that usually greets him is a big number "54" lumbering toward him. Bob's speed and agility carry him down the field before anyone else on many occasions.

Captain of Florida Game

The big senior received a great deal of delight when he was selected by his teammates to lead them against Florida several weeks ago. He showed his appreciation by leading his mates to victory, aiding them no little by his slashing defensive play.

Off the field, however, Bob is quite different from the hard-hitting tackle one witnesses on the gridiron. An easy going fellow, he gets along well with everyone. His most outstanding characteristic is his modesty, if such a trait can properly be called outstanding.

Marine Reservist

The North Jersey lad will complete his business education next May. He had planned to coach football but his enlistment in the Marine Corps Reserve has postponed those ideas until he has settled the score for Uncle Sam.

AIEE Hears Speech By Naval Officials At Combined Meeting

The Navy Department presented its reserve program to the Villanova branch of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers at a meeting last Friday evening at the University of Pennsylvania's Moore School of Electrical Engineering. At this meeting, groups from other local colleges were also represented.

No regular meetings of the Villanova branch have been held as yet, and no definite program has been arranged. The principal difficulty appears to be in finding a suitable time for meetings.

It is expected that war regulations will force cancellation of the inspection trips which were made in former years. However, the group may attend several meetings of the Philadelphia section of the A. I. E. E. at the Engineers Club. When the Villanova branch is organized, regular meetings will be held and short talks will be given by its members.

is a near disastrous blow to his general morale and faith in mankind. But to the hardened upperclassman, it is merely something to be shaken off with a firm shrug of the sloping shoulders and a mental notation not to answer that shiftless personage so fast the next time — let him (or her, as the case may be) see how it is to await anxiously for that belated letter.

Exceeding all other looks of disappointment is the somewhat pale green color that appears upon the visage of the hapless lad who receives the dreaded envelope marked "Selective Service." This is an anticipated moment to all eligibles of Uncle S.'s fraternity — this is the moment that brings out the mental fortitude of the recipient—this is the moment that makes him wonder why he went to the post-office in the first place.

In spite of these slight (?) annoyances the P. O. will continue to be the most popular place upon the Villanova campus — it will still be a place full of joyous and mournful expressions and exclamations.

Pamphlets Added By Press Apostle

Several new booklets have been added to the pamphlet racks about the campus to supplement the religious courses offered by the College. Rev. Edward V. McKee, O. S. A., the moderator of the Press Apostle, as the collection is called, recommends their perusal.

There are several booklets of interest to the student taking the senior religion course concerning marriage and life problems. Of special note is "Questions I Am Asked About Marriage," by Rev. Daniel A. Lord, S. J.

New Edition

For the sophomores, the collection includes many pamphlets on the sacraments. A variety of material is for the asking of the freshman seeking knowledge of the commandments.

Since the booklet "Reverse Your Field" achieved such great popularity among the students last year, a new edition has been published and included among the Press Apostles. It relates further stories of sports personalities and how their religion assisted them in attaining their popularity.

In commenting on his appointment, Kiefer stated that since the yearbook is intended primarily for student consumption, the 1943 Belle Air will be written with a view rather to pleasant reading than to rigid following of conventional..

Religious Survey

During the religious meetings questionnaires were issued to the student body in the 13th religious survey to be conducted at Villanova since the adoption of that custom. Purposes of the survey are to determine as well as possible the efficiency of prevailing religious policies, that they be occasion for the development of sound Catholicity in belief and practice.

The emphasis of the present religious survey lay on war conditions and the response of the students to these conditions.

German Club Plans To Present Pictures

Tomorrow evening, the initial meeting of the German Club for the current semester will be held in Simpson Hall, it was announced by George Temple, newly elected president of the group.

While nothing definite has yet been decided, Rev. William J. Lunney, O. S. A., moderator of the club, is considering the advisability of presenting films on Tyrol or on Switzerland. All students interested in joining the German Club are invited to be present.

At the meeting, plans for the coming school year will be discussed. Already several of the speakers who will address the group at a later date have been approached. These include Dr. Edward L. Haenisch, and Dr. Rudolf F. Drenick, of the college faculty.

Plans for the customary joint meetings with the language groups from Chestnut Hill and Immaculata Colleges are also being considered.

Give War Calls the Right of Way!

TELEPHONE lines are crowded with calls—and many of them are vitally important to the armed forces. the government and war industries.

To give war calls a clear track and full speed ahead, adopt these telephone tactics for the duration:

1. Don't make any unnecessary calls.
2. Keep all calls as brief as you can.
3. If you must use Long Distance, make your calls on Sunday, if possible —or after 9 P. M. at night.

VILLANOVAN
CENTENNIAL YEAR

Vol. 15—No. 13 N. A. S. Z-660 VILLANOVA COLLEGE, VILLANOVA, PA. TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1942

Social Season To Open Friday Night

Social activities at Villanova will be given a gala introduction this Friday evening, when the Class of 1945 presents the Sophomore Cotillion in the college gymnasium. It will be the first major social event to take place since the new wartime restrictions were put in effect by the college authorities.

As in other years, the music of the "Villanovans" will be featured at the dance, from 9:00 P. M. until 1:00 o'clock. Although presenting many new members this year, since a number of former players have been called by the armed services, it is probable that the band will give just as excellent showing as was given last year.

Servicemen Half-Price

Admission to the affair has been set at $1.65 per couple including tax, while servicemen will be admitted at half-price. Preparations are well under way, with the advance sale of tickets indicating promising results at the box office. No money will be accepted after 1:00 P. M. on Friday. All unpaid tickets must be accompanied by the necessary money at the door.

The decorations will stress simplicity in accordance with war-time necessities, but will make an appropriate setting for this, the first dance of the current season.

Transportation is Problem

As in former years, refreshments will be served in the Blue Room. During a number of previous dances the soft drinks and cakes have always run short. This year the refreshment committee promises no repetition. Enough sodas and food have been purchased to fulfill the demands of the expected crowd.

Due to gasoline and tire rationing, transportation presents the most serious obstacle to the success of the affair. However, the Cotillion committe has made arrangements with the Philadelphia and Western Transportation Company to stop their cars at the Stadium station, which is directly across from the Field House.

Trolleys leave the 69th St. Terminal approximately every fifteen mintues for Villanova, while Pennsylvania Railroad trains depart from Broad Street station every half-hour.

Group To Hear Talk By Fr. Burns

Rev. Lorenzo Lozano, O. S. A., moderator, announced that the next meeting of the Spanish Club, which will be held at 1:30 P. M. Thursday, at 106 Mendel Hall, will be devoted to a talk by the Rev. John F. Burns, O. S. A., Dean of the School of Arts.

Father Burns, who spent some time in Spain will relate some of his interesting experiences while there. The purpose of this, Father Lozano explained, is to give the members of the Spanish Club a background of Spanish culture and customs, which will enable them to have a deeper appreciation of Hispanic lore.

Joint Meeting

Plans are being made for the presentation of a motion picture in Spanish sometime before Christmas. Father Lozano stated that this picture will be presented for the students of the Spanish Club and members of the Spanish Clubs of Rosemont, Immaculata, and Chestnut Hill Colleges, who will be the guests of Father Lozano.

It is intended also to arrange some festival in honor of the great Spanish author Cervantes, but this will not take place until sometime in April.

Father Lozano said he was very pleased at the enrollment of the Spanish Club, which now numbers over one hundred members, and issues a cordial invitation to all members of the student body to attend the lecture to be given by Father Burns.

War Affects VILLANOVAN

An Editorial

IT is with sincere regret that the editorial board of the VILLANOVAN must make the announcement that this publication will be reduced to four pages for this and many future issues.

We know that our reading public will be disappointed by such a reduction, but conditions utterly beyond our control have brought about this departure from our former policy; conditions brought about by the omni-presence of a country at war. The latter's effect has already been shown upon the campus of Villanova and all its activities. The VILLANOVAN is to be no exception.

The reasons for this curtailment are many, but the principle ones might be listed as follows: Firstly, the amount of advertising usually obtained has been cut by 75%; national advertising is practically impossible to contract and local advertising is at a minimum.

Secondly, all fraternities, clubs, and seminars have had their activities cut tremendously by the accelerated program. Formerly there were many dances, banquets, meetings, etc.—these also have been eliminated. The total of this curtailment of extra-curricular activities has meant a lack of news sufficient to fill eight pages.

Thirdly, the majority of the members of the staff are now carrying exceedingly heavy class schedules which makes it impossible for them to devote too much of their time to producing a paper. This is particularly true of the members of the editorial board.

Finally, there is a patriotic reason. By editing a smaller paper there is naturally a saving of materials and man power needed in its publication. At present facilities for handling the printing, making of plates, etc., have been reduced as has everything else. This also has added to the difficulties in publishing the former sized paper.

But we add that the regular sized VILLANOVAN has not come to a complete end — we shall produce such an issue as often as it is possible in consideration of the above determents; that is, particularly when news and advertising warrants such an extension. We ask you to bear with us in our editing of a smaller paper until the time comes for a return to the former policy.

ASME Plans Smoker

Herman Behnke, president of the Villanova Chapter of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, announced today that the annual club smoker will be held in the Field House on Wednesday, November 18, at 8:00 P. M.

J. Stanley Morehouse, dean of the Engineering School has been requested to give a talk. In addition to Professor Morehouse, two other speakers will address the group on technical subjects. Behnke has also invited "Red" Smith, Philadelphia Record sports writer to be the informal speaker of the evening. Refreshments will be served after the meeting and the bowling alleys will be open to all members.

Dinner Date Set

The Annual Alumni Reunion and Football dinner will be held this year on December 5. Announcements regarding this have been mailed to the alumni who reside in Philadelphia and its suburbs, Trenton and Camden N. J. This affair which honors our football coaches and our team will be held at Town Hall, Broad and Race Sts., in Philadelphia.

Since this may be the last year for intercollegiate football for the duration of the war, it may also mean the last football dinner for some time. Ladies will be present for the first time, and after a few short speeches, there will be dancing until 1:00 A. M.

Navy Objects To Extention Of Holiday Recess

Knox Voices Disapproval of Plan to Lengthen Christmas Vacations in Colleges

In a letter received by the Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, from Secretary of Navy, Frank Knox, naval authorities have expressed their disapproval to any plan lengthening the coming Christmas holidays.

In view of present transportation difficulties, and foreseeing that it will become more acute during the holiday season, many university and college authorities hoped that by allowing longer vacations students would not congest traffic by travel to and from home. Because many students are enrolled in various naval programs, the plan was submitted to the Secretary of Navy.

The letter in reply was as follows:

"With the thousands of young men in college who are now on inactive duty as apprentice seamen under the V-1, V-5 and V-7 programs the Navy has a vital interest in seeing college education completed with all speed and thoroughness. Not only these young men, but all students now in college are contributing to the fighting strength of our country in direct proportion to the time and effort they devote to their studies. A proposal that operates them to lengthen the time required for them to complete their college course lessens the contribution they make, and cannot be approved by the Navy Department.

Eliminate Vacation

"The difficulty of transportation problems is recognized and it is suggested that if the problem of returning college students to their homes is so difficult as to require the drastic action proposed in your letter, it may be met by the equally drastic action of elimination of Christmas vacation.

"The adoption of this suggestion would mean that instead of presenting to our enemies the gift of the millions of study days that would be lost by lengthening the Christmas vacation for over a million college students, we would actually turn our difficulty to our advantage and speed up the preparation of our young men and women for the urgent tasks that await them."

Father Stanford, as yet, has refused to comment upon this announcement in regards to the situation at Villanova.

Exams To Be Held In Reserve Corps

On Thursday, Nov. 12, examinations will be given in Mendel Hall to all those desirous of joining the Army Air Corps Reserve. Applicants for this test must have all their papers in order before being allowed to take it.

The papers demanded are three letters of recommendation, preferably from acquaintances of long standing, and the signature of the applicant's parents granting him permission to join the Army Air Corps. Thus far twenty-six have presented their names to the registrar.

Since the meeting of the Joint Presentation Board of the Army, Navy and Marines at the Field House on October 8, one hundred and fifty, the majority of whom are freshmen, have applied for the various reserve programs. Of these 150 aspirants approximately a hundred are seeking to enter the Naval V-1 program.

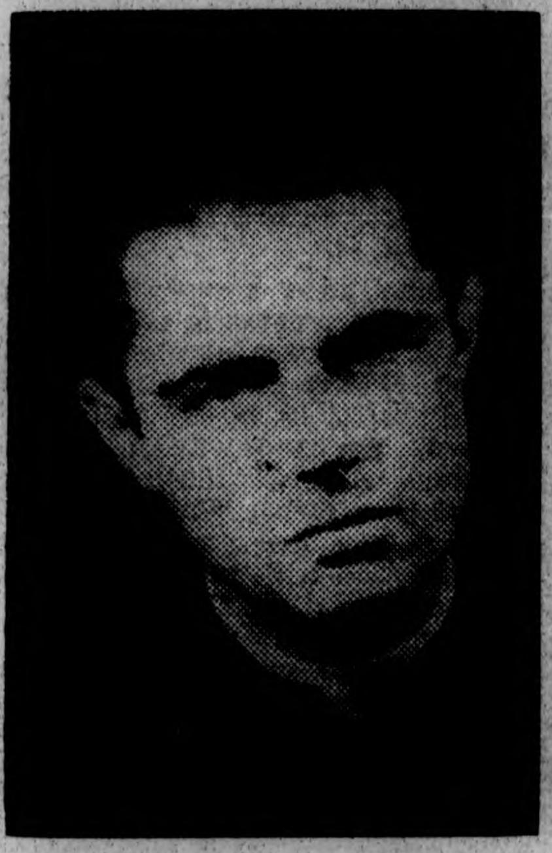
Those who have submitted their names are going in groups of ten to have their interviews and to take their physical examination, all of which will be completed in one afternoon. These examinations will take place at the Office of Naval Procurement, on the 17th floor of the Widener Building in Philadelphia.

The dates set for each group of students have been posted upon the bulletin boards and those whose names appear are requested to take their examinations at the time appointed or get in touch with Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O. S.

New Moderator To Lead Debaters

Fr. Coffey Succeeds Fr. Sullivan; Gagen Chosen President of Beta Gamma Society

It has been announced that Rev. John J. Coffey, O. S. A., will assume the duties relinquished by Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O. S. A., Assistant Professor of English, as moderator of Beta Gamma, varsity debating society. The new moderator was added to the faculty list at the beginning of the summer term. After having obtained his A. B. degree from St. Mary's Hall, Villanova, he matriculated at Catholic University, where he received a degree in speech and dramatics. At present Fr. Coffey is teaching Public Speaking and Freshman English, and is serving as counselor of Austin Hall.



REV. JOHN J. COFFEY

New President

An announcement was likewise made that J. Wilfird Gagen, a Junior C. & F. student majoring in Pre-Law, will take the position of president of the debating society. In addition to his work in debating, being a member of the Beta Gamma for two years, Gagen also served for two years on the Belle Air staff, played on the Varsity Tennis team for two years and has been a one year member of the Glee Club.

Because the heavy class schedules carried by the debators under the present accelerated program would conflict with league debates, Beta Gamma has been forced to resign from the Philadelphia Forensic League, which consists of all the major colleges in Philadelphia.

Contrary to the custom of former years which provided a separate society for Freshman debaters, it is also planned to permit freshmen to participate in Beta Gamma activities.

Thus far the society has contracted to take the floor against New Rochelle, Fordham, St. Joseph's, St. Mary's, Seton Hall, and the University of Pennsylvania.

Chemists To Form New Organization

At a meeting held this past week of the Villanova Chapter of the American Institute of Chemical Enginers, plans were made for the formation of an American Chemical Society Chapter here on the campus.

At the present time both chemical engineers and chemists are permitted to belong to the A. I. Che. E. With the formation of this new organization, chemists will have their own society, namely the A. C. S., while the chemical engineers may seek membership in both groups.

Election of officers will be held at the next joint meeting of these chemical organizations.

It has also been announced that within the near future, the parent-chapter of the A. I. Che. E. will award a medal and certificate to the junior chemical engineering student here at Villanova who has made the highest scholastic attainment throughout his Freshman and Sophomore years

Facts Are Hidden

IT is a tradition (whether true or false being of no matter) that Washington prayed at Valley Forge; it is history that Lincoln hoped for "a new burst of freedom, under God."

These men became famous in their day, and more so in ours, because they were inherently religious, that is, they placed all their hopes and ambitions in the hands of the Lord. We canont think of them as heroes without thinking of them as Christian men. Why, then, do we fail to consider a man's religion in connection with his courage? Why do we mention that a man was "prominent in religious circles," as if we were saying that he played a good game of golf or that he belonged to the Elks? In short, why do we treat religion as an accessory to a man's character, rather than as his character itself?

An illustration of this is the newspapers' treatment of the already immortal letter written by the late Comdr. John J. Shea, U. S. N., to his young son. Comdr. Shea's letter was carried by the Associated Press and by the United Press. To the newspapers serviced by these organizations was sent this wonderfully human and touching letter. In the letter, the hero of the U. S. S. Wasp advised his young son in the ways he must tread to achieve the parents' ambitions for him, that he be a good Catholic. a good American, and a good fellow. One line of the letter was particularly significant to the son and more so to those who would know the dead hero. "Be a good Catholic," he said, "and you will be a good American."

This line was dropped by both of the news agencies mentioned above. The AP explained that the letter was far too long to be published in full, so that the removal of the line, together with other portions, was necessary. In other words, the most important parts of the letter were printed, and the remainder forgotten.

Here we see the modern opinion of a hero. Here he is, a man, brave, devoted to duty, and obedient to orders, who either believes or doesn't believe in God—it make little difference. We not only disregard as trifling the fact that a man is religious, but we even deem it most unimportant of his qualities!

The United Press parried inquisition by stating that the "be a good Catholic" sentence was too personal a thing to be seen in print, and that "It did not add to the story." Newspapers have not thought the reviews of divorce cases, with their ludicrous charges and humorous insights into the domestic activity of actors and other much-married people, to be too personal to print; nor have they considered the political mud with which they stuff their editorial pages as not adding to the story.

Yet a man of heroic virtue, a fearless naval officer, who thought nothing of plunging himself into an inferno to save his men, has his words shortened to add to the story, his ideas perverted by the omission of pertinent phrases, and his name, which should always be connected with the Catholic Church, mentioned as if he were an atheist.

Yes, we know that Washington and Lincoln were prayerful heroes. Why are we not permitted to know the same of our modern heroes?

—T. McF.

Poor Excuses

MANY and varied are the explanations offered by the stunned Democrats who were victims of last week's Republican landslide. Prentiss Brown, of Ohio, a dyed in the wool New Dealer, alibis his defeat by shifting the blame on the voters who he says are indignant at the restrictions imposed on them by wartime legislation, for which Brown was a consistent voter.

His self-satisfied opinion implies that the voters would go so far as to vote against a Congressman merely on the grounds that he supporter emergency measures.

According to his twisted logic, a majority of the citizens don't care whether we win the war or not.

Nor is this an isolated viewpoint. Vice-President Wallace attributes the Democratic defeat to the fact that most of our "middleclass" citizens are in the armed forces and neglected to vote. He bases his conclusions on the strange argument that a large part of this same "middleclass" are Democrats!!. Only the wealthy are Republicans and only Democrats are in the armed forces!!

Without a doubt this is the best example of muddled thinking we have seen in many a month.

Such short sighted leaders fail to even consider the possibility that the electorate was voicing disgust at the bungling manner in which the Congress practiced the dictums of the New Deal at the expense of enacting critical war measures. Evidently, not a few of our leaders are still peering through rose tinted spectacles.

—R. T. C.

Cooperation Needed

THAT which has received the most comment since school started in October is the cafeteria. These comments were due mainly to the length of the line and the condition of the eating utensils. There have been a few comments as to the quantity of food.

The line is "shaping-up" a little better now because some of the students are learnnig the how and when of eating. However, if necessary, steps will be taken to arrange a more even distribution of students excused from classes, labs and sports.

The conditions of the utensils can be traced to the acute employment situation. Once in a while help can be gotten, but the quality has no voucher. Consequently if a man can't be hired who is willing to wash dishes properly, the dishes will not be washed as such. The administration is working on this labor problem and promises a change in the near future.

The student must realize that there is another side to this question: his side. He must remember that a dirty floor or table is not the fault of the labor but his fault, and the fault of his fellow students, who strew milk, broken dishes, napkins, ice cream, etc., wherever they please. He must remember that courtesy, patience, and cooperation is the theme in these times, even more so than in ordinary times.

Improvement of the cafeteria situation will only come about through full cooperation of the entire resident student body with the efforts of the college authorities.

Meet The Boys:

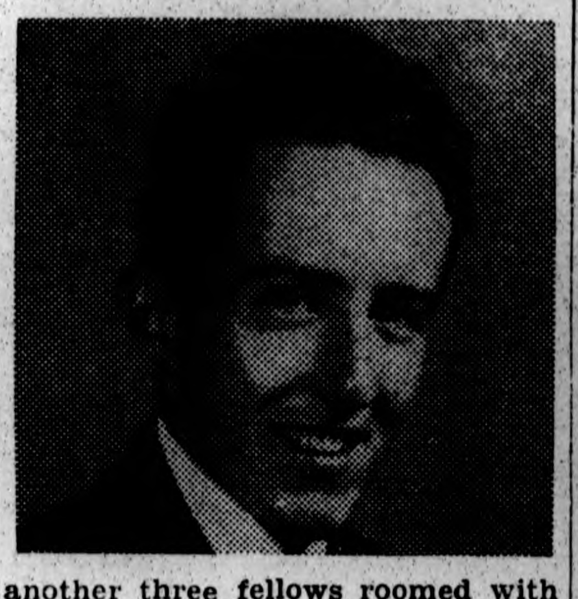
For a Lawyer's Life, Smitty Hankers; Jim Hopes to Turn Out as a Banker

By BILL SWAN

GENE SMITH is a typical Villanovan. By that is meant that after four years on the campus, he has a host of friends; is well liked by all; active in campus doings; and all set for the Army upon graduation.

In the way of background: Gene was born on Staten Island on January 30, 1921. Incidently, this day is the date of the President's birthday and to Gene this fact has some meaning.

The freshmen days of Gene were memorable ones; for he was the frosh who had the dubious honor of breaking all the rules and regulations. Finding roommates was a big problem. For one reason or another three fellows roomed with him his freshman year. All departed and finally "Swifty" Nunemaker appeared. This started a combination that has lasted these three years.



Business Manager

In the way of campus activities Smitty began work on the Business Staff of the VILLANOVAN. Another event of that year was the performance in Alumni Hall's Amateur Night cast.

Gene really found himself in his junior year. Selected chairman of the Ring Committee by his class, Gene handled the business with ease and excellence. When the time came up for the Financier's Frolic, the logical man to handle the publicity was Mr. Smith. Recognizing his ability, Gene was appointed Business Manager for the VILLANOVAN.

Giant Rooter

Seeing the long arm of Uncle Sam pointing at him, Gene joined the Army Reserve Corps and returned to college for the summer months. Moving to O'Dwyer Hall, our boy became the right hand man of Fr. Coffey, started innumerable bridge games; instigated many loud bull sessions, and converted the hall to rooting for the Giants.

The title of a confirmed bachelor fits Gene very well. In his own word, "I leave that stuff to my roommate." When asked about future plans, the answer was rather non commital. But the tendency seems to be toward the legal field or the advertising business.

JIM NUNEMAKER, the other half of the Smith-Nunemaker combination, was born in Bradford, Pa. At the beginning of the interview this fact was stressed: for a town of its size, Bradford has the best ball team in the country. To this Jim will argue until the cows come home.

Getting back to our subject, we find that the early schooling of Jim was received at St. Bernard's in Bradford. Here, playing football on the high school club were the important moments of his life.

Nicknamed "Swifty"

Early in his freshman year Jim was dubbed with the nickname of "Swifty." The origin of this term springs from the fact that our hero found it to be quite a task to roll out of bed in the mornings in time to catch those early classes at C. and F. During his frosh year Jim had as a roommate another Smith. This time it was a Bob Smith. To him this fact is now signficant.

"One Smith for another. Perhaps I'll marry a girl named Smith."

On the more formal side of things, Jim joined the Sanctuary Society during his first year, and began to write for the sports staff of the VILLANOVAN.

Entering his second year Swifty chose as his major the course in Finance. The Sophomore Cotillion was aided by his efforts when he handled the tickets. As a Junior, the success of the Junior Prom was aided by the work that Jim did in handling the Patron List.

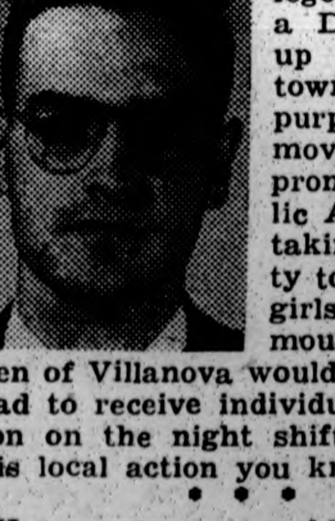
Future Banker

When asked about that delicate subject of women, a rather heavy silence hung over the room for a moment. Then Swifty said, "For publication just say that at the present time I am following the P and W tracks." So that seemed to take care of that subject.

A most strange hobby is the main interest of Jim at this time. All his spare time is spent in trying to figure out how to get to the dining hall at the right time so as to be able to hit the head of the line, instead of the rear.

Barter By Binder

AFTER looking over (or is it overlooking) the headlines of all the collegiate publications for the last week, I see nothing exceptionally flashy or anything degrading enough to interest a college man. So for the time being I have no plugs for any collegiate activities except for Marymount College.



The femmes of Marymount College are opening a Day Nursery up in Tarrytown. The first purpose of this movement is to promote Catholic Action. I am taking the liberty to inform the girls of Marymount that the men of Villanova would be only too glad to receive individual instruction on the night shift. (Tired of this local action you know.)

Gridmen Depart Friday for Battle with Titans

Sportorial

SUPPOSE the Wildcats play this way against Detroit? Wonder if the blocking will be any better next week? Certainly hope the boys get on the ball because Gus Dorais' Titans won't be pushed around like this. These and other thoughts passed through our mind last Friday night as we watched an indifferent Villanova eleven vanquish a fighting, but weak, Iowa State outfit. The type of play exhibited by the 'Cats against the Cyclones will never, never do Sunday if the boys hope to take the Titans into camp.

Both offensive and defensive play was spotty, and with the exception of a few instances, only individuals produced on important plays. As a group the ends played well. Billy Sullivan's pass snatching and defensive crashing was a standout. Johnny Dzitko's smashing tackles and Al Postus' scintillating all around work were particularly notable. But as a unit the team didn't look like much.

The offensive blocking of Clipper's charges was very unpolished and on many occasions about as scarce as ice in the Solomons. The Westerners didn't offer much resistance, but Detroit is the kind of team that isn't used to being pushed around. They haven't taken it from anyone but Marquette, and the Golden Avalanche had their hands full. So the boys better polish up if they expect to open the Titan's strong defense or move the fast secondary out of the way.

The general play was sloppy throughout the contest. True, the Wildcats didn't have to extend themselves altogether but they could have played a smoother brand of ball. They would start a drive, then seem to relax and forget that they were marching goalward.

This type of ball might have been enough to overcome Iowa State, but Detroit, no! The Titans are too strong for that. Gus Dorais is too tricky a gentleman to permit the opposition to rest whether they are far ahead or behind in the game. Detroit plays hard and never lets up. This has always been their style. The Clipper and his boys know that. So do Wildcat fans who have witnessed struggles in this fiery rivalry. It will be a rough, tough game with every man playing for all he is worth.

DAYHOPS!

Day Students gather your forces for a showdown touch football elimination tournament starting next Monday. No limit has been placed on the number of six man teams allowed to participate.

Bob Simpson, Senior Engineer in charge of the tournament announced that the games will be played on carefully laid out gridirons located on Mendel Field. The time of each fray will be one hour, divided into halves.

Present plans call for a division of the tournament into two sections. Mendel Dayhops will comprise one division, while the C. & F. Commuters will conduct their own league. The respective winners of the two sections will meet to decide the dayhop team to challenge the resident champions.

Any six men can form a team. They are to appoint a man to act as captain. He will register the team with one of the men in charge of the league. This is to be done this week as the league will get underway next Monday afternoon.

Assisting Simpson in the Mendel division are Jack McManus and Jack Allen. In charge of the C&F organization is Jack Dudley. All those interested in the tournament are urged to confer with the leaders sometime this week.

Rutgers 150's Subdued By Kittens, 7-2

An inspired and rejuvenated Villanova 150-lb. team redeemed itself at New Brunswick last Friday afternoon when it completely outplayed a good Rutgers eleven and won, 7-2.

The score of the game does not give a true picture of the Wildcats' struggle with Rutgers, for, outside of one serious threat, the boys of the Red and Black were rendered completely powerless by a fighting, surging Villanova line. After the Main Liners received the opening kickoff, an exchange of punts ensued and the Blue and White was immediately put in a hole when left halfback Cook, of Rutgers, coffin-cornered on the Villanova six yard line. A five yard penalty moved the ball to the one, and then Freshman Joe McGinness stepped into the end zone and got off a beautiful 60 yard boot that put his team back into the game. The team found itself right back in trouble as Cook again displayed masterful control punting and kicked out on the Villanova 10. The Wildcats lost two on an off-tackle play, and then a bad pass from center went out of the end zone to give Rutgers two points.

Cahill Runs 57 Yards

Villanova's sleeping 'Cats now became very much aroused and when they next gained possession of the ball they tried two strong side running plays before Captain Jim Cahill spun off his left tackle, cut back into the center, and then outran two pursuers for a brilliant fifty-seven yard touchdown. Tom Burns, a substitute center, then raced into the game and calmly kicked the extra point.

The Wildcats had tasted blood and now they were not to be stopped. The line charged even harder than before, and when Cook attempted his next punt, Joe Silva, a vastly improved right tackle, broke through and blocked it, with the 150's recovering. However, the Blue and White couldn't gain through the Rutgers line and the game continued to be a kicking duel.

Clock Prevents Second Team

As the second half opened the game again turned into a battle of hard charging, opposing lines. Both offenses failed to gain on the ground, and when Rutgers took to the air their passer was continually thrown for long losses. Cook, the Cats' nemesis, again unlimbered his kicking toe and drove the lightweights back to their own sixteen yard line. Quinn, attempting to kick on third down, fumbled, but recovered and made his second try good. Potter, the Rutgers safety man, raced in to catch the kick but he also fumbled and Whitey Czarnecki recovered. A weak offense failed to gain, and as the minutes ticked away in the final quarter, Rutgers gained possession deep in their own territory.

Detroit Eleven Beaten Only Once; Boasts Star Passer In Madarik

Coach Gus Dorais Again Prepares Aerial Arts to Greet Wildcats; Titans Also Possess Strong Defense Losing Only to Poweful Marquette Team

By BILL WALSH

Detroit University's Titans will play host to Villanova's Wildcats out in Michigan next Sunday afternoon when these two schools renew the gridiron feud which was inaugurated back in 1931. Villanova nosed out the Titans in Shibe Park last year 7-6, in a game that was packed with thrills from start to finish. The margin of victory proved to be a perfect point after touchdown boot from the toe of Ed Kasky, now a member of the Philadelphia Eagles.

The Titans' record is impressive this season, giving notice that "Gus" Dorais has his usual strong aggregation to pit against Clipper Smith's forces. After winning their first four contests, the Titans bowed to a powerful Marquette eleven by the score of 10-0. Being idle last Saturday, however, they have had two full weeks in which to prepare for the Main Liners, a fact which bodes ill for the visitors on Sunday.

Madarik Offensive Threat

Always possessing a backfield man who is capable of carrying practically the whole offensive load, Dorais is not at a loss for a back of this caliber this year. His name is Elmer "Tippy" Madarik, a junior, who spark-plugged the Detroit team to its lone touchdown in last year's 7-6 fray. Madarik has taken up the slack left by such other Detroit backfield immortals as Andy Farkas and Al Ghesquiere and is the answer to a coach's prayer.

Last season, in his first year on the varsity, he was one of the sophomore sensations of the country, being fourth in the nation in total offensive with 1,541 yards gained, and sixth in forward passing, completing 64 out of 128 aerials for a total gain of 912 yards.

Good Backfield

Madarik has not slipped this fall as many sophomore sensations do each year, and is again headed for national honors in the ground-gaining and forward passing departments. It is certain that he will be the man Villanova has to watch.

Besides this aerial ace, Dorais has a few other backfield men who can carry their share of the burden should Tippy be bottled up by the Villanova forwards. Henry Piper, Madarik's understudy, is very close to "Tippy" in ability to chuck the ball, while Tom Senffner and Joe Smith, two other backfield men on the Titan eleven, are not only powerful runners, but also left handed tossers of no mean ability.

Link an Excellent Punter

Another department in which the Titans look better than usual this fall is punting. In Quarterback Art Link, they have one of the most

Courtmen Hold Outdoor Drills

For the past wek, Al Severance and his hopefuls have left the hardwood, and have been taking advantage of some fine weather by working out on the field court, behind the gymnasium. These outside meetings will be kept up for a week or so, if the weather permits.

The object of these open-air scrimmages is two-fold in nature. Primarily they are to stimulate circulation and develop the resistence of the squad. Secondly, however, and most important, they are to build up a passing attack as dribbling is almost impossible on the grass.

Squad Lacks Height

No predictions can be made as yet, with regard to Villanova's "first five" this season. However, the courtmen who will represent Villanova will have to make up in speed, ball handling and shooting what they lack in height. Returning from last year's varsity, there is only one man, Bob Kelty who tops the six foot mark. Joe Lord and Chuck Drizen are close behind Bob, but the rest of the squad averages only 5' 9". This is definitely a great handicap in retrieving balls off the backboard.

Whatever may be the case, however, Coach Severance is doing his utmost to put a good team on the floor. Bill Woods and Kelty, both seniors, have two years behind them in which they have seen plenty of action and will be counted on heavily by their mentor to carry the brunt of the attack. Lon Reynolds, a sophomore, showed a great deal of promise as a freshman last year but as yet it is not certain whether he will break into the starting lineup or not.

The official schedule has not as yet been completed, but it is expected to be ready for release next week.

LEADS SCORERS

Al Postus now leads the Wildcats in the present scoring parade. Al's two six-pointers Friday night against Iowa State give him five touchdowns to date. Milt Anderson, frosh end, has three scores to his credit.

Villanova Overwhelms Iowa State 32-7; Postus Sparks Offensive Drive

By BILL CAREY

Running wide open and in high gear, the Villanova Wildcats ran roughshod over the Cyclones of Iowa State last Friday night to the tune of 32 to 7. Twelve thousand spectators saw everything from razzle-dazzle, to good old-fashioned off tackle thrusts carry the Blue and White to five touchdowns.

Leading the assault for Villanova was Al Postus, who scored twice himself besides tossing two touchdown passes into the arms of Steve Pritko and Bill Sullivan. Also crashing into the scoring parade were Joe Pezelski, and Tom McCarthy. Pezelski accounted for two extra points, via the place kicking route.

Score in Opening Minutes

Three minutes after the opening whistle, left end Bill Sullivan recovered an Iowa State fumble on the Westerners' 42. After two plays, Postus, on a spinner from Johnny Dzitko, faded back and hurled a pass into the outstretched arms of right end, Steve Pritko, who crossed the goal line standing up. Pezelski then converted.

Fighting back with the spirit they showed all night, the Cyclones took the kickoff, and on successive plays brought it down to the Villanova three yard line, where they lost the ball on downs. Pritko booted out, but Captain Royal Lohry brought the ball back to the Wildcat 12. Then, bringing the ball to the one foot line, Lohry gave way to fullback Paul Darling, who plunged across for their only touchdown of the evening. Darling then placekicked the extra point and the score was tied, 7-7.

Sullivan Snares Aerial

Villanova received the kickoff and marched quickly to the visitor's 20, where Postus tossed a hook pass to Sullivan, who speared it on the one yard line, and then stepped across to score. Capitalizing on a recovered fumble, ten minutes later, the Wildcats sent Postus back on the visitors' 22 to pass again. This time, after running to his right he found no open receivers, so he tucked the ball under his arm and went down the sideline for another score. Pezelski again converted to make the score 20-7.

McCarthy Races 73 Yards

Seming to be able to score at will, the Wildcats kept the rout going during the second half. Just before the close of the third quarter, Postus, running to his right again from

Austin Breaks League Deadlock, Scoring Wins Over Day Hop Quints

By LEM WENTLING

As a result of last week's Intramural basketball games, the three way deadlock between Alumni, Austin, and Mendel Day Students was broken. Austin, who won both games, now leads the league by a one game margin. Mendel Day Students and Alumni are still tied up at six wins and two losses with C. & F., Fedigan and the winless Mendel Residents out of the running.

On Tuesday, Austin won the first of their two games by defeating C. & F. 54-46. The game was uneventful with Austin maintaining a safe margin throughout. Noteworthy was the fact that Hagan, C. & F. forward, shattered the individual game scoring record with 24 markers. Joe McGuinnis, of Alumni, originally held this coveted distinction by notching twenty points earlier in the season. Jack McFadden, one of five smooth working Austinites, was high for the victors with six field goals and a foul.

Alumni Wins

That evening Alumni added another game to her winning streak in defeating Mendel Day Students 36-24 to break up the second place tie between the two contenders. The boys in Green showed remarkable prowess in the second half by scoring 25 points to the opponents' 12 after trailing 12-11 at halftime. Carmen Graziano, Mendel Day's prize package, finally found his eye for ten points. The second game showed Fedigan in front of Mendel Residents by a 45-33 score. The Mendelites, who have yet to win, looked helpless as the more experienced upperclassmen led all the way.

Hagen Stars Again

On Thursday C. & F. won from Fedigan 44-34 without affecting either team's fourth and fifth place in the standings. The winners kept their ten point lead throughout the entire latter half. Hagan again stood out offensively by swishing the cords seven times. Pat Regan's 15 points and brilliant floorwork were in vain.

The Mendel Residents lost again, this time to the Mendel Day Students 42-21. The residents displayed more offensive power, after losing at the half 25-8, than they had all season. However, they weren't quite strong enough to take the high flying Day Hoppers.

Deciding Game

The second game of the evening was the most thrilling as Austin and Alumni met each other to

Ericson, All Around Man, Plays Best At Guard

Big blond Roy Ericson is a football player's football player when it comes to knowing more about all positions on an eleven than anybody else. And Roy has learned all by actual experience, playing three positions during a seven year span.

Roy, born in Worcester, Massachusetts, was raised in New York City where he played football for Peter Stuyvesant high school. For three seasons he played in the backfield running from the tailback spot and as a result learned much about handling the pigskin.

In 1938 he went to Bordentown Military Institute, noted for crack grid teams. Here the coaches decided to take advantage of his abilities as an end so Roy found himself on the wing for that season from which position he showed up well.

At this same spot Roy made a name for himself on the Main Line. During his freshman and sophomore years he played the wing, then in his junior year, with a wealth of wingmen and a scarcity of guards Clipper Smith converted Roy to the latter position.

Gains Weight

Weight that Roy had gained in his first two years was now put to good use. He saw plenty of action last year and this season is one of the mainstays of the fighting Wildcat line. He captained the Wildcats against the Plainsmen of Auburn.

Pass Interceptor

Roy's fun comes from piling up line plays and throwing opposing backs for losses. He can always be found at the bottom of the pileup on goal line stands. His play in the Manhattan game, however, has made him one of the leaders of the Wildcat interceptor command. His two timely interceptions of Jasper passes stopped two drives and set the stage for two of Villanova's five touchdown marches.

Ericson couples his football prowess with scholastic ability. He keeps his marks well above the average by constant hard plugging.

At present Roy is enlisted in the Army Reserve. His military training at Bordentown should stand him in good stead. This along with his football experience should make him an all around soldier.

Postus Recipient Of Maxwell Award

Al Postus, brilliant Wildcat halfback, was the recipient of the Maxwell Award yesterday at a luncheon at the Warwick hotel. This award is bestowed on a player, outstanding in the Philadelphia district, every week during the football season.

Postus has been the leader of the Villanova attack through out the season. Friday night against Iowa State he hit his peak, scoring two touchdowns and passing for two others.

the three, cut off tackle and scored standing up, for another six-pointer.

With second and third stringers playing the fourth stanza for the Blue and White, Sophomore Tom McCarthy went off tackle and raced 73 yards for the fifth Villanova touchdown. The try for extra point was wide, and the final score became Villanova 32, Iowa State 7.

SENIOR MEETING

All members of the senior class are urged to attend a meeting Thursday at 1 P. M., in room 215 Mendel Hall. Plans for the Belle Air, and forthcoming class events will be discussed.

Austin Leads

break up their first place tie. Austin took an early lead with Father Dunne's charges not far behind. The Green quintet put on a last minute splurge to lead 16-15 at intermission. Austin came back in the second half like a tornado and Alumni couldn't find the basket. It was in this second half that the unusually large crowd of students saw the fast, rough basketball typical of this league. Amid the loud cheers Austin emerged on top 30-21, never letting up for a minute for fear their opponents would overtake them.

McGuiness Out

A big factor in Alumni's poor showing was the absence of Joe McGuiness, who was out with injuries. Art Martin was the thorn in Alumni's side with his 11 points plus his fine defensive play. Bill Lowner, who was banished late in the game for inciting a fight, was high for the losers with 10 points.

From here on Austin Hall, the leaders, should ride high. The Blues have the Mendel Residents and the Mendel Day Students yet to play. The former shouldn't provide much competition and Austin rates a fairly good chance of winning the second. Alumni meets C. & F. and Fedigan and should take both games. The Mendel Day Students encounter first place Austin and fifth place Fedigan. These five games will determine the winner of the first half championship and will provide a battle for all. In the remaining game, C. & F. meets Mendel Residents. The second half will begin shortly after the completion of the first half.

EX-SWIMMERS, MARINES

The co-captains of last year's swimming team are both in the Marines. Bob Koness is a second lieutenant in the Reserve and John Maher is a sergeant in the regulars.

Lightweight's Face Cornell

Next Saturday Cornell's 150 lb. team will meet the Wildcats in a league game played at Villanova. It promises to be a well fought contest, as the Main Liners seem to have found a winning combination in Friday's game with Rutgers. Cornell also showed that it has power and strength to spare as it beat a strong Penn eleven last week.

Frosh Play

Since the Princeton game the freshman rule which states that the freshmen are ineligible to compete in league games has been dropped. This is a decided break for Villanova's team, as Father Sullivan, coach, has unearthed three plebes to fill the gaps left vacant by graduation and members of last year's squad too busy with studies to participate this year.

The Red and White left the field last year as the victors in a hard fought battle which could have gone either way. They received the one break which they were able to capitalize on for a touchdown and won, 6 to 0.

Cahill at Halfback

The lineup for the lightweights will probably be the same as in the Rutgers game. Czarnecki and Zeeman will be at the ends, Joe Carbine and Jose Silva will take care of the tackle slots and freshman Walt Young and Herm Behnke at guard. George Famiglietti will be at the center post. In the backfield we have Jim Cahill who has replaced Jack McManus at left half, the two freshmen, Ed. Quinn and Joe McGuiness as fullback and right half respectively and Tony Paruta calling the signals.

Detroit Game

consistent punters that has graced their lineup in years. He has averaged close to forty-five yards in games played so far this season.

These facts indicate that Detroit has more potential offensive strength this season than they have possessed in a number of years. Furthermore, there is a better balance betwen running and passing. Sometimes the Titans have been very strong in the overhead department, but haven't been able to gain much ground by lugging the ball.

Banonis Sorely Missed

Although Detroit has lifted the freshman eligibility prohibition "for the duration" it is unlikely that many of them will see action in Sunday's game. Halback Joe Smith, however, may be one of the starters. He is the best of the freshman crop to date.

The one spot in which the Titans appear to be lacking in strength this season as compared with the power which they had to offer during the last few years is in the pivot position, where they are minus the services of Al Banonis. Banonis, captain of the 1941 Detroit eleven, was Grantland Rice's selection for center on the Collier's All-American team last fall. He was one of the greatest linemen in University of Detroit history, and one of the best pivot men ever developed in the Middle West. Although Tom Frielink, Banonis' understudy for the past two years, has been performing nobly in the middle of the line, his work does not come up to the calibre of last year's captain.

Dancing To Music Of The Villanovans

Scene: Last Friday's Sophomore Cotillion held in the Field House. A record crowd enjoyed the music of the Villanovans at the opening dance of the season.

Soph Dance Shows Successful Start For Shortened Social Season

With cold, wintry blasts blowing outside, and a warm, friendly atmosphere floating around inside, the Field House presented a fine setting last Friday Night for the opening event of the college social season. Nearly four hundred and fifty couples helped to put this dance down in the books as one of the best informals given by the second year men.

From nine until one the couples danced to the surprising music of the Villanovans (?). That is, the majority of the couples danced at this time. For an hour or so, numerous freshmen, as well as a goodly number of upperclassmen, stood huddled in soft-spoken groups around the entrances. These lads were waiting for blind dates that were scheduled to arrive en masse from the surrounding girls' colleges.

Mystery Is Solved

But to the uninformed they appeared as questionable characters. Some of this class even ventured to pass remarks about the large number of Villanova men that came to the dance stag. But through all the remarks and glares the boys stood firm, practicing all the while their friendliest salutations to try on the expected visitors. (Incidentally, the boys are still thanking the committee for arranging these dates which turned out very satisfactory all around).

When Tom Quigley, chairman of the affair, made the announcement that refreshments were being served in the 'Blue Room', a mild cry of astonishment spread among his listeners. Some had already been in the room to partake of the refreshments (coca-cola) but all they had seen was a plain room with walls and curtains of an unknown hue. The question of the evening had now been settled. This announcement came as a result of the close scrutiny of some of Villanova's best sciencemen, and after much debate, they definitely established the color as being of blue origin.

Resting Place

Among the innovations to the Field House for the dance was the 'college room.' With appropriate college banners and pennants hung over numerous easy chairs, the stage was turned into a large rest room. But when two Villanovans sit down together the inevitable happens. The belles dames accompanying the wildcat men were treated to a ringside seat at an authentic Villanova 'bull-session.' Conversation mingled with many laughs and disputes flourished back and forth all evening.

The night was well rounded out by the music of the Villanovans, who this year are majoring in 'White Christmas,' with or without vocalist.

Positions Offered By Civil Service

Under a new announcement with completely modified requirements, the Civil Service Commission is seeking Student and Junior Instructors for the Army Air Forces Technical Schools and Navy Aviation Service Schools.

Student instructors will be given training in radio operating, engineering, airplane mechanics, or shop work for a period of from three to six months. Those who successfully complete such training will be promoted to junior instructors and assigned to an appropriate school.

Student instructors can qualify through completion of one year's study in a college; through the possession of a Civil Aeronautics Administration ground instructor's certificate; airplane mechanic's or airplane engine machine's certificate; through one year's progressive technical experience as aircraft mechanic, aircraft or automobile engine mechanic; through completion of technical courses (six months) in a radio school or a war training course in radio work; or through the possession of a commercial or amateur radio operator's license. Additional training or experience is necessary for the junior instructor positions.

No written test is required. Applicants' qualifications will be judged from their record of training or experience. Applicants must have reached their 20th birthday, but there is no maximum age limit.

Tid-Bits Of CAMPUS NEWS

Applications for membership to the science fraternity, Lambda Kappa Delta, are now being accepted, John J. Bongiovanni and Jose Silva, co-chairmen of the initiation committee, announced last Wednesday.

The initiation will take place on December 15 instead of the 14th as it had been previously planned. Applicants will be informed of the time and place of their interviews after they have filled out their entry blanks.

Rimsky - Korsakoff's "Scheherazade" will be the music seminar's feature tomorrow at noon, in room 215 Mendel Hall. The Symphonic Suite is based on the Arabian Nights' tales, and it takes its title from the name of the story-teller Scheherazade, the beautiful slave. By reason of its length, Dr. Edward L. Haenisch, the seminar's moderator, announced that the program will begin earlier than usual.

At the first meeting of Villanova's chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers on November 11, president Carlos Martinez led a discussion on the field trips to be held in the near future.

Jack McManus was appointed to the position of program chairman. Following this meeting, the group left on a field trip to observe the construction of a new highway.

Draft Law Comment

In response to the VILLANOVAN'S request for a statement from college authorities, now that the new draft amendment for 18 and 19 year olds has been passed by Congress and approved by the President, we are authorized to state the following:

"The college authorities very strongly urge that all able bodied Villanova students make immediate application for enlistment under the Reserve Programs of the Armed Forces through the military liaison officer of the college, Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O. S. A.

"The time for procrastination is now passed. Immediate action is required of those students who, as yet, have not signed up, if they wish to complete a maximum of college work and be earmarked for training as officers in the Armed forces. The quotas assigned to Villanova College have not yet been filled.

"The attitude of Selective Service toward college students in engineering and science is too indefinite at the present time to warrant continuation as in the past. It is reasonable to expect that Selective Service Boards may feel that the Reserve programs of the Armed Forces, as well as the new educational programs now under preparation, adequately provide for the need of trained men during the war."

Debate Contest Opens To Students

War Bonds and Cash Offered as Prizes for Intercollegiate Radio Debate

Rev. John J. Coffey, O. S. A., new moderator of the Beta Gamma, Varsity debating society, has made it known that Villanova College has accepted the invitation offered by the American Economic Foundation to compete in the National Intercollegiate Radio Prize Debates. The question for this year is, "Should American Youth Support the Re-establishment, After the War, of Competitive Enterprise as Our Dominant Economic System?"

The national championship prizes to be awarded in this, the second series of such debates, are first prize, a $1000 War Savings Bond and $250 cash, second prize, a $500 War Savings Bond and $125 cash. Besides these, sixteen qualifying prizes, which consist of eight first prizes of $50 cash each and eight second prizes of $25 cash each, will be offered.

Open to All Students

The contest is open to the entire student body, not merely to members of Beta Gamma. By means of eliminations, scheduled to begin in the Field House about the first week of December, two speakers will be chosen from the student group; one for the affirmative and one for the negative side of the question.

A form bearing the names, certified by the president, of the two representatives chosen must be sent to the Foundation not later than January 15, 1943. All those students desirous of competing are requested to get in touch with Fr. Coffey.

Local Radio Debates

Each certified representative must file with the American Economic Foundation an outline or abstract of his proposed opening address, the length of which should be equal to seven and one half minutes of speaking time. Basing their decisions on such outlines, three judges will select from the nation's colleges the best sixteen affirmative and the best sixteen negative arguments. The writers of these are to engage in local radio debates, at which time prizes will be given to the best speaker for the affirmative and to the best speaker for the negative.

The traveling expenses of all speakers will be paid for by the Foundation. Prize winners in the local debates will then qualify for further competition.

Arts Frat Admits Pledgees Tonight

Hopkins Chairman of Committee; Initiations To Be Held in Field House

Initiation of the pledgees to the Epsilon Phi Theta, Arts fraternity, will be endured tonight in the Field House beginning at 7 o'clock. Since last Tuesday, the initiation committee, with senior artsman John Hopkins presiding, has required the pledgees to maintain their strictest humility before other frat members.

Besides John Hopkins, seniors, Louis Esposito, Alexander Lukacs, and Robert Kelty, and juniors Christian Kiefer, Louis DeSimone, Anthony Garzarella, and James Connelly of the initiation committe helped the future fratees to qualify. Rev. Edward M. Dwyer, O. S. A., the fraternity's moderator, has supervised during the "dog week."

JOHN HOPKINS

"Dog Week"

The feature of the initiation will determine the extent of the cultural merits of the pledgees, by giving them examinations in philosophy, Latin and French. After this the student will be tried by the traditional physical exertions.

For the past week, the candidates have suffered the usual "dog week" indignities: being forced to wear identifying signs, furnishing candy and gum to the demand of future "brothers," and carrying paddles for the use and pleasure of those in authority. The committee announced that these paddles were used to good effect on the traditional portions of the pledgees anatomy. A prize will be given, however, to those who have the largest number of paddle strokes recorded.

The committee has invited Rev. Francis X. N. McGuire, O. S. A., vice-president of the college; Rev. John F. Burns, O. S. A., Dean of the Arts School; Rev. John E. Bresnahan, O. S. A., and Rev. Thomas A. Kiley, O. S. A, to attend the initiation and to direct the intelligence examinations.

"Following this endurance test," John Hopkins said, "refreshments will be served to revive the pledgees. Father McGuire will then speak to the new members of the E. P. T. and finally Clipper Smith, Villanova's football coach, will show motion pictures of some of the games played at home this year."

Proofs Due

Thursday, November 19, will be the final opportunity for seniors and juniors to return their proofs. A representative from Zamsky's will accept them on that day in the reception room of Mendel Hall from 11:00 A. M. until 5:00 P. M. A large number have been negligent about returning their proofs. It is urgently requested by the editor of the Belle Air that the students cooperate.

Dance to Replace Junior and Senior Proms; Mauch to Act As Chairman

Under the auspices of the Student Council, the night of January 15, 1943 has been announced as the date for the Centennial Ball. This formal dance, replacing the junior and senior dances of former years, has been designed as the major social event of the scholastic year.

Jacques Mauch, president of the Student council, will head the dance committee. Committee chairmen, within the Student Council have already been appointed. The other committe members will consist of the entire Student Council and other juniors and seniors who are selected by the council.

Chairmen Named

George Erickson, senior science student, has been named chairman of the ticket committee; H. Christian Kiefer, junior artsman, will head the program committee, and the publicity will be supervised by Robert F. Young, junior C. & F. student.

Nicholas Eni, a senior science student, is in charge of refreshments and Eugene Barry, senior engineer, is the chairman of the decorations committee.

Tickets to the dance will cost $5.50, including tax. It will be necessary for students buying tickets to pay an advance assessment of $2.50 so that a popular orchestra can be contacted in time for the dance. This assessment will be held in part-payment for the dance. The time at which this fee will be collected will be announced in the near future by the chairman of the ticket committee. All servicemen, who are alumni of the college, will be admitted free.

"Success of the dance and the calibre of the band will depend on the amount of assessments we can collect before the contracts are drawn up," said Mauch. "Because there are not going to be many dances on the campus this year, we feel that most of the students will attend, and therefore, they shouid be willing to give the necessary assessment in advance."

A meeting of the individual chairmen will be held Thursday at 1:00 P. M. in 111 Mendel Hall at which time their assisting committees will be chosen.

Statistics Of Registration

Nineteen states and nine foreign countries are represented by students attending Villanova, according to the geographical distribution statistics released by Paetrus F. Banmiller, Registrar.

Out of the 992 full-time students enrolled, Pennsylvania leads with 620. As in former years, New Jersey, and New York follow with representations totaling 147 and 123, respectively.

From New England, Massachusetts sends twenty-six; Connecticut eighteen; Maine, New Hampshire, and Vermont each have one student.

From the south, Delaware leads with seven representatives. Florida and Maryland are second with three each. Alabama, North Carolina, and the District of Columbia send one student each.

Illinois heads the midwest group with eight. Michigan and Ohio follow with four and two, respectively. California is the only far-west state sending students. It claims two.

Twenty-one students are registered from outside the limits of the United States. Puerto Rico leads with an enrollment of nine, while Cuba places second with five. Other foreign countries represented are: Hungary, France, Canal Zone, Mexico, Nicaragua, Colombia, and Australia, each with one student.

Are Villanovans Refusing An Urgent Plea?

AMERICAN soldiers — Villanova men — our best pals — all are giving their life blood on some distant battlefield to protect the God-given rights of freedom. Many lie wounded in the mud and muck of a war torn land begging for medical assistance to ease their pain.

The majority of college students realize these horrors of war, and also the fact that, soon, they too will be among these fighting heroes. Yet it is a shameful thing to discover that so many students of Villanova have ignored the appeal of the American Red Cross for blood donations.

This appeal was put before the student body last week and thus far only a handful have answered this urgent request to help our buddies on the battlefield.

Has plain neglect been the cause? Has a heavy class schedule prevented the students from pledging one pint of blood that might save the life of a fellow American? Has ignorance of where to sign up for this donation delayed their action? We certainly hope these have been the reasons for Villanova's slow response for the giving of blood.

But the Red Cross continues their request for donors and the students still have the chance to pledge their blood by merely seeing a Student Council representative who is present every noon in Mendel Hall. Villanovans have shown their spirit before in this country's all out war effort; are they going to neglect this patriotic duty to aid their dying comrades by merely donating one pint of blood? We don't think so.

Author Suggests Plans For World Peace

WAR may be hell but it is not eternal. Peace is sure to come. Could not we, as college students, better plan the peace than the war?

Plans for reorganizing the nations of the world have already run the whole gamut of human ingenuity: from Clarence Streit's plan for "Union Now" to Westbrook Pegler's diabolical scheme for dismembering Germany and deporting her people to the far corners of the world.

Though not intended to be an all-inclusive blueprint for world order, there has recently appeared an unusually sound suggestion from Louis Adamic, a famous American immigrant author.

He urges that we begin now to establish training schools for government administrators who shall be sent to the various European nations after the peace to aid the natives in setting up new governments on the lines of our own democracy. Adamic further urges that some of these students be Americans who are already familiar with the language and customs of the various nations.

For example, colleges in Chicago, where we have large Czech and Polish groups, could train post-war workers for Poland and Bohemia; while Western Reserve University in Cleveland, where we have our largest Slovenian group, could train personnel for Slovenia; and so on. Naturally great care would be taken in selecting these student-administrators to insure that they themselves are firm believers in democracy.

Adoption of these principles would mean the passing of the "ward-heeler" type of politician, both in Europe and in America. He would be replaced by skilled political economists trained in the complexities of international, national, and local government.

Meet The Boys:

Ward Has Proven Quite A Versatile Chap; Publicity For Sports To Him Is A Snap

By TOM SCHUBERT

When we approached Ward Guncheon the other day, it was on the rather routine assignment of learning the story of his life for publication in this weekly biographical section. But Ward C. Guncheon, senior Businessman, turned out to be an upsetter of routines from start to finish.

At our first innocent question—"Where were you born," Ward took a deep breath and began: "I was born in Bradford, Pa. At the time of my birth, my family was living in Smethport, Pa. However, when I was still an infant, we moved to Rochester, N. Y." All this, incidentally, began on December 6, 1921.

Begins News Writing

Rochester held our wandering hero's attention long enough for him to attend Nazareth Hall Grade School and Aquinas Institute. At the latter school, Ward served for four years both on the newspaper staff and in the dramatics society; in each case his efforts were rewarded by appointments to positions of honor. In his senior year, he was Associate Editor of the paper; and during his last two years, he was Stage Manager for the dramatics group.

Family Moves Again

About the time when Ward was ready for college, the Guncheon family once more felt the urge to travel. This time the Philadelphia area caught their fancy, and they settled in their present home in Cynwyd.

In his freshman year here on the Main Line, Ward was a member of the VILLANOVAN staff and Beta Gamma. In his second year, he decided to devote all his spare time to one activity rather than do several half-heartedly. Several VILLANOVAN editors have blessed the day he made this decision, for Ward has been an outstanding staff-member for four years. Last year he was appointed Managing Editor.

Ward has only returned to his high school love—stage work—once—when he was one of the three men who worked long and hard to produce the fine decorations for the '42 Junior Prom.

In his freshman year, the boy from Bradford gave a startling exhibition of his ability to upset routines. His report at the mid-term consisted of five "A's" and an "F" in Economics. If this isn't a new high in contrasts, somebody else can have our slide rule. But he had no trouble passing Economics again this year.

Co-Publicity Manager

Basketball and baseball are his favorite sports from a spectator's point of view. During the time he lived in Rochester, Ward got to know several of the players on the St. Louis team, and as a consequence is an ardent Cardinal fan. He saw nine out of the eleven games the Cards played in Philadelphia, and didn't miss a New York game of last season's World Series.

At present, Ward is quite a busy man around the campus. He and Tom Devine are handling the college's publicity problems and have already had several interesting experiences. Travelling to Auburn with the team, he and Devine sent stories back to the Philadelphia papers as they went along. During the game, Ward reported the progress of play on a direct wire to the Philadelphia "Record."

Missed One Dance

In connection with the team — which he is in a better position to judge than most of the students—Ward is convinced that it is one of the best in the East. He is particularly impressed by their fighting spirit. He feels confident that the results of the Detroit game will inspire them to beat Duquesne and Temple here in Philadelphia.

When asked about his social life, Mrs. Guncheon's little boy replied very abstractly that he likes to dance and has only missed one college dance since his matriculation. Thinking this over, and realizing that things equal to the same thing are equal to each other, it hardly seems likely that he would enjoy dancing because of the mathematical precision involved. There is also some talk about a stop he would like to have made in Raleigh, N. C., on the way to Auburn.

Likes Newspaper Career

Ward would like to continue with some phase of newspaper publicity work after graduation. An accounting major, he has gained practical experience by doing accounting work for his father since his freshman year, but he finds the newspaper work more interesting. As yet, there are no definite plans.

Uncle Sam turned down a good bet when he refused Ward's application for the Signal Corps because of his weak eyes. Ward isn't at all happy about his 4-F rating, but hasn't been able to find a way out of it.

BELATED "congrats" to College of Chestnut Hill's performance of "Stage Door" last November 6 at Town Hall. Because of a stiff production schedule laid down by the editor, this columnist failed to "feature" a tidbit of information in the form of a "plug" for the girls of the Hill.

La Salle College has launched a War Bond Drive in the form of a lottery. Doesn't sound like a bad idea. Chances are sold for twenty-five cents until enough receipts have been taken to raffle off a bond.

This Friday the "Anglenovians" will be torn between two social events, namely, Rosemont's Senior Prom, and Chestnut Hill's Fall Prom. Scandal editor Reardon's informers will be present to report the dirt; so a word to the wise is sufficient, men.

Poem of the Week:

There once was an editor named
Young
More copy he constantly sung.
A few jokes do I write,*
Then he's high as a kite.
Oh! what an editor this Young.

* or copy. (Note: I would have inserted this but I could not make it rhyme. We should always print the truth, even though it hurts, lest some gullible Villanovan — if such animal exists—be deceived.)

With quarterly exams sneaking up on us, the following extract from the "Exponent" seems quite appropriate.

Quizzes, quizzes everywhere
With lots of pen and ink.
But the profs never leave the room
To let a fellow think.

Here's the latest version of the song "I Met Her On Monday."

Our hero was the common sort, when all is said and done:

He worked his head off daily and was out to get the MON.

The reason for his diligence was commonplace, 'tis true—

He tried to swell his salary so it would suffice for TUE.

And maybe that's the reason why one day he lost his head,

And falling on his knees, he cried, "Oh, darling, wilt thou WED."

She lisped a quick acceptance, and said quietly: "Yeth THUR."

But when they went to keeping house he feared that he would die;

For, oh, that modern lassie could neither bake nor FRI.

She could not run a bungalow, nor even run a flat,

So on many sad occasions in a restaurant they SAT.

But he forgave her everything, as man has always done,

When she presented him one day a bouncing baby SUN.

Ann would sure like to know. . . Joe Antonuccio, saxaphonist of the Villanovans, entertained the boys in the C. & F. basement last Friday with a very solid jam session. . . As a supplement to the article beside this column on Ward Guncheon, wherein he denies any affairs of the heart, we would like to add that this denial is partly true since Alice left for North Carolina last night . . . The resident students have a new dining-hall version of that very popular war song "Braise The Beef And Pass The Malnutrition". . . George "Block Buster" Smith had quite a time at a Hallowe'en party in Rosemont last Saturday nite. Incidentally George, how are Lois and Shirley back in McKeesport?. . . Joe "Mush Darling" McCarthy receives some very intimate letters from a certain girl at Skidmore College, with this very touching salutation . . . Tom "Old Faithful' 'Devine, former editor of this publication, is the only man in Villanova history who has brought the same girl, namely Betty, to four consecutive Soph Cotillions and also to every other school dance he has attended in four years. That's consistency for you.

Wildcats In Crucial Test Against Duquesne

VILLANOVAN SPORTS

Wildcat Courtmen To Play Eighteen Games At Home

Twenty-three Game Schedule Opens With Ft. Dix Quintet on Dec. 10th; May Play More

By BILL CAREY

Celebrating the Centennial year, the Wildcat basketball squad under the guidance of Al Severance opens up one of the biggest court schedules in recent years when they meet the soldiers of Fort Dix, N. J., on December 10 at the college field house. Packing 23 games in the season that starts on the already mentioned date and closing with Muhlenberg on March 11 the Blue and White highlights its schedule with Wittenberg, Niagara, Loyala (Chicago), Baltimore U., Princeton, appearing for the first time, Coast Guards of Manhattan Beach, and Seton Hall.

Must Hit Peak

Eighteen of the games will be played in the Wildcat field house while four will be played away. Among the away games is Seton Hall who waged a nip and tuck battle two years ago to sink the Wildcats. Having been drilling the team for the past month, Al Severence has his hands full in putting the men in top shape from scratch. To go through this season successfully, the courtmen will have to hit an early peak and maintain a fast pace from the beginning.

Besides the above mentioned, teams like Geneva, Rider College, Providence and Loyola of Baltimore will add sparkle to a heavy season.

At present negotiations are underway for a home and home series with Manhattan College, but nothing definite has been settled as yet.

Teams Return

Gettysburg, Manhattan Beach Coast Guards, Princeton, and Ft. Dix are new opponents for the Villanova courtmen, while Wittenburg, Scranton, and Seton Hall return after a lapse in relations.

The Wildcats held their first organized scrimmage last week under the critical eye of Al Severance. Severance gave no indication of his opinions on the results, but several freshmen showed up well.

Early Detroit Assault Humbles Villanova 9-0

Safety and Seven Yard Lateral Pass Play in First Period Give Titans Victory; Madarik Leads Attack on Wildcats

Packing its scoring punch into a thrill jammed first period, the University of Detroit Titans slapped the Wildcats back on their heels 9-0 last Sunday afternoon in Detroit and snuffed out their hopes of continuing the victory streak they began so successfully two weeks ago.

The Titans scored midway in the period when Steve Pritko, standing in the end zone on an attempted punt, fumbled the ball momentarily and was nailed by Charlie Ruth for a safety. Led by Elmer "Tippy" Madarik, a plunging, passing, whirlwind, Detroit crossed the Wildcat goal five minutes later on a seven yard lateral pass play Madarik to Tom Senffner.

Wildcats Threaten

The scoreboard never changed after this and the Wildcats only threatened once in the game at the start of the second period. Art Alois, Wildcat center, intercepted a Madarik pass on his own 36 and lugged the leather 37 yards before he was brought to earth on the Detroit 26. Joe Pezelski failed to gain on the next play and Al Postus faded and tossed a pass intended for Billy Sullivan. The ball never reached its mark; Art Link raced in, pulled down the ball and ran to his 15 yard line thus ending the Wildcats strongest scoring bid of the game.

The Titans went to town right from the opening whistle. After Hart's kickoff went over the Wildcat goal Postus ran 16 yards on the first play to his thirty-six. Postus then passed and Hughes intercepted on the 'Cat 45.

Postus Intercepts

Madarik passed to Hintz for six then quick-kicked out on Villanova's four yard line. Pritko attempting to kick was tackled in the end zone and Detroit led 2-0.

After the kickoff Hughes ran 18 yards to the Wildcat 43. Madarik passed to Hintz for eight, then skirted his own left end and raced to the 22 for a first down. Madarik's pass was intercepted by Postus on the eight and the Titans were temporarily halted.

Senffner Scores

Postus' punt was partially blocked and the ball went out on the Wildcat 30 yard line. Madarik sliced inside tackle for a first down on the 18 and made another first down faking a reverse to Senffner, and dashing 12 yards With the ball on the seven Madarik then lateralled to Senffner who crossed the final stripe for the score. Hart placekicked the extra point making the score 9-0.

At the start of the second half Detroit threatened again when Burke blocked Pritko's punt and recovered on the Wildcat 17, but the Titans were stalled on the six by the fighting Villanova line.

Whistle Ends March

The rest of the game developed into a punting duel between Madarik and Al Postus. Both got away several nice punts as they tried to outsmart one another with quick kicks hoping for a break that would offer a chance to start a scoring drive.

Villanova started a drive late in the game that petered out as the final whistle blew. Postus ran a Madarik punt back 10 yards to his 26. Smith failed to gain and the nimble halfback dashed through tackle for a first down on the 37. Zig Zamlynski smashed for another first and Postus got nine. Zamlynski made it first down on the Detroit 42. Postus passed to Joe Koproski for another first but was nailed for a 10 yard loss on the next play as the game ended.

Kasky In Marines

Ed Kasky, stellar tackle on last year's Wildcat eleven reported to Quantico, Va., last week to the Officer's Candidate Class to begin training for a Commission in the Marines. Kasky was a regular member of the Philadelphia Eagles Professional football team this season until his call last week.

Senior Meeting

A very important meeting of the entire senior class will be held today at 1:00 P. M. in room 215 Mendel Hall. President John Quinn urges all seniors to attend for discussions on the Belle Air and forthcoming senior events.

150 Lb Gridders Lose To Cornell In Frigid Contest

40 Yard Scamper by Williams Sets Up Score as 'Cats Fall 6-0

Villanova's once-beaten 150 pound team entered a fray with Cornell's Lightweights last Saturday afternoon in the Main Line stadium and when the referee's whistle ended the hard fought contest, the Kittens found themselves on the short end of a 6-0 count. Although outrushed, the boys from Cayuga's waters managed to shake their fullback, Joe Williams, loose for forty yards in the second period before he was caught from behind on a beautiful diving tackle by safetyman Lou Centrone on the four yard line. Three plays later the Big Red team chalked up the only tally of the game.

Miller Scores

The Wildcats started off with a bang when successive off-tackle thrusts by Jim Cahill netted two first downs in the first few minutes of the contest. At this point Cornell held, and Joe McGuinnes punted out on Cornell's thirty-four yard line. Play seesawed back and forth for the next ten minutes until Williams staged his beautiful run around left end to the four. Bob Miller, left halfback on the team from Ithaca went over from the one yard line three plays later. The try for the extra point was blocked by Joe Carbine, Villanova's candidate for All-American Lightweight honors, and Bill Merryweather, right end on the Wildcat eleven.

Carbine, Young Excel

In the second half the play followed a pattern similar to that of the first twenty-four minutes except that there was no scoring. Villanova rolled up four more first

Seek First Win Over Duke Team In Three Years

Pittsburghers Minus Victory Streak But Are Still Tough; "Must" Game for Clippermen

Villanova will be gunning for its first victory in three years over Duquesne University when the teams tangle at Shibe Park this Sunday. Gone is the Duke's lengthy winning streak that included two wins over the Wildcats in the previous two years. Duquesne will enter the game with a record marred by three defeats, one at the hands of Manhattan, already a Villanova victim.

Duquesne suffered badly from graduation this year. Coach Aldo "Buff" Donelli is building for the future with a young team, but at the present time, the Dukes miss such greats as Phil Ahwesh, triple threat star, Al Demao, choice of many for All American center, ends John Rokisky and Joe Squires, all of whom are remembered for their play against Villanova in the past two years. Thirteen other experienced players departed by graduation, leaving many a vacancy to be filled. Out of fifty-seven players comprising the Duquesne squad, thirty-seven are sophomores and freshmen who have had no previous varsity experience.

Setcavage Returns

This year's edition of the Dukes is built around Joe Setcavage, brainy quarterback and ace blocker, and John Matisi, slashing 200 pound tackle, who rates as one of the outstanding linemen in the East. Veterans sure to see action at Shibe Park are tackles Ed Stavenski and Joe Cibulas, Guard Ben Keller, Center Al Wukits, Backs Joe Goode and Max Kielbasa.

After a slight absence last year, in which he coached the Pittsburgh Steelers, "Buff" Donelli is back at Duquesne as head coach. The name of Donelli still exists on the playing squad as well as on the coaching staff. Brother Ray Donelli is understudying Setcavage at quarter, and has been showing constant improvement since the season's opener.

North Carolina Surprises

Duquesne began the current campaign as they had left off at the close of the last. Waynesburg, Holy Crass, and Kansas State all went down by one-sided scores, none of them crossing the Duke goal line at all. A hard charging North Carolina team surprised the Dukes with a 13-6 setback. Before they could get back on their feet, the Dukes dropped another one the following week to Manhattan, 10 to 7. St. Mary's from the Coast held Duquesne to a 7-7 tie. The Red and Blue come into the Villanova game with a record of four wins, three losses, and a tie.

Clipper Smith hopes to send his strongest lineup into the game. Big Bob O'Conner seems to be fully recovered now, Joe Pezelski is again in top shape, and Ben Danik may be able to see action.

Di Carlo Leads Trackmen

Johnny DiCarlo, senior sprint, hurdle and relay star was chosen captain of the Wildcat trackmen in an election held last week. DiCarlo who came from Lower Merion and West Catholic, has led the Wildcat trackmen in scoring for the past three years. After a successful freshman year, he took over the sprint duties of Johnny Maher, and has established himself as one of the best sprinters in the east.

After starring in the dashes, and mile relay team, DiCarlo branched out into the low hurdles. It was in his sophomore year that he placed second in the 400 meters and intermediate hurdle championship in the Penn Relays.

Holds Scoring Record

No doubt the best all around trackman ever to wear the blue and white of Villanova, Johnny has already put the iron man feats of former coach Jumbo Elliott in the background. On numerous occasions, he has scored 20 points in dual meets, and set the college individual scoring record at 23 for one day's work.

Meanwhile, besides taking over the captaincy, DiCarlo along with other senior varsity men, will act as advisory coach in the absence of Lieut. Elliott.

JOHN DI CARLO

A Good Little Man Proves To Be Better Than Most Good Big Men

By JOE CARBINE

LEO JAGOE

"One of the smallest men on the team—and one of the best." These words describe only one person, Villanova's closest thing to a watch charm guard, Senior Leo Jagoe.

A Pennsylvania contribution to Villanova's football forces, Leo was born in Nanticoke, on May 23, 1921, and ever since he can remember, he has followed the ideals of being a student and a football player.

Leo began catching the eyes of local colleges when he was only a junior at Nanticoke High, where he starred for three years as an outstanding schoolboy center. He chose Villanova as the school of opportunity and continued to hold down the center position on the Wildcat Frosh team which beat N. Y. U. Frosh and St. Benedict's Prep.

Only Junior Starter

When he began spring practice, Clipper moved Leo over to right guard in an attempt to bolster this vital blocking position. The unusual Jagoe speed greatly aided Leo in making a success of this change—and he has emerged as the valuable running guard on the past two varsity teams.

Last year, as the only junior on the first team "Jagger" started every game until his right knee was seriously injured in the Temple game. The injury prevented him from playing in the final two games—and in April of this year a successful operation was performed by Dr. Loefflad, the college physician, and the troublesome cartilege was removed. The little senior says that his summer job at Ford's greatly aided in strengthening his knee, and now it is as good as ever.

Co-Captain

Leo has been somewhat slow in getting started again this season, but in recent practice drills he has been shining in his old time form—a fact that elevated him to the enviable distinction of being co-captain for the very important Detroit game. From here on in, it looks as though he will be playing a lot of right guard for the rejuvenated and victorious Wildcats.

It is with many regrets that Villanovans see Leo playing out the string in his final year of competition. It goes without saying that he has always been one of the most popular members of the squad. In addition to these many accomplishments, Leo has also distinguished himself off the gridiron — being a mathematics major in the School of Education and an active member of the Epsilon Phi Theta fraternity.

After the war, Jagoe hopes to teach his favorite subject, and to coach at his alma mater in Nanticoke, assisting "Bunny" Galazin, a former Wildcat center. In the meantime, watch Leo finish up his final season in a blaze of glory, and then continue to serve "Old Glory" in the same way, as a United States Marine.

Austin Wins First-Half Crown

Beats D. H. Quint In Deciding Game

Alumni Wins Two and Edges Out Mendel Team for Second Place

By LEM WENTLING

Last week a much favored Austin team copped the first-half title of the Intramural Basketball League, lacing the Mendel Day Hops 35-22. Alumni placed close behind the Mendel Day Hops holding up third place.

In the first game of the week Alumni marched to an easy victory over C. & F. 47-34. The losers opened up with an early lead but gradually lost it as Alumni forged ahead 23-20 at the half. The second period was a runaway affair, Alumni garnishing 14 baskets and C. & F. only half that number.

That same evening Mendel Day Students eked out a 31-24 victory over Fedigan. Both teams were at full strength and the game was rather close until the waning minutes of the latter half when Curreri and Edeiken set up Ward's basket scoring with accurate passes.

The champs from Austin completely overpowered the hapless Mendel Residents by the score of 57-38 in the other game. Red McFadden peppered the backboards all night for a total of nineteen points.

The following Thursday the Mendel Residents lost again to C. & F. in one of the closest games so far. In the opening minutes it looked as though Mendel would get that initial win as they took complete command in the first half and led 25-16. C. & F. gathered their forces and rebounded in the second half with a series of baskets by Meehan and O'Donnell to hand Mendel her tenth straight loss 43-40.

That evening the crucial game took place when Austin tangled with the Mendel Day Hops. The smooth working unit of Curreri, Graziano, Edeiken, Sachetti, and Ward took the floor against the smoother working unit of Martin, Cheppa, McFadden, McQuade, and Koval.

The lead shifted to either side during the first period which ended 19-14 in favor of the Blue. After intermission Father Kemme's champions put on a defensive drive featuring a host of intercepted passes and the Grey team literally fell apart. With Cheppa leading the offense and Austin's guards holding down Graziano the Blue quintet marched to a 35-22 triumph and the first half title.

The closest game having been played that afternoon, the biggest upset was recorded that night as Alumni trampled all over Fedigan by a 36-11 score. With but two minutes of play gone the Greens led 4-0 but the Redbirds came back with one basket to every two of Alumni's and the latter led 15-6 at half time.

downs but could not reach payoff territory. Carbine and freshman Walt Young blocked two Cornell punts in this half but the Kittens did not take advantage of either of the two breaks. The game ended with Cornell having possession of the ball at the midfield stripe.

With the temperature hovering about the freezing mark and a strong northwest wind blowing across the stadium, neither team was strong in the kicking or passing departments, but Cahill and McGuinnes for the home team and Williams and Harris for the visitors did make quite a bit of yardage on the ground.

Villanova Aims For Victory In Season's Finale

Huge Pre-Temple Game Pep Rally Set For Friday

Many Prominent Celebrities to Speak in Traditional Rally at Field House; Bonfire Omitted This Year

Marked by several innovations necessitated by wartime conditions, the traditional pre-Temple game pep rally will be held this Friday evening at 8:30 P. M. in the college Field House.

Conceding to the times, to the extent of changing but not to the extent of diminishing, the Student Council under president Jacques Mauch has made plans for a gigantic demonstration of college spirit.

Activity will begin with the congregation of the student body in front of Alumni Hall a half hour before starting time. From there, the band will lead the way in a march down to the Field House. All students, Freshmen in particular, are expected to participate in this march.

Noted Speakers

Many outstanding speakers will contribute their talents to the success of the rally. In addition to Maurice J. "Clipper" Smith, head football coach of Villanova, and Rev. Francis X. N. McGuire, O. S. A., Vice-President and Moderator of Athletics, Perry Lewis, noted sportswriter for the Philadelphia "Inquirer," and Jordan Olivar, stellar tackle on the undefeated 1936 and 1937 teams, will address the crowd. Olivar has enjoyed a successful coaching career since his graduation and is now head mentor at Roman Catholic High School in the city.

John P. Keffer, President of the Alumni Association, is also expected to speak on that evening. Keffer was an electrical engineer of the Class of 1925 and is now an official with the Bell Telephone Company in Trenton, N. J. He has been an active alumnus since his graduation, and has held his present position as head of the Association for five years.

Besides this, he is Chairman of the Alumni Relations Committee and an officer on the Alumni Centennial Fund Committee. An ardent supporter of his Alma Mater, Keffer has gained a reputation as an influential speaker and writer both in alumni circles and in the business world.

Decorations Discontinued

Between the speeches, the band will entertain and the cheer leaders will lead the students in a demonstration of their enthusiasm.

In compliance with the request of the Defense Council, there will be no bonfire after the rally. The bright light generated by this blaze, which in past years has reached a height of one hundred feet, would be a great hazard in case of a possible air raid.

It has also been announced by the college authorities that building decorations will be discontinued for the duration of the war.

In past years it was the custom for each hall on the campus to adorn their individual buildings with appropriate signs and symbols of the approaching conflict between the two rivaled football squads. These decorations were done in a spirit of intramural rivalry and a prize was awarded to the hall who was considered the winner of the contest by a picked committee of student council members and priests of the faculty.

The coveted prize of this spirited contest has been the Connelly Plaque which was donated by William Connelly, graduate of the class of '27, and has been captured by the perennial champions, Fedigan Hall, since its donation in 1937.

Use College Spirit

ANOTHER year, another football season, and another Temple game . . . Yes, the spirit of this rivaled meeting is again running rampant on the campus of Villanova. Its students are giving vent to their energies by preparing for a monstrous pep-rally and eagerly discussing their predictions for the outcome of the fifteenth game of a highly spirited series.

Inevitably the question comes up "to what extent may one let his spirit run?" The answer is one that follows the precepts of a Catholic college man — that is, to show the spirit that underlies such a game but to keep it in control, particularly during and after this gridiron event. Villanova's anxiety to win can be demonstrated in a manner evident to all but shameful to none if we merely remember that we are no longer high school students.

Spirit is something to be shown by the exuberance of those who possess it, not by the boisterous, thoughtless actions on the part of immature individuals who believe it can only be shown by irresponsible and pugnacious feats.

Let Villanova show its true spirit at this game by backing the team all the way, win or lose, by cheering our hearts out, and by remembering that we represent an institution of learning that has been respected by all for one hundred years.

Wildcats Ready To Make Nov. 28 Sad Day For Owls

Fifteenth Game of Rivaled Series to Start at 2:00 P. M. in Temple Stadium; Pritko to Act as Captain for Smithmen

By JACQUES MAUCH
Sports Editor

Philadelphia grid fans will be treated to the best in football fireworks when Villanova and Temple clash at the latter's stadium Saturday afternoon at 2:00 P. M. in the final game of the season for both schools.

Saturday's meeting will be the fifteenth consecutive battle between these traditional foes which had its beginning back in 1928. The Wildcats hold the lead in the series with eight victories while the Owls have added five zestful wins to their record books. One game, the first encounter between these hard competitors, ended in a scoreless deadlock.

Although Villanova leads the series, the Templars have emerged victorious in the last two engagements. In 1940 they pummeled the Wildcats 28-0, the worst beating the Main Liners have suffered at the hands of the North Philadelphians, and last season they squeezed through 14-13 on Hank Zajkowski's placement boot.

Neither squad has registered a very high digit in the win column this season, but both teams will be out to take this scrap to soothe the wounds of earlier defeats.

Six Games Without Victory

As present records go the Wildcats seem to have a slight edge. Clipper Smith's charges have chalked up three wins over Florida, Manhattan and Iowa State, while losing to the Coast Guards of Manhattan Beach, Auburn, conqueror of mighty Georgia, Detroit, and Duquesne.

The defensively strong Owls, have held several top notch opponents to low scores but at the same time could not get their own offense rolling. After dropping a close one to Jack Haggerty's Georgetown outfit, Temple came back the following week to nip Joe Muha and V.M.I. 7-6. Then followed a long period of famine — a victory draught that plagued the Owls for six games in which they lost three and tied three. Last Saturday they awoke and drove back the Oklahoma Sooners 14-7.

Morrison's Third Season

In their winless period, the Philadelphia lads were beaten by Holy Cross and the powerful North Carolina Pre-Flight and Boston College elevens. The Eagles were held to a touchdown in each quarter which was quite a feat in view of their present records. Ties were earned with Bucknell, Southern Methodist, and Michigan.

Ray Morrison, in his third year as head coach at the Broad Street institution and never beaten by a Wildcat team, has had troubles since the start of the season in moulding an experienced unit. Many new men had to be drilled in the unbalanced line, single wing formations usually employed by

Another Rumor Scotched

According to Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, there is no truth to the rumor prevalent on the campus that "the Navy is planning to take over the college."

Fr. Stanford pointed out that the college is already cooperating in the various programs of the armed services and expects to continue to cooperate with these programs as well as with the new programs which are now being planned.

He remarked that as a member of the Navy Advisory Education Council, he was pleased to see that the students were so "Navy conscious" as indicated not only by their rumors but because of the large number of enlistments in the Naval Reserve programs. He intimated that the two Naval officials, who toured the campus recently, are associated with him in work at the Navy Department.

Students May Obtain Game Tickets Today

Today is the last day in which students may obtain tickets for the Temple-Villanova game.

These tickets will be given free of charge to each full-time undergraduate student for his exclusive personal use upon presentation of his matriculation card at the Business Office between the hours of 12:00 P. M. and 2:30 P. M.

All Villanova students having tickets will enter Temple Stadium at Gate "NG" and each one must present his Matriculation Card as identification with his student ticket. Although the section "NG" will be a reserved section, seats will not be reserved. Therefore, students and their guests will be put on the basis of "First come, first choice of seats."

Guests of students — not more than one with each student—in possession of a $2.85 reserved seat ticket and accompanied by a Villanova student with proper identification will be admitted into the student section at Gate "NG."

Optimism Is Rampant on Villanova Campus

By STAN ZEEMAN

IF the optimism of the student body has any influence on the outcome of the big game next Saturday, the Wildcats should win with ease. Almost to the man Villanovans that were interviewed predicted a victory for the 'Cats, but not without adding that anything can happen in such a heated rivalry.

Past performances is the basis of junior pre-med, Bob Kohnlein's prediction. He says, "Although Villanova's record has been far from perfect this year, Temple has definitely been off season. This should assure us victory." "Chick" Hefele, junior science, confidently prophecies "We still haven't seen the Wildcats at their best; we will

Man on the Street Predictions Vary

By TOM McFARLAND

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following interviews actually took place with our reporter who stationed himself at the corner of 13th St. and Market.)

With the thought of predictions from the man on the street in his native element, we descended into the maze of streets, lanes and alleys of Philadelphia and took up a stand, between a quarterchinking cigar-smoking bookie, and a sailor on his first leave in months.

The sailor, upon questioning proved to be a staunch supporter of the under dog, so that when, in order to boost the Alma Mater's odds, we told him Temple was picked to win, he immediately became an ardent

Templars Are Unsure of An Owl Win

By JIM McWILLIAMS

INTEREST in the coming battle 'twixt the 'Cats and the Owls is not confined only to the Villanova campus. "The Rolling Acres of Broad Street," otherwise known as Temple campus, is also at a high point of excitement. Proof of this can be found by anyone brave enough to journey up to Temple.

So for the purpose of finding the exact pitch of this feverish feeling, we started en route with pencil, paper, and broad smile to the North Broad University.

Upon entering massive Mitten Hall we encountered first a book-laden student hurrying out the door. He was rather reluctant to take enough time to utter a statement for the press. After a few

Annual Alumni Dinner Postponed Until Dec. 5

Because of unforseen conditions, the annual Alumni Homecoming Celebration and Football Banquet will not be held immediately after the Temple game as it has been in former years. Instead, the banquet will be held at Town Hall, Broad and Race Sts. Philadelphia, on December 5. The price per plate is three dollars and fifty cents; for service men, three dollars.

Reservations may be secured by sending the above amount to the chairman of the committee, Mr. H. Bruce Murry, 211 East Cliveden St. Philadelphia, or to the Alumni Director at Villanova. For the first time in the history of the affair, women will be permitted to attend.

The OPA Flounders Again

Among the many confusing statements issuing from the various agencies in Washington the latest edict now under consideration by the Office of Price Administration is even more uncomprehensible.

At present the OPA is debating the advisibility of passing a piece of legislation known as the 'anti-hoarding law.' This bill is designed to curb the limitless buying and excessive storing by the public of necessary foods and vital war materials. As it stands by itself the regulation appears to be a very undemocratic measure.

Why a nation in midst of a struggle for its very existence should be forced by governmental law to do the things that are most helpful to itself is hard to understand. But it is understandable when we realize the numerous activities into which the OPA has been delving lately.

For instance, when the officials in charge of rationing announce weeks, even months, ahead of time that they intend to place restrictions on various commodities, we can see their first-rate stupidity. By such actions they invite needless buying and hoarding, therefore calling for such measures as an 'anti-hoarding' bill. Now, after predicting publicly months ago what foods were to be rationed in the near future, they find that an 'anti-hoarding' law is the only answer to the hysteria of excessive buying that is sweeping the nation.

Instead of foreseeing such a result months ago, the OPA has now reached a point where it virtually admits it cannot cope with the situation.

If they did not wish to encourage coffee and sugar hoarding, why did they announce their intention of a possible rationing weeks before the law went into effect?

The average buyer of America is tempted only to buy more and more when such announcements are made. If some sort of a sensible plan had been formulated and practiced from the outset, there would certainly be little need of an 'anti-hoarding' law today.

—J. P. McW.

A Nation Offers Thanks

In the United States a day is set apart each year for thanksgiving and praise to God — Thanksgiving Day.

The nation as a whole has much for which to be thankful concerning the progress of the war, the natural resourses, its health, and especially the mercies of God. For a nation that has been wasteful in material things and negligent in spiritual matters we have received much clemency.

Each individual, besides sharing his part in the nation's thanksgiving, has personal reasons for expressing thanks. In the case of a Villanova student it may be gratitude for a free afternoon or for doing well in studies this semester.

We could go on perhaps indefinitely naming such items, but if we were to come to a stand-still the job would not be done. We recognize these many things and we are thankful; but, to whom or what can we express our gratitude. It is true we can be indebted to a fellow man but on deeper meditation we realize that for the things that matter most we are indebted to God.

Thankfulness is measured by words and gratitude by actions. Our thankfulness and gratitude should be expressed to God.

SCIENCE and THE MAN

By DR. MACBETH

THERE is always danger that a striking thought will be taken up and repeated so widely and so often that it eventually assumes a prominence entirely out of keeping with its true value. This fate, I think, has befallen the idea that the war we are now waging is a war of science and the machine. So deeply has this idea penetrated our mentality that many of us are showing a tendency to overlook other important elements in our preparation for full participation in the war. This tendency is particularly noticeable in the great stress being placed upon the mastery of the exact sciences in the education of prospective officers in the various services, and in the corresponding neglect of other studies essential to a balanced training program.

Qualities For An Officer

There is certainly ample reason for the presence of courses in physics, mathematics, and related subjects in the curricula of those preparing to be officers. These studies will very likely be of direct value to most of these in the performance of their duties, and will at the same time play their due part in the sharpening of the mental faculties generally. But it should be noted that there are other realms of study that are just as important as these in the training of officers, and that those realms cannot be slighted without detriment to the capabilities of the men who will later win commissions.

What are the elements in an officers' make-up besides that which comes from the study of exact science? Above all, a successful officer must have the quality of leadership, that is, he must understand human nature in the mass and in the individual. He must have the ability to think intelligently and with complete confidence upon a great variety of matters, weighing one point against another with regard to involved relations and subtle distinctions.

Liberal Education Advocated

He must be capable of adjusting his mind easily to new and complex situations arising out of the rapidly changing conditions of actual warfare, and of acting swiftly upon matters of life and death. He must, in short, have acquired either by means of his own unguided efforts or through the proper formal study the kind of education that is underestimated and misunderstood only by those not possessing it—a liberal education.

A liberal education is not what some people appear to think it is. It is not a luxury, to be enjoyed only by the pampered pets of our social order. It is something quite different—something extremely valuable to the individual and to his country—something which includes many things that cannot be put into a word or a sentence, but which has for an important constituent the quality most needed by a leader of men — the quality of thinking straight under adverse conditions and of inspiring others with confidence in that quality.

A Broad Curriculum

Should our officers turn out to be superior to the enemy — and they must, if we are to win—the reason may be found in the fact that the enemy by his very conception of life cannot give his officers the necessary liberal background — while we, because of our preservation of the Western tradition, for which we are fighting, can.

Granted that the above point of view is correct, it follows that the best training program for officers —with the exception, perhaps, of strictly technical men — will rely strongly upon the broadening subjects of the curriculum. But it is imperative that those receiving this training should be of the mental caliber to take quick and full advantage of it. The reason that a liberal education is often looked upon as a failure is that many students seeking to gain it are not capable of taking sufficient advantage of their opportunities. At this time, because of the urgency of the war, it is obsolutely necessary that only those be given advanced training who are gifted with unusual capacity for mental development and assimilation.

Various Tests Needed

A broad plan for officer training, therefore, should have for its starting point the selection of good material, from the standpoint not only of the exact sciences but also of the traditional subjects of the curriculum. To pick out the superior material no one test should be given pre-eminence, since there are a number of factors going to make up mental superiority. Various tests, measuring all the leading aptitudes — such tests as have been worked out by the Human Engineering Laboratory at Stevens Institute—should be called into service. Of these the vocabulary test, which can be given with ease and objectivity, has been found from statistical studies to bear the clos-

Barter by Binder

AFTER reading the latest issues of the Temple University News, it is my humble opinion that the students of Temple expect a close game this Saturday, with Temple coming out on top. Being influenced by this foreign propaganda sheet, I will lay even money on Temple,—and thirty-two points! Any interested lad desiring to pick up some easy money can do so by getting in touch with H. J. B. any afternoon in the VILLANOVAN office. (Note: No wager accepted that exceeds the national debt, as this would be an inflationary tendency and therefore not patriotic.)

"Congrats" of the week go to Vice-Admiral Halsey for doing a very fine job on the Japanese Navy. Sinking twenty-three ships is quite an accomplishment. We hear from unconfirmed sources believed to be reliable that despite the emnity of the Japanese fleet, Admiral Halsey holds no grudges. In fact, he drank a toast to the Japs just before the battle. Quote Admiral Halsey: "Bottoms up."

Safety First:

He had his hand upon the wheel
Quite joyful was the ride,
The other arm was wrapped around
The cutie by his side.

A Copper yelled, "Use both hands,"
In a voice that carried far;
"I can't," the loving swain replied
"I have to steer the car."

Engineer Activities:

We expect a large turnout of engineers at the game Saturday, and we rather appropriately dedicate this little poem to them. This is an excerpt from the Tulane Hullabaloo.

That bunch of dears
The engineers
Who stripped their gears
On many beers.
To the game they flew
With too much brew,
And acted like fools
The whole day through.

Prior to last week-end's social activities, which featured proms at Rosemont, Immaculata, and Chestnut Hill, many of the lads were chirping to their invitees:

Roses are red
Violets are blue
Orchids are $3.50
Won't dandelions do?

Certainly not at Villanova:

Breathes there a man with a soul so dead
Who never has turned around and said
Wow! Not bad!

Contrary to the teachings of the instructors in the physical training course, a noted psychologist on the campus tells us it is possible to lose weight by mental concentration. President Roosevelt would probably call this wishful shrinking.

After last week's issue, I was confronted by a certain Commerce and Finance student (I won't mention his name) and the following conversation ensued:

Student: "I never miss your column."

Me: "You mean you read every issue?"

Student: "No, and I never miss it."

So much for this wise guy. So he doesn't appreciate genius or whatever you want to call it.

The Tech of V. P. I. contains this proposal:

"Go to father," she said, when I asked her to wed;
For she knew that I knew that her father was dead,
And she knew that I knew what a life he had led;
So she knew that I knew what she meant when she said,
"GO TO FATHER."

Dedication of VILLANOVAN Honors Deceased Student, Leo Goodreau

By JOE MILLER

"This paper is dedicated to one of the finest men who ever entered Villanova; scholar, athlete, gentleman—Leo Goodreau."

Ever since the Autumn of 1928, these words have been carried in the masthead of the VILLANOVAN. The story of Leo Goodreau —his life and death—has become somewhat of a legend on the campus. The tradition of Leo Goodreau will live as long as the halls he once walked endure.

In September, 1927, Leo entered Villanova and enrolled in the Arts School. During his sophomore year, he proved his extreme popularity by being elected president of his class. In this year he was also chosen as a member of Pi Omega Phi fraternity.

Having a deep fondness for sports, football especially, he tried out for the Wildcat eleven, and developed into a very capable quarterback. He did not allow his athletic ambitions to interfere with his studies, however, for he maintained a high average on the class honor roll.

Suddenly, with a brilliant future ahead, catastrophe overtook Leo Goodreau. On Friday afternoon, September 28, 1928, he was severely injured during football practice. The seriousness of his injuries was quickly recognized, and he was immediately rushed to the Bryn Mawr Hospital where the last rites of the Church were administered to him.

From Sunday night until the moment of his death on Tuesday afternoon at least one of the priests from the college was constantly at his side. His last moments were extremely peaceful when, surrounded by his immediate family and ministered by one of his priest professors, he passed out of this existence. Death was looked upon by all who had been close to him as a merciful ending to long hours of torturing pain.

It was not easy to forget this sad occurrence. Clouds of gloom, which proved extremely hard to dispell, hung over the campus. Even the football team which he had served so faithfully could not erase the mark of sadness after turning in victory after victory.

It seemed only fitting and proper that his classmates, who had accepted him with such warm friendliness, should erect a memorial to him. This newspaper, the first issue of which appeared about three weeks after his death, is a tribute to the memory of one, who by his brave death, has become a member of every class that has graduated, or will graduate.

While Leo was in the hospital, shortly before his death, one of the priests asked him if he was afraid to die. Leo, endeavoring to suppress cries of anguish being forced upon him by his crushed body, turned to the priest and with a semblance of a smile answered, "No, father. I wasn't afraid to live, so why should I be afraid to die?"

On the morning following his death, the college Chapel was the scene of an impressive ceremony. Team-mates 'on the foot' all squad served as his pallbearers. Solemn High Mass was sung, and the final Benediction was imparted; but no word of eulogy was spoken, for none was needed. His casket was carried out from the church to a waiting hearse where he was started on the first lap of his final journey to the little town in New Hampshire which he had called home.

His classmates decided to memorialize him further by erecting a plaque at the entrance to our stadium. On a day in May, 1930, their plan was fulfilled by having a bronze plate unveiled on the south side of the stadium. This plaque, which can easily be seen by anyone entering the stadium, contains the following words in a simple and unassuming style:

In Memoriam
Leo Francis Goodreau, (1909-1928)
Scholar, Athlete, Gentleman, To One Who Gave His Life For
Villanova College
Dedicated By His Affectionate
Classmates

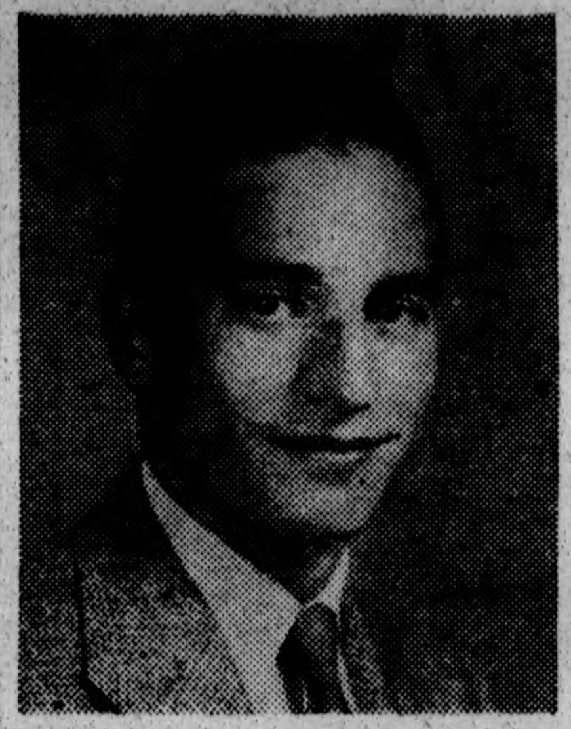
Today it still stands as a material remembrance of one of Villanova's entrants in its own hall-of-fame. As long as college men can retain a memory of a brave student, both in life and in death, Leo Goodreau will still walk the campus.

Meet The Boys:

Lou Has Seen His Share Of Italy; Bob Is Known For His Debating Politically

By RAY BALDWIN

THERE is absolutely no question about it. The gods perched atop Mt. Olympus smiled benevolently, the constellations scrambled together in an advantageous design, and the leaves in the bottom of my tea cup spelled good luck the day our college editor seized upon the idea of assigning me to introduce these two well-known campus characters, who, to be trite, scarcely need an introduction, Louis Esposito and Bob Canfield.



A Trip Abroad

June 21, the same day on which Philadelphia watched summer make her 1922 debut, also ushered into being this column's first guest, Lou Esposito. At the proper age, like every other kid, Lou was hustled off to school, having been enrolled in St. Paul's Parochial School. Unlike most other kids, he emerged from that school as valedictorian; and, because of his excellent record there, received a scholarship sponsored by the Italian Government for a European trip.

No saint inspired with a thirst for souls could ever burst forth with more enthusiastic oratory than Lou displays when vocalizing on the subject of that trip. And small wonder! He set out on the huge Italian liner, Roma, for adventures which would thrill the most blase among us. Pope Pius XI, the Crown Prince of Italy and many more Lou actually met, even down to Hitler's little playmate, the strong-jawed Mussolini. He explored Rome and its catacombs, relics, and wealth of ancient ruins. He toured all the principal cities of Italy, each of which welcomed him and his group with good food and the best hotels.

Having returned from abroad, Lou enrolled at St. Joseph's Prep where you might suppose he became just an ordinary freshman; but no, he became an extraordinary freshman—he obtained the coveted (he assured me it was) position of waterboy on St. Joe's mighty football team. In addition to this, Lou served on the business staff of the Prep's yearbook and quarterly publication.

Writes Exchange Column

The next stepping stone in Lou's career is the one on which he is still standing, the Arts School of Villanova College. Writing for the VILLANOVAN became his first extra curricular activity; and, with characteristic energy, within two years he earned himself the office of Exchange Editor and wrote the column, "The Trading Post." He joined the Belle Air staff in his sophomore year, and was elected business manager of the Centennial Yearbook. Lou did not stop at these activities, for, he is also an active member of the International Relations Club and served on the Dance Committee of the Summer Hop of this past summer.

What part of his future does he see through the crystal ball? A course in law at Penn and a successful attorney's practice afterwards. What tale of romance is weaved by the lines of his palm? That of a certain young miss with whom he is seen at all Villanova's socials and for whom (we learn from reliable sources) he reserves his Sunday afternoons. What are his confident words on the supreme question of the day, "Who will win the Villanova-Temple game?" "Sure victory for Villanova," says Lou confidently.

WE devote the second half of this column to Bob Canfield: the hub of numerous political debates, the well-known nucleus of many a campus controversy; for, Bob's interest in the mechanism of national and world politics is as great as any scientist in the machinery of this orbit.

Like most other mortals Bob was born, the particular year being 1921, the month, April, the day, the 19th. St. Alice's grammar school was the scene of his bookbag-totin', knicker-wearing days. From there he graduated into long pants of Upper Darby High, where he completed his high school years.

In the fall of '39 Robert Canfield walked through the enrollment doors of Villanova's C. & F. School to major in Marketing and to minor in Political Science. Bob immediately plunged into various extra-curricular activities; activities which he entered as an ordinary he almost invariably became the leader.

He has been a staff member of the VILLANOVAN since his freshman days; and, in his senior year he was chosen copy editor. Tales of his famous "after the sheet is done" escapades with Editor Tom Doyle still fly about the campus.

Political Minded

However, where Bob is really in his element; where he feels as natural as a mountaineer without shoes is at a meeting of the I. R. C. He was vice-president last year. There he can utilize the immense fund of information he has acquired concerning the affairs of the day; there, he can give vent to his favorite political theories and his pet political hates; there, he can engage in intelligent debates concerning the things which interest him most.

The I. R. C. has taken him to most of the neighboring colleges for discussions on international policy and admitted him to a meeting at Swarthmore of the Foreign Policy Association. But do not get the idea that all of Bob's political expounding is done within the confines of a meeting room. Many a fiery editorial he has pounded away for the VILLANOVAN, and woe-be-tied the unsuspecting isolationist who chances to stroll his way.

Tid-Bits On College Socialites With A Prediction Of The Wildcats Avenge Over The Temple Owls

By ED REARDON

THIS year Thanksgiving will come and go without much ado, since the "holiday" will consist of suspension of classes at noon on Thursday. However, many of the boys will combine their celebration with the inevitable Temple victory this weekend at several victory parties. Roast Owl is on the menu this Saturday nite. The feathers may be dry, but there's always a way!

We wish that Joe Daly would make up his mind about Betty. From the latest front-line reports, it seemed that Nancy from Chestnut Hill was moving into the number one slot—but after the effects of the Rosemont dance, we wonder? . . . against Temple."

Hard at work behind the counter in the Pie Shop, we found Joe Hamm, campus attache, whom we proceeded to interview. After gazing into the atmosphere for a moment, he announced, "We'll take 'em like Grant took Richmond!"; then he gave me a big smile and went right back to work.

Interrupting an exciting game at the pin-ball machine long enough to get commerce student Joe Barry's opinion, we were not surprised to find that he thinks "Postus will lead us to an easy win. His roommate, "Wabbit" Sullivan, a leading exponent of the Movement for the Consumption of More Green Vegetables, believes, "If the boys eat their carrots before the game we ought to hop all over them."

Jack Deery, junior artsman, sounds a mournful note "Ever since I've been at Villanova we have lost to Temple"; he adds, however, "but this year there's a war on." On the other hand, Don White, science sophomore, looks at it this way: "We just missed it last year, so we'll make sure this year."

Then there are the real optimists Jim Cahill, junior engineer, for instance, says: "It won't even be close, I'll take any bets." George Coleman, sophomore education, has the same idea: "We ought to break the scoring record of the series."

George Mathews, engineering sophomore, is in the same category with his prophecy: "We'll murder da bums! Irishman Ed McCune, sophomore engineer, feels "Itll be a great day for the Irish!" Bill Walsh, junior C. & F., predicts that "This is a Wildcat year."

With an eye to the future Vince Bradly, C. & F. junior, says, "I hope to nurse a victorious memory of this notable occasion in my imminent army days."

Right in the spirit of times is Larry Landolfe, junior engineer, who thinks, "The best possible celebration for a centennial year would be a victory over Temple."

"What do you think about the Temple-Villanova game?" we asked the bookie. "I don't think about it," he said, in a tremendous puff of cigar smoke, "but I'll give you even money either way."

As we turned to leave (we always do when $$$ enters the conversation), our attention was attracted by a strikingly beautif. . . .but that's another story.

The next person we accosted with the pertinent but seeming impertinent question was the true man-in-the-street. . . . a traffic policeman. "Well," he said, "Excuse me. . . . where the h— do you think you're going; that light's red. . . .I believe that Villanova should win, but . . . .excuse me. . . .if you're sober g'wan home and get that hack off the street. . . .but the sledding will be tough if Temple . . . .excuse me, bud, that's my Sarge in the car over there. See you again."

Victim number four was as unproductive of applicable information as the law had been. He was a salesman (sandwich variety) for a certain Mole St. oystermonger. "Vill-nove? Who's dat place? Don' bodda me boy!"

"Ya gotta watch 'em big boys lads on Temple," advised a more obliging newsboy (65 yrs. old) but I ain't been follyin' Villanova since 'ey took up wid 'at 'T' and dropped 'at fancy shift. 'At 'T'. . . .evvybody uses it. . . .no showm'nship, no coler. . . .Knowwaddeyemeen?" For the sake of keeping the peace we did.

A colored Chicagoan, who plays slap-base in a certain dive and stands on the corner in off hours, spoke thus: "Ain't much on football, Jack, but ah dug yo' baylah game las' yeah. . . .'em 'Cats' was frantic, Jack. Lotta boys gone, you loses; latch onta passah sinz las' yeah, you wins. Thass ole Jack. Cuttin' out."

Having premonitions concerning button-holing of executive types, we carefully avoided approaching such.

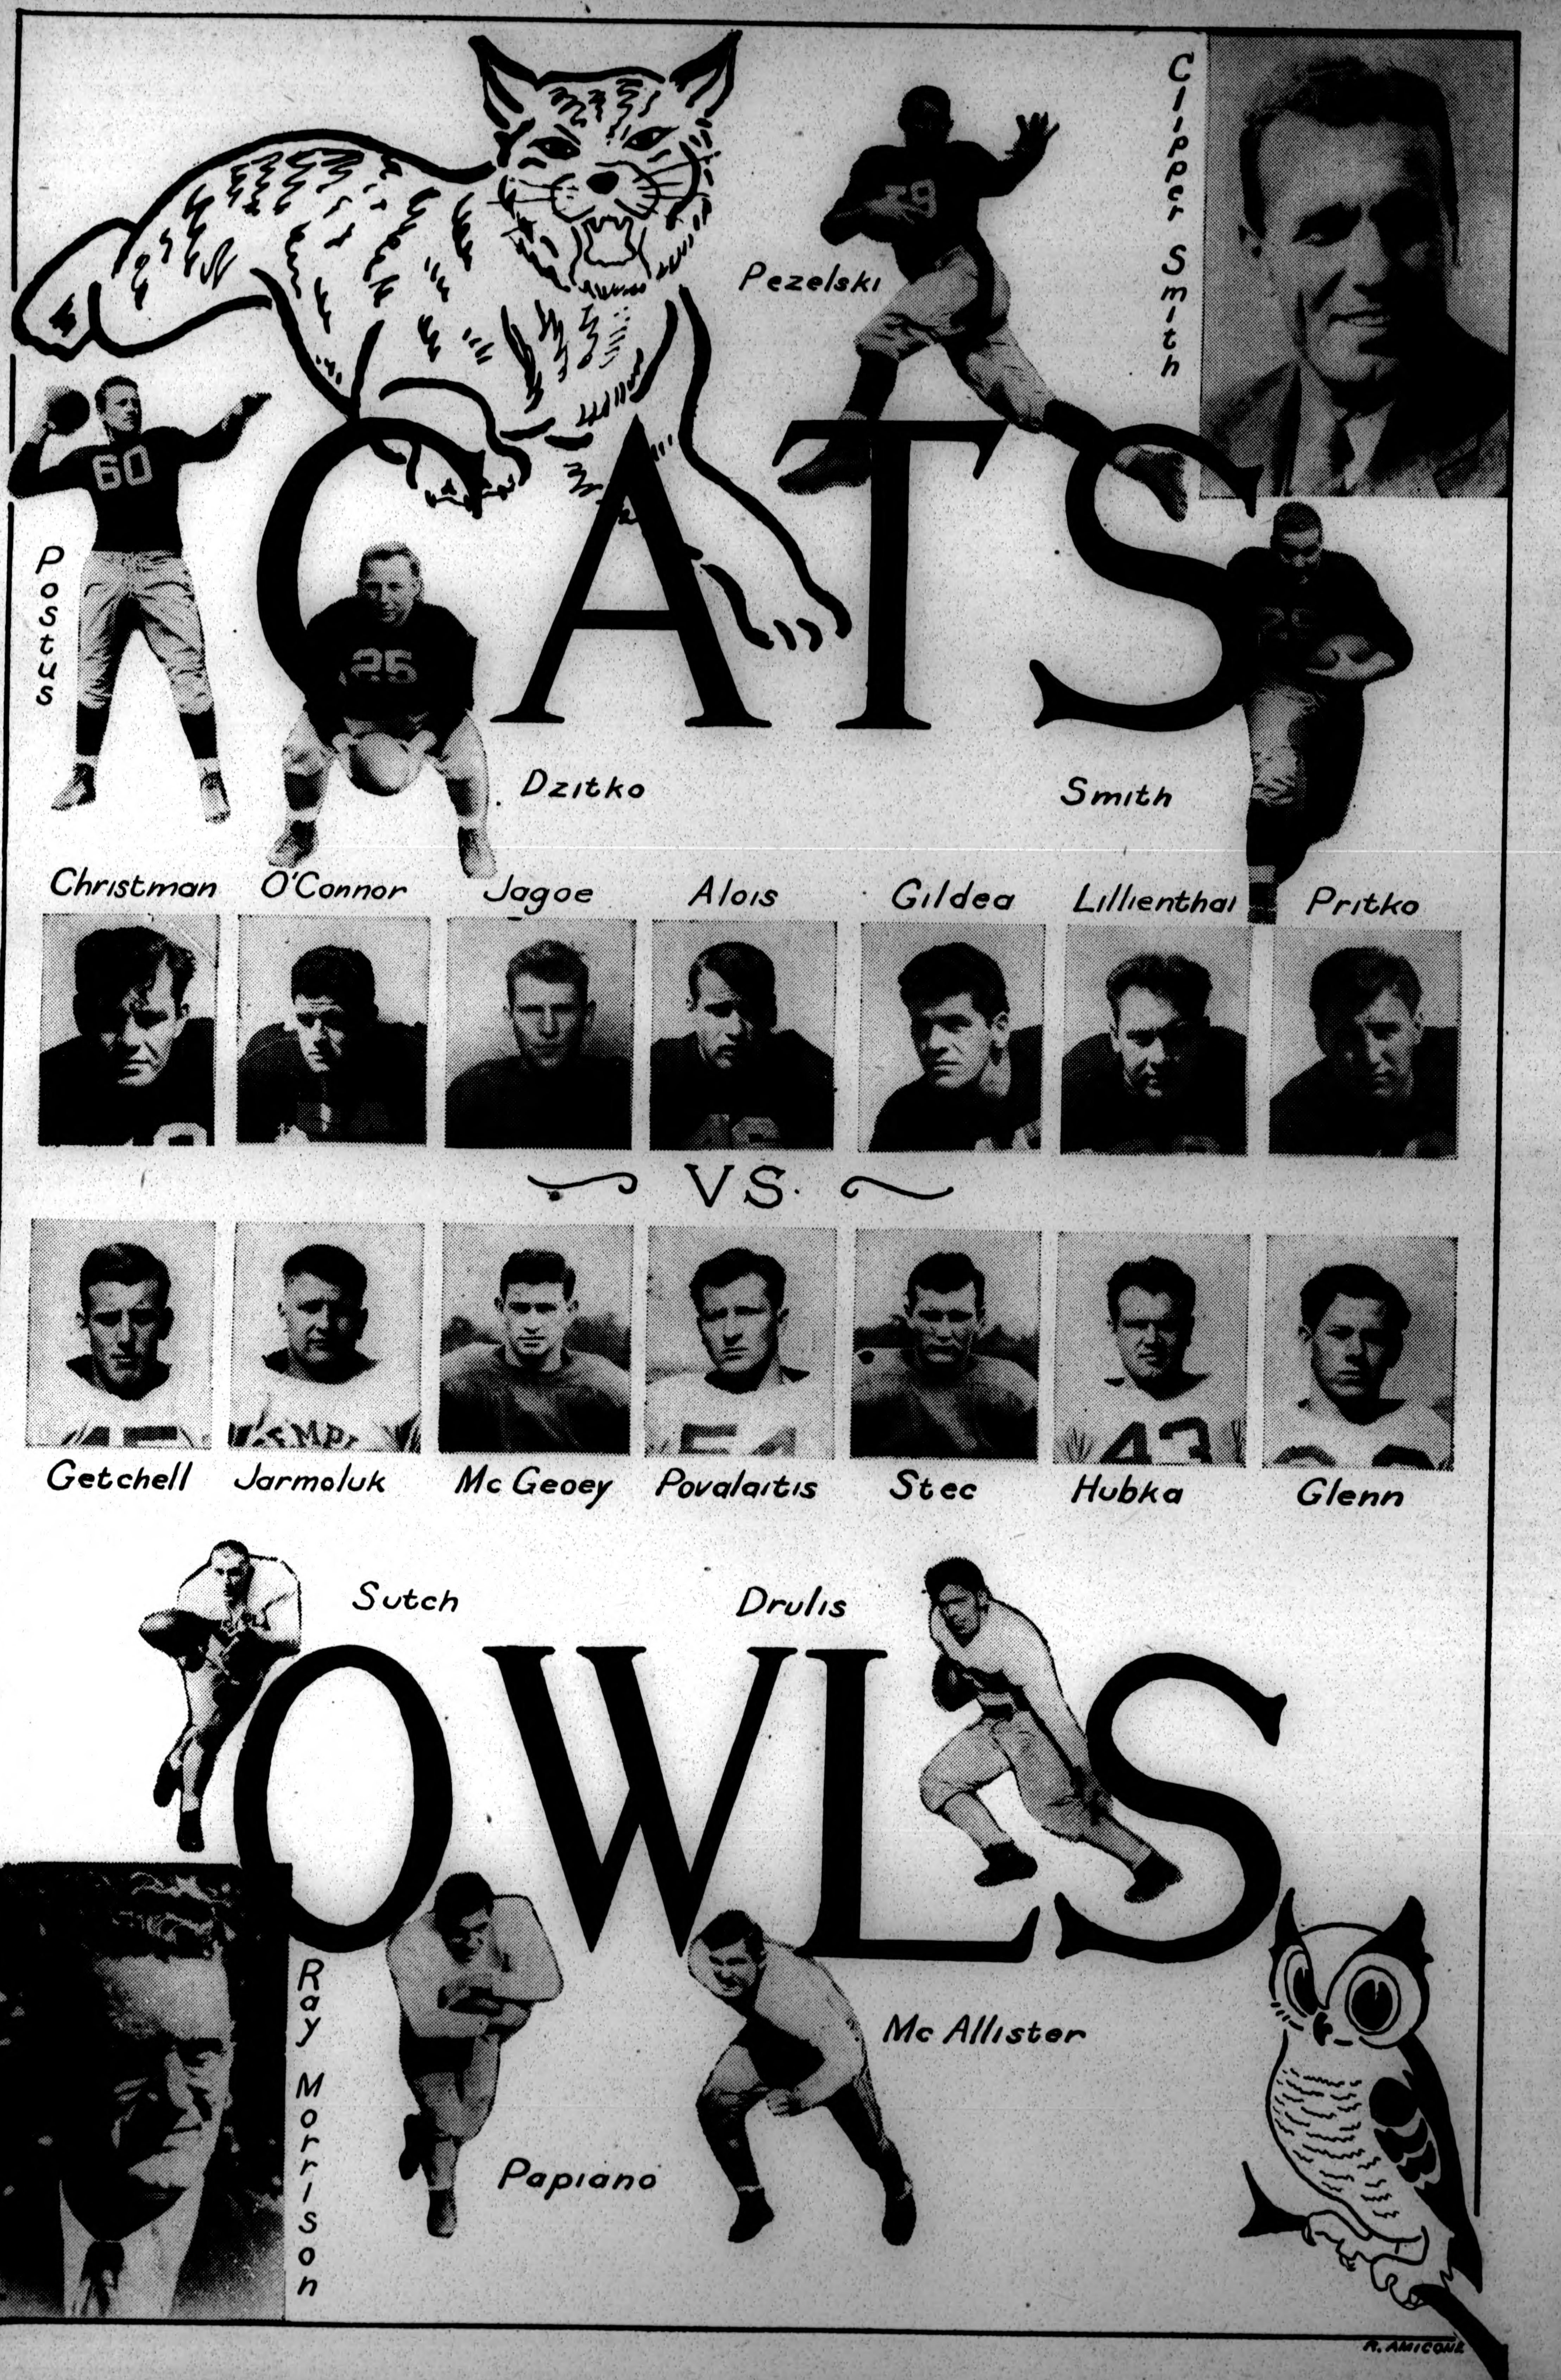
seconds of urging, James V. McCarthy announced that, as he saw it, "Villanova ought to just about wreck the stadium on Saturday with our poor boys. We will be doing wonderful if we can hold the score down to 25-0."

Strangely enough the sight of a pair of co-eds next commanded our attention. Bidding a hasty farewell to our first interviewee we dashed over to consult the girls. The first, Sally Hatzer, predicted "a very close game," but nevertheless was quite confident that the Owls would end up on top. Her partner, Lil Cohen, remarked, "We should win the game which will be much like last year's—very close and very good."

Their persuasive arguments began to sway our faith in Villanova until we came across our next lad. This boy, George Tilbury, a loyal 'Cat rooter in Owl's feathers foresaw "A pretty good battle but Villanova will probably win easily."

By this time we had covered a lot of territory back and forth through Mitten Hall, so we decided to gather our impliments together and leave. But for the second time within the space of one afternoon, our attention was rudely distracted, this time by another bevy of co-eds. They, as far as we could ascertain, turned out to be a quintet from the Phi Delta Tau Sorority, Nancy, Marion, Mildred, Sunny, and Ruzzie, (surnames withheld for unknown reasons) each in turn predicted an overwhelming Temple victory. Among other things, they announced that "Villanova has a pretty good team, but this year the Owls will double last year's score." Such talk we dismissed with a shrug saying it was only so much false talk eminating from the enemy camp.

Just to even things up slightly we stopped another male student and asked his comment. "It points to be a good game," Bob Goldberg replied. "But I think that Postus and Zamlinsky will prove too much for our bedrageled Owls."



'Cats Priming to Avenge Two Defeats by Temple

Sportorial

By Jacques Mauch
Sports Editor

THERE comes to Temple stadium Saturday afternoon a Villanova Wildcat eleven that will repeat this season's performances of Boston College, Holy Cross, et al and write an entirely different story into the books than those that were recorded the past two seasons.

Templars bring your crying towels for at the close of the day there will be weeping and gnashing of teeth in the South stands of the North Philadelphia stadium!

Although neither the Wildcats nor the Owls have established very impressive records this season, Villanova has quite an edge when the respective registers are matched. We know that every last rooter on either side from the oldest alumnus to the most naive freshman will tell you that past records mean nothing when the teams take the field in this classic. But a rating of four trimmings and three ties in nine starts is very, very poor in any league.

Two years ago a Temple writer ennumerating reasons for an Owl victory over the Wildcats listed Andy Tomasic as half the reasons. This year in stating causes for a Villanova win we might list "No Andy Tomasic" as half of them.

Yes, Temple's great back is gone and Coach Ray Morrison has none to replace him. Gone also is most of the Owl line that operated in front of Tomasic. Andy's pass receivers, Cliff Seaver and Frank Moister are no more. The veteran tackles Matt Kilroy and Henry Zajkowski have graduated and the center of the line was depleted by the loss of Korba, Brahm, and Boyd.

We sympathized with Ray Morrison at the beginning of the season when he was faced with these cold facts. Saturday afternoon he will again have our sympathies when Smith, Postus and Company go to work on his boys.

Who has the Owl coach got to replace Tomasic? Three men now do the work that was handled by Andy. Freshman Gene Hubka is a good passer but he can't match the tosses of Villanova's Al Postus. Besides Postus has it all over him in experience.

George Smith is as good a line smasher as George Sutch any day and at backing up a line the "Blockbuster" has few equals in the East. Sutch's controlled kicking is evened up by Postus' toe on the Wildcat side of the roster and Steve Pritko can outdistance Jim Woodside's punts as season's statistics prove.

Walitis, Nejman, Sylvester and the rest can never outrun Postus or the fleet-footed Joe Pezelski in a month of Sundays.

Where will Temple find two ends like Steve Pritko and Billy Sullivan? That's quite a question for Temple fans. The rest of the Owl's line we might say is even with the Wildcat forward wall (and that's giving the North Philadelphians a break). But the Wildcat reserve power at the guards and tackles is much greater than Coach Morrison's and by far the more seasoned. Sophomores fill the Owl line while juniors and seniors predominate in that of the Wildcat.

Clipper Smith:

"We're going to have a battle on our hands Saturday afternoon. Right now the Temple team is a lot better than they were three weeks ago. The backfield unit of Nejman, Woodside, and Sutch is the best Temple combination I've seen this season. Nejman holds the key position and works well behind a big Temple line.

"It will be an even game with the team exhibiting the most enthusiasm coming out on top. No special skills will determine the outcome unless it is superior punting by one of the teams.

"Eeverything will be put into this fray. Both schools will go at it hammer and tongs and the one that is up for this game will be the ultimate winner."

Joe Pezelski, Villanova halfback, almost got loose on this play Sunday afternoon at Shibe Park as Duquesne University downed the Main Liners 6-0. Setcavage (49) and Jansante (54) have just missed the runner, but the Duke safety man brought him down.

59 Yard End Run By Hall Gives Dukes 6-0 Victory

150 Pound Halfback Dashes for Score in Second Period; Kielbasa and Goode Run Over Powerless Wildcats

By BILL WALSH

Reigning supreme over Villanova for the third consecutive year, Duquesne University defeated the Wildcats in Shibe Park last Sunday afternoon in a hard fough contest, 6-0. A lightning-like dash around right end by substitute halfback Forest Hall in the second period of the contest for 59 yards gave the inspired Dukes the only score of the game.

Villanova kicked off to the Pittsburghers to open the contest, and on the fourth down Max Kielbasa, star punter of the Dukes, got off a very poor kick which went out of bounds on the midfield stripe. Villanova could gain no more than seven yards in three tries, and Al Postus got off a beautiful boot which went out on the Duquesne eleven yard line.

Getting possession of the ball on their own 39 on the exchange the Wildcats made the initial first down of the contest on a pass from Postus to Pritko to the Duquesne 47. Thrown for a twenty yard loss a moment later, however, Postus then kicked to the Dukes' 20.

Dzitko Intercepts

From that point Duquesne began to roll, making three first downs in succession, and reaching the Villanova 42 before an alert pass interception by Johnny Dzitko interrupted the Red and Black march. After losing five yards in three plays, however, Villanova was forced to kick, freshman Ed Czaikoski booting to the Duquesne 40. The period ended a moment later after the Dukes had made a first down on the Blue and White 48.

Hall Scores

They followed this up with another ten yard gain as the second stanza opened. but after being penalized for being offside a few plays later, Captain Joe Goode kicked into the end zone and it was first down for the Wildcats on their own 20. A buck through center netted a first down and Czaikoski then punted to the Duquesne 38. Hall, who had just entered the game, brought the ball back to the 43. The next two plays resulted in losses and then Hall skirted right end for 59 yards and a touchdown. The try for extra point was blocked by Art Alois, freshman center of the Wildcats.

Goode's Punt Stops On One

After an exchange of kicks Joe Pezelski threw a running pass to Dzitko who reached the Duquesne 32. The attack was stalled at that point, however, as the next two plays resulted in a net loss of 29 yards, and Czaikoski kicked to the Dukes' 25. Goode returned the punt to the 33 as the half ended.

Kicking off again as the second half opened, the determined Villanovans finally brought the Red and Black ball carrier down on his own 45. Goode then kicked out on the Villanova 11 yard line and the play remained in Villanova territory for the next 12 minutes, the period being highlighted by another punt from the toe of Captain Goode which stopped on the Wildcat one yard line. Pritko kicked out to the Villanova 40, but Duquesne had a first down on the 22 as the quarter ended.

Field Goal Attempt Fails

Thrown for losses on the next three plays, the Dukes then attempted a field goal from the 25. Kielbasa's kick was wide, however, and Villanova took over on the 20. Peselski made a first down on the 32, and after being held to a yard gain in the three plays that followed, the Wildcats kicked to their opponents' 30. Duke fullback, Joe Gottlieb, split the center of the line for 16 yards and a first down on his 46. The potential march culminated at that point.

Pritko kicked out on the next play to his own 30, and on the exchange, Goode missed the coffin-corner, and Villanova had the ball, first and ten, on the 20, with only a few minutes remaining. Smith then went through center to the 31, but the Wildcats were forced to kick, the game ending with Duquesne in possession of the ball a moment later.

Bruising Battle Expected Between Opposing Lines

Both Teams Will Be At Peak in Attempt to Redeem Poor Seasons; Eight Seniors Play Last Game for Villanova

Morrison, and throughout the season the lineup has undergone several revisions.

Lamented deeply is the loss of the brilliant Andy Tomasic, the Owls' one man team of last season. The regular end, Cliff Seaver, both guards and both tackles are also missing.

Frank Moister returns at one wing post while John Mahalic and Frank Ford, local boy from North Catholic high take care of the other. Close behind these are freshman Frank Kane, and senior Roy Diduk.

Brenden White and Big Mike Jarmoluk, 242 pound giant, mainstays of last season's freshmen line are fixtures at the tackles. Jarmoluk is another local boy who gained All-Scholastic honors at Frankford High School in Philadelphia, and White is from North Catholic High.

Sutch Is Dangerous

Senior Sid Beshunsky, placement kick artist, and junior Ed Stec hold down the guard slots, while John Timko, freshman from Carteret, N. J., fills the pivot spot. Morrison, especially worried at the beginning of the season by the loss of five men in the center of the line has discovered several capable replacements. Tom McGoey and Walt Macenka were the starting guards against Oklahoma and may find themselves in there at the opening whistle Saturday. Jim Woodside, regular center, was shifted to understudy Al Drulis at quarterback when Timko proved to be a very dependable man.

Big gun in the Owl attack is "Jarrin' Jawge" Sutch, senior fullback from Norristown, Pa. Sutch tallied seven touchdowns last year to finish second behind Tomasic in Temple's scoring parade. He handles the ball on many of Morrison's single wing plays, is a good blocker, and a line smasher who means business when he comes through.

Freshman is Passer

The other senior signal caller Al Drulis, bearer of a name famous in Temple grid history. He and Sutch are playing their third season as regulars.

A trio of freshmen halfbacks round out the backfield. Gene Hubka, passing find uncovered in midseason, will probably start at left half if he has recovered from injuries suffered in the Boston College game several weeks ago. Otherwise, he will give way to "Injun Joe" Nejman, who displayed brilliant passing and running ability against the Sooners last Saturday. Bill Walitis established a monopoly on the right halfback position at the start of the campaign and has held it ever since.

Five Seniors Start

Clipper Smith, preparing for his seventh tangle with the Owls, will send five seniors, five juniors, and a freshman into the fray. Steve Pritko, 205 pound end, Roy Erickson, sixty minute performer at guard in the last two games, tackles Vinnie Carlesimo and Bob O'Connor, and fullback George "Block-Buster" Smith are the starting seniors. Three others who will also play their final game for the Blue and White are end, Hank Christman, guard Leo Jagoe, and quarterback Ben Danik.

Juniors, Tom Gildea, Erickson's running mate at guard, and diminutive Billy Sullivan, left flankman, and freshman center, Art Alois, complete the Wildcat forward wall,

FINAL GAME

Ray Morrison:

"Temple's football team has not enjoyed a very successful season in 1942, but I am looking forward to my team playing its most spirited game of the season on Saturday against Villanova.

"I have enjoyed every minute of the past two games with Villanova—and not for the particular reason that I've seen Temple win both times. But what has made me happy has been the fine, sportsmanlike play on the part of both Villanova and Temple players. If it becomes our lot to win again, I know that Clipper will come across the field to shake my hand and tell me how fine our team played. And I, in turn, will go across the field to greet Clipper if Temple loses."

Brilliant Feats Color Owl-'Cat Gridiron Rivalry

Entering the fifteenth game of an interrupted series that began in 1928 the Wildcats hold a three game edge in victories over the Cherry and White of Temple. On the short end of the score the past two years Villanova has won eight of the games, lost five and fought to a scoreless tie once.

The deadlock occurred in the inaugural battle between the two institutions in '28. The game was played on Franklin Field. That year the Blue and White bottled up the Owls great back, Swede Hanson.

The following year Coach Harry Stuldreher sent a fighting team on the field which sunk the Templars 15-0. Johnny McGann and Johnny Gillespie scored the first touchdowns of this famous series.

Smallest Crowd

Biff Gardner, rugged Wildcat fullback led the Main Liners to a thrilling 8-7 victory in 1930 in the bitter cold of Municipal Stadium. Gardner scored first but Temple surged back with Swede Hanson going over and Corny Bonner converting. In the waning minutes of the struggle Bonner was caught in his end zone for the deciding points.

Under the direction of a new Coach Heinie Miller, the Owls retaliated in 1931 and dropped the Blue and White 13-7 at Municipal Stadium. Zahnrow and Dreibe scored for the North Philadelphians and Milne tallied ofr the 'Cats.

Temple Editor Gives Reasons For Owl Victory

By Harvey Pollack
Sports Editor

Take it from a guy who has been through the mill—a guy who has been forced to undergo the ordeal of watching Temple's gridders in nine contests, Temple is going to beat Villanova Saturday or die in the attempt.

At this stage of the game the only thing that can make the season a success is a win over Villanova. That's exactly what's cooking in the minds of Temple's football squad and in the desperate minds of the Owl coaches, Ray Morrison, Josh Cody, and Harold Williams.

Won Last Two

Morrison is dangerously close to seeing Villanova down Temple for the first time. In his previous two years at the helm of the Cherry and White pigskinners, he watched his proteges take 28-0 and 14-13 victories over the Wildcats. He wants to keep that record unblemished and says he'll do everything possible to do so.

It would really be funny if the Temple offense, which has been threatening all season long to break loose, suddenly shows its true power aganist the Cats. Yet one never knows what will happen in this traditional contest and it wouldn't surprise Owl fans one whit if George Sutch, Joe Nejman, Gene Hubka, and other backs finally display their true colors against the Main Liners.

Austin, Alumni Win Two Each to Lead; Mendel Residents Taste First Victory of Season

Austin and Alumni halls opened up their second-half drives Tuesday afternoon of last week to continue to dominate the Intramural basketball league and to make things unpleasant for their hapless rivals. In the opening week of the second-half they each won two contests and left the fighting Mendel Day Hops in the lurch with one win and one loss.

The first game resulted in a victory for the Mendel Day Hops as they trounced the C. & F. dribblers 41-31. However, the game wasn't the runaway the score indicates. C. & F. opened with an early attack that gave them a 17-15 halftime lead. In the second period Ward entered the fracas and sealed C. & F.'s doom with his fourteen points.

Alumni Thumps Mendel

In the initial nocturnal test Austin trammeled over the Fedigan Gigiloes 46-24. It was Austin coming and going. The best the Redbirds could do was to sneak a basket in once in a while. Cheppa's 21 points weren't needed and Ned Milde's 16 points weren't sufficient for the losers.

The second contest like the first was another runaway. The Mendel Residents added to their losing streak by collapsing at Alumni's feet 47-23. The Greenies led 22-9 at the half and Father Dunne and his boys are still wondering how Mendel got 12 points in the second half.

McFadden Totals 20 Points

On Thursday, Commerce and Finance lost again, being downed 47-30 by Austin. C. & F. was hampered by a lack of reserves and a couple of good passers to set up baskets for Hagan and Meehan whose scoring has dropped considerably. McFadden and Cheppa were grateful to the Businessmen for giving them a chance to fatten their scoring totals by 20 and 16 points respectivly.

Draw Close

Nightfall descended and so did the Mendel Day Hops. In one of the best games in this second half they were outpointed by Alumni 31-26. Alumni played excellent ball and the best Father Sullivan's charges could do was to make their foul shots in the first half which ended 15-9 with Alumni in front. After intermission a small but appreciative audience saw the Greys rebound with an attack that was enough to gray Alumni's hair right then and there. They gradually shortened the lead but for some mysterious reason declined in the late minutes of the contest, as Alumni opened the gap with shots by McGuinnes and Lowden.

The second game although not close came as a big surprise. Father Kropp's boys from Mendel won their first game in twelve starts when they downed Fedigan 41-29. The Yellows played an inspired brand of basketball in defeating the Redbirds who haven't been coming up to par lately. Englehard took scoring honors while Charlie LaBelle was held to a mere 5 points.

Dzitko, respective signal callers have been good quarterbacks throughout the season. Their selection of plays on Saturday and the adaptation of their offensive to the defense set up by the opposition will determine which is the better.

Finally, we may say that Temple is a good defensive team, and only a defensive team from what they have shown this season. On the other hand Villanova's offense and defense have both clicked. They have shown that they can score from anywhere on the field and can hold when the going gets tough.

We've witnessed eleven of the past fourteen Villanova-Temple battles and have never seen the Wildcats off on that day or let down but once. Even if the Owls play over their heads Villanova's all-around superiority and her grim determination to win this one at all costs will lead her to victory.

Florida beat Auburn 6-0; Villanova took Florida 13-3; Auburn beat Villanova, 14-6; Georgia murdered Florida 75-0; and Auburn upset Georgia 27-13.

nova and its likely that their play Saturday, whether good or bad, will turn the tide.

George Sutch, the battering fullback who last year cause Owl rooters to yell "We want a Sutchdown" will close out his intercollegiate career against the Cats for it's not likely that Temple will accept any bids to any post season Bowl classics. Always a dangerous man and always potent against Villanova, George would like nothing better than to wind up spearheading the Templars to a win over their arch rival.

Zajkowski's Toe

Other seniors who are veterans of previous skirmishes are Captain Al Drulis, George Povilaitis, Sid Beshunsky, Angy Spanagna, and Ed Bilikiewicz. It may be that Beshunsky's toe, like the talented digit of Hank Zajowski in 1941, may prove the difference between victory and defeat.

What with the reserve programs expected to call up students to active duty and the 18 and 19-year-olds being drafted th-- may be the last year of college football for the duration and likewise the last Villanova-Temple engagement. Temple would certainly like to end things on the right side of the ledger. I think they will but then I use reefers.

while a trio of third year men round out the backfield.

Postus May Not Start

Johnny Dzitko, the durable director of the Villanova machine, will be in there at the whistle along with either Joe Pezelski or Zig Zamlynski at right half. If Al Postus recovers from the leg injury he received in Sunday's game he will be a certain starter, otherwise Pezelski will take his place and Zamlynski will move into the right half spot.

Without Postus the Villanova attack will be slowed down considerably. But in this rollicking rivalry, where anything can, and usually does happen, some unknown may earn the plaudits of the fans and lead his team to victory. Coaches, players, and fans on both sides want this one more than any other. Saturday afternoon, barring a tie game, the ambitions of one side will be achieved while the hopes of the other will be blasted from under them.

HIGHEST SCORER

The highest total of points ever scored by a single player in the Wildcat-Owl series was made in Villanova's victory in 1933 by Whitey Randour. He scored two touchdowns and kicked three extra points for fifteen markers.

BEST TACKLES

When Doc Jacobs reported to Clipper Smith after scouting Duquesne he said that the Dukes had the two best tackles in the east in John Matisi and Ed Cibulas. Their performances Sunday verified the Doc's statement.

1932 to give Villanova a 7-0 victory.

Warner Takes Over

1933 brought "Pop" Warner to Temple and also brought "Whitey" Randour, who proceeded to run wild over the Owls scoring fifteen points in an overwhelming 24-0 win. Carroll Cook tallied once and quarterback Toby Cavanaugh kicked his fourth field goal of the year which gave him a tie for first in the nation in that department.

The mighty Dave Smukler matched Randour's work the following year to lead the Owls to a 22-0 victory. Big Dave scored a touchdown, the point after and later in the game booted a 24 yard field goal. Dave Watts and Buzz Mowery also contributed scores. The impressive showing by the Owls in this game and in others throughout the season landed them in the Sugar Bowl the following New Year's Day.

Thrilling Triumph

Captain Eddie Michaels, one of the greatest linemen to wear the Blue and White led the 'Cats to a 21-14 victory the next season in the most thrilling game of the series. Art aimo and Nick Kotys scored touchdowns for the Main Liners but Stumpy Bill Londsderf tied up the game with two long end runs that resulted in scores. Late in the third period with Temple attempting to kick from the end zone, Michaels tore through the line and blocked the punt to tie the score with an automatic safety. Nick Koys sewed up the ball game in the final period when he passed to Franny Nye in the end zone.

Coaches Clipper Smith and Vince McNally took the reins of the Wildcats in 1936 and Temple's Chris Pappas made it a sad season for them when he scored the game's only touchdown as Temple won 6-0.

Nowak Scores Twice

With revenge in their hearts, Villanova's "Dream Team" of 1937, fifth ranking club in the nation, steamrollered the Owls 33-0, the highest total registered by either team to date. The highlight of the snowy, bitter cold afternoon, was the interception of an Owl pass by Bill Rogers, rotund tackle who raced sixty yards for a touchdown surrounded by Wildcat blockers.

Continuing their unbeaten string the following year Villanova romped to a 20-7 victory. End Walt Nowak scored twice in the first five minutes. He caught a pass thrown by Nick Basca for the first touchdown and grabbed a fumble right out of the air and ran twenty yards for the second score. Nick crossed the Temple goal in the final period and Jim oPwers scored for the Owls.

Basca Shines

Basca's performance in the 1939 game will long be remembered in this rivalry. Intercepting a pass in the first quarter, Nick galloped sixty yards to pay dirt. Temple came back to tie the score when Andy Tomasic, then a sophomore, scored on a ninety yard pass and run play, then went ahead on the conversion. With only several minutes remaining, the sensational Basca, brought the crowd to its feet when he intercepted another pass on his own thirty-five and snaked his way to the Temple three yard line. In rushed sophomore Ad Worthington who rifled a short pass to Buzz Howlett in the end zone to give the 'Cats a 12-7 win.

The thirteenth game proved disastrous for the Wildcats for now it was Tomasic's turn. Handy Andy travelled 140 yards that afternoon as Temple registered their most impressive victory 28-0.

Last year it was Tomasic again. He passed for two touchdowns to end Cliff Seaver and Harry Zajkowski kicked both extra points to give the Owls a slim 14-13 triumph.

LONGEST PLAY

The longest scoring play of the Villanova-Temple series was a ninety yard pass and run combination pulled off by the Owls in 1939. Al Juraliwicz passed 10 yards to Andy Tomasic, who was then a sophomore and he hot footed 80 more for the touchdown.

Here And There

By JACK DUDLEY

Tomorrow we'll celebrate our first wartime Thanksgiving Day. We're so thankful we could think of no better way of showing the fact than by deciding to attend school on the morrow.

Everyone has something for which to be thankful. In the lives of most of our campus sporting notables is found something for which they are rejoicing in their own peculiar ways.

Maurice J. "Clipper" Smith, head coach of our fighting football team, bends his knee everytime he realizes that Villanova plays Auburn but once a year. We can't recall any other rival that has stopped the Wildcats four years running. And then remember that the army left him enough players to make a football team. But those boys in service would make a nice outfit if they could get together.

George "Doc" Jacobs, chief scout and coach of the baseball team, breathes a sigh of relief when he realizes that the VILLANOVAN no longer carries the coaches predictions of future football games. Doc was always explaining why he skipped the Villanova game in his predictions. As official scout he was on the spot. If he picked the Wildcats he would be squelched for over optimism. If he predicted a defeat he would be charged with a pessimistic outlook on the 'Cat's chances. Doc should know by now that you can't please everyone.

Al Severance wouldn't admit it but he's probably grateful that he didn't lose too many of his basketball stars since last year. Villanova has a good schedule this year, one that will keep the boys on their toes and add more gray hairs to Al's scalp.

Senior football managers, Lou Block and Joe Halpin, will have easier sailing shortly when they pack away the moleskin for another year. Theirs was a tough job well handled.

Genial Bill Craven, senior track manager, who has been filling in for Jumbo Elliott as best he can is happy about the fact that all his underclass stars with one exception have returned to school this year. At a time like this it is well to mention that Bill is one of the happiest and thankful lads on the campus, but for the rest of the story see Ed Reardon!!

—V—

This Saturday Temple and Villanova will clash for the 15th time. At this stage the Wildcats hold the edge in the series with eight victories. Temple, with its victories in the past two years has closed the gap somewhat. The Owls have now won five games.

One-sidedness in any rivalry makes for lack of interest. For that reason, as we look back, those defeats in the last two years don't look so bad. Besides, they give the 'Cats more incentive to wreak vengeance on the Owls.

In The Sportlight

By BILL CAREY

Back in 1939, Big Hank Christman emerged from the hills of Manayunk, Pa., and wended his way to Villanova. Hank, varsity end, is formally known as Henry J. Christman, Education School, class of '43.

Christman, besides starring in football and basketbal at St. John's High School, built himself into a legend of the school in the hills. Starting out in his freshman year, Hank played four years of varsity football and was unanimously chosen All-Catholic, and All-Scholastic end in his junior and senior years. In his last year he even alternated at end and left half, as he captained the team to their most successful season in the Philadelphia Catholic League.

HANK CHRISTMAN

Injury Jinx

Standing 6' 2", and weighting in the neighborhood of 200 pounds, Hank has been definitely characterized by his loping manner and boisterous wit. One thing about him, if he has any worries no one else will realize it, because even when he shows disgust he has a funny crack to make about a paralleling situation. Very often he starts out on a gripe, and ends up laughing with every one else enjoying his predicament.

Names Gafford Best

Catching the eye of Clipper Smith early in his frosh year, Hank started at left end and has been there ever since. However, he has been dogged by hard luck on injuries. A season hasn't gone by that he hasn't suffered an injury to his knee. This has kept him out of more action than he ever expected, for in his first freshman days he established himself as an iron man.

Playing a crashing style of football, Chris is a typical Rockne end. He has developed a rough and ready style and has played recklessly with full body blocking and shoe string tackles characterizing his type of play. Often finding himself in the opponent's backfield, he got good enough views to name Gafford of Auburn, as the best back he ever faced and Mush Battista of Florida, as the most impressive lineman. His greatest moment came when he blocked a kick on Temple's Andy Tomasic.

Finding that varsity football takes up a lot of his time Hank has kept most of his activities in the athletic sphere. He is remembered especially well for his heavyweight activities in the Intramural boxing tournaments. The McGee-Christman battle has gone down in I. M. history.

With the coming of the war, Chris enlisted in the Marine Reserve and is ready to go whenever they call him. After the war, he expects to follow in the footsteps of his uncle, A. G. Hennessey, and go into sales work. It was his uncle who fostered the idea of college and Villanova.

By JOE CARBINE

In the heat of battle, both in war and in football, it is the field general who directs the offensive. Therefore much of the credit for the Wildcats' tremendously improved blitzkrieg tactics this year can be given to their husky, stocky, senior quarterback, Ben Danik.

This aggressive mainstay of the Villanova backfield hails from Elizabeth, N. J., a fact that accounts for Ben's attendance at Thomas Jefferson High School in Elizabeth where he began his football career.

All-Around Back

From the very beginning Ben became familiar with the various running and blocking duties of a backfield man. The system employed at Thomas Jefferson featured an interchanging backfield, a type in which a player is able to play many different positions in the course of a single game. Thus, Ben became a logical choice for the quarterback job, from which position he can block, run, catch passes, and, defend the safety zone. One of his high school teammates was Will Stein, who at present is doing the signal calling for the undefeated Georgia Tech team.

Champ Wrestler

Before completing his days at Thomas Jefferson, Ben also established quite a reputation as an outstanding wrestler. In his junior year he won the State Championship for the 165-pound and 175-pound classes and in his senior year he became the Y.M.C.A. mat champion of New Jersey.

Danik's football endeavors at Villanova have been continually hampered by a string of injuries that began on the first day of practice as a freshman. A painful injury to his side kept him out of action during the entire frosh season, and when spring practice came around, he was still an unknown quantity. It wasn't long, however, before Ben began to show his worth as a dependable blocker for the Wildcats' fast breakaway backs, and from sophomore year on, he has seen a bit of action.

BEN DANIK

Injuries have been over abundant for Danik this year, for he has suffered a pulled muscle, a torn ligament in his shoulder, and in the Auburn game he was put out of action with a broken nose. He came right back, however, to captain his team in the Wildcats' victory over Iowa State, playing a large portion of the game. Ben claims that the injuries wouldn't be quite so painful if it weren't for the snoring of George Smith, his roommate which keeps him from getting the right amount of sleep and rest.

Danik is a student of Commerce and Finance, majoring in Marketing. After the war he hopes to enter into a career in the business world — but for the present he is enlisted in the Marine Reserve Corps, and hopes to be assigned to his favorite branch, the Coast Artillery.

Wildcat Fumbles Give Penn 150's Close 6-0 Victory

Quakers Recover Loose Ball on Blue 23 in First Period and March Over Goal

On Saturday the Lightweights matched their brawn against the Red and Blue of Penn and came out on the short end of the score 6 to 0. The game played in a driving wind was marked by the lack of both teams to push the ball over the final stripe. Penn scored early in the first quarter and from then on it see-sawed up and down the field, first one team and then the other becoming scoring threats.

Carbine Blocks Kick

Penn started the game by kicking off to the Wildcats who ran back to the 20 yard line. On the second play of the game Villanova fumbled and Penn recovered on the Main Liners 42. This time, however, Penn was stopped before they were able to do any damage covering not more than 8 yards on four plays. Villanova took over and within three more plays had fumbled again. This time Penn recovered on Villanova's 23 and by tricky reverses, power plays, and end runs pushed the ball over the goal. The attempted conversion was blocked by Joe Carbine. That was the end of the scoring for the afternoon; all other threats died out before they caused any damage.

Reach 6 Yard Line

After the touchdown the Wildcats started to march goalward reaching Penn's 18 yard stripe on a 30 yard run by Joe McGuinis. The officials, however, detected offensive holding and the play was called back plus 15 yards for the penalty.

That ended the first quarter and left Villanova more determined than ever to score. After an exchange of punts, Villanova had the ball at mid-field when on a fourth down Sellers of Penn slipped through to block the kick and recover on Villanova's 45. This time Penn used the air-ways to drive forward, but fate stepped in and the half ended when they reached the 6.

Last Game

The second half was uneventful being mainly a kicking battle between Beck and Ed Quinn. In the closing minutes of play fate again stepped in and the Wildcats fumbled on their own 38 yard line. This threat was stopped when an attempted field goal from the 22 hit the goal post. The game ended with Villanova in possession of the ball still trying to break someone free.

Since this is the last game of the season and more than likely the last for the duration, words of praise can be given to each and every member of the squad. After a very late start the team found themselves for the Rutgers game, but in their last two games the breaks were against them and they lost by the thin margin of one touchdown.

The Lightweights Line Up

Lined up and ready for action is the Villanova 150 pound football team which closed its season Saturday against Penn. In the forward wall are (left to right): Ed Czarnecki, Joe Silva, Walt Young, George Famiglietti, Herm Behnke, Joe Carbine, and Tony Scalzetti. Members of the backfield (in the same order) are: Ed McGovern, Tony Paruta, Ed Quinn, and Jim Cahill.

The Seniors Speak

With the Villanova, Temple game only four days away, every man on the squad is on edge, especially the seniors who will wear the blue of Villanova for the last time. They are all confident of victory but at the same time they know that it will be a hard fought contest.

Hank Christman, end: "We hope to redeem ourselves for the past two showings against the Temple Owls."

George Smith, fullback, who played in two of these fall classics says: "The third time is the charm."

Leo Jagoe, guard: "The Wildcats are hungry this year and the Owl will be the only meat that will satisfy them."

Roy Erickson, guard: warns against overconfidence: "We are due for avenges but you can never predict the outcome of a Temple-Villanova game."

Steve Pritko, end:
"The Wildcats will be at their best,
So Owls, you judge the rest."

Bob O'Connor, tackle: "Let the score tell the story."

Ben Danik, quarterback: "Last year's game proved Tomasic was great. This year he will probably look at the game from the stands. Too bad!"

Vinny Carlesimo, tackle: "This year's Temple-Villanova game will be no different from those of past seasons. I look forward to a hard fought contest with Villanova coming out on top."

SEVEN COACHES

Temple University has been directed by five different coaches in their fourteen games with the Wildcats while Villanova has had only two.

Bert Bell, Heinie Miller, Pop Warner, Fred Swan and Ray Morrison have handled the reins at Temple, while Harry Stuldreher and Clipper Smith have been the Wildcat mentors.

. . . . SIXTY-MINUTE MEN . .

The Villanova Wildcats have several sixty-minute performers among their stalwarts. So far this season guard, Roy Erickson, center, Art Alois, and quarterback, Johnny Dzitko have completed full games. Steve Pritko, end, has just missed the full time limit.

Alois' stretch in the Duquesne game was the third game in which he went the whole distance. Dzitko and Erickson also played sixty minutes against the tough Dukes. Erickson finished out the Detroit game while Pritko played all but four minutes.

Positions Open for Engineers; D. P. E. Announces Chairmen of Various Committees

Seventy-four juniors and seniors have not as yet returned their proofs for the Belle Air. A representative from Zamsky's will be here for the last time on this Friday between 11:00 A. M. and 3:00 P. M. in the Reception room of Mendel Hall to collect these pictures.

Assessments for the Centennial Ball are being taken up starting today, it was announced by George Ericson, chairman of the ticket committee. All students who intend to go to this dance in January are requested to pay this fee of $2.50 as soon as possible.

Industry, Civil Service, and the fighting forces are accepting senior engineers for future services upon their graduation. Twenty-one are enlisted in the V-7 class of the Naval Reserve and an equal numbers are enlisted in the Army and Army Air Corps Reserve, the Marine Reserve, and Civil Service.

The Radio Corporation of America will send representatives here next Friday who will speak to the senior class at 9:50 A. M. and will interview applicants at fifteen minute intervals. Frederick Rappleyea of the class of '40 who is now serving the Dow Chemical Corporation, will come next week and interview several civil engineers.

In the near future, representatives of Westinghouse Electric Manufacturing Co. and the Douglas Aircraft Corporation will call to address interested senior engineers.

Today in room 215 Mendel Hall, Caesar Franck's Symphony in D Minor will be featured at the meeting of the noon-day seminar. This is Franck's only attempt at the symphonic form yet it ranks among the great works of the masters. It differs from most symphonies in that it contains only three movements instead of four.

Dr. E. L. Haenisch, the moderator of the seminar, presented Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Scheherazade" last Wednesday in answer to several requests. Dr. Haenisch announced that the popular "musical quiz" will be held next week. At that time the students will note the composition and its composer on paper and the one with the least errors will receive a recording of his own choice. All are invited to try their knowledge of famous music.

Bi-weekly meetings of the Villanova Branch of the American Institute of Electrical engineers will begin today. The first series of programs will consist of talks by the senior members of the branch on their experiences in industry during the summer months.

Sam Burruano, president, is head of the newly formed entertainment committee which is arranging special programs in an effort to enliven more interest in the meetings.

Classes Suspended

Tomorrow Villanova will observe Thanksgiving Day. Classes and laboratory periods will be held until 12:30 P. M. but will be suspended in the afternoon. Thanksgiving dinner will be served to the residents between the hours of 12:00 and 2:00 o'clock.

The last class on Saturday, Nov. 28, from 11:40 to 12:30, will be suspended to permit the students to have luncheon early in order that they may be in attendance at the Villanova-Temple game, scheduled to begin at 2:00 o'clock.

Positions Open For Junior Pharmacists

Of interest to senior college students with majors in pharmacy is the new examination announced by the U. S. Civil Service Commission for Junior Pharmacist, with a salary of $2,000 a year.

Applications must be filed with Commission's Washington office by December 15, 1942.

To take the test, applicants must either have successfully completed a full 4-year course with major study in pharmacy in a recognized college, university, college of pharmacy, or medical school, or be a senior student in such schools, expecting to graduate by July 1, 1943.

Registered pharmacists lacking the required education may also qualify for the test—provision being made for their substituting pharmaceutical experience, or study in resident pharmacy schools, for the prescribed college training.

P. K. P. To Hold Initiation Monday

On next Monday night, the Phi Kappa Pi, the engineering fraternity, will hold its annual initiation. Usually this is followed by a banquet; however, after school authorities requested that social activities be curtailed, the fraternity decided to hold only a smoker after the initiation.

George Baird and Paul Hinski, both seniors, are the co-chairmen of the initiation committe who are assisted by an equal number of representatives from the senior, junior and sophomore classes. Mal Boyle, president of the P.K.P., stated that the sophomores are always the most severe on pledgees since they have a more imminent recollection of their initiation. The committe usually selects the most harshly treated of last year's initiates to represent the sophomore engineers.

The initiation committee refused to disclose any methods that will be used on the large number of candidate; however, rumors of the electric chair and paddle strokes are reiterated among the future fratees.

The candidates are looking forward to the smoker which is to be held in the College dining hall immediately after the inquisition. Co-chairman James Donnelly and Arthur Lyness of the Smoker committee are preparing a reviving session which should restore friendship again. The professors in the Engineering School have been invited to attend both sessions and to partake in them if they wish.

Post Office Asks For Early Mailing

It has been requested by the United States Post Office Department that the following item be released:

"The approaching Christmas season means an increase of millions in the number of pieces of letters, cards, and packages handled in the mail. If thousands of soldiers, sailors, marines and civilian friends are not to be disappointed at Christmas times, the public must cooperate with the Post Office Department. Delicate Directions Are Described For Travelers To Temple Stadium

If you have any interest in Villanova College, you will have one objective this Saturday—Temple Stadium. The objective is quite a distance away (this can be applied both figuratively and literally) and how to get there is the question. The methods for approach will be taken in a logical order; therefore, how to get to Temple Stadium by automobile will be discussed lastly.

Temple Stadium is located northeast of Villanova at Vernon Rd. and City Line, Philadelphia.

Those who are going to use the railroad public services will use City Hall in town as the half-way mark to the Stadium. You can reach City Hall by the Pennsylvania R. R.

You might choose to use the P. & W. to 69th street. From there take the elevated to town but, when paying, ask for an exchange for the Broad Street subway. You then ride on the "El" to 15th St. (City Hall) and transfer to the North Bound Broad St. Subway. On this, ride to Olney Ave. and walk upstairs to the terminal and get on a Route 6 trolley. This car will take you to within two blocks of Temple Staduim. If you get the exchange at 69th St. and walk carefully, this trip will cost you thirty-one cents.

On arriving at the Suburban station on the Philadelphia Local, you have the choice of riding to Temple Stadium on a bus or on the subway already described. If you choose the bus (two cents more than the subway) walk 3 blocks north on Broad St. to Vine St. and mount a "C" bus going north. This will take you directly to your objective. If you prefer the subway, ride the north-bound subway to Olney Ave. and carry out the procedure outlined above. This method will cost thirty-eight cents or thirty-six cents depending on whether you use the bus or subway.

Preceding from City Hall to the Stadium is the most convenient for the majority; however, 63rd and City Line is also a point for departure. The bus which stops in front of th College will take you directly to 63rd and City Line. There, mount an "E" bus going to Washington Lane and Greene St. where you must change to an "H" bus and continue to the field.

Aid To Motorists

Your immediate destination should be City Line. From the College, just procede down Lancaster or Montgomery Pikes which lead directly to City Line. Go northward across the Girard Ave. Bridge and bear left up Lincoln Drive, route 309, and follow to the end at Allen Lane. There turn right onto Germantown Ave. (double car tracks). Turn right again and then at the first traffic light turn left onto Mt. Airy Ave. At the second traffic light on Mt. Airy Ave. bear right on Cheltenham Ave. to Temple Stadium.

WAR hits the WIRES!

WAR hits telephone service two ways at once. It piles on a heavy load of calls. And it cuts down the supply of telephone materials and equipment.

Most Long Distance lines are overloaded on weekdays from 9 A. M. to 12, from 2 P. M. to 5 and from 7 to 9 at night. You can usually avoid telephone "traffic jams" if you make your calls during other hours. Best time to call home is on Sunday, when lines are less busy and the reduced night rates are in effect all day.

Please keep all calls brief and avoid unnecessary calls. This is especially important around Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's.

Making Plans For Centennial Ball

Committeemen Chosen For Dance

Chairmen Name Students Assisting on Centennial Ball

With the appointment of the members of the various dance committees by the individual committee chairmen, with the approval of the Student Council, plans for the Centennial Ball on January 15, are taking definite shape.

George Eriksen, a junior in the science school, has already begun the work connected with his position as chairman of the Ticket Committee. For the past week he and the men assigned to work under him have been collecting assessments from the students. This is the $2.50 assessment which is to be paid in advance by those who intend to buy tickets.

Collecting Assessments

H. Christian Kiefer, junior artsman and chairman of the program committee, has also announced the men who are to work with him. They are: Joseph Mahoney, senior in the arts school, James Murphy, junior engineer, John Di Carlo, commerce senior, Austin Gavin, junior scienceman, and Vincent Quinn, senior engineer. These men will begin their work this week.

Eugene Barry, senior engineer, has not as yet completed the list of students chosen to assist him in making up the decorations for the dance. In regards to these decorations he promises that they will definitely be in style with the theme of the dance and will come up to the decorations had at Villanova's former formal dances. He may be hampered somewhat by war restrictions on certain materials.

Band Undecided

John Quinn, senior engineer, is assisting Jacques Mauch, president of the Student Council, in the capacity of Orchestra chairman. The two have contacted an agent in an attempt to secure a suitable band, but they are, to a large extent, powerless to act until the students turn in their assessments so that they may obtain some idea of how much financial backing they can supply for it.

There will be a meeting of all members of the committees in Room 110 Mendel at 1:00 P. M. tomorrow to discuss further plans for the pre-graduation dance.

Two Graduates Receive Commissions; Catholic Collegiate Congress To Be Held in Cincinnati

Two graduates of Villanova have received commissions in the armed forced, it was announced by the Public Relations Office.

John F. Nieman, '42, former star of the football team was commissioned a Second Lieutenant in the United States Marine Corps. He joined the Marines immediately after graduation last June.

William M. Gillespie, graduate of 1940, received his commission as Second Leiutenant in the Army Air Forces Reserve. January, 1942 was the date of his entrance into this unit.

The Catholic Collegiate Congress will be held in Cincinnati, Ohio, between Dec. 27 and 30. Under the direction of the national officers of the Newman Club Federation and the National Federation of Catholic College students the congress will be composed of delegates from Catholic colleges and Newman Clubs of America.

Under the theme, "Victory in War and in Peace," the program will consist of daily Mass and sessions of open discussion on nine selected phases of the general theme.

At the meeting of the Villanova branch of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers on November 25, president George Baird, senior engineer, announced that freshmen will be admitted to the society for the first time this year. The membership drive for underclassmen will begin in the near future.

The president of Lambda Kappa Delta, science school fraternity, Angelo Macchia, is making an appeal to the members of the science school who are interested in joining the organization to obtain their application blanks immediately. They may be secured at either the science school or arts school offices.

A meeting of the initiation committee will be held today in room 210 Mendel Hall to discuss plans for the initiation on Dec. 15.

Dr. E. L. Haenisch, moderator of the music seminar, will conduct a musical quiz tomorrow in room 215 Mendel Hall beginning at one o'clock. Fifteen unannounced compositions will be played and the participants will note the title and composer of each selection. The student with the best paper will receive a record of his own choice. All are invited to attend.

Last Wednesday, Caesar Franck's Symphony in D Minor was featured at the seminar before one of the largest audiences of the season.

Dean To Preside At SPEE Meeting

Engineering in Relation to War To Be Topic of New York College Discussion

J. Stanley Morehouse, Dean of the School of Engineering, will act as the presiding officer at the meeting of the Middle Atlantic Section of the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education to be held next Saturday, December 5, at the Cooper Union College in New York City.

The meeting has been planned to concern itself largely with the future role of the engineering colleges in direct relation to the war effort, and with the training of women for the replacement of men drafted from technical positions. All members of the engineering faculty of Villanova will attend as delegates.

President to Speak

National president of the S. P. E. E., Henry T. Heald, will give the principal address upon recent developments in the cooperation of the colleges and engineering schools with the training committees of the U. S. Army and Navy. Other speeches will be given upon the different purposes of the convention by Dr. Edwin S. Burdell, Director of the Cooper Union; Lt. Colonel H. J. Schwabacher, Regional Liaison Officer; C. Wilson Cole, Supervisor of the Engineering Personal Bureau of Curtiss-Wright Corporation, and Dr. Gano Dunn, President of Cooper Union.

Also connected with this meeting will be a convention of the Engineering School Librarians Committee of the Middle Atlantic Section. Topic for discussion at this gathering will be "Wartime Activities of the Engineering Societies Library."

Initiation Treatment Suffered Last Night By PKP Inductees

Nearly fifty pledgees of the Phi Kappa Pi, engineering fraternity, were initiated last night in a ceremony held in Mendel Hall.

The proceedings began in room 215, but the new members were soon led to the engineering laboratories where they underwent the real initiation. Their first duty was to meet the "president," a mechanical man who shocked them when they shook hands with him.

The pledgees were taken to the Hydraulics laboratory, where they prayed to "Allah" for rain. Their prayers were immediately answered by a shower of water which drenched them. The condition of the candidates was further aggravated by the shocks which they received from a charged rod upon which they chinned themselves a certain number of times. They then received the usual paddlings which accompany an initiation.

Various professors questioned the pledgees as to their opinions of the teachers, and there were many red faces when the blindfolds were removed and the candidates discovered who their questioners were.

Following the initiation, the new members were addressed by Rev. Francis X. N. McGuire, O. S. A., vice-president of the college, J. Stanley Morehouse, dean of the Engineering school; Dr. Edward L. Haenisch, Professors Kenneth Moser, Joseph Blumenfeld, John Oakey, and Rev. John S. O'Leary, O. S. A.

Sectional IRC Meet To Be Held Dec. 4-5

It has been announced by Robert T. Canfield, president of the International Relations Club of Villanova, that a convention of the Middle Atlantic Region of the I. R. C. will be held next Friday and Saturday, December 4 and 5. The meeting will be held at the University of Princeton, Princeton, N. J.

Approximately 500 delegates are expected to attend from colleges in Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey. Although it has not been definitely decided who will represent Villanova at this convention, it is contemplated to send one or more of the members as delegates.

Belle Air Request

Seniors and accelerated juniors who have not yet returned their information blanks containing their name, address, and a list of extra-curricular activities in which they have participated for publication in the Belle Air are asked to do so immediately. They can be turned in either at the Belle Air office or at the information booth in Mendel Hall.

A number of students have still neglected to remit their photograph proofs and are requested to return them immediately to Zamsky's Studio, 1007 Market Street, Philadelphia. Since a representative of this studio will not return to the school again for collection of these proofs, the students must bring them directly to Philadelphia.

Service Flag To Be Dedicated On Next Monday

A service flag honoring the Villanovans who are now in the armed forces, and hallowing the memory of those who have been killed in action will be formally dedicated in front of Mendel Hall at 1:00 P. M. on Dec. 7, the anniversary of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

Rev. Edwin T. Grimes, O. S. A, college chaplain, will bless the banner, followed by an address of dedication delivered by Rev Francis X. N. McGuire, O. S. A., vice-president. The band under the direction of Rev. Ralph J. Handran, O. S. A., together with a representation of the Villanova alumni now in the Army, Navy and Marine Corps will provide a martial atmosphere.

The flag is of the same type displayed by many institutions, rectangular in shape with a red border and blue and gold stars on a white field. Each blue star represents a Villanovan who is now in the service, at home or abroad; each gold star signifies a Villanovan who has made the supreme sacrifice for his country. There will be over 500 blue stars on the college banner, and twelve gold.

Debaters To Meet Seton Hall College

On Saturday, Dec. 5, at 8 P. M., in Simpson Hall, Beta Gamma, varsity debating society, will hold its second scheduled debate for the season. They will be opposed by Seton Hall College. All are invited to attend.

The topic to be discussed is a national question, which will be debated almost exclusively throughout this year. "Resolved: that the United Nations should establish a permanent federal union with power to tax and regulate international commerce, to maintain a police force to settle international disputes, and to enforce such settlements and to provide for the admission of other nations which accept the principles of the union."

Yeager Appointed Secretary

The representatives of Beta Gamma, who will uphold the negative of this question are Edward Gregory and Lawrence Sullivan, both Sophomore Commerce and Finance students.

It has also been announced by Wilfrid Gagen, president of the society, that Carl Yeager, sophomore C. & F. student, was appointed secretary of the debate club.

The first regularly scheduled discussion of the season was held on Nov. 18, with Mount St. Mary's College. The national question also served as the issue for the debate.

Arguments Being Prepared

At the present time, the society is collecting data on the question in an effort to strengthen their offensive and at the same time acquaint themselves with both sides of the issue. Rev. John J. Coffey, O. S. A., Moderator, is determined that every student in the debating society make a thorough study of the question. Clarence Streit's "Union Now" is serving as the basis for the affirmative, however, the increasing number of contemporary articles on the subject are offering further arguments.

Quinn, McFadden Named Chairmen Of Dinner-Dance

Saturday, Jan. 16, Set as Date for Annual Senior Affair; Committees To Be Chosen Later

Vincent M. Quinn and John J. McFadden have been appointed co-chairmen of the Dinner-Dance to be held on Saturday, January 16. John J. Quinn, senior class president, announced. He stated that more committee appointments would be made at a later date.

Vincent M. Quinn is a senior mechanical engineer from Germantown, Pa. Currently he is a member of the A. S. M. E. program committee and active in the engineering fraternity, Phi Kappa Pi. After graduation in January, he goes into active service with the Navy.

John J. McFadden is a pre-law major in the Commerce and Finance school from Tarrytown, New York. He is a member of Delta Pi Epsilon and is enlisted in the Marin Reserve. McFadden served as a member of last year's Junior Prom committee.

Band Not Yet Chosen

John Quinn also announced that the dance was being held on consecutive evening with the Centennial Ball in order to facilitate the students who wish to bring a home-town date for the affair. He pointed out that this would make unnecessary extra strain upon transportation and hotel accommodations and would spare the students extra expense.

More than likely, a band from Philadelphia or surrounding districts will be employed for the dance. The one engaged for the affair will be decided by the transportation facilities available for it, since the government has restricted the use of them for non-essential activities.

The class president thought that a class assessment would be necessary to defray the initial costs of the dinner and dance. This assessment will depend upon the cost of the band, hotel, and dinner and has not been ascertained yet. Although the Centennial Ball, conducted by the Student Council, will also assess the students, this fee for seniors is considered necessary since the affair is to be given by the senior class.

Plans are made to hold the dance at a Philadelphia hotel. It will be formal since the chairmen feel that no exceptional transportation difficulties will be experienced in reaching downtown Philadelphia.

The co-chairmen expressed the hope that the senior class will support the Dinner-Dance as well as they have backed other dances in the past. They asked that all students co-operate with the committee and help make the affair a success in every way.

Various Committees Appointed By D. P. E.

Chairmen and their respective assisting committeemen have been chosen by Delta Phi Epsilon, commerce school fraternity, for activities in the near future.

John Dudley, chairman of the pledging committee, is at present supervising the task of obtaining future members for the organization. Pledging this year is being conducted by the ballot basis and prospective members are asked to submit their names for consideration to the pledging committee. A new feature in regards to entry into the club is the admitting of freshmen and seniors who have not made prior application for membership. "This is to offer transfers and new students an opportunity to join," stated James Meehan, president.

A combined initiation and banquet will take place at a future date, not yet decided upon, and John McFadden and William Marchese will act as co-chairmen of the banquet committee, while John Newell will supervise plans for the initiation. Difficulty in naming the actual date for this affair has been caused by the examination schedule and the approaching basketball season but it is expected that a definite date will be announced soon.

Victory Is In Knowledge

NEARLY every sign we see, or every program we hear, tells us of V for Victory. Victory for the United Nations in World War II. This is all well and good but it is only half of the true story. Too few people take time to consider victory in peace.

It has been stated, and rightly so, that "The present world situation requires every Catholic collegian to be thoroughly familiar with principles underlying the present conflict and a just and lasting peace." To pass this off as folly would be traitorous. However, in view of a lack of knowledge on the subject it would be human to tend to do so.

This knowledge is not lacking to the few Catholics who have recognized their duty to God and Country. It remains now for the rest of the Catholics to recognize the same duty and to seek knowledge on this subject through the regular channels open to them.

For the Catholic student the channel is the Catholic Collegiate Congress to be held in Cincinnatti Dec. 27-30 under the theme of "Victory in War and in Peace."

The congress will be composed of delegates from Catholic colleges and Newman Clubs, and under the direction of the National officers of the Newman Club Federation and the National Federation of Catholic College Students. The program consits of daily Mass and sessions of open discussion on nine phases of the general theme.

The students of today will be the leaders of tomorrow, and as all students learn the principles of Accounting, Science or Engineering to prepare for the future, the Catholic student should also learn the principles of his religion to prepare for the future.

War Demands Sacrifice

SIX MONTHS ago, gasoline rationing became the East's "noble effort" towards winning this war. Today that effort becomes nation-wide. It has become nation-wide in spite of endless arguments which even resulted in a congressional bloc before the issue was passed and approved by the president last Thursday. Arguments from "it isn't practical" to "there never was a shortage and there never will be one" were offered by the defenders of the offenders to the Nation's morale.

National gasoline rationing is not the result of a gasoline shortage; it is an ultimate approach to the solving of the rubber scarcity. No citizen is called upon to make a sacrifice unless it is instrumental to the winning of this war. Every citizen will admit that there is a rubber shortage. Therefore is it not logical that every means should be taken to conserve rubber. One political physician formulated that the consumption of rubber is directly proportional to the gasoline coming out of the exhaust pipe.

To refute the criers from the afflicted states who maintain that the American citizen can restrain himself whenever he is called upon to do so, we need only point to the voluminous packages of the housewife. People do not eat that much in a week let alone a day. These people have been classically referred to as "hoarders." It is so common a practice now that the quotation marks are no longer being used.

No, the rationing system must be used now and must be called upon again and again, whenever the situation calls for it. Sacrifices in the home always precede victories on the field of battle.

Meet The Boys:

To Be A Doctor Nick Aspires; The Same Career Is John's Desire

By DAN EHART

THIS week we have caught two more seniors in the glare of our spotlight, and quite a bit of knowledge has been revealed to us by its rays. We put them through the usual third-degree treatment, and came up with a host of facts which show their all-around versatility in scholastic and extra-curricular activities.

A remarkable parallel between their careers will be seen as this article progresses, so we might as well get down to cases and come up with the dope (no offense meant, fellows!).

We come first to Nicholas C. Eni, a native Philadelphia, descended from the ancient Latins of Italy.

He made his first acquaintance with the "City of Brotherly Love" on December 20, 1920, and had an uneventful childhood until his entrance into grammar school.

Now we wouldn't want to say that Nick was a jinx to the grammar schools, but it 's a recorded fact that , of the three schools he attended in his younger days, two of them became extinct. After eight years devoted to these schools, he entered South Philadelphia High School.

Handled Circulation

He graduated in 1939 and then, in the fall of the same year, he entered Villanova as a pre-medical student. He is a daily commuter from his home to the college. While keeping up his studies, he also entered whole-heartedly into the extra-curricular activities.

Among other things, he is a member of the Student Council and the former circulation manager of the VILLANOVAN, of which he was a staff member for four years. He was on the business staff of the Belle Air for three years and was a writer for the Mendel Bulletin for the same length of time.

Serves On Dance Committees

He is on the initiation committee of L.K.D. and has been on the refreshment committees of several dances, including the Junior Prom of 1942, the Summer Hop and L.K.D. dances. Recently Nick was appointed to the refreshment committee of the forthcoming Centennial Ball.

THE second of our current biographies deals with John J. Bongiovanni, also a resident of Philadelphia.

John is unusually young for one who hopes to graduate in February, for he was not born until July 28, 1924. However, his youth has not impaired his ability in scholastic and other activities.

His younger days were divided between John Hay Public School, where he went through the usual course, and then South Philadelphia High School, where he was a member of the student council and a staff writer on the "The Southron News."

From here on in the similarity of tastes between him and Nick Eni will become apparent, as we see the activities in which he participated.

Writes For Publications

John is a day-hop and a pre-med student. Like Nick, he will graduate at the end of this term, if all goes well, and he too, hopes to continue his education at Jefferson Medical College.

He is a student of music in his spare time, having a knowledge of the intricacies of the piano, violin and organ. He has been a writer for the VILLANOVAN and for the Mendel Bulletin for four years, and for the Belle Air for two.

He has also belonged to the German Club, the band and the Reseach Seminar for three years. He was president of the Kappa Gamma Sigma, is co-chairman of the initiation committee of L. K. D. and was a member of the dance committee of that organization.

Feminine Interests Vary

John's love life seems to have its ups and downs, for from an unimpeachable source we learned that he recently tried to break into the charmed circle at Rosemont, but was severely censured by a member of the clergy. However, he is a steady visitor at Immaculata, since he finds the scenery very inviting at this time of the year. A friend tells us also, that he only puts in an appearance at meetings of the German Club when the feminine element is represented.

Barter By Binder

NOW that exams have passed and we have passed the exams (it says here) the latest topic of interest seems to concern how soon the war will end. Hitler and the Japs are getting it out of both barrels. In fact our correspondent from the Fordham Ram informs us that when Joe Stalin's boys started chasing the Germanic legions, the following ensued:

Hitler called up the Devil on the telephone one day,
The girl at central listened to all they had to say.
"Hello — Hitler speaking — is old man Satan home?
"Just tell him it's the dictator who wants him at the phone."
The Devil said, "Howdy Dolf," and Hitler said, "How are you?"
"I'm running hell-on-earth, so tell me what to do."
"What can I do?" the Devil said, "Dear old pal-of-mine,
"You don't need any help from me, you're doing mighty fine."
"Yes, I was doing fairly well, until some time ago
When a man called Uncle Sam told me to go slow.
He said to me 'Dear Hitler, we don't want to be unkind
But you have raised hell enough So you better change your mind.'
I thought his lend-lease plan was bluff,
He'd never get it through;
But soon he put me on the spot
When he told me what to do.
So that's why I called you, Satan, I need advice from you
For I know that you can tell me exactly what to do."
Satan said, "Dear partner, there is not much left to tell
For Uncle Sam will make it hotter than I can here in Hell.
I have been a real old Devil, but not half as mean as you,
So the minute you get down here the job is yours to do.
I'll be ready for your coming, and I'll keep the fires all bright
And I'll get your room all ready as soon as Sam begins to fight.
For I know your days are numbered
And there's nothing left to tell;
Except hang up the 'phone—put on your hat
And come on down to hell."

Guest Columnist

Running true to the very confident predictions of Sports Editor "Jake" Mauch in this same column last week, our in and out Wildcats brought a rather disappointing season to a glorious closing in the Temple Stadium last Saturday afternoon, when they ran all over the Owls in the first period with an offense that brought back memories of the Manhattan and Iowa State games earlier in the season, and held on to their early lead to win out 20-7.

Losing two out of their first three contests this fall, the Wildcats started to click against the Jaspers and Cyclones only to fail miserably in their tussles with Detroit and Duquesne. Whether they could come back with the spirit necessary to whipe the Owls, was a question in the minds of all Villanova rooters until a few minutes after the game had begun on Saturday.

After that there was no doubt as to whether the Wildcats had bounded back sufficiently enough to beat their intra-city rivals. A surprise to all, however, was the manner in which the Blue and White tallied its initial touchdow. After a blocked kick by Roy Ericson, Tommy Gildea, stellar right guard in the Wildcat forward wall, grabbed the elusive pigskin and a moment later crossed the double stripe with the first touchdown of his college career.

Too much credit cannot be given to coaches Smith and McNally and the stalwarts who saw action in this tussle, for the great victory which they scored over Villanova's greatest rival. After successive defeats in 1940 and 1941 the Wildcats gained their ninth victory in this series which began back in 1928.

Nor was their performance confined merely to offensive play. The three goal line stands in the third period more than proved the fighting and determined spirit which was imbued in every Wildcat gridder Saturday afternoon.

To name an individual star on the Wildcat eleven on Saturday afternoon would be quite difficult, as every man who participated in the fracas played brilliantly. The linemen were terrors on defense, and opened holes on the offense which the backfield couldn't help splitting for huge gains. Twenty points is indicative enough of the offensive power of the backfield, but it does not tell the number of passes which were intercepted by this same Villanova secondary. No less than four Temple aerials were snared by the Wildcat defense and returned for a total of 47 yards.

While we said before, it would be quite hard to name any individual star in the Wildcat lineup, it is possible to name one who, despite the fact that he suffered more than one tough break in the contest, gained the amazing total of 147 yards from scrimmage in eight tries, and ran the Temple linesmen dizzy. This man is fleet-footed Joe Pezelski who put on a show which easily made him the outstanding offensive weapon of either team.

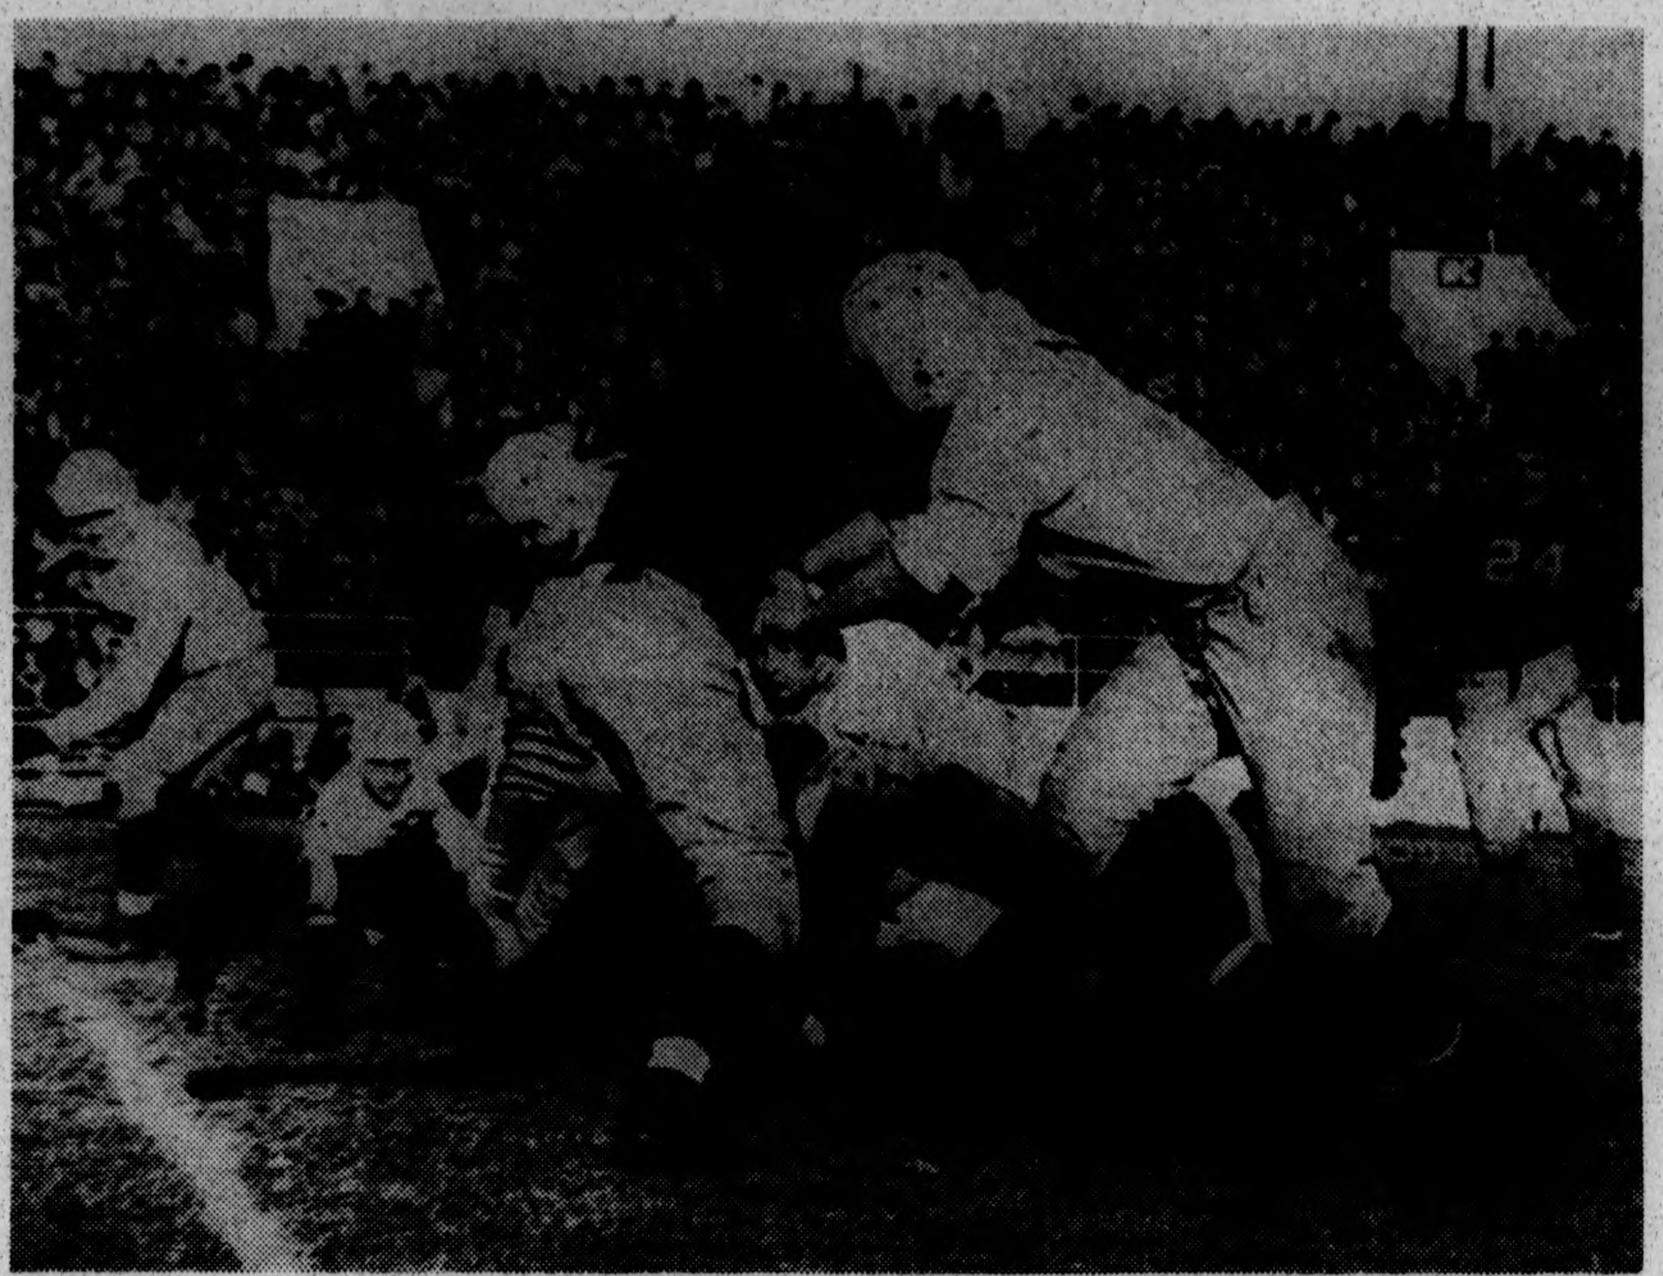
Being overshadowed somewhat in former games this season by the brilliance of his running mate, Al Postus, Joe came into his own Saturday afternoon, but was not rewarded with a score, his one touchdown run of 80 yards being called back to the ten yard line as the result of a very raw clipping decision.

So, although a record of four victories and the same number of defeats was none too impressive for the entire campaign, the winning of this one contest against Villanovas' arch rival more than makes a heretofore dismal season a successful one.

The seven seniors who played their last contest wearing the Blue and White of Villanova are Captain Steve Pritko, George Smith, Vinnie Carlesimo, Roy Ericson, Leo Jagoe, Hank Christman and Bob O'Connor, as well as the injured Ben Danik, a casualty of the Iowa State engagement, can look back on their final season without misgivings, despite the fact that the record for the year showed a .500 percentage.

It is true that four games were lost this season, but a closer view indicates that none of these defeats was by more than nine points. The Manhattan Beach Coast Guard aggregation, which finished its season as New York's only unbeaten football eleven defeated the Wildcats, 20-13. Auburn, conquerer of mighty Georgia a week or so ago, defeated the Main Liners to the tune of 14-6. Detroit was victorious 9-0, and Duquesne vanquished the Smithmen 6-0. This indicates that at no time during the season was the Wildcat eleven "easy meat" for its opponent.

There's That Roy Ericson Again!



The Wildcat guard (51) came in to stop Temple's Joe Nejman on this play, Saturday afternoon at Temple stadium as Villanova shellacked the Owls 20-7 in their final game. Ericson was a demon on defense and was all over the field during the afternoon, diagnosing plays almost before they were run.

First Period Onslaught Gives Wildcats 20-7 Win

Gildea, Postus, Smith Score Touchdowns For Blue and White; Three Temple Drives Repulsed at Goal Line

By JOE CARBINE

Striking swiftly with a drive and force that was characteristic of a Marine landing party, Villanova's Wildcats kept their pre-game promises last Saturday, and brought home a 20-7 victory over Temple's Owls.

A team that had lacked the fire and spirit in it's last two games that it had shown earlier in the season, round itself once again after the opening whistle, and proved to 20,000 spectators that it is a good football team.

The first score was manufactured by a hard-charging Wildcat line six minutes after the opening kick-off, when senior guard, Roy Ericson charged through and blocked Jimmy Woodside's fourth down punt. His running mate, Tom Gildea, was right there to scoop up the ball on the 12-yard line and as he pulled away from one tackler, a swarm of blockers converged to escort him safely over the goal line. There were no regrets when Gene Konopka's placement was blocked, for the Villanova rooters had already sensed that the boys in the golden silk pants wanted this game very badly.

Postus Scores

If there were any doubts, they were quickly dispelled when the Blue and White again got a chance to move the ball. Al Postus ran from Temple's 39 to the 32 on a spinner reverse and then the brilliant tailback uncorked a perfect 20 yard pass to Joe Pezelski who was knocked out of bounds on the 13. Postus then made three yards off tackle, and after George Smith was stopped, he again cut off tackle, stepped away from three Owls, and easily went over for the second touchdown. This time Konopka's kick was good and Villanova was leading, 13-0.

75 Yard Quick Kick

The next bit of action reminded Wildcat followers of the high-powered 1937 team which could explode at any point on the field. The periods had changed and Villanova had been set back to its own 20 yard line as a result of "Indian Joe" Nejman's 75 yard quick-kick. On the first play from scrimmage, Smith handed the ball to Pezelski who cut inside the Temple left end, and then raced down the field to the Owl's 10, where he swerved in and then went over the goal as a great cheer rolled down from the stands. But it was back at the 10 yard line that the referee ruled a clipping penalty against a Villanova blocker, and the Blue and White was forced to start again, but this time from the Owl 25. Smith and Pezelski combined on successive bucks right through the center of the line and drove to the two, from where the "Block-Buster" scored his first touchdown of the season. Konopka's placement was again good and the score read 20-0.

Temple Rebounds

In a Villanova-Temple game, however, the losing team never gives up, so it was no surprise to see the Cherry and White come right back two minutes later with a trick play that had everyone in the stadium fooled execept the Temple team. Roy Diduk, the Temple left end, took the ball from the ground where it had been placed by Woodside, and ran 55 yards down the south sidelines before Ericson caught up with him on the Cat's 18. Nejman took over from here and personally conducted a tour over the six point marker. Sid Beshunsky kicked the extra point to complete the scoring for the day.

Three Goal Line Stands

The second half of the game was featured by the other side of Villanova's stellar play - a - stone - wall defense that threw back three Temple thrusts at the goal line, one drive ending only two feet from payoff territory. With Gildea calling the defensive signals for the Wildcats, the Owls were unable to score in the third period despite the fact that they had first downs inside the Villanova ten yard line on three different occasions.

With Joe Pezelski running for long gains in the final two stanzas, the Main Liners could do no further scoring as costly fumbles stopped numerous drives deep in Temple territory.

Interceptions Numerous

When the Owls took to the air late in the final period, Postus, Dzitko, and Zamlynski took turns intercepting Nejman's long heaves. Zamlynski made the final interception on his own 35 yard line, and raced down the sidelines for 40 yards, almost getting away for another touchdown.

.500 AVERAGE

The victory over Temple Saturday gave Villanova's grid team a .500 average for the season, the same as last year. The Wildcats defeated Florida, Manhattan, and Iowa State besides Temple and lost to Coast Guards from Manhattan Beach, Auburn, Detroit, and Duquesne.

Coach Severance To Rely Heavily On Five Regulars

By JIM BONNER

December 10 sees the Villanova courtmen open the 1942-1943 season against an army quintet representing Fort Dix, N. J. Led by five returning veterans the Wildcat cagers will be forced to hit top form early and stay there throughout one of the toughest schedules in reent years.

Bob Kelty and Bill Wods, only returning seniors, will be back holding down their old berths in the line up. Kelty, 6' 2" forward from Trenton, N. J., is one of the finest defense men on the squad. A cool head, coupled with a lot of fight makes him deadly at retrieving off the backboard. Bill Woods, who hails from the Philadelphia district, has a deadly eye. Once set, it is a sure two-pointer for the 'Cat courtmen.

Three Juniors

The other three veterans are all juniors from the Philadelphia area. Joe Lord, Norristown product, will probably garner a starting berth. He saw plenty of action last year. Chuck Drizen, who broke all scoring records his freshman year by scoring twenty-five points in one game, is fast, rangy, and a fighter. Defensively he rates with the best. His height and speed break up many an opponent's play.

Major McDonnell is being groomed to take over the duties of Dick Gray, last year's captain. Major, though short, is a scrapper. He ties up the opposition repeatedly on the defense. Offensively he is a good floorman and a consistent point maker, dropping most of them from half way out.

Frosh Good

The remainder of the team will consiste chiefly of freshmen and one sophomore, Lou Renolds. Lou was the sparkplug of the in and out frosh club last season. He should see a great deal of action in various departments this season. The freshmen, Kodsih, Byrnes, Kelly and Frascella should round into shape fast. Kelly is dangerous around the backboard and Coach Severance should be able to use him to adavantage.

Al Severance hopes to see some of the football men come out after the Temple game. Among these is Al Postus, who made quite a name for himself in high school, placing on the All-Catholic five in his senior year. Milt Anderson, freshman end and Don Osterman are two other good prospects. Osterman placed on the All-Michigan State quintet last season.

MADE CAPTAIN

Joe Missar, '38, one of Clipper Smith's better guards is a captain in the Marine Corps. Joe enlisted before Pearl Harbor and since receiving his captain's commission has been stationed at Quantico, Va.

To Honor Squad At 21st Annual Football Dinner

Gridiron Banquet To Be Combined With Alumn Homecoming Celebration at Town Hall on Dec. 5th

Alumni and followers of the Villanova football team will unite i a combined Alumni and Footbal banquet on Saturday evening, December 5, at Town Hall, in Philadelphia The Football Banquet, annual feature will be combined with the Alumni dinner this year because of the conflicting dates of the Villanova-Temple football game.

December 5 was the date set for the intra-city tussle at the beginning of the season and continued as such until Army and Navy officials definitely announced that the Army-Navy game scheduled fo Municipal Stadium on Novembe 28, had been transferred to Annapolis. With no game being played i Philadelphia on that day, as Pennsylvania, Drexel and La Salle would have finished their seasons befor that date, Villanova and Templ officials agreed to move the Wildcat-Owl fray up to the 28th.

Original Date Held

As plans had already been made at that time to hold the annual Villanova Homecoming Celebratio on December 5, as these are held annually on the night of the Temple contest, it was then too late to change the date of the banque to November 28.

As a result, the Homecoming wil be celebrated a week later than usual, and will thus be held jointly wtih the Football banquet, which i given each year by the members o the Villanova Alumni Club in honor of the football squad and coaching staff.

One of the chief speakers of the evening will be Maurice J. "Clipper" Smith, coach of the Wildca team which trounced Temple las Saturday. It is believed that Smith will review the '42 football seaso, and also express his opinion as t the future of football throughou the country next season.

Invitations Extended

More than five hundred people are expected to attend the banquet, includng Very Rev. Joseph Hickey O. S. A., Assistant General of the Augustinian Order; Rev. Franci X. N. McGuire, O. S. A., vice-president of Villanova College and Dean of Athletics, famous athletic coaches and personalities, sports-writers and radio commentators.

Invitations have been extended to Geoge Munger whose Penn team walked all over Cornell on Thanksgiving Day and also to Ray Mor

Track Captain Replaces Elliott

In a decision reached by Rev. F X. McGuire, Moderator of Athletics, and the Athletic Board, Johnny D Carlo, captain of the track tean was officially appointed coach for the coming season. Unable to fin the type of man they wanted to fil the spot left vacant by Lieutenan Jumbo Elliott, they went into the ranks of the trackmen themselve and found a suitable coach.

Nucleus of Team

The cindermen still have the advice of Elliott periodically through correspondence. The nucleus o the track team, having been together for the past two and three years, will not be difficult to develop int a winning squad. Men like Harr Keefrider, Bob O'Sullivan, and D Carlo will form the leadership fo the newcomers to follow. Plannin an extensive indoor schedule as usual, the men will soon start seriou work in building up their mile relay team. Putting on the board one of the fastest teams in the Eas last year, the Wildcats are agai hopeful of repeating their successes.

McCarthy Promising

Soon the runners will move o the cross-country course and ont the board track behind the stadium. They will have time trials t determine what kind of shap they're in. This year freshmen ar eligible for varsity competition, s th holdevers from last year wil have their hands full in keepin their berths.

Showing promise is Junior Dutc McCarthy who failed to win a spo on the relay last year. McCarth has improved in speed and thi seems to be what he needs to com through as a quarter miler

In The Sportlight

By JACK DUDLEY

An outgrowth of the Villanova system of electing game-captains during the football season has been a keen anticipation of the announcement of the Wildcat leader in the annual Temple encounter. This year the honor fell to a player whose outstanding play for three seasons merited such recognition—right end, Steve Pritko.

Steve learned his football at Northampton High, at that time Pennsylvania State Champions. He played three years against Andy Tomasic, of Temple fame, and from that high school rivalry has sprung a fine friendship that exists today.

Football was Steve's first love, but it did not stop him from winning his letter in baseball, basketball, and track in high school. He was picked on the All-State basketball team.

Admiral Farragut Academy of New Jersey had claim to Steve's service in the year 1938-39. High laurels followed Steve, and the Little Middies won the New Jersey State Championship on the gridiron. In the Little Army-Navy game, Farragut stopped La Salle Military Academy of New York 15-0.

A Marine Reserve

Steve's plans to enter the coaching field have been sidetracked for the time being. As a member of the Marine Reserves, he will start working for his commission after his graduation this coming May.

As he looks back upon his varsity days at Villanova, Steve can say truthfully that he has never missed a practice. Friends say he's the first one on the field in the afternoon and the last one to leave at dusk.

Steve rates Monk Gafford and Andy Tomasic as the greatest backs he has opposed. He should know about Tomasic, having faced him five times. John Matisi of Duquesne gets Steve's vote as the hardest charging linesman Villanova has had to put up with in his three years on th squad. While Steve was stating his opinions he said Auburn's defeat of Georgia was no surprise to him. Steve ranked the Auburn line with the best in the country.

Alumni Frosh Quint Trims Austin To Tie For Intramural Court Lead

Alumni Hall's fiery freshmen five exploded all their latent strength into the second half of their game with Austin Hall last week and knocked the Firemen from their lofty perch far atop the other teams in the Intramural league, 36-34.

At the start Austin scored so quickly that it looked as though they would gain an easy victory. It continued to look this way as the Blue team retained their early six point lead until the mid-way point in the first half. Following this they increased that coveted lead rather impressively and led 22-12 when the whistle blew ending the first half.

Frosh Stampede

After intermission Alumni came forth with a red hot offense that netted them eight points before the bewildered Austinites could find the basket. However, the Firemen got hold of themselves and added seven points to lead 29-22. Alumni came back with another drive to close the gap at 29 all.

Then the fireworks began. Austin's Mike Cheppa sank his third mechanical pivot shot after three minutes of scoreless play. Joe McGuiness, who had been playing a whale of a game, came back with a peeper to tie the score again but Red McFadden got off another beautiful set shot to break the ice. Lowney and McGuiness, Alumni's stellar forwards, cleared the rims with shots and the Green were out in front for the first time in the game. Each team sank a foul and the game ended 36-34 in Alumni's favor. It stopped Austin's winning streak and gave the Greenies a tie for the league lead.

C & F Wins

On Tuesday afternoon, in the first of the week's two contests, Fedigan bowed to a slightly stronger C & F team by a 52-46 score. The scoring was rather heavy but remained even up till the half which ended in a 22-22 tie. In the second half Fedigan matched their conquerors point for point and the game was tied until late in the game when Bob Biggins, former St. Joe's Prep basketeer now playing with the Businessmen, broke loose with a scoring spree to assure the game for his team 52-46.

Charley LaBelle, Fedigan's best, had 15 points for the afternoon.

The Mendel Residents garnished their second and easiest victory of the season when the Mendel Day Students forfeited to them. Father Sullivan couldn't find enough of his men and consequently the game could not be played.

Scribes to Attend

Also expected to be present from the Philadelphia area are the various sport scribes who covered Villanova's exploits on the gridiron this fall. Among them will be Red Smith and Bill Dooley of the Philadelphia Record, Perry Lewis of the Inquirer, and Ross Kaufman and Tommy Lovett of the Bulletin.

Another feature of this combined Alumni-Football Banquet will be the presentation of the Loyalty Award to the Alumnus who contributed most to Villanova during the year 1941-42. John Dougherty of the class of '18 received the award last year.

School Dedicates New Service Flag

Class of 1942 Presents Banner With Eight Gold Stars and 812 Blue Stars

The service flag honoring Villanova students and alumni serving in the armed forces and those who have been killed in action was formally presented to the school by the class of 1942 at a ceremony held in front of Mendel Hall at noontime yesterday.

Jacques Mauch, Student Council chairman, presented the banner to the school on behalf of last year's senior class. A speech of acceptance and dedication was made by Rev. Francis X. N. McGuire, O. S. A., vice-president. Before assuming its place on the corridor wall of Mendel Hall, it was blessed by the college chaplain, Rev Edwin T. Grimes, O. S. A.

Eight Gold Stars

The banner is similar to the type displayed by many institutions throughout the country. It is rectangular in shape, white with a red border and bearing in the center one large blue star with a group of eight smaller gold stars. On the blue star is inscribed the figure 812 which signifies the number of Villanovans now serving their country. This number will be changed as more students and alumni enter the armed forces.

The original plan was to have a large number of small blue stars each to represent a man in the army, navy, and marines, but this was abandoned in favor of the more practical alternative of one large inscribed star.

The gold stars which represent Villanovans who have made the supreme sacrifice are eight in number instead of twelve as was previously announced. The college band under the direction of Rev. Ralph J. Handran, O. S. A., provided appropriate music for the occasion.

Dr. Drenick Talks At German Club

Dr. Rudolf Drenick, of the engineering faculty, was the guest speaker at the German Club meeting held last Thursday evening in Simpson Hall. Dr. Drenick related some of his interesting trips through Europe while serving as a leader of the Youth Movement in his native Austria. He explained to the group that he had witnessed about seven of these trips during his summer vacations, and emphasized the highlights of these adventurous experiences.

Of all his journeys, Dr. Drenick said that he found his travels through the Balkans the most interesting and surprising, being quite impressed by their Mohammedan civilization. For beauty he remembers Venice and other picturesque cities of Italy, and for action and thrills he can always look back to his almost fatal boat trip down the Rhine River or else his deportation to Budapest. Other places of interest brought to life by the speaker were Athens and Constantinople, and many other famous cities on the continent.

DPE To Hold Annual Initiation Tomorrow

Tomorrow evening at 7:00 P. M., Delta Pi Epsilon, Commerce and Finance school fraternity, will hold their annual initiation and smoker. The initiation proper will take place in the C. & F. auditorium, while the smoker which follows, will be held in the "blue room" of the Field House.

This celebration will be the only important social function of the D. P. E. this year, as their yearly banquet, together with many other extra-curricular events, has been eliminated because of the curtailed college calender. However, John Newell, president of the initiation committee, plans to have the gathering tomorrow night more than make up for any curtailment of other D. P. E. activities.

Christmas Vacation

Will Be Held According To College Calendar Unless War Department Calls Up Reserves

In answer to the anxious inquiries of the students, it has been announced by Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, that the Christmas vacation will follow the college calendar as already tentatively announced, unless the War Department sets a date for calling the Army Enlisted Reserves prior to Jan. 30.

In that event it may be necessary to curtail the vacation in order that those students now enlisted in the Army Reserve may complete their term before being called into active service.

Fr. Stanford has stated that no further word has been received to indicate on what date the Army Reserves will be called, other than through the public announcements made through the office of the Secretary of War. At that time it was stated there is a possibility that the reserves would be called sometime after the end of the current term. The announcement pertaining to the vacation is merely a precautionary measure on the part of the college authorities to insure the students that they will be able to complete their term in the event the Army Reserve is called before the date of graduation, Jan. 31.

As listed in the college calendar the Christmas vacation will commence on Wednesday, Dec. 23, and will terminate at 8:30 P. M., on Monday, Jan. 4. Classes will be resumed on the following day.

Debaters Meet Rutgers Tonight

Beta Gamma, Villanova's debating society, will meet Rutgers University in a decision debate at 8:00 P. M. this evening in Simpson Hall. The question under discussion will be "A World Federal Union." Frank Cahill, commerce senior, George Baer, freshman engineer, and Thomas Sulivan, C. & F. freshman, will represent Villanova and argue for the affirmative, "establishing a just cause for such a union based upon a peace concluding the present universal turmoil."

The society will meet Lafayette College on Dec. 10, and debate the same issue. Representing Villanova will be Joseph Coll, commerce junior, Jack Deery, junior artsman, and Joseph Giiletto, engineering freshman.

Host to Forensic League

Wilfrid Gagen, president of the society, also announced that on the same day at 8:00 P. M., Villanova will be host to the Philadelphia Forensic League in 215 Mendel Hall. La Salle College and St. Joseph College will participate in a decision debate on that evening on "A World Federal Union." St. Joseph will establish the affirmative.

Change of Policy

Rev. John J. Coffey, O. S. A., moderator of the Beta Gamma, announced that there is stimulated interest on this question because it will be the problem facing the United Nations after the present conflict is over. Fr. Coffey further announced that the policy of the Beta Gamma will be drastically changed.

The formality of past years will be replaced with an exchange of views and opinions with the audience participating in a question and answer period. The society decided that by adopting this policy, the audience will be able to understand much more from the discussions.

Freshman Engineer Wins Seminar Quiz

Waldo Armand, freshman engineer, won the musical quiz conducted in the music seminar last Wednesday. Out of a possible 30 answers he answered 23 correctly, Dr. E. L. Haenisch, moderator, announced. Robert P. Koob, senior science student, was runner-up by recognizing 20 titles. Dr. Haenisch played 15 records and the participants needed to name the title of each work and its composer.

Briefs Of CAMPUS NEWS

A second plea was made by Rev. Francis X. N. McGuire, O. S. A., vice-president of the college, to all students at meetings on Tuesday and Wednesday last week that they should respond to the call for blood donors. Fr. McGuire stressed how much this plasma is needed at the war fronts.

The vice-president expressed his disappointment at the poor response thus far, since only about two percent of the total student body has volunteered. In contrast to this showing, the seminarians have responded almost to the man to the plea for contributions to the Red Cross blood bank. If a suitable number volunteer, at least a hundred, the Red Cross will send a mobile unit to the campus to accept the contributions of the donors.

Thomas F. McMahon, a graduate of the class of 1940, has received his commission as Ensign in the United States Naval Reserve, it was announced by the Public Relations Office. McMahon was a student in the commerce school and former star fullback on the Villanova football team.

At a meeting of Phi Kappa Pi, engineering fraternity, last Wednesday, it was decided that seniors will receive their fraternity keys on January 31. Tuesday, December 15, has been set as the last day for payment of dues. No senior can rereceive his pin unless payment for the current semester is made.

It was also announced at the meeting that Edward Manderfield, senior engineer, will sponsor a series of program to be held on Thursday afternoons at 4:00 P. M. The general theme of these gatherings will be "Reconstruction After The War." Speakers will include members of the faculty and student body.

Notice For Marine Corps Enlistees

Of special interest to students who have began their enlistment in the Marine Corps Reserve is the following statement issued by the college liaison officer, Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O. S. A. "All students who initiated their application for enlistment into the Marine Corps Reserve prior to Dec. 5, must complete details of their enlistment by Wednesday, Dec. 15."

Any student in doubt as to his status after the presidential order to close all voluntary enlistments should see Fr. McQuade as soon as possible.

Engineers Attend ASME Meeting

Prof. Kenneth J. Moser and four senior mechanical engineers attended the annual meeting of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers held in the Hotel Astor, New York, from Nov. 30 to Dec. 5. Villanova's student representation consisted of Herman C. Behnke, Edward J. Gallagher, Robert A. Leary, and William J. Schneider.

Theme of the meeting was the value of mechanical engineering in war production. The attendants presented papers and conducted numerous discussions on this topic.

Sikorsky Gives Talk

The program began with a luncheon at which James W. Parker, President of the A. S. M. E., introduced the distinguished engineer, Igor Sikorsky, who displayed a motion picture showing his famous helicopter and spoke on "Creative Engineering, Invention, and Intuition."

On Wednesday, December 2, the Student Council Luncheon provided a special occasion for the student members to meet with the officers and other members of the society. Parker, who presided, and president-elect Coes gave brief talks, and Student and Pi Tau Sigma awards were presented.

Many Topics Covered

The technical sessions covered a variety of subjects including management, aviation, fuels, machine design, dynamics, production engineering, plastics, and rubber.

At the Annual Dinner on Wednesday evening the members heard the presidential address, a greeting by the president-elect, and witnessed the conferring of honors. The dinner was followed by the President's Reception and Dance.

Band Gives Informal Concert At Rosemont

Last Thursday evening under the direction of the Rev. Ralph J. Handran, O. S. A., moderator of the band, the Villanova College band presented an informal concert for the faculty and students of Rosemont College in the Rosemont gymnasium. John Scola, drum major, sophomore science student, gave a complete exhibition of baton twirling. His performance received three encores. Following the concert, the Rosemont girls entertained the band members and served refreshments.

On Sunday of this week the band participated in a service flag raising at Berwyn and played several military selections. Yesterday they played at the Villanova College flag raising exercises. Plans are also being made for the band to entertain at Immaculata College in the near future.

Manderfield Edits Engineer; Editorial Board Appointed

Koob, DeVoldere Named to New Posts; Temple, Lyness Retain Positions; November Issue Out This Week

Edward Manderfield, senior chemical engineer, has been appointed Editor-in-Chief of the Engineer. Rev. John J. Vrana, moderator of the magazine, announced that Manderfield will succeed Thomas C Muraski, past editor of the monthly publication of the Engineering School.

Robert Koob, senior chemical engineer, has been chosen as Managing Editor, and Joseph DeVoldere, junior chemical engineer, is the new Circulation Manager, a post formerly held by Manderfield. Only two staff positions remain unchanged, George Temple, junior chemical engineer, as Photography Editor and Arthur Lyness, senior chemical engineer, as Business Manager.

This is Manderfield's fourth year on the Engineer staff. In addition to his literary work, he has been a member of Beta Gamma, the debating society, the Sanctuary Society, Phi Kappa Pi, the engineering fraternity, and Chi Epsilon Mu, the engineering honor fraternity.

War Metals Discussed

The November issue of the Engineer, which is scheduled to come out this week, will contain a story by James Shelly on war metals, which surveys our supply of metal, the shortage, and presents a general picture of war metals and their significance in war-production.

Raymond Kray contributes an article on Smokeless Powder which is an exposition on the manufacture of this vital commodity. "Water In Industry" by James Schultes treats of deep well drilling and the technique involved. The old "Cross Section" feature is revived under a new name, "Fact and Friction."

No Change in Policy

In the coming December issue Robert Koob will present an article on war gases as used in modern warfare. Koob is well suited to discuss this as he is a decontamination officer in the Philadelphia Gas Defense Corps. Paul Simpson has prepared a story on the Cathode Ray Tube.

The new editor has stated that the magazine will not undergo any radical change in makeup or policy. The Engineer has always featured many photographs and Manderfield says that he will try to continue this as long as possible.

Council Asks Students To Pay Assessments For Centennial Ball

At a meeting of the junior and senior classes held last Tuesday, Jacques Mauch, president of the Student Council, urged that all students who intend to go to the Centennial Ball should pay their $2.50 assessment as soon as possible. After Dec. 18, the assessment, to be applied to the ticket price of $5.50, will be raised to $3.00.

Mauch stated that his committee cannot move toward signing a suitable orchestra until all assessments are paid.

Further appointments to the Decorations and publicity committees have also been made. Serving on the Publicity committee with Robert F. Young, chairman, are Raymond Amicone, senior engineer, Thomas Devine, senior artsman, Robert White, commerce junior, Joseph Daly, and Louis Fares, both junior sciencemen. Thus far the committee has distributed posters about the school for the purpose of reminding all students who intend to go to the dance to get their assessments in as early as possible.

Assisting Eugene Barry, chairman of the Decorations committee, are Ward Guncheon and Eugene Pinto, senior, John Bambrick and William Sullivan, juniors in the C. & F., Arthur Lyness, Donald Cryor, and Robert Simpson, senior engineers, James Connelly, artsman, and Thomas Delahanty, scienceman of the junior class.

More Red Tape Is Added

THE Social Security Act, when it was first put into effect, was sniped at by various political writers and statesmen of anti-New Deal tendencies. These men pointed out that anything which mentioned security without first presenting liberty smacked of fascism and communism. There is, these men held, a difference between liberty and security just as there is between the owner of a dairy and one of his cows.

Another grievance that the opponents of the administration had, lay in the fact that this act placed a number on an individual. This is a characteristic of all "ism" governments, and, therefore, bad.

The third bone these men had to pick with the governing body concerned the possession by the government of private information which belonged to the individual himself. This Act represented one of the first of a flood of questionnaires, polls, and forms which now engulfs us.

These questionnaires pry into a man's personality. They desire to know where a man stands socially, financially, spiritually, racially, and politically. Yet these things are not supposed to matter. Most of the information mentioned can be found in church records, bank records, birth records and death records. That the facts garnered in this manner are used for nothing but for the purpose of finding out, for political (vote-getting) reasons, to whom one should appeal to be elected, was brought out in the open the other day.

A merchant, one of thousands now pursuing the same course of action, charged that the OPA made him spend a good deal of time and money to fill a terrible number of questionnaires that now lie in a warehouse in bales, a fire-hazard and a waste.

The Social Security Act, although it is charitable, and, with modifications a necessary thing, has ultimately caused and put the stamp of approval on all this red tape.

It is high time we lose ourselves and win this war the right way.

We Must Do Our Share

OVER a month ago the sale of War Bonds and Stamps was inaugurated in Mendel Hall. A great number of the students have seen the table and the display of books and posters, but only a few have paid any attention to them and fewer have done anything toward buying, even stamps.

During the summer semester Stamps and Bonds were also sold and the sales were very good. Now, when the student body has been increased several times, the sales have dropped off. There is only one answer. The interest in buying such securities has fallen off.

This would seem to indicate that the students do not consider it necessary to buy or even build bombers anymore. Surely every student has not stopped worrying about the war. The anxiety expressed by one student after another concerning his possibility of staying in school will tell one that the government has not slackened off its war requirements.

The news from the war fronts is good and bad, tending toward the good. However, anyone who gives the war any consideration knows that it is far from being won. It still is necessary for the people of this nation, each and everyone, to buy War Bonds and Stamps not only as they bought them in the past but even more so now.

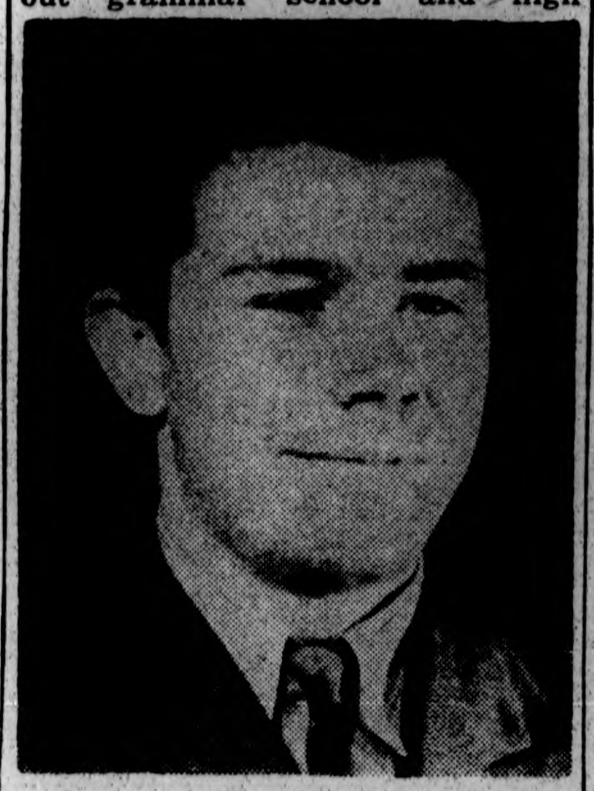
Meet The Boys:

Mal Acts As President Of P. K. P. While Herm Is Leader Of A. S. M. E.

By RAY WILLE

IN the center of the ring this week we have two senior engineers, one favoring electrical work and the other mechanically inclined. Neither of them resides at the college; both have exceptionally fine scholastic records, and each is a leader of some campus organization.

The first of these men was christened Malachy Vincent Boyle when he was born in Philadelphia twenty-one years ago. His name seems to be a synonym for the words conscientious and studious. Throughout grammar school and high school he ranked with the best scholars in his classes, and was the pride of his seventh grade section when he carried off the top prize in a city spelling bee.



If Mal is asked whether he participated in any sports while he attended St. Joseph's High School, he will probably answer that he played a little football. Anyone who knows him well, however, will reveal that he was a varsity lineman on two city championship football teams.

Since he entered Villanova in the fall of 1939, his consistently high grades have kept him at the top of the scholarship list. He is enrolled in the electrical engineering school from which he will graduate next May.

President of PKP

Extra-curricular activities in the form of clubs and societies have been a highlight in Mal's campus life. When he became a member of Phi Kappa Pi, engineering fraternity, in his freshman year, he little dreamed that he would preside over this group in his senior year. He also joined the math club as a freshman, and during his second year at Villanova he served as a Student Council member.

Many a girl has felt a twinge of disappointment when she learns that she doesn't stand a chance with Mal. A blonde named Frances is supposed to have priorities on most of his spare time, and Mal's closest friends know more about her than they do about Mal himself.

As a member of the Naval Reserve, class E. V. P., he will naturally go into the armed forces after his graduation. He expressed a desire to study electronics in a naval research laboratory while he is in the service.

NEXT we are to meet Herman Carl Behnke, another native Philadelphian, who got his first glimpse at the world on March 24, 1921. In his early classes he learned the value of keeping his grades at a high level, but otherwise his life was uneventful until he entered Northeast Catholic High School.

Here Herm became the editor of the school magazine. The caliber of his marks during these four years earned him the signal honor of being salutatorian of his graduating class in 1939.

Heads A. S. M. E. Society

Herm came to Villanova the following fall and finished his first year at the head of his class. He became a Phi Kappa Pi member in his freshman year, and as a sophomore he was secretary of the Math club. The honorary engineering fraternity invited Herm to become one of its members. This is his third year as a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, and he now serves as president of the Villanova chapter of this group.

The fact that he had never played football in his life kept Herm from engaging in this sport during the first few seasons he was here. Doubtful as to whether he would even get a uniform, he decided to try his luck on the Villanova 150-lb. team this year. His willingness to learn, some natural ability, and plenty of hard work made him a starting guard in every game the team played. His teammates recognized him as a hard, clean player with a likeable personality.

Already Commissioned Ensign

His other main interests are women and aeronautics, but the latter seems to be his first love. He already has his pilot's license, and last year he took a C. A. A. course in the college.

Herm now has a commission in the Naval Reserve. During the the past summer he completed his indoctrinational training at Notre Dame University. Immediately after the completion of this training, he went on active duty as an ensign in a naval aircraft factory at the Philadelphia Navy Yard until the beginning of the fall term. When he has graduated next May he will again return to active duty in the navy.

THIS first report I'm bringing you is more for Bill Friel's Alumnus, but here goes:

Joe Costa, '42 enlisted in the Air Corps Ground Crew recently and one of his first letters home stated: "Army life is swell. They really treat us great down here. I don't get up until 5:00 A. M. and I have nothing to do until 5:10 except wash, shave, sweep out the barracks, make my bunk, and yell 'here' at reveille."

To those who remember Joe's gentle voice on this campus, we say "Same old Joe."

Relax Now:

The boys up at Northeastern University have just finished exams last week. Expressing the sentiment of the students the Northeastern News published the following:

Exams are over,
And all is well.
Now to go out,
And raise some. . . money.

So You Think You're 4F!

The manpower shortage is rapidly growing acute as Local 78 (yes, that's my draft board) reports.

In the pre-Pearl Harbor days, one of the Local 78's prime candidates got himself a defense job at Budd's. Operating a press, one day he found both his arms cut off.

Well in Local 78's last quota our hero reported to the induction center, and (this is the crux of the story) passed the physical and was promptly sent to Fort Dix.

Reporting to the C. O. he was wondering what his duties would be. The C. O., noting the decided lack of arms, call him over to the window.

"You see that man down there at the well waiting for the bucket to get filled? Well, he's blind. You go down and tell him when it's full."

TAKING off with a strong "tale" wind behind us, we resum our hedge-hopping (or hiding) to divulge the news behind the fuse. Many of the local reservists seem to be victims of a war of nerves. It used to be "What do you know, Joe?" Now it's "When do you go, Joe?"

ON THE BEAM:

Vince "Monk" Goronski has challenged John Bongiavonni to a duel (fisticuffs at twenty paces) over the affections of Mary, president of Immaculata's freshman class. May the better man win. . Johnny Green, one of the O'Dwyer Dudes, recently invited several friends down for a week-end. Little did he know they would all choose the same week. As a result he dated one, secured blind dates (take it or leave it, the hard way) for two of them and wrote the other and requested her to change the date. John was really in a jam, but he finally managed to cross the threshold. . .Earl Brusso and John Bittig carry on a very lengthy telephone conversations, nightly, with Peg and Kit from Norristown. Incidentally, boys, have you ever heard of the Fictitious Name Act? . . .Bob Fladd, frosh engineer, is gradually working his way up (seat by seat) to an introduction to a blonde whom he sees on the P.&W. every morning. The train leaves 69th Street at eight thirty-five.

Waitress: I have fried liver, boiled tongue, stewed kidneys, and pigs feet.

Diner: Don't tell me your ailments, sister. I came in for a chicken dinner.

PROPWASH:

Bill Sullivan, junior class president, entertained several of the footballmen at a post-season party last week at his house. Ava, a flaming red-head, was the hostess . . .Don't repeat this, but we heard from a very confidential source, that Bill Mundy stands in front of the mirror every morning and says to himself, "Toupee or not toupee!" No matter what he does for his hair, it always comes out on top. For those who are not familiar with Bill, he's the only man on the campus who wears his hair de-parted in the middle. . .We are glad to see that Bill Walpole is changing his attitude toward "girls." "Wally" seemed interested in Franny, Warren Fox's date last week-end. . . Franny McLoughlin bore the brunt of a twenty dollar bill recently in Philly, for his friends. It just shows to go you that a friend in need is a friend in debt. . .The boys are wondering what put the dent in Gene Smith's roll last week over in Jersey. We're sure that it wasn't the bridge toll.

TAILSPIN

Question of the week: Where are the fellows in O'Dwyer Hall getting all the firewood that is burned in the fireplace every nite? We're sure that no one chops any. . .Andy Scalzetti's social activities have been drastically curtailed since he wore out the "welcome" on the mat in the Greeks. . .Prof. Dougherty's Stat class presented him with an engraved portion of the goalpost from the Temple game. Some of the rooms in Fedigan Hall have likewise been decorated with some of the loot. . ."Hungry" Joe Reich finally found a Hungarian girl at Rosemont at an informal concert given by the Villanova Band last Thursday nite. John McKee, another band member, had a rather difficult time keeping tabs on "Midge," due to some unwanted competition from a "former" friend. . .Frank Labor wrote Ruth and explained that the reason he hasn't been to see her is that he has been "cooped up" here at school. The next day he received in the mail a loaf of bread with a file concealed inside. The evidence may be viewed any day in his room between the hours of twelve thirty and five P. M.

COURTMEN OPEN SEASON WITH FT. DIX

VILLANOVAN SPORTS

Sportorial

By Jacques Mauch
Sports Editor

Curtailment of athletic programs because of war conditions and the overshadowing of the transportation problem has been faced at Villanova and is being effectively dealt with during the present court season.

When freshmen were permitted to play varsity sports last March, plebe teams were automatically eliminated. This helped save on transportation because there was only one team of each sport on the road instead of two.

The last sport to function with both freshmen and varsity teams was basketball. This year there is only one team and Villanova was faced with a new problem. It was always customary to have a preliminary game to the varsity contest in the fieldhouse. No one ever witnesses a single basketball game; fans want their money's worth. They either get a prelim and main event or a double-header of entertainment.

Without the frosh team who would play the preliminary games? This was the question that was foremost in the minds of Coach Al Severance and the other members of the Athletic Board. Then Fathers Dunne and McKee, moderators of intramural sports, and originators of the present system, got together with Coach Severance and came up with the solution.

"Why not have some of the intramural league games played as preliminary to the varsity affairs?" suggested the Fathers. "A fine idea," agreed Al Severance. So the best league contests were arranged to be played before all varsity games until Christmas.

Then someone got a better idea. "We have the material; let's choose an all-star team from the intramural league and arrange games with local high schools or junior varsity teams of colleges in the surrounding area." This plan is just in the embryo stage and nothing definite has been settled yet.

We think this is one of the best plans that athletic leaders at Villanova have thought up in a long while and we hope to see it carried out as fully as possible.

The intramural basketball league has been the best organized sport program among the students and has created the most interest. Many fine athletes have entered the intramural ranks and in turn the intramural ranks have produced many fine athletes. Many members of the intramural league are former high school athletes. Alumni Hall's court squad boasts five former high school basketball captains.

There are numerous instances where an intramural athlete has developed his skill to such a degree that he has earned a berth on varsity teams. The most notable example is Lloyd Rice, 1940 graduate, who became a basketball and baseball star in his final year and went on to play pro baseball after he left Villanova. Al Skaf, became a varsity catcher after two years in the intramurals and last year Joe Malone graduated to the varsity ranks. There are at present a number of men on the campus who are potential varsity performers.

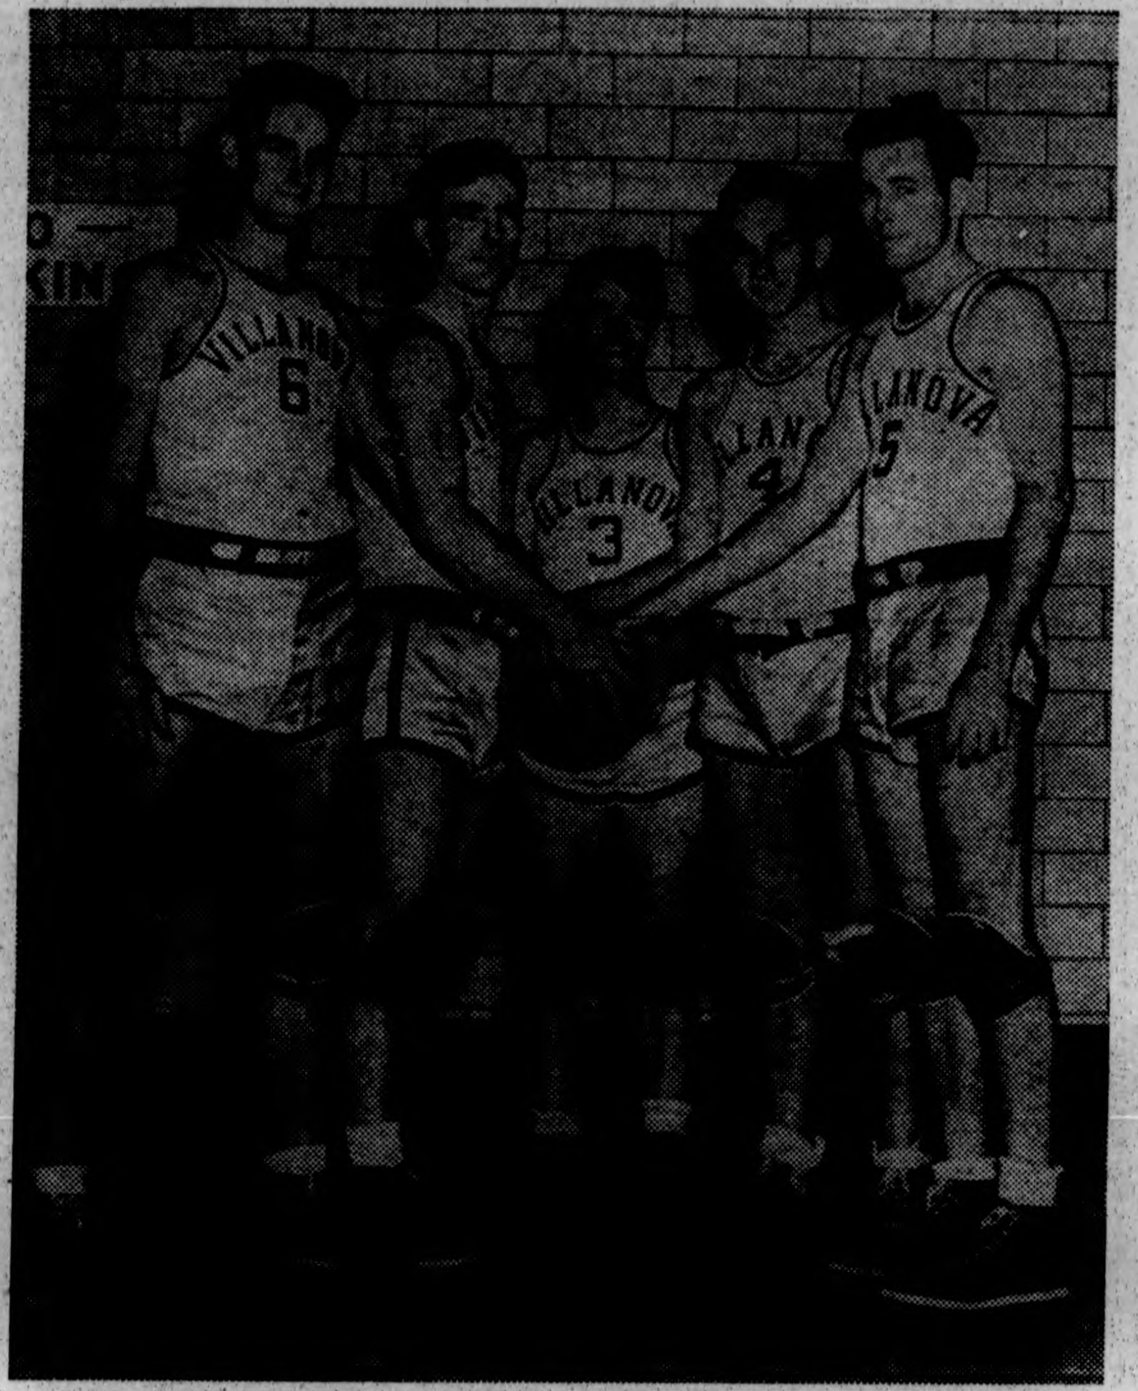
An all-star unit from the intramural circuit would hold its own with any local high school five and probably make the game a lot more interesting to the spectators than the runaway victories our unmatched frosh quintets have registered in former years.

Athletics are for the student. This present idea if it is carried out wholeheartedly, will give him the physical benefit which is so important at present and would also increase his interest in the game.

Al Postus Merits All-State Honors

Al Postus, Villanova's triple threat halfback, has been selected on several "all" teams. The brilliant junior, who scored six touchdowns for the Wildcats the past season and threw passes for four other scores was placed on the All-State team picked by Associated Press. He was given a second team berth on the All-East eleven by the Associated Press also.

Victory Bound



Getting set for the 1942-'43 basketball opener Thursday night are (from left to right): Bob Kelty, Bill Wood, Major McDonnell, Herm Drizen, and Joe Lord. Kelty and Wood are seniors and co-captains of the Wildcat team. The remaining three are juniors.

Auburn's Gafford Leads All-Opponent Selections

Little Monk and Burke, Detroit Guard, Unanimous Choices of Wildcat Gridmen; Five Other Plainsmen Gain Positions on Two Teams

Monk Gafford, Auburn University's fireball, led the nominations for Villanova's all-opponent team picked by the Wildcat players in a poll last week. Gafford was placed in the halfback slot on the all-foe team for the second consecutive year by a unanimous vote.

Three teammates of the Plainsmen star also gained first team berths. Clarence Grimmet was voted one of the end posts, Vic Costellos was placed at guard, and Jim Reynolds, Gafford's running mate on an Auburn team that whipped the mighty Georgia, gained the other halfback position.

Rounding out a backfield, whose combined abilities are the dream of every coach, are Don Hughes, Detroit quarterback and Paul Darling, fullback from Iowa State. Hughes, a typical Rockne quarterback, was one of the best blockers met all season by the Wildcats. Darling's line plunging and kicking against the Wildcats were prominent but it was his sensational defensive play that gained him the first team honors. He was the best line backer the Blue and White faced all season. He made half the Iowans' tackles and if he hadn't been in the lineup Iowa State's defense would have crumbled.

Duke Tackles Chosen

Statistics prove the rights of Gafford and Reynolds for first team distinction. The former, winner of All-Southeastern Conference honors, carried the ball 20 times against the Wildcats and gained 113 yards. He also added a hundred more on punt and kickoff returns. The latter hit Villanova's line 30 times for a net gain of 114 yards.

Duquesne, conqueror of the Wildcats, gained both tackle positions, placing John Matisi and Joe Cibulas. These boys opened the holes for the Duke backs to run through on their tricky spinners and reverses and were the big factors in holding Clipper Smith's boys for no gain on the ground. Doc Jacobs, scout, acclaimed them the best pair of tackles in the East.

Burke, Unanimous Choice

Nick Klutka, end, and Ed Lee, center, both of Florida and Bob Burke, Detroit guard are the rest of an intelligent fast charging line. Burke, along with Gafford, was a unanimous choice for his position.

Temple, Villanova's arch rival, failed to gain a first team position but placed three men on the second team. Auburn and Florida each got two places and Manhattan, Detroit, Duquesne, and Iowa State garnered one each.

Members of the Coast Guard eleven from Manhattan Beach were not considered in the voting.

FIRST TEAM

End—Grimmet, Auburn
Tackle—Matisi, Duquesne
Guard—Burke, Detroit
Center—Lee, Florida
Guard—Costellos, Auburn
Tackle—Cibulas, Duquesne
End—Klutka, Florida
Quarterback—Hughes, Detroit
Halfback—Gafford, Auburn
Halfback—Reynolds, Auburn
Fullback—Darling, Iowa State

SECOND TEAM

End—Worst, Manhattan
Tackle—Eddins, Auburn
Guard—Konetsky, Florida
Center—Pharr, Auburn
Guard—Beshunsky, Temple
Tackle—Jarmoluk, Temple
End—Ruth Detroit
Quarterback—Lohry, Iowa State
Halfback—Kielbasa, Duquesne
Halfback—Nejman, Temple
Fullback—Cory, Florida

Pezelski Picked

The "Kulpmont Komet," Joe Pezelski, was the only member of the Wildcot football team that was chosen on Temple's all-opponent eleven. Pezelski ran the Owl secondary ragged all afternoon in their game with the Wildcats and topped off his performance with a twisting 80 yard run for a touchdown. The run, however, was nullified by a clipping penalty.

Sadowski, Bloom and Hassmuller Lead Jersey Team's Attack; St. Francis, Wittenberg Fives Visit Fieldhouse Saturday and Monday Nights

By BILL WALSH

Opening his eighth year as head coach of Villanova basketball teams on next Thursday evening, Al Severance will send his Blue and White hopefuls against a star-studded outfit from Fort Dix, New Jersey. This opening tilt will be followed on Saturday and Monday nights by encounters with St. Francis' of Loretto, and Wittenburg College, respectively. All three of the contests will take place in the Villanova gymnasium.

Coming into the Main Line territory under the name of the Fort Dix outfit for the opener will be an array of stars, the like of which has never been seen in the Main Line gymnasium in years gone by. Three former All-Americans form the nucleus of a squad which has already played six games this season, and has been successful in five of these contests. Their victims include the U. S. Naval Station both home and away, Bolling Field, Brooklyn College and Weston Stillman.

Sadowski, Bloom to Play

Familiar to all basketball fans of the last five years is the name of Ed Sadowski, former All-American court star in Seton Hall, and more recently one of the main cogs in the Detroit Eagles' aggregation, the World's Professional Champions in 1941. Now a sergeant in Uncle Sam's forces, Sadowski is the Post basketball coach at the Trenton Training Station, as well as a playing member of the Dix cage team.

A Temple star of a few years back, Meyer "Mike" Bloom by name, is another All-American who graces the Soldiers' lineup. Bloom, after graduating from college in 1938, had great success in the pro ranks, playing with the Philadelphia Sphas, Baltimore and Trenton, before entering the service a short while ago. At present he is a private.

Other Luminaries

Bob Hassmuller, the Fordham flash of two seasons back and captain of the Ram quintet in his senior year at Rose Hill, is the third All-American luminary who will start for the Fort Dix aggregation on Thursday night.

Others who have achieved fame on the hardwood before entering the service and are members of the team which will oppose Villanova in its opener next Thursday are Sgt. Earl Yost, formerly of the Colorado All-Stars; Al Lor of John Marshall College; Cpl. Fred Eggers, who

Team Hears Notables At Grid Dinner

Captain Edward J. (Mike) Moran, commander of the cruiser Boise, famous for its performance in a battle with six Japanese warships in the Solomons was the main speaker at the combination Alumni and football dinner held last Saturday night at Town Hall in Philadelphia.

Other speakers on the gala program were Rev. John T. Sheehan, O. S. A., district Provincial of the Augustinians; Rev. F. X. N. McGuire, O. S. A., moderator of athletics; Lieutenant F. Leo Lynch, U. S. N. R., all-time center of Wildcat football teams; John P. Keffer, president of the Alumni Association; and Clipper Smith, head football coach.

Moran Impressive

Lieutenant Lynch was the first speaker on the program. He spoke of present football conditions and related various incidents that occurred in Villanova's games with the Army and the Navy back in '17 when he was a standout center. Captain Moran played on the Navy line that year. Lynch told of their rivalry and then introduced Captain Moran.

Captain Moran gave the most impressive speech of the evening. He described the battle in which the Boise accounted for six Jap ships. He warned the people not to get impatient and likened the Navy offensive to that of Notre Dame's scrub team, saying that because we have to protect two oceans we have only our second team in the Pacific against the Jap's first team, and we are still holding our own.

Smith Satisfied

Both Fathers McGuire and Sheehan commented on the past grid season, and voiced their satisfaction with the work accomplished by Coach Smith and the fine spirit

Unbeaten Alumni Five Paces Intramural Loop

By JIM CARBINE

Riding on the crest of last week's victories, Alumni Hall still holds on to the lead which they gained on November 24. The Greenies with the teamwork that typifies them showed even more power last week when they topped the ledger for team scoring with a total of 86 points in two games.

This week the games were played on the Fieldhouse floor instead of in Alumni Hall, because the teams must get used to playing there, since they will furnish the thrills in the preliminary games to the varsity's contests. On Tuesday the change was immediately noticed with the teams showing lack of ability to cope with the large floor, many a bad pass was thrown and many a scoring opportunity was missed.

Fedigan Loses Again

On Tuesday afternoon the Greenies started off with a bang by trouncing C & F 43 to 19. Lowney led the pack in the scoring column for the winners with 12 points. George Famiglietti center of the 150 pound football team, had 7 points for the losers. The game started off slowly with each team having difficulty getting accustomed to the long floor; the score at halftime was only 11 to 7 in favor of Alumni.

In the night program the Mendel day hops finished out ahead of Fedigan 30 to 27 in a contest close from the opening whistle. The day hops held on to their early lead with the help of Scotty Boyle and Bob Koob who rang up 7 points apiece.

In the other night game Austin beat the Mendel residents 34 to 27. Lamb led the defeated team with 10 points, while Mcfadden led his teammates from Austin with 10 points.

Close Game

In the first of Thursday's games, C & F got back into the winning column by nosing out the Mendel residents 33 to 32. Hagan was high scorer for the Commercemen with 7 points. In the other games Austin won from the Mendel day hops 30 to 20, and Alumni outscored Fedigan 43 to 23. Mike Cheppa was high scorer for Austin with 10 points while Doras led Alumni with 11 points.

The big game of this week will be the clash between Alumni and Austin when they meet on December 10. Austin will meet Mendel D. S. on the 12th before the varsity game.

In The Sportlight

By BILL CAREY

With the close of the football season we find Vinnie Carlesimo relaxing in his spare time, and now realizing that his collegiate football days have come to an end.

Starting out on his athletic career at South Side High School in Newark, N. J., his home town, we find that Vinnie starred in swimming and football there, captaining the latter in his senior year. Holding down the guard position as he did for year, Carlesimo built his 200 pounds into solid muscle. After his days at South Side High he decided to prep a year at Seton Hall, and here he duplicated his past activities even to being chosen captain of Seton Hall's mighty eleven. It was on this team that four future All - Americans played.

In his freshman year at Villanova, curly haired "Carl" played guard again under Doc Jacobs. Gathering a reputation as a steady and strong player, he found no difficulty in crashing into the varsity lineup at the start of his sophomore year.

For two years Vince held down the left guard berth, and then this year was called on by Clipper Smith to fill the big gap at left tackle caused by the absence of Paul Stenn. This change had no ill effects because Carlesimo came through in his usual steady way.

VIN CARLESIMO

Traveling out to Detroit, "Carl" had his big disappointment when he captained the team in their loss against the Titans. Following the choice of most of his teammates, he chose Monk Gafford as the best back he faced and Jack Russell of Baylor as the best lineman. A very commendable observation by Carlesimo is the playing of Auburn teams. He gives the title of the hardest playing and cleanest teams he's faced for the Wildcats. He says that is typical of all Auburn teams.

Majoring in English and Spanish, Vinnie will have his degree in Education in May. He found his greatest pleasure in the psychology classes of Doc McHugh. In these classes he has enjoyed the teachings and wit of the eminent Doctor, and feels that this will prove a very good background for his teaching career that he intends to begin after the war.

In the past years Vinnie has spent his summers working at a leading brewing company in Newark and was proud of the fact that he didnt' earn his money by back breaking duties, but by a position in the testing labs.

SPORTS STAFF

There will be an important meeting of the Sports Staff Thursday afternoon at 1:00 P. M. in the VILLANOVAN office.

shown by the players throughout the campaign. Although the Wildcats lost half their games, everyone present seemed to agree that the explosive quality of the team, their ability to score from any position at any time, made them potential winners until the final whistle of every game.

The Loyalty Award, presented each year to the alumnus who has done the most outstanding work during the year, was bestowed upon Edward J. Burke, of the class of 1925, Burke, City Chemist for Philadelphia, was instrumental in producing the evidence in the arsenic murder cases during the past year.

George Smith, who was elected captain for the year, presented Jim Tadley with a traveling bag as a token of the team's appreciation for his work as trainer during the grid season.

used to play pro ball with the Jersey City Reds, and Pfc. Jim Crowe of Mississippi State College, and others who made a name for themselves in the high school ranks.

Possess Height

Possessing great height, the All-Soldier outfit promises to be a tough opponent for the comparatively small 'Cats. Sadowsky stands 6' 5", Hassmuller 6' 4", and they both tip the scales at 225, while Bloom, the tallest man on the squad is 6' 6" tall, and weighs 209 lbs.

Starting Lineup

Starting for the Wildcats will probably be Boby Kelty, Bill Wood, Joe Lord, Chuck Drizen, and Major McDonnell, with Lou Reynolds, and freshmen Ray Kodish, Frank Frascella, Don Byrnes and Jim Kelly, certain of seeing their share of the action.

CENTENNIAL YEAR
Vol. 15—No. 18 N. A. S. Z-660 VILLANOVA COLLEGE, VILLANOVA, PA. TUESDAY, DECEMBER 15, 1942

18 Yr. Olds Must Register In Draft

Students Ordered To Enroll By Dec.31; Residents To Register In Bryn Mawr

All Villanova students who will have reached their eighteenth birthday by December 31 and have not yet registered for Selective Service must do so this month, according to the provisions of the recently amended Selected Service Act.

Of particular importance to the resident students is the fact that the registration will not be held at the college. These students will register at Local Board No. 4, Lancaster and Bryn Mawr Avenues, Bryn Mawr, Pa. The office of the Board is located in the Community Center which is next to the Bryn Mawr Library.

REGISTRATION DATA

DATES: Dec. 11 to 17 for those born on or after July 1, 1924 but not after August 31, 1924.

Dec. 18 to 24 for those born on or after Sept. 1, 1924 but not after Oct. 31, 1924.

Dec. 26 to 31 for those born on or after Nov. 1, 1924, but not after Dec. 31, 1924.

PLACE: Community Center at Lancaster and Bryn Mawr Avenues, Bryn Mawr which is the office of Local Board No. 4.

TIME: Between the hours of 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. on the given days.

Members of Reserves Exempt

Students who have completed their enlistment in any branch of the armed forces are not required to register for Selective Service. Members of the various reserve groups, since they are already serving in the war effort are not under its jurisdiction.

For the duration of the war, students who become eighteen years of age on or after January 1, 1943 are obliged to register on their eighteenth birthday unless that day falls on a Sunday or a legal holiday, in which case they must register on the following day.

Navy Bestows Sword On Former Student As Token Of Ability

One of the six midshipmen chosen from 1,100 classmates to receive swords as tokens of outstanding ability and devotion to duty was John J. Costello, a Villanova alumnus of the class of 1939 at the recent graduation of the New York Naval Reserve. He is a resident of Teaneck, N. J.

The awards were conferred during the ceremony held at the New York Yacht Club. High ranking officers included Rear Admiral E. J. Marquart, Commandant of the Third Naval District, Rear Admiral Lamar R. Leahy, retired, and Commander H. A. Mallett of the British Royal Navy, made the awards and gave short congratulatory speeches.

Midshipman Costello, a graduate of the Commerce and Finance School of Villanova, recently completed a law course at Columbia University. While an undergraduate student at Villanova, he was an honor student and was also active in extra-curricular activities.

New Additions Named To Dinner Committee

In preparation for the senior dinner-dance which will be held on Jan. 16, the day after the Centennial Ball, many new members were added to the various committees to assist John J. McFadden and Vincent M. Quinn, co-chairmen of the affair. Those chosen are:

Spanish Club Host At Joint Session

The Spanish Club of Villanova sponsored its first social function of the year last Friday evening in the auditorium of the Commerce and Finance Building. A varied and interesting program was presented to an audience that numbered nearly one hundred, and was composed of students of Bryn Mawr, Rosemont, Immaculata and Chestnut Hill colleges.

The guest of honor was Senor E. Albela, Spanish consul stationed in Philadelphia, who spoke briefly about the value and benefits of such an organization as a Spanish club in American colleges.

Discusses Latin America

Rev. Edward J. McCarthy, O. S. A., professor of Latin American History at Villanova, delivered an interesting speech that had for its topic the necessity of an understanding and appreciation of the Spanish language for a complete knowledge of Latin American problems.

The moderator of the Spanish Club, Rev. Lorenzo Lozano, O. S. A., spoke briefly in Spanish. In his talk he showed the influences of Spanish culture in America and all of the Latin American countries.

As a highlight of the evening, Spanish songs were sung by the members of the Spanish Club. Miss Juanita Ripoll, a student of Chestnut Hill College, sang two classical numbers.

After refreshments had been served, a Spanish picture, "Sesenta Segundos de Vida," was shown.

CORRECTION

Instead of as previously announced, the annual initiation and smoker of the Delta Pi Epsilon, C. & F. fraternity, will take place tonight at 7:00 P. M. in the C. & F. auditorium.

Nativity

By THOMAS McFARLAND

Cool blows the wind and sweeps
the skies cold,
Brushing into view a bright, white star
That splashes silver spangles on the purple wold
And scatters shimmered sparklings afar.

Brute breath steams and warms
the wet hay;
Shepherds scuffle softly on the stable floor,
See the tiny toes wriggle and the small hands play
And kneel in raptured rev'rence to adore;

For the lights that spark the stars are in His infant eyes
And the splendor of the suns in His small face;
Now in a simple Virgin's shawl the great God lies
And showers sleeping worlds with His Grace.

Posts Of Many Former Students Now Disclosed

Word has been received notifying the college authorities of the whereabouts of a number of former Villanova students now serving in the armed forces.

Among these are: Sgt. Edmond C. Malhame, '35 who is in Ireland, and Lt. Walter M. Lennon, '33 of the Quartermaster Corps, who is stationed at the headquarters of the Transportation Service at Camp Stoneman, California. Both of these men are in the army.

Those in the Marines who are stationed at the Sea School Detachment, Santiago, California, include Lieutenants Andrew Melton, '42, Arthur Sommers, '41, Lester Casemen, ex-'42, William Howlett, '42, and P. F. C. John Gallagher, '42.

Joseph C. McNamara, '40 is stationed at the Reserve Cadet School of the Coast Guard at Groton Training Station, in Connecticut.

Faculty To Attend Various Meetings

Beginning today and continuing through the holidays, members of the Villanova faculty will attend various meetings.

Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, will be a speaker at the annual meeting of the Eastern Region Secondary School Department of National Catholic Education to be held today and tomorrow.

There will be a meeting in Washington during the holiday season of the two Augustinian Provinces in which problems pertaining to the Augustinian schools will be discussed.

During the same period Rev. Edward J. McCarthy, O. S. A., and Dr. Harold F. Hartman will attend historical meetings also in Washington.

Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O. S. A., will attend meetings of the American Catholic Sociological Association, at which he will speak, and of the American Sociological Association.

On Dec. 7 and 8, Fr. Stanford attended a meeting of the Committee on Governmental and Educational Finance at the Hotel Commodore in New York. He likewise was present at a meeting of the Committee on Post War Problems of the Association of American Colleges on Dec. 5.

Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O. S. A., attended a meeting on Dec. 10 of the Executive Committee of the Catholice Education Association of Pennsylvania, of which he is treasurer.

LAST '42 ISSUE

With this issue, publication of the VILLANOVAN is suspended until after the Christmas holidays. The next edition will appear on Jan. 12.

Villanova Grad Receives Award

Passanante Awarded Order Of The Purple Heart For Outstanding Bravery in Manilla

Second Lieutenant Bartholomew Passanante, graduate of Villanova College, has been awarded the Order of the Purple Heart for, as the War Department announced in presenting it, "wounds received in meritorious action."

Passanante, an officer of the United States Army Air Corps, was seriously wounded in action in the Philippines ten hours after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, Dec. 7, 1941. Until the time of his injury he was stationed at Nicholas Field, Manila. Following the battle, in which he suffered the loss of a leg, he was sent first to Australia for treatment, and later recalled to the United States.

LT. BERT PASSANANTE

On Bond Tour

Since his return to the United States, Lt. Passanante has traveled all over the country, presiding at numerous war bond rallies. During these travels he has been hailed at all gatherings as one of the first heroes to emerge from this war. In furthering this cause he has made many public appearances in Philadelphia and surrounding countries.

Passanante was a member of the class of 1939, and received a degree from the science school. Following his graduation from Villanova, he enrolled in the University of St. Louis before enlisting in the Army Air Corps.

The Order of the Purple Heart, as received by Passanante, is an award given to deserving members of the armed forces who have made themselves outstanding by their bravery outside of the regular call of duty.

Beta Gamma To Make Debate Tour

Beta Gamma, the varsity debating society, having completed two debates last week, will engage in a series of debates on other campii in New Jersey and New York. On Thursday, four representatives, Wilfrid Gagen, Carl Yeager, president and secretary respectively of Beta Gamma, along with Howard Connelly and Louis DeSimone will begin the tour.

On Thursday evening, they will argue the India Question at Rutgers University and on Friday, Rider College and New York University will be engaged on the World Federation question. The trip will be concluded on Saturday night with a debate on the same question with the Good Counsel College for Women.

Last Tuesday evening Frank Cahill, George Baher, and Thomas Sullivan defended the affirmative of the Federal Union proposition against a team from Rutgers University. Two nights later, Wilfrid Gagen, Lawrence Sullivan, and Thomas Sullivan upheld the negative of the same question against Lafayette College. Both debates were non-decision.

The Forensic League debate between St. Joseph's College and La Salle College held at Villanova last Thursday evening was won by La Salle.

A King Was Born

FROM one of the latest popular tunes we are all "dreaming of a white Christmas." We are all looking forward to a Christmas vacation, the exchange of gifts, the posting of greeting cards, etc. For indeed Christmas is a great and universal feast. It is the birthday of the Christ-Child.

Two thousand years ago three kings traveled long distances to see a new born child, to honor him with precious gifts and to adore him. Since then, generation after generation has adored this same child. This year the feast will be much the same as before, but to millions who are fighting a war there will be fewer gifts exchanged and more praise given to God.

It generally takes a great player or players to make a team known. It is taking a great war with its hardships and sorrows to remind us that the all important side of Christmas is spiritual.

Soldier Johnny may have to spend December twenty-fifth behind a barrier on a searing desert, or in the thick foliage of a steaming jungle, or at an observation post in sub-zero weather. He will still remember the joys of receiving gifts and stories he heard as a child. Stories of Christmas morn and shepherds. He will need consolation and will turn, as he has often turned before in trying times, to his trust in God. This is all the consolation he needs. It has made him happy in the past and will do so now.

Material things keep life in the body and spiritual things keep life in the soul. The first Christmas gave life to a body and a soul. This Christmas remember the soul as well as the body.

—T. C. M.

New Law Advantages Cited

WE are in full agreement with the executive order of the President abolishing enlistments, discharging soldiers who are over thirty-eight years of age, and the naming of Paul V. McNutt as head of the whole manpower program, including selective service.

Of the many advantages that accrue from this decree, probably the most important is that there is now one director charged with the management of the whole manpower problem, including the military, navy, industry, and agriculture. No longer will there be the struggle for control of this program between Mr. McNutt and General Lewis B. Hershey, the director of selective service. An end will be put to the bickerings which characterized their fight over which men were put in the armed services or deferred for war work.

The second most important advantage is the release of men over thirty-eight from the armed forces, provided that they can prove that their discharge would further the prosecution of the war effort. This will enable thousands of skilled workmen, previously inducted, to return to civilian life and do work in which the younger generation has not had sufficient experience. It will also release many of the younger men for active military duty, where youthful drive and zest are an enormous asset.

This termination of the privilege of enlistment will also prevent highly skilled and necessary workers from quitting their posts to enter the armed forces.

This executive order may be said to lessen the freedom of the individual to do as he pleases, but in this instance, at least, the citizen's loss is the country's gain.

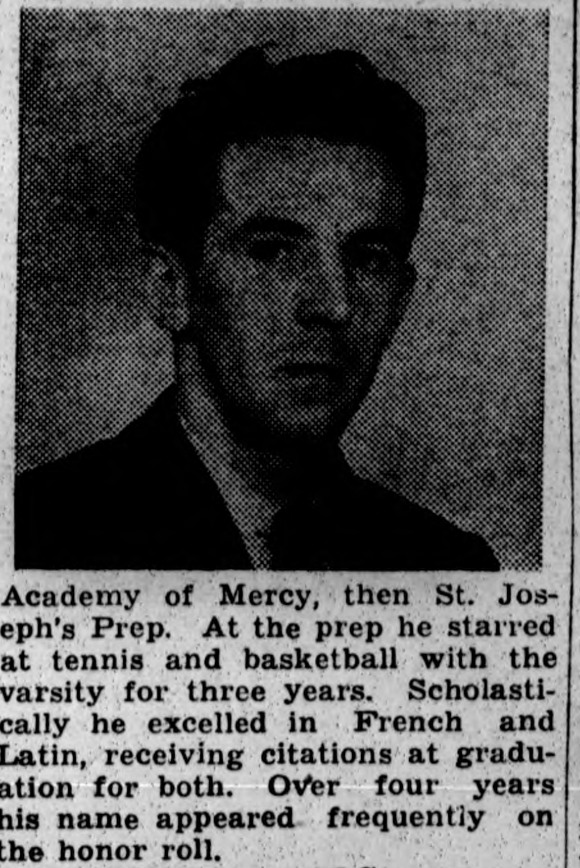
Meet The Boys:

Two Jims Are Brought To You This Week, For Better Men You Need Not Seek

By TOM GOWEN

THIS week's sixty-four dollar question is, "Who is the vice-president of the senior class?" He is Jim Meehan, the highly unpublicized steering committee of the class. Quietly and efficiently he lines up the students to support the activities of the senior-year men. Besides this post, he holds the presidency of the Delta Pi Epsilon, commerce school fraternity.

Jim's background goes back to June 6, 1921. He is a native Philadelphian and has attended the Academy of Mercy, then St. Joseph's Prep. At the prep he starred at tennis and basketball with the varsity for three years. Scholastically he excelled in French and Latin, receiving citations at graduation for both. Over four years his name appeared frequently on the honor roll.



Chosen as All-Star

In the fall of 1939 he came to Villanova's Commerce and Finance school as a pre-law student. In his sophomore year he served on the Soph Cotillon and fraternity dance committees. As a junior he was chosen vice-chairman of the Junior Prom, was active with the D. P. E. and History Seminar. In both years he belonged to the Spanish Club.

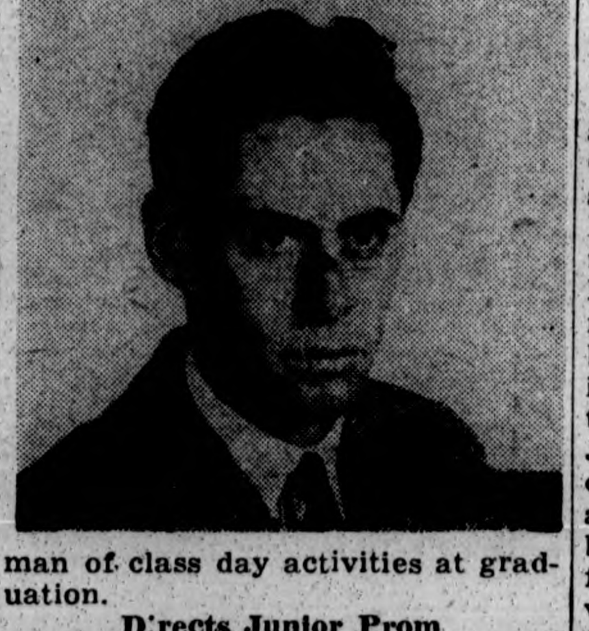
Jim is well known as a basketball man in the intra-mural league. For four years he has played with the Business school day-hops. So well has he played that his name appeared on the All-Star team for his sophomore and junior years and last season he was the league's leading scorer.

Guns Are A Hobby

Since his fifteenth year, Jim has attended Camp South Casco in Maine, and for the last few years has conducted target practice at the camp. Guns are a hobby with Jim as are pipes. He is a demon collector of the new, the old, and the odd models.

FROM Hartford on the seventh day of July, 1920, came the announcement that a bouncing baby insurance boy was born to the Walsh's of Connecticut. The heir to the Walsh tradition was named James. Jim's father and his father before him sold insurance to the people of New England. Now Jim intends to be the third generation of Walsh's to sell insurance in New England.

He attended the East School and the William Hall High School. After three years at William Hall, he went to Kingswood Preparatory School for one year. At both schools he was an outstanding athlete, starring in football, track and ice hockey with the varsity teams. He was vice-president of the class, chairman of the junior prom and chairman of class day activities at graduation.



Directs Junior Prom

From Kingswood Prep, Jim came to Villanova in the Fall of 1939. He entered the Commerce and Finance school as a major in Finance. He has been outstanding in his extra-curricular activities. He has been successively secretary and president of Father Lazano's Spanish Club, and has held the chairmanships of the Sophomore Cotillon and Junior Prom.

When summer rolls around Jim returns to Connecticut and his favorite hobby-sailing on New England waters. Twice he has taken his boat to Portland, Maine to enter regattas. Twice he has returned to Connecticut with trophies for his efforts. From outdoor sports to indoor relaxation is from boats to books. Ranking as his favorite reading are historical and tragical novels. Jim finds great pleasure in reading and re-reading the various plays of W. Shakespeare.

After graduation in June Jim goes into active service with the Marine Corps.

With A Tinge of the Christmas Spirit We Bring You an Assortment of College Jokes

WITH the holidays a little more than a week away, Christmas spirit seems to be the topic of conversation. Everyone's praying that Mr. Stimson will not make an announcement concerning the E. R. C. until the long awaited and much deserved holidays get underway. The residents are dying to get home and get into civilian clothes (John Sutton please note).

Under the Mistletoe:

I was charmed by the look in her eye,
By her nightengale voice I was smitten,
And her beautiful figure—Oh my!
By her glorious tongue I was bitten.
She is really the charmingest girl, sir,
In her arms any man would find bliss, sir;
But what struck me most about her
Was her hand when I started to kiss her.

You Can't Win:

With today the last day for enlistments in the reserves, many of us are chirping the following:

For the Army—too tall
For the Navy—poor sight
For the Marines—too small
For the Draft Board—just right!

Washington: First in war, first in peace, and last place in the world to find a hotel room.

* * *

When the residents go home it isn't a least bit doubtful that this piece of conversation will be heard:

Mother: "What's your roommate like?"

Student: "Everything I have."

Humorous History:

The Skidmore News revealed these all too true facts concerning the cycle of a joke.

Birth: A freshman thinks it up and laughs aloud, waking up the seniors in the back row.

Age, five minutes: The freshman tells it to a senior, who laughs but says he has heard it before.

Age, one day: The senior turns it in to the school magazine as his own.

Age, two days: The editor thinks it's terrible.

Age, ten days. The editor has to fill space in the magazine, so it is printed.

Age, one month: Twenty-seven other school publications reprint it.

Age, ten years: Ninety-four radio comedians "discover" it simultaneously, and tell it, accompanied by howls of laughter from the boys in the orchestra (at $5 per howl).

Age, one hundred years. School teachers start telling it to their classes.

Christmas comes but once a year
Of next semester, we have no fear.
So let's all give a rousing cheer
For after Christmas we won't be here.

This being the last issue before Christmas, we would like to respectfully dedicate the above little ditty to the Army Reserve.

SAP:

All good things come in pairs, but in this case its triplets. "Big" John Newell and Betty Kranshaw will announce their engagement on Christmas as will Paul Gallagher and Betty Lynch from Immaculata. Fred Faas will also become betrothed to Jane Zipf of Bloomfield, N. J. on the twenty-ninth of this month. . .Jimmy Hagan, a member of the Navy V-4 reserve, which is (CENSORED), was called to active duty last week. Good luck Jim. . .Pete Hin really had a close call with the Army. He received a notice to report last Thursday to be sworn in and be ready to leave for camp. It seem his application was placed in the regular army files instead of the reserve files. As a result the auction of his personal effects, originally scheduled for Friday, has been postponed indefinitely. . .George "V-5" McElwee journeyed to Immaculata last Wednesday afternoon to see Mary Virginia (that's one girl). Much to his chagrin he learned that dancing was not permitted in the "Green Room." Incidentally George, does Marie know about this?

"Joe has a glass eye."
"Did he tell you about it?"
"No, it just came out during the conversation."

NEEDLES:

Roy "Sugar Daddy" Ericson was seen at the basketball game last Thursday buying several femmes ice cream. . .One of the main "distractions" at the game was "Terry and the Pirates." Tell us, Bill Walsh, how do you rate that big "Hu-llo" . . . Don Cryor was there also explaining the intricacies of the game to Mary, a petite brunette. . .Frank Quinn and Tom Dunleavey can't seem to make up their minds about Lucelle. May we suggest you toss a coin, fellows?. . . Bill Meehan is once more wearing his own ring after a brief sojourn with Ann from Chestnut Hill. Jim Bonner is dealing in and is apparently taking up where Bill left off . . .The love-life of Herb Sentner has finally come to light. We learned that he corresponds regularly with Gloria from Reading. Austin "Where's My Check" Gavin was seen enjoying the concert last weekend accompanied by Nancy, the reason for his new field of endeavor at Chestnut Hill.

Customer (in drug store on Sunday morning): "Please give me change for a dime."

Druggist: "Here you are. I hope you enjoy the sermon."

TINSEL:

Jimmie Johnson is trying to board the Helen Kane (Immaculata) bandwagon despite the fact that La Salles' Harry is currently in the driver's seat. . .Ray Hill has been spending most of his time lately with Jannie Sanders over Garret Hill (no relation) way. In fact he waits for the bus every afternoon just to see her home. . Joe Barry has really fallen overboard for Joan from the Mount. We think Sunday afternoon walks are nice too, Joe . . .John DiCarlo completed a perfect inside loop on the icey sidewalk the other day. If he's not careful he'll be dreaming of a "White Christmas"—in bandages. . . .What love will do to the best of them: "Beel" Caberara is on a diet. Could it be that the Washington blonde had handed him an ultimatum? Tom Delehanty, Angelo Macchia and Al DeBlois had the nerve to invade the Temple Senior Ball last Saturday night but according to them they really had an excellent time.

That's all for this year, gates' see you next year. Until the MERRY CHRISTMAS AND A HAPPY NEW YEAR.

Sportorial

By Jacques Mauch

LAST week we discoursed on how Villanova is meeting the transportation problem in regard to the games preliminary to the varsity court contests. But even the varsity five and, in fact, most college basketball teams are encountering pressing problems over their travel schedules for the season.

Much talk has been circulating among athletic authorities concerning this situation and the ODT has been issuing orders that travel be limited as much as possible. ODT officials intimate that teams will not only have to play closer to home this year but that next season only games that can be played within a city and its suburban area will be permitted by government authorities.

There are five colleges and universities in Philadelphia itself and two others, besides Villanova, in the immediate rural district. If each team scheduled a home and home series with all the others a major portion of their schedule could easily be filled.

Games between the five leading city teams, Penn, Temple, La Salle, St. Joseph's, and Villanova would be big attractions to basketball fans in this vicinity and would provide plenty of competitive action. Because of the high caliber of its teams and the rabid interest of its fans Philadelphia has been noted as a basketball center of a sports-conscious nation. What could be better for promoting the game in the Quaker City than an intra-city rivalry?

Villanova used to play Temple and St. Joseph's. That was before the Ned Irish-Clair Hare regime in double-header basketball and the subsequent withdrawal of the Wildcats from that league. Villanova always has, and still is willing to meet these teams, but not in Convention Hall. Court coach Al Severance sums up the situation when he says, "We would welcome the opportunity of meeting these teams either on our own court or their home floors."

We think this season will draw the curtain on the double-header show for the duration. Most of the teams scheduled to meet the local fives are native to the South and Mid-West. Transportation conditions will not permit these teams to appear next year, and the boys in Convention Hall will not have anyone to attract the crowds..

Difficulties have already been encountered this season. Colorado,

Wildcats Win Opening Games With Ft. Dix And St. Francis Quintets

Bill Wood Leads Blue and White Five To Lopsided Victories With 34 Points; Villanova Shows Plenty Of Reserve Strength Among Frosh

By BILL WALSH

Displaying offensive strength that bodes ill for future opponents of Villanova this season, the Wildcats soundly trounced their first two rivals of the present campaign last week. The Fort Dix soldier outfit from Trenton, N. J., was the initial victim of the powerful Blue and White team, 75-55, as Messers. Meyer Bloom, Ed Sadowski, and Bob Hassmuller, former All-Americans at Temple, Seton Hall and Fordham, respectively, were held in check by the inspired Wildcats. On Saturday evening, the Red Flashes from St. Francis College at Loretto came into the Fieldhouse, fresh from an upset victory over Scranton University, only to be repulsed by the Severancemen, 56-33.

First Half Close

Thursday's contest against the Servicemen was very close throughout the entire first half, as the score seesawed back and forth continuously, with the Wildcats drawing away to a 36-32 lead as the half ended.

As play began after the rest period, the Fort Dix quintet appeared to be going places, as Bloom split the cords with two beautiful set shots within the space of half a minute. That was the closest the Trentonians came to taking the lead away from the 'Cats, however, for immediately thereafter, with Bill Wood, "Chuck Drizen, and Bob Kelty scoring regularly, Villanova drew away quickly to a commanding lead, and the Wildcats were in no danger from that point on.

Wood Stars

Wood, who scored a total of 232 points last season, lost no time in his endeavor to top that mark this winter. He dropped eight field goals and three fouls into the bucket to take scoring honors for the night with the sensational total of 19 points. Bloom was the hero of the Soldier's cause with his total of sixteen markers followed closely by Coach Sadowski's fourteen point total, and Hassmuller, who came through with 11. Kelty, who, along with Wood, is co-captain of the Main Line quint this season, tallied 14 points.

Subs Play

Saturday night's contest with St. Francis was little more than a practice tilt for the powerful Severancemen, as they scored almost at will throughout the entire first half and led 30-10, when they walked off the floor at the intermission. Wood was again going great guns, having dropped five double-deckers and

Swimming Included In P. T. Program

Villanova's physical training program, counterpart of the accelerated program, is continuing successfully and even more intensively. First initiated during the summer semester under Clipper Smith, head football coach, it has expanded during the fall until now all the coaches and many teachers are engaged in handling its many activities under which all the students are compelled to participate.

Classes Indoors

With the advent of cold weather all classes are being held in either Alumni Hall gym or the fieldhouse. Activities are a bit cramped but a suitable program has been worked out.

Al Severance, basketball coach, Doc Jacobs, Vince McNally, and Smith, grid coaches, handle the classes in the fieldhouse while many of the younger teachers take care of the exercises in Alumni Hall. Calisthenics are particularly stressed and are given before every class. Basketball games, pushball contests, etc., usually follow.

Swimming for V-1 Enlistees

All students who are enlisted in the Navy V-1 program are required to take swimming twice a week for two hours. Under the supervision of the instructors a systematized schedule has been arranged. The students will undergo a vigorous training in the water to prepare for their service in the Navy. Underwater swimming, water polo, and individual races are the chief features stressed.

Evening workouts in the gym are held for all students whose schedules do not permit them to engage in the regular afternoon classes.

NO TANK TEAM

Villanova will not have a varsity swimming team this season but a more extensive intramural tank program is expected to be organized.

High Scoring Albright Court Team Visits Field House Tomorrow Night

Lions, Led by Dick Shollenberger, Out to Repeat Last Year's Victory Over Severancemen; Loyola At Baltimore Friday; Siena Game Postponed Until Feb. 12th

Villanova will engage in two basketball contests before calling a Yuletide furlough until the 2d of January. Tomorrow night in the Fieldhouse the Wildcats meet Albright College of Reading. Friday night in Baltimore they take on Loyola of that city.

The Severancemen will be seeking revenge for the defeat handed them last year by Albright. The Lions have one of the highest scoring clubs in the state, having hit the 1000-point total for the past two years. With most of last year's stars back for another season, Neal Harris' Red and White team is a strong contender for the State title they held two years ago. Dick Shollenberger, Ken Hopkins, Bob Rhoads, and Dewey Boltz are the mainstays of the squad, while capable replacements have been gleaned from last year's successful frosh team. Sophomores to see action this year are Ross Guensch, Dick Stark, and Bill Dearden.

Frosh eligible to play this year include Gene Shollenberger, brother of Dick, the Lions' outstanding star.

Reitz, Former Villanovan

The Wildcats will try to make it three straight over the Greyhounds of Loyola when they meet Friday night. Coached by Emil "Lefty" Reitz, one time Villanova basketball and baseball star, Loyola turns out one of the best teams in its district each year. The Greyhounds were Maryland State Champions two years ago. In the past, this game has been one of the hardest fought contests of the whole season. Reitz's knowledge of the Villanova system make his team a tough outfit to down.

The same five men who started for the Wildcats in their first two court engagements will probably take the floor tomorrow night. "Major" McDonnell and Chuck Drizen will be at forwards, Bob Kelty will hold down the pivot spot, and Joe Lord and Bill Wood will man the guard posts. Al Postus, and freshmen Jim Kelley, Frank Frascella, Ray Kodish, and Don Osterman will be ready for first call.

The game with Siena College, originally scheduled for Saturday night in the Fieldhouse, has been postponed until February 12 at the request of the authorities of the Loudenville, New York institution. Severe transportation difficulties prevented the Siena five from appearing.

According to present plans the team will be inactive until the New Year, when on January 2nd, they will meet Niagara University in the Fieldhouse.

Track Team Starts Work On Boards

By JIM BONNER

With the official appointment of John DiCarlo as track coach the trackmen are rounding into top form rapidly as the start of the indoor season approaches.

For the past few weeks the squad has been running over the complete cross country course. Earlier in the season it was possible to negotiate only half of the course, but with the coming of colder weather the ground has hardened up sufficiently to allow them to cover the complete course. Last week's snow ended the outdoor work.

Moved Onto Boards

A week ago yesterday the squad moved onto the boards underneath the north stands of the stadium in preparation for the first of the indoor meets in the latter part of January. Last year was the most fruitful one in quite a few years. Among the honors garnered by the Blue and White trackmen were first place in the Milrose games in New York when they romped home ahead of Boston College and Holy Cross, and a first in the Penn A. C. meet.

Negotiations are now underway with Swarthmore college to arrange a meet for sometime in January. Swarthmore boasts a quarter mile cinder track in their field house.

Large Squad

The squad is one of the largest in recent years. Among the many experienced men back are Bob O'Sullivan, Harry Keefrider, and Dutch McCarthy. These men were all mainstays of last year's strong team. John DiCarlo, Coach and Captain, will be holding down his old spot as anchor man on the mile relay quintet. Tom Kiely, who nursed an injured leg through most of '41, is back and showing up very well.

Buck Coleman cleared twelve feet his first day out this year in the pole vault. With several weeks of

Alumni Sure Of Second Half Tie; Fedigan Wins First Game In Upset

By DAVE WARD

This past week there were many surprises in the basketball league as Fedigan beat Austin, Mendel Residents lost to Alumni 54-42, and Alumni beat Austin to assure themselves of at least a tie for the second half title.

Tuesday, December 8, Mendel Residents forced Alumni to the limit before being defeated. A few minutes after the tap off the yellow quintet led 13-0. Then the Alumni first team came into the game. However, coming from behind was not so easy as the score might indicate for Englehard, who was high scorer for the evening with 19 points, managed to drop a shot almost every time the score came close. But his individual brilliance was not enough to offset the team play of the Greenies and at the end Alumni was still unbeaten.

Fedigan Beats Austin

This same night saw what was probably the biggest upset of the season as Fedigan beat Austin 34-29. Losing 17-4 at the half, Fedigan, led by Ken Breitzke, who tallied 18 points, staged a great second half rally to pull the game out of the fire. Holding Austin to 12 points while they themselves scored 30, the red clad team managed to go ahead to stay, with but a few minutes of play left.

In the only other tilt of the day the two day-hop teams clashed with the Mendel boys coming out on top 54-42. The Commercemen made it tough for the gray clad team for Jim Meehan garnered 10 field goals and two fouls to keep the C & F team in the battle all the way.

Alumni Clinches 2nd Half Title Tie

Thursday night before the varsity game, Alumni kept its unbeaten record intact by downing Austin 24-21 to clinch at least a tie for the second half title.

Play started off slowly and as both teams were unwilling to take unnecessary chances the half ended with Austin leading 10-9. Opening the second half Red McFadden widened the gap with a field goal but Jim Doras and Joe McGuiness dropped two quick shots and Lowney got a foul to put the freshmen ahead. Austin came right back on Martin's two and Cheppa's one basket to take the lead 19-16. This was cut to one point as Lowney broke away from his guard to score a lay-up. But Austin, breaking fast up the floor, caught Alumni unawares as Cheppa sank a western shot. Here it was that the green team showed its fighting spirit. With but four minutes of play remaining they scored on three successive plays, two by Savage and one by Lowney to sew up the game.

Breitzke Continues Torrid Pace

Earlier in the day Fedigan outpointed C & F, 44-26. The day hops were not in the game after the first few minutes as Breitzke's scoring rampage netted 14 points.

Saturday night the Mendel dayhops, in a preliminary game to the varsity, beat Fedigan 20-11. Holding Breitzke in check, the day hops piled up a 15-4 advantage at the half and then proceeded to take it easy for the rest of the game.

three fouls, for a total of 13 markers at this point.

The first team saw very little action in the second half, however, as the second and third fives were called upon to bear the brunt of the action in the final 15 minutes of the lopsided contest. They performed very nobly, despite the fact that the Loretto aggregation did gain nine points on the leaders in the second half.

Ostermann Good

Many future stars were uncovered in this tussle, and showed that Coach Severance has a wealth of reserves this season. Don Ostermann, former All-State high school star from Detroit, Michigan, showed up very well in the ten minutes which he saw action on Saturday night. His pivot shots were unstoppable by the opposing defensemen, and although only a first year man, he is certain to see plenty of action in future Wildcat court battles.

Wittenburg Came Cancelled

Another star in the St. Francis' contest was the sensation of the recently concluded football season, namely Al Postus. Freshmen Ray Kodish, Jim Kelly, and Frank Frascella also appear to be destined for future good work under the colors of the Blue and White.

Last night's scheduled contest with Wittenburg College, was cancelled because of transportation difficulties.

practice before the opening of the season he should be clearing this and a good bit more. Jim Rooney is running over the hurdles and whipping into shape fast.

Among the freshmen this year there are three outstanding men: Ed Fitzgerald, a member of the Catholic League Championship team from St. Thomas More High in 1941; Frank Henningkamp, who anchored the powerful Harrisburg Catholic mile relay team last season; and Bob Reagan of Asbury, New Jersey, a miler who has already done better than 4:30.

NEW RECORD?

Fans have asked whether or not the 75 points scored by the 'Cats against the Ft. Dix five last week is a fieldhouse record. Information would be appreciated.

who was to meet St. Joe's could not find adequate travel facilities and will not appear. Villanova's opponents, Wittenberg and Loyola of Chicago, cancelled games with the Wildcats because they could not get to the Main Line.

If the sport is continued next year as the majority hope it will be, the local college fives will be forced to play one another or starve for competition.

Scoring Duel

It should prove to be a scoring duel between Bill Woods and Dick Schollenberg in the Albright game tomorrow night. Schollenberg has a record of scoring 300 points a season since his freshman year which adds up to a total of over 950 points to date.

Wood so far this season has about a .550 average.

needs the wires
this Christmas!

War can't wait—not even for Christmas. Telephone lines must be kept clear for important war calls during the holidays as at all other times.

So this year, we must ask everybody not to send Christmas or New Year's greetings by Long Distance—especially to Washington and other centers of war activity.

Important war and emergency calls will, of course, be given precedence during the holiday rush. This means that other calls may be subject to long delays on certain over-crowded circuits to the South and to the West. We are sorry—but such delays may be unavoidable under present conditions.

Position On War Committee Given To Fr. Stanford

McNutt Names College President to Post on Educational Council; Will Be Advisor to War Manpower Board

Very Rev. E. V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of Villanova College, was recently appointed by Paul V. McNutt, War Manpower Commissioner as a member of the Committee of Representative Educational Leaders. The purpose of the committee is to advise the chairman of the staff of the War Manpower Commission on policies, rules and regulations for the utilization of colleges and universities in furtherance of the war effort.

At the same time, presidents of several other colleges and universities were appointed by Mr. McNutt to serve on the committee.

Offers Counsel to McNutt

In announcing the appointment of the committee, McNutt pointed out that "under the President's executive order, the chairman of the War Manpower Commission, after consultation with the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy, is authorized to prescribe rules and regulations under which instiutions of higher learnnig will be selected and utilized for special service in the armed forces.

"The new committee now meeting will provide invaluable counsel," said McNutt, "not only in developing rules and regulations, but also in determining policies to insure adequately trained specialists for war industries and essential civilian activities. Their assistance in working out procedures and regulations whereby institutions of higher education will be able to provide a flow of civilian specialists will be an all-important part of the work of this committee.

Augustinians Hold General Meeting

On Dec. 29 and 30, the annual Augustinian Educational Conference was held at St. Augustine's College at Washington, D. C. Present were instructors from Villanova College and from various high schools throughout the country. The conference was presided over by Very Rev. John T. Sheehan, O. S. A., Provincial of the Province of St. Thomas, and by Very Rev. Ruellan P. Fink, O. S. A., Provincial of the Province of Our Mother of Good Counsel; Rev. Thomas F. Gilligan, O. S. A., was chairman of the conference.

The conference began with a Solemn High Mass celebrated by Fr. Sheehan. Papers were read at the conference and discussions followed. Rev. Robert W. Whitley, O. S. A., discussed Rev. John P. Maher's, O. S. A., 'St. Augustine On War And Peace." "The Catholic School And Citizenship" by Rev. Bernard T. McConville, O. S. A., was discussed by Rev. Edwin T. Grimes, O. S. A., and "The Teaching Of Mathematics in High School During War Time" by Rev Thomas F. Walsh, O. S. A., was discussed by Rev. Kenneth J. Kennedy, O. S. A.

Rev John J. Glynn, O. S. A., reported on "The Survival Of Classical Culture" by Rev Louis A. Ronglone, O. S. A. "The High School In a Nation At War" by Rev. Frederick J. Winn, O. S. A., was discussed by Rev. James M. Hurley, O. S. A.; Rev. Edward J. McCarthy, O. S. A., discoursed on "The College In a Nation At War" by Rev. Francis X. Boyle, O. S. A.

The conference was concluded with Solemn Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament given by Fr. Fink.

Dinner Dance At Ritz-Carlton On Saturday Night

Philadelphia's palatial Ritz-Carlton Hotel will be host on the evening of Saturday, January 16, to the Villanova seniors and their dates who attend this year's senior Dinner-Dance. John McFadden and Vincent Quinn, co-chairmen of the dinner-dance, have announced that those present will dance to the music of Freddy Herman and his orchestra, well known in Philadelphia and suburban social circles for their pleasing and novel arrangements of hit tunes.

Believing that a well known local band, valuable favors for the seniors' dates and an excellent cuisine provide the perfect combination for the 'perfect' evening, the co-chairmen signed this excellent band to provide the musical entertainment.

Those attending the affair will enjoy a six-course dinner which will be served at 8 P. M., and will listen to Freddy Herman's music while the dinner is in progress. Decorations for the tables, at each of which five couples will be seated, have been eliminated because of wartime restrictions. There will be dancing in the main ballroom of the Ritz, which is located at Broad and Walnut Sts.

Tickets for the dance are now on sale at the price of $8.00. Those who have paid the preliminary assessment of $2.50 may secure their tickets with the payment of the balance which remains due.

All seniors who have not paid their assessments as yet, and who desire to attend the dinner-dance, are requested to notify the committee of their intentions in order that reservations may be provided.

Fr. Regan To Lead One-Day Retreat On Feb. 1; New Schedule

Rev. Robert E. Regan, S. T. D., O. S. A., will conduct a one-day retreat to be held in the college chapel beginning on the evening of January 31, and closing on the morning of February 2. Fr. Regan is Professor of homeletics at the Augustinian College of the Catholic University of America in Washington, D. C.

On the morning of January 31, which is graduation day, Mass will be celebrated in the chapel for the graduates, and the retreat will begin that evening. The schedule of the retreat, which will be announced later, will again be arranged for the convenience of both the resident students and the day students.

On Monday, Feb. 1, Mass will be celebrated for all the Villanova students who have died within the last year; and on Tuesday, Feb. 2, Mass will be celebrated for the parents of the students. Following Mass, there will be Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament and the Papal Blessing will be bestowed on the student-body.

There will not be a three-day retreat as in former years because of the accelerated course of studies. Instead, one-day retreats, of which this is the second, have been substituted for each semester of the Scholastic year.

Committee To Confer On Class Elections

At a meeting of the student council on Jan. 6, a committee was appointed to work out a plan for holding class elections under the accelerated program. Elections formerly have taken place in May, but with seniors graduating not only in June, but February and September, there would be vacancies in class offices under the old system that would have to be filled.

The committee will work on the problem and present its solution at the next meeting of the council on Jan. 20. Meanwhile, announced president Jacques Mauch, any student council member who has an idea that would aid the committee should not hesitate confering with him. The committee includes Jacques Mauch, John Quinn, William Sullivan, and Edward Fanelli.

Rev. John F. Burns, O. S. A., Ph.D., Dean of Arts for the past several years, received a new assignment during the Christmas vacation. He will engage in parish work in the San Diego Diocese of California.

Fr. Burns' class in History has been taken over by Rev. Edwin T. Grimes, O. S. A.

Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O. S. A., assistant to the president, will add to his other duties as college liaison officer the work of directing the Arts students.

3 Senior Editors Retire From Duty

Amicone, Mauch, Muraski Leave Staff; Walsh, Mancuso Take New Positions

With this issue the terms of three associate editors of the VILLANOVAN expire. Raymond G. Amicone, photography editor, Jacques Mauch, sports editor, and literary editor Thomas C. Muraski pass on their duties to others.

"Edward E. Mancuso, sophomore engineer, will assume the duties of photography editor, and William Walsh, C&F junior, will replace Mauch," Rev. Edward B. McKee, O. S. A., moderator, announced.

Seven additions have also been made to the VILLANOVAN staff. They are: Nicholas Albano and Samuel Ciriaco, sophomore sciencemen; Edward Grostas and Joseph Miller, engineering freshmen; John Scola, sophomore in the science school; Thomas Sullivan, freshman commerce student, and Raymond Wille, freshman engineer.

All of the retiring editors began their terms of office last January, and all are members of the senior class which will graduate in May. At the present time, Jacques Mauch is president of the Student Council and Thomas Muraski was recently retired as editor of the monthly engineering publication "The Engineer." Amicone is a member of the engineering fraternity Phi Kappa Pi.

Mancuso is also a member of Phi Kappa Pi and was Amicone's assistant while the latter served as photography editor. Walsh is a member of Delta Pi Epsilon and served as sports editor during the accelerated program last Summer. As yet no one has been named to replace Muraski.

The festivities which usually surround a change in the staff will be curtailed this year. The accelerated program has broken the yearly change in editors. Several of the other editors' terms will not expire until May. A dinner-dance celebration usually inaugurated the new officers to their posts and acted as a fitting testimonial to those retiring.

Friday Night To Feature Music Of Gray Gordon

Committee Changes Dancing Hours to 9 'Til 1 to Cope With Transportation Problem; Tickets on Sale at $5.50

SCENERY DEPICTS CENTENNIAL MOTIF

By THOMAS M. SCHUBERT

Featuring the music of Gray Gordon and his orchestra the band whose distinctive rhythms are known throughout the nation, the Student Council will present the Centennial Ball in the Field House on Friday evening, with dancing beginning at 9:00 P. M. Tickets have been on sale at $5.50 for several weeks.

Because of the difficulties of war transportation, starting time for the prom has been changed from 10:00 P. M. to 9:00 P. M. This means that the dancing will end at 1:00 A. M. instead of 2:00 A. M., so that promgoers may make better transportation connections.

Directed by Student Council

The Ball, in itself a war-time innovation at Villanova, is the major social event of the year's college calendar. Designed to replace the Junior Prom and Belle Air Ball of former years, it was placed in the hands of the Student Council—the body considered best fitted under the accelerated program to sponsor a large-scale social function.

Since it will also be the last college dance for those seniors who attended the first full-time summer session, Chairman Jacques Mauch, president of the Council, disclosed that he expects a large attendance and has endeavored to make all arrangements suitable to the occasion.

Transportation Facilities

Despite the difficulty in securing transportation at this time, all the formalities of a college prom will be preserved. Arrangements have been made with the Philadelphia and Western Railway to have their trains stop at the stadium station, and Mauch promises that in case of inclement weather facilities will be provided for get-

Cincinnati Site Of NFCCS Meeting

Thomas C. Muraski, senior chemical engineer, and Robert White, junior commerce and finance student, were the representatives from Villanova College at the Catholic Collegiate Congress held in Cincinnati, December 27-30. The Congress, composed of joint sessions of the Newman Club Federation and the National Federation of Catholic College Students, was attended by representatives of eighty colleges and universities and the total registration of delegates amounted to over five hundred.

The Most Reverend James E. Hearney, D. D., Bishop of Rochester, opened the Congress by celebrating a Pontifical Mass. The Most Reverend Samuel A. Stritch, D. D., Archbishop of Chicago, delivered the opening sermon.

Nine Points for Victory

The theme of the Congress, "Victory in War and in Peace," was subdivided into nine different points which were discussed separately in joint sessions. Each day was started with a recitation of the Mass, and the joint sessions held in the morning and afternoon were followed by separate meetings of each federation where the topic or topics just discussed were applied to the needs of the particular group. Each discussion was led by one or two student leaders and a student chairman presided over each session.

At an evening session which was open to the public, Archbishop Stritch, chairman of the Bishops committee on the Papal Peace Program, gave a summary of the letters for peace issued by His Holiness and interpreted them in the light of the American Catholic and the war.

The last session was devoted to adopting resolutions and a review of Congress as a whole. The resolutions were formed by a committee composed of representatives from both federations. They were then presented to the assembly by the chairman and voted on individually.

The delegates resolved to take

Dance Transportation

Ample transportation facilities will be available to the couples at the end of the Centennial Ball on Jan. 15. The Student Council has made arrangements with the Aronimink Bus Company, the Pennsylvania Railroad, and the Philadelphia and Western Railway to handle those affected by transportation difficulties.

Aronimink buses are scheduled to stop at the Field House at 12:01, 12:31, and 1:01 A. M. The P. & W. will stop at the Field House station at 1:15, 1:30, and 2:15 A. M.

Those traveling by means of the Pennsylvania Railroad will be accommodated at 1:30 A. M. when the "Pittsburgh Flyer" will accept passengers at Villanova station. Then the train will not stop until it arrives in Philadelphia.

The Student Council assures those going to the Ball that every available means of transportation has been considered.

Ruling On Draft Affects Students

According to an announcement issued by the War Manpower Commission, vigorous action will be taken against all draft delinquents after Feb. 1 by Selective Service officials and the Department of Justice.

The new ruling requires possession at all times of both registration and classification cards. "This measure was established," Selective Service officials stated, "because a small number of persons are known to be either wilful or negligent in keeping in touch with their local boards."

In order that each student will comply fully with the new requirements, National Selective headquarters has decreed the following: "All students that are subject to registration should be registered and have their registration certificates in their possession. If a student belongs to an age group required to register as long as six months ago, he must have his classification card as well as his registration card in his possession, by not later than Feb. 1."

Anyone that has received a classification card and has lost it, should notify the local draft board and request a duplicate. Failure to observe the new ruling will bring about drastic action, FBI officials said.

Students who have reached the age of eighteen since Dec. 31 must register on their birthday at their local board. Resident students are reminded that the board for Villanova College is located at Lancaster and Bryn Mawr Aves., Bryn Mawr. Upon completion of registration boys are urged to notify Paetrus F. Banmiller, Registrar.

Remarkable Wartime Guidance

DURING the Christmas vacation, Villanova students were surprised to find the great amount of confusion and lack of information on such vital concerns as Selective Service and Military Programs which existed in the minds of so many students from other institutions.

It must be borne in mind that the remarkable guidance which we have been receiving since the present crisis began, is not something which just happens. Wartime letters to our parents, personal guidance in our personal problems, letters and phone calls to our draft boards, up-to-date and reliable information on Selective Service and Military Programs in notices on bulletin boards, etc., demand a great deal of time, energy and attention.

We are most grateful to Father Stanford, our president, for this remarkable service in guidance. Time and again, because of the important positions he holds, he has been able to supply us with important information which, in many instances, is more up-to-date than the information received from draft boards.

Through the office of the president, specialized programs in military service under the direction of Mr. Paetrus Banmiller, and Military Programs under the direction of Father McQuade have been provided. We are grateful to both of these men for the amount of time, attention, and patience which they have given to our individual problems.

Catholics and a New Era

BESIDES winning this war we must win a just and lasting peace after the war. This has been said in so many words by quite a few eminent leaders. It may be added that we Catholics must win a just and lasting peace. This is not a rash statement that Catholics should write the peace treaty, but a statement that the peace treaty must be based on Christian principles.

This war will bring a new era. The old era affirmed the rights of individuals and nations, but in real life it neglected the reciprocal duties of human brotherhood and created gross injustices, unrestricted capitalism, nationalism, and economic and political imperialism. The old era is "folding up"; it did not work out.

This new era is the one in which we will have to live and in which we want a just and lasting peace. To form this into a right era we must integrate the dignity, rights, brotherhood, and duties of persons and nations.

The part Catholics should play is leading in the creation of this new era by not only believing in, but knowing thoroughly and living the Christian faith. We have every opportunity because we have access to Christ and the Church, the history of the Church, and the guiding teachings of the Church.

The Christian faith is open to everybody, but the Catholic college student, because of his position, has a greater responsibility and obligation with regards to the peace. The Catholic student must learn Catholic social teachings, facts about past and contemporary life, how to work with other people and to guide one's course between slavery and anarchic freedom because that is the way to a right new era. The Catholic student must then apply this to his personal life and act to convince others, not only on the campus as a student, but in the world as a Catholic lay leader.

FACULTY COMMENTS

A Vanishing American

By FR. GAVIGAN

ALL Villanova students are old enough to remember a vastly over-rated figure of more than a decade ago. He was a figure well portrayed on comic strips—perhaps the place best suited to his mentality. Usually he had a skull cap, ukelele, 'collegiate width' trouser-cuffs, and a rather vacuous look on his face. His interests were few but very definite: proms, varsity matches, moonlight excursions, weekends with his chum's family.

Parental Reembercements

He lived on college campuses. 'Lived' is perhaps the best word. Most of his meals were taken there at any rate; his bed (used chiefly in the early morning or afternoon) was located there; and—oh, yes! he attended recitations when he was not busy with more important affairs such as sleeping off a busy night-before.

His letters home usually contained brief but earnest appeals for money. After all, a fellow needed a little spending money in college! How else could his nocturnal lunches, prom tickets, and picture-shows be continued? Perhaps he even worked hard during the summer to help finance another year or so in college. It was so much fun that it was worth it!

In the Minority

Do you recall the type? Or the name usually given to such inhabitants of colleges as distinct from honest-to-goodness college students who took their work seriously? Yes, you have it: Joe College was his name.

Do not confuse these statements. I am not condemning en masse all or nearly all our college students of the recent past. I am merely referring to one type among them, and I sincerely hope that their number was far smaller than some fear. At any rate, there certainly were enough to make plenty of shrewd Americans suspect that college was looked upon by many of its inmates as a convenient place to have a rare good time without any parental supervision to spoil the fun.

Today's College Student

Now turn to the year 1943. God in His wisdom has allowed mankind to embroil itself in a gigantic war that is shaking the souls of men to their very depths. Our beloved nation is at death grips with a foe that definitely means business. The youths of the enemy, trained in the rigorous discipline of the totalitarian state, have grimly girded themselves for a fierce contest. On our side hundrdes of thousands of the flower of our young manhood have answered their country's call to arms. Eight former students of our Alma Mater have already gone to eternity from the ranks of our armed forces. Our graduates of the past few years have hastened to their places among our nation's defenders. Why? To make the world 'safe' for Joe College and his ilk? Or was it rather to win for themselves and their serious-minded countrymen the blessings of peace to be turned to better account than Joe could have ever made it?

His Obligations

In every man's college throughout the land today, students are wondering what is to become of them. With good reason. The needs of wartime may produce unimagined changes in our educational programs. But one thing is crystal clear! While the men of our armed forces are preparing to give their lives if need be in this awful hour, college men who are fortunate enough to be in school have a grave obligation to make the most of their priceless opportunity that is denied to so many others.

Joe College could not thrive in such an atmosphere and under such pressure. No longer can he return home and brag to admiring adolescents about the courses he flunked and the classes he cut. Slowly and inexorably the type has been forced to disappear.

Villanova men naturally don't want to be in the sad company of Joe College. Villanova therefore depends on her sons to do their duty in these trying times and to take seriously their educational opportunities so recklessly thrown away in the past by Joe College and his frat brothers.

Invest In Victory

Our boys can take the war to the enemy, if we back them up with ships, tanks and guns! But that takes money!

Help our boys on the fighting fronts wherever they may be! Buy War Bonds and Stamps as an investment for yourself and your country.

Barter by Binder

WITH the dance coming up this Friday, the minds of everyone around Villanova parts are engrossed in the problems of transportation. Several of the boys are thinking seriously of hiring horse-drawn carriages as the answer to their problems. Looking into the future of this Friday evening, we can see them now pulling up to the side of the road, stopping, and informing their dates that they must have run out of oats.

"No," came an eager voice from the inside, "but there's a McDonnell down here that's willin' to try."

Thoughts for the Week:

The difference between a bachelor and a married man is that when a bachelor walks the floor with a baby, he's dancing.

If a girl doesn't watch her figure, the boys won't.

The average man is proof enough that a woman really can take a joke.

After the recent restrictions on automobile transportation, the following lines fit the picture perfectly:

With nothing to ride in,
And no chance to roam,
It ain't hard deciding
There's no place like home.

This is the first issue of the new year, and from confidential sources, The Taper, to be exact the rubber administrator William M. Jeffers, didn't see the old year out. Quote Mr. Jeffers: "Why stay up half the night to see an old one out when I see thousands of Good Years go out every day?"

Labor Trouble:

I had twelve bottles of whiskey in the cellar and my wife told me to empty the contents of each and every bottle down the sink—or else. So I said I would proceed with the unpleasant task.

I withdrew the cork from the first bottle and poured the contents down the sink with the exception of one glass, which I drank. I extracted the cork from the second bottle and did likewise, with the exception of one glass, which I drank. I then withdrew the cork from the third bottle and poured the whiskey down the sink, with the exception of one glass, which I drank.

I pulled the cork from the fourth sink and poured the bottle down the glass, which I drank. I pulled the bottle from the sink of the next and drank one sink of it and threw the rest down the glass. I pulled the sink out of the next glass, bottled the drink and drank the pour.

When I had everything emptied I steadied the house with one hand, counted the bottles, corks, glasses, and sinks with the other, which were twenty-nine. As the house came by I counted them again. I finally had all the houses and bottles and corks and glasses and sinks counted except one house and one bottle, which I drank.

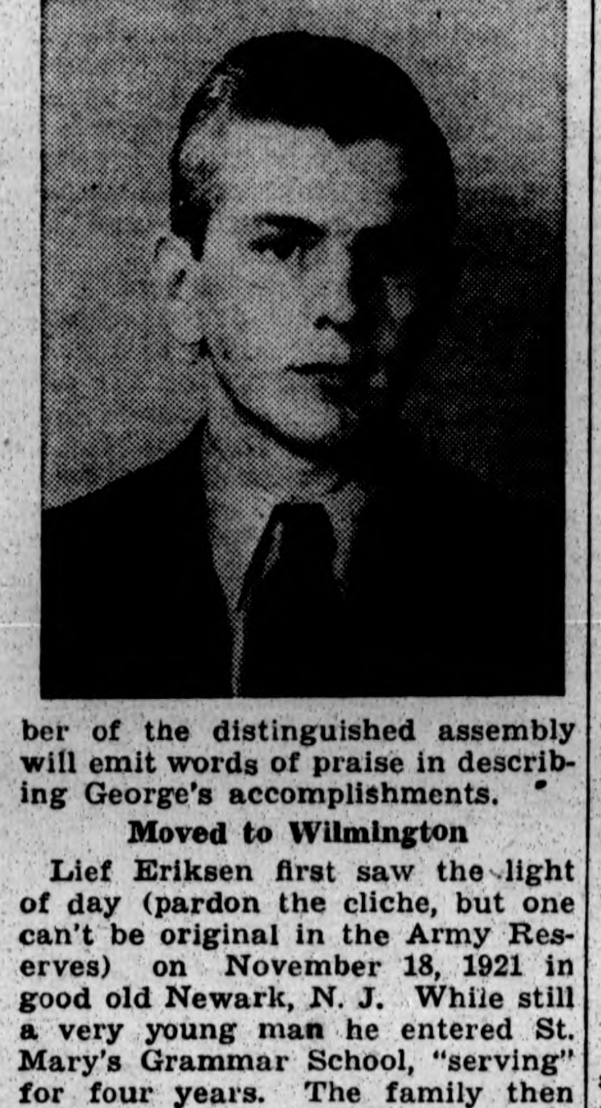
Meet The Boys: To Rid The World Of All Its Woes, George And Joe Would Be Medicoes

By LOU De SIMONE

IF ever you seek information about a prominent Fediganite—or two, just rush up to the third floor of that remarkable hall, and force your body through a door marked 325. This happens to be the "private" boudoir of two illustrious senior gentlemen, "Whitey" Kempf and Tony Di Benedetto They are the proprietors of the renowned "Mayors Room," the respectable hangout of all well-known Fedigan men. As was to be expected, we cornered our quarry here.

Seated next to the radio in this room, which had all the appearances of the "Bronx Limited," we spied George Norton Eriksen among the celebrities. What has George accomplished in his short life to be permitted to rest his feet atop the lukewarm radiator adorning the "Mayors Room"?-Any member of the distinguished assembly will emit words of praise in describing George's accomplishments.



Moved to Wilmington

Lief Eriksen first saw the light of day (pardon the cliche, but one can't be original in the Army Reserves) on November 18, 1921 in good old Newark, N. J. While still a very young man he entered St. Mary's Grammar School, "serving" for four years. The family then migrated to Wilmington, Del., George's present place of abode, and Lief scampered off to complete his elementary education at Christ Our King school. Here he won the coveted John Rascob Scholarship to Salesianum Catholic High.

In high school George served as editor of the "Sphinx," the school newspaper, and he was also a member of the debating club, chemistry club, and intramural sports organizations. At graduation he received awards for history and English.

Named to Committee

In September 1939, Lief matriculated at Villanova, enrolling in the science school as a pre-med. His extracurricular urge caused him to join numerous organizations, including the band, symphonic band, Santcuary Society, Holy Name, and to participate in various intramural sports. He mastered the trombone in the band. At the end of his sophomore year he journeyed to Scituate, Mass., with Fr. Stanford on a vacation trip. As a junior, Lief served on the Blazer Committee. This practice proved helpful, as on the following year he was named to the Summer Hop ticket committee and serves in this capacity for the Centennial Ball (and as the cop said to the bewildered auto driver, "This is a plug, buddy.")

Having reaped the benefits of the accelerated program, Lief will graduate this month. He plans a career in medicine, having already been accepted at Jefferson Medical College. He has received a commission as second lieutenant in the Medical Administration of the U. S. Army.

Has Many Hobbies

When we asked about Lief's hobbies, we heard: "Collects old shaving tubes," Mayor Kempf harped in; "Bakes good cakes," comptroller Di Benedetto added; "Make a little sweet please," baseball magnate Brannigan said. But lief insisted that he has more respectable hobbies, such as listening to Sammy Kaye, reading a good book, and "shooting the bull" in room 325. True to his nick name Lief likes to travel. The boys all agree on this point. Many a time they have told him to "hit the road."

Lief is very proud of the fact that he is inactive along the Main Line. The one and only is a little blonde miss, called Jean. Mr. Eriksen makes frequent trips back to Wilmington just to see her. And, by the way, you can meet them both at the Centennial Ball.

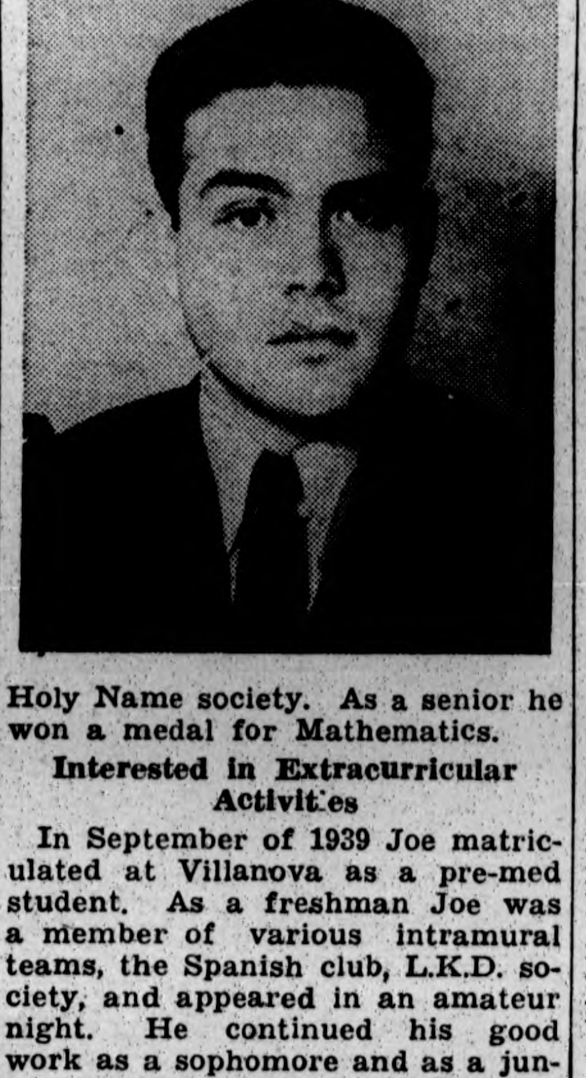
AT this point Comptrolled Di Benetto shouted, "Put your hand in that apple and have a bag—I mean—". But we did not wait till he corrected himself—we grabbed for the apple. What a sociable group! As we were enjoying a large morsel, Mayor "Whitey" was behind us with a baseball bat demanding a coin adorned by a buffalo. What a sociable group!

As we had no medium of exchange we fretfully awaited sentence but also, a kind-hearted gent sprawled on the upper bunk, saved me by paying the debt himself. This man was Jose Silva. We asked about him.

From Villanovas' Farm Club

Jose was born in Cienfuegos, Cuba, one bright rainy day. At the tender age of six he began his life of laborious study at Mountserrat Grammar School. This school was conducted by the Jesuits. Jose promptly established himself as an honor student, a title which he has never relinquished.

Upon graduation from grammar school, Jose demanded that he be sent to one of the best prep schools in the world—Malvern Prep. He journeyed to America at the ripe old age of thirteen. It did not take long for Jose to become a real American. His knowledge of English amazed the professors at Malvern and he was promptly given a good old American name—Joe. Joe lived up to his new name by participating in numerous extracurricular activities including J. V. football, manager of basketball, Science club, Sanctuary society, and Holy Name society. As a senior he won a medal for Mathematics.



Interested in Extracurricular Activities

In September of 1939 Joe matriculated at Villanova as a pre-med student. As a freshman Joe was a member of various intramural teams, the Spanish club, L.K.D. society, and appeared in an amateur night. He continued his good work as a sophomore and as a junior he was rewarded by being elected L.K.D. treasurer and being named to the Junior Prom and L.K.D. dance committees. Joe also was a stellar member of the 150 lb. football team, playing also as a senior. In this last year as a senior Joe has indeed proved himself to be a gentleman and scholar.

From Organ to Juke Box

We discovered that Joe is very proud of the fact that he has attended mass every day since he began his college career. He plans to be a doctor and intends to enter Temple University. Upon graduation this month, however, Joe plans to return to Cuba for a while, as he has not been home for over eighteen months. He spent his Christmas vacation in Trenton at the home of Angelo Macchia.

Joe is very fond of music, enjoying both classical and modern. He has a "broadcasting station" in Fedigan, which features recordings exclusively. Xavier Cugat is his favorite maestro. Joe likes to dance especially the Bolero, a native Cuban dance. He has not had much opportunity to practice here in America, but he makes up for this by doing a Fox Trot with "Bette," a fair young lass from Haverford.

Ex-Villanovan Reported Missing On Bombing Mission Over France

Through a blazing inferno of machine gun fire with two engines of his bomber coughing flame, a Villanova man parachuted to enemy-occupied France. His fate is unknown, but his courage and daring will ever be proclaimed. Lt. John R. McKee, an Artsman of the class of '41, was officially reported missing in action on Dec. 29. He was last seen bailing out, in the midst of an aerial hell, somewhere near Romilly, France. McKee piloted a bomber of a squadron which is known to have participated in more than a thousand of the daring raids which have been devastating Nazi-dominated territory.

Varsity Football Player

The pilot attended high school at Audubon High, in his home state of New Jersey, where he distinguished himself in football, baseball and basketball. While at Villanova, he was a well known member of the varsity football team, playing center for two years, and participated in many intra-mural activities. Notable among his extra-curricular achievements was the almost single-handed feat of sparking a poor Alumni Hall Amateur Night performance to a totally unexpected success. Yes, in those days Johnny was known as the "Barrington baritone of New Jersey." Here on Villanova's campus McKee displayed all the good humor and fighting spirit necessary to the youth of a nation at war.

From Villanova, McKee transferred to the University of California, upon graduation from which he immediately enlisted in the Army Air Corps, and was stationed out on the West Coast. A flight to the Hawaiian Islands failed to result in active combat, for he was summoned back to the United States, where he remained for just eight weeks before being ordered to proceed to England.

Meets King George

Approximately three months ago, McKee and several companions flew in formation over Philadelphia on an undisclosed mission from Europe. The group again passed over the city on their return to the fighting front.

In his last letter, McKee wrote that his group had been honored by a visit from King George VI of England who, he stated, was "one grand person," for he paused to say a few words and to shake the hand of each man in the squadron, despite the coating of grease which covered them. He told of English houses with grass rooftops, of the friendship of the people, and of a three day leave spent in London, where he visited Westminister Abbey, the Tower, Buckingham Palace, and all the famous historical sights. Such leaves as mentioned must have been few and far between, for week after week he soared into the thick mist of an English dawn at the controls of one of the giant gray birds which have been carrying their loads of iron-spitting destruction to be dumped on vital enemy targets.

It was from one of these raids that his bomber failed to return. All we can do is pray that Johnny got through alive. Newspaper clippings and letters from England justify the statement that McKee made as many flights over enemy countries as any American flier has since the entrance of this nation into the war. After glancing over the proud record of Lt. John R. McKee, no one could question whether or not Villanova men are doing their share in displaying self-sacrificing grit and determination which shall in time drive the Axis forces of evil to their ignominous defeat.

Editor Spends A Gay Vacation In Hospital

Surrounded by the traditional bevy of traditionally beautiful nurses, Bob Young, editor of this journal, wrote a soothing note to his worried and perspiring charges from his Rochester home, where he is recovering from an operation.

Assuring us that he enjoyed miserable health during the vacation, he made all sorts of witty observations on the making of a newspaper and confided that, while he would undoubtedly be sorely missed, he was confident that we could carry on in his absence. His chagrin at missing the usual "turkey and trimmings" on Christmas and New Year's was partially assuaged by the attention of the nurses, who, he remarks, "were the nuts."

But we'll get back at him. We had no pretty nurses — we can't even get a secretary—but when he comes back today we won't let him tell us about his operation.

Life Of Young Oriental Spared, But Suffers At Hands Of Spouse

By MERRILL LEE

"It is a great life," we are told, "if one does not weaken." This week brings us a tale of a man who lived a great life and was so far from weakening as to be often mistaken for a biblical patriarch as he ambled slowly and quietly down the centuries.

All of you devout and dutiful Buddhists have been inside the temple, it is supposed, that one finds at Ying-Lang. If you have been there, you will have seen the honorable Pung; but you undoubtedly never noticed him. At the right porch, where the "Chamber of Horrors" situates itself, stands the statue of the frowning Lord of the Underworld, who has held his uncomfortable and impossible pose now for a thousand moons, carrying his livraisons and holding in his right hand all dire instruments of pain. Close beside the deathless image bows the honorable Pung, white of hair and wrinkled of face. Seat yourself, esteemed stranger, and I will recount his history for your pleasure.

Juggling the Book

The lord of the underworld has in his ledgers the names of all living beings, as you well know. The rose that withers and dies in your lady's hair does so because the baneful lord has erased its name from his books. The deaths of all persons, low and high, of every kingdom, are caused by just such an erasure. When the fearful lord eradicates your worthy name, you shall die; when he removes my humble name, I shall die. So do and shall all men; and so all living things.

It happened, one infernal day, that the diabolical lord, in thumbing the large, soft pages of his great book, haplessly administered a slight tear on the page marked Pum-Pum. A stickler for custom, the lower lord mended his mistake with the common paper strip so familiar to Orientals. The page was beautifully mended, but one man's name was lost to view under the paper's foils. That name was Pung's.

One Deserves Another

Every day, as the base lord scanned his book, he passed over Pung's name. As a result, Pung lived on and on and on. At ninety-three his first wife died. Pung still waxed remarkably healthy and it was of interest to bystanders in the way to note the bland, young face crowned by stray wisps of white hair. Pung, seeing no reason for the contrary, married again. After fifty years this wife also died. Pung lived on, and on. At the venerable age of two hundred and ten, he took him another wife, but thi one died, too.

During the great famine Pung had in succession twenty wives. And every day his name went unnoticed by the devilish lord. Pung lived on. At seven hundred and forty-nine, Pung married his seventy-second wife. As usual, she was the most beautiful maid in the village, but it is to be noted that she constituted Pung's first mistake in seven hundred and fifty years.

Oh, but she was a shrew! She was a wretched back-biter, a destroyer of leisure, an enemy of pleasure, and as curious as the proverbial cat before its death. She pried into Pung's affairs and made of him the most harrassed man among believers. She snooped among his effects and destroyed the keepsakes Pung had of his former wives. She questioned the poor man incessantly. That he should live and continue well for such a long time was the object of her sharpest curiosity. But Pung would never tell her the reason for this happy condition, not Pung! He was too old—and too wise.

Trapped

One day, in order to fulfill his religious duties, (and secondarily to evade his wife) Pung went up to the temple. He walked solwly up to the horribel image of the underlord and bowed low. "Excellency," he said, "if I loved not life so much, I would you took me, for my wife—she is unbearable." The statue was noted for silence and upheld its reputation admirably. Turning slowly, Pung made to leave, but was struck dumb at the sight of the figure standing at the base of the porch. It was that of Pung's impish wife!

She had never railed and ranted as she did now. She called Pung every type of creature and every sort of sinner. She screamed and screeched so loudly that the lord of the underworld heard her. And the story was out. At last reports, Pung's situation is the talk of Hell.

He expects and awaits death. Daily he bows before the demon majesty imploring leniency; and daily, upon going home, he says to his seventy-second wife, "As I hang in Hell by my dishonorable thumbs, surely I shall kick thy esteemed teeth down thy honorable throat!"

—From an old Chinese myth.

News On The Boys Who Are Back At Their Desks Engaged In Their Normal Pursuits.

By ED REARDON

TAKING up the tar and eathers where we left off last year, we commence the new year with no New Year's resolutions. So beware.

After a much needed mental rest, the lads have returned to these higher halls of learning to recuperate—physically.

REFUSE:

Niel Dieghan, a member of the "House of Dieghan" of Jersey fame, holds the distinction of being the first man in history ever to be sworn into the Marines in bed. He was recovering from a recent illness . . . Vince Tigani heads for New Brunswick nearly every weekend to be in the company of Josephine. He is presently holding down the position of president . . . Bill Menseck is frantically searching for a Rosemont basketball schedule . . . Jack Callahan, one of the intra-mural court stars, put a fast one over on the boys by announcing his engagement to Peggy Watson, a "Philly" girl. Good luck, Jack . . . They'll do it every time: Vic Borjeko and two of his pals from Chester were so over-anxious to return to school that they came in for Monday classes. In fact some of the "Punchies" were working in the lab during the holidays.

Beneath the stars he told his love,
The color left her cheeks,
But on the shoulder of his coat,
It plainly showed for weeks.

FOREIGN MATTER:

Rumors have it that Big "Beel" Cabrera in unofficially engaged to Jo from Washington. We're not sure but the odds are 2 to 1 . . . Jack Coleman played host to some of the boys at a New Year's Eve party. Bill "Cherub" Craven's impersonation of 1943 was tops . . . The Blue & White Club's dance at the Bellevue, the same evening was a great success. Buzz Powers was observed with "Sonny" from St. Petersburg, Florida, a prospective WAVE. Lou Merlini was constantly leaving his date in search of other fields of endeavor . . . Trenton was the scene of another get-to-gether by Angelo Macchia. Joe Silva, alias "Jose Carioca" was undecided whether the New Year was at twelve or one o'clock. To play it safe, he bid everyone happy New Year for sixty minutes . . . Bill McDonald expects to return home to California after the thirty-first to enjoy the remaining two weeks of his civilian life. "Coo" is expected also to make the trip.

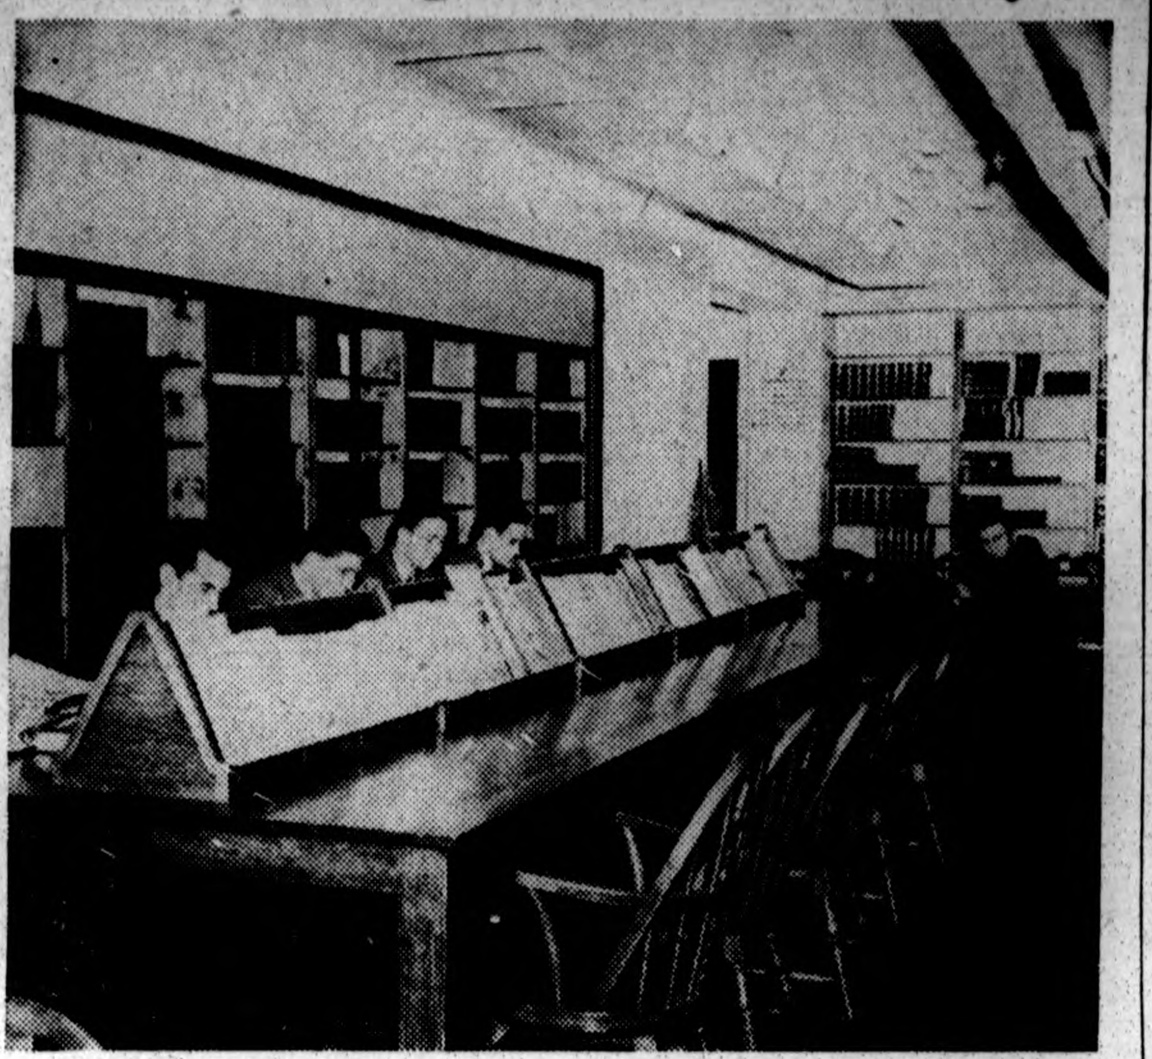
RESIDUE:

Jack Dudley and Bill "Bunny" Mundy are "a fuedin" over Harriet. "Bugs" had a date for last Saturday nite while Jack was the cause of the busy signal on New Year's Eve. Incidentally Jack, how come you never did get to the party? Hmmm? . . . Bill Carey is beginning to settle down. He actually dated the same girl, Cass, twice in one week . . . With the Centennial Ball coming up Friday and the recent ban on all pleasure driving, it doesn't look as though the transportation problem will be very easily solved. Ward Guncheon is taking Helen from Bristol. Oh well, it's better than going to North Carolina for Alice . . . John Bongiovanni bet Nick Eni 10 greenies that he will come to the dance in a horse and buggy. John will win that wager even if he has to come in a D. P. W. wagon .

New Reading Room In The Library



Opening Of New Wing In Library Gives Students More Reading Room

With the opening of a new wing in Austin Hall, the library has increased in size in order to handle the ever-growing demands of the student body for more literature and more space in which to enjoy it.

The new section holds all periodicals, including those of a technical nature, both current issues and bound volumes. New tables and chairs have been installed, as well as fluorescent lighting. In the new room there are open racks of technical periodicals, to which the college subscribes, a rack of those which are donated by others, and a rack of educational and classical magazines. The space formerly occupied by the periodicals has been replaced by a section on English literature.

War Book Council's Selection

Among the latest non-fiction books in the library are: "They Were Expendable," and "See Here, Private Hargrove." The first of these was recommended by the War Book Panel of the Council on Books in Wartime, which at certain times recommends books which are considered by them to be imperative reading during the war. "They Were Expendable" is the first book selected by the panel, which includes several well known authors and men of military and naval experience. They are: Lt. Col. Joseph L. Greene, U. S. A., Admiral H. E. Yarnall, U. S. N., retired, Irita Van Doren, J. Donald Adams, and Amy Loveman. A large poster has been placed in the library to draw attention to their choice and others will be sent with each selection.

New Fiction and Technical Books

Some of the newer fiction books are: "The Robe," by Loyd C. Douglas, "The Cup and The Sword," by Alice T. Hobart, "The Song of Bernadette," by Franz Werfel, Christopher Morley's "Thorofare," "The Raft" by Robert Trumbull, and "I Remember, I Remember," by Andre Maurois.

A further enlargement of the library facilities was completed recently with the opening of an extension on the second floor. This addition contains the sections on political sciences, education, music, fine arts, science, and technology.

Inluded among the new technical books are: I. M. Kolthoff's "Volumetric Analysis," "A Layman's Guide to Naval Strategy," by Bernard Brodie, "Sea Power in the Machine Age," by the same author, Marquis James' "Biography of a Business," Earnest Hooton's "Man's Poor Relations," "Constantine the Great," by Lloyd B. Holzapple, "America's Natural Wealth," by Richard Leiber, Herta Pauli's "Alfred Nobel," and John D. Redden's "Catholic Philosophy of Education."

Briefs Of CAMPUS NEWS

All Centennial Ball tickets, partly paid for through assessments, may be obtained upon presentation of a receipt and $2.50 in room 110 Mendel Hall on Wednesday and Thursday from 1:00 to 1:30 P. M.

* * *

Angelo Macchia, president of Lambda Kappa Delta, the science fraternity, announced that today there will be an important meeting in room 210 at 1:00 P. M. An election of new officers will be conducted then.

Orders taken for the L. K. D. keys have been submitted to the manufacturer.

The editors of the Mendel Bulletin, W. J. Redner and W. A. Hadfield, announced that the January issue will be distributed during the week of Jan. 13. A bulletin will be posted as to the date and room to obtain the publication.

Articles contributed by the students of the Science School include: Sr. Mary P. Steiner, S. M. "A Study of Manganese in Plants," H. B. Cutrone "Opalina Ranarum," Nicholas C. Eni, "The Common Toad-Bufo Americanus," W. A. Hadfield, "Anaerobic Culture Methods," W. J. Redner, "The Beaver and the Forest," and S. E. Zeeman, "A Practical Agglutination Reaction."

universities for maximum effectiveness," McNutt said, "several meetings of the committee would probably be necessary before their final recommendations would take shape."

The Situation

(Editor's Note: The following poem has been received from William Duffy, '40, now serving in the United States Navy and stationed in Alaska.)

The weather is censored, conditions taboo,
Movements and supplies are hidden from view.
But this line to you, my friends,
Will give you an idea of the floating trends.
Am out here on the Aleutian Chain—
Where the action is far from being tame;
Where the wind does howl, and the snow is thick;
Where the rains do pour, and the fog does tricks.

Where a man goes nuts and thinks it's fun;
Here in the land of the forgotten sun.
Where the women are Few and far between Makes you miss them, that I mean.
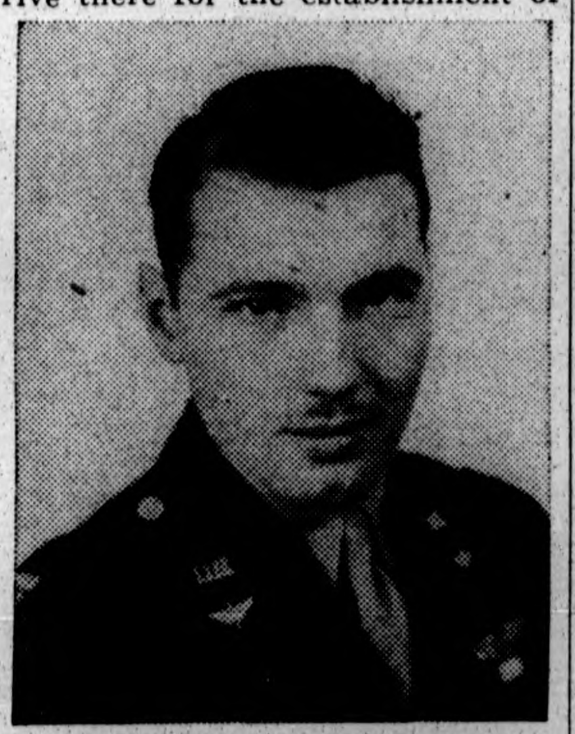
Where the devil gloats, in some corner of hell
Over the job on Dutch Harbor, he's done so well.
This is the place we've pledged to defend.
Why? Only the Great White Father can comprehend.
But it's not a question of where you want to be
We're here to fight for our liberty.
And we are healthy, happy, and well,
That's what counts so what the "L,"
It's the Japs to beat and that's a treat
Out here with the Eskies and the Aleutian Fleet.
So until that time, to you I relate,
Keep in shape and keep the faith.

Ex-Student Raised To Rank Of Major

Thomas J. Carbine, Former Arts Student, Receives Promotion in Army Air Corps

Thomas J. Carbine, former Villanova student, has been promoted to the rank of Major in the U. S. Army Air Corps. His new commission was awarded on January 4.

Major Carbine graduated from the School of Arts with the Class of '39, and immediately enrolled in the Air Force. He received instruction in the Army's peace-time training program at Tulsa, Okla., and at Randolph and Kelly Fields in San Antonio, Texas. His first assignment, after winning his wings, was to the Transport Squadron, in which department he served for over a year. In September of '41 he volunteered for service in Africa with Pan-American Airways, Inc., being one of the first pilots to arrive there for the establishment of a trans-continental and trans-Asiatic air line, now under the jurisdiction of the Army.



MAJOR T. J. CARBINE

Instructs Bomber Crews

Major Carbine returned to the United States in March of 1942 and resumed his duties with the Air Corps, at the same time being promoted to the rank of Captain. Since that time, he has been an operations and executive officer at Jackson, Miss., and also instructor of four-engine bomber crews at the Army Air Forces Combat Crew School at Symrna, Tennessee, where he is now stationed.

While at Villanova he was a consistent honor student, and also unusually active in extra-curricular affairs. Since leaving the college, Marjor Carbine has nearly circled the globe, having flown as far east as Rangoon, Burma. On many occasions he has returned to visit the school, but usually from an aerial viewpoint.

He is considered to be one of the youngest Majors in the Army.

Gray Gordon's Orchestra Hailed As Band Of the Year By Men Who Know

Gray Gordon and his orchestra, the band whose music will be featured at the Centennial Ball, have been acclaimed "the band of the year" by the nation's coin machine operators—men who are in a position to know best the bands in demand.

Recognition of his exceptional music first came to Gordon about eight years ago at another centennial celebration, Chicago's Century of Progress. Gordon, brought there to fulfill a limited engagement at the exclusive Canadian Club, enjoyed such tremendous popularity that the orchestra was held over for the entire season. His own unique offering, "Tic-Toc Rhythm," became one of the hits of the fair.

A National Favorite

Since then the band has come a long way along the road to fame. Gordon has firmly established himself as a national favorite with engagements at such famous places as the Westchester Country Club; the Stanley Theatre, Pittsburgh; Playmor Ballroom, Boston; and Virginia Military Institute.

Among his many engagements which included time on the air was his long and sensational stay at the Hotel Edison in New York. From here his music went out nightly over a coast-to-coast network. In Chicago, Syracuse, and elsewhere, the musical offerings of this band were again aired extensively.

Introduced Two Song Hits

Like many of the big name bands of the country, Gordon's sharp rise to fame came soon after he introduced on the radio two tunes which became nation-wide hits: "I Am An American" and "Ferryboat Serenade" were first played on the air waves by Maestro Gordon during his record-breaking engagement at the Hotel Edison, and the band leader shared in the popularity of the two songs.

A feature of the Gordon contingent is their musical "show" unit. They invariably score a hit with their novelties, instrumental and vocal specialties—many of which invite audience participation.

A Fine Musician

One factor primarily responsible for the rapid rise and continued success of Gray Gordon is the fact that Gray is himself a fine musician, well schooled and thoroughly experienced. As a boy he was forced by his father to concentrate his musical attention on the classics. At the age of 17, Gray was playing clarinet in one of the leading concert groups in the Mid-West. The following year he organized his own jazz band, and called it the "Pretzel Five."

Following this he studied music at the Bush Conservatory in Chicago and played as clarinetist and saxophonist with several big-name Mid-Western bands before organizing his present outfit. He has succeeded in bringing together a talented, versatile, and colorful aggregation, which features the vocals of lovely Barbara Moffett, and Tony Russell.

Broke Many Records

In his country-wide tour of hotels, night-clubs, ballrooms, and college proms, Gray has broken the established record for attendance almost every time. In Buffalo, for instance, he drew an all-time capacity crowd of 32,000 dancers.

Today, Gray plays the saxophone mostly, rather than the clarinet, supervises the band's arrangements, and is known as one of the smartest business heads in the orchestra world.

Music Seminar Plays Mozart Symphonies

Mozart's "Haffner Symphony" will be the featured work in the music seminar tomorrow at noon in room 215 Mendel Hall. The program will include several other compositions of the nineteenth century composer. The Symphony was written in 1782, six years after he composed the "Haffner Serenade." Both works derived their title from the devoted friend of Mozart.

At the first meeting of the music seminar for the new year, Dr. E. L. Haenisch, moderator of the seminar, presented Rachmaninoff's popular Second Piano Concerto. The audience seemed interested in the first movement of this work, since the second theme was used several months ago in a popular song. The composers of the song failed to identify the true source of the melody and were sued. The court ordered that the song could no longer be played except in its original form. The song was played sufficiently enough that the audience at the seminar last Wednesday recognized it in the Concerto.

Rachmaninoff, since he is in his sixties, no longer appears on the extensive personal appearance tours for which he was so famous as a virtuoso, but now spends most of his time composing.

Graduate Receives Wings And Commission In Navy

Albert J. Mayell, graduate of Villanova's Arts School, has been commissioned an Ensign in the Naval Reserve at Jacksonville, Fla.

Ensign Mayell was presented his commission and gold wings of the Naval Air Corps by Capt. J. D. Price, commander of the air station. During brief ceremonies Captain Price commended him on his fine showing throughout the months of training. Before reporting to the Jacksonville Station last May for advanced flight training, Mayell completed pre-flight training at the Naval Air Station, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Fr. O'Shea, O. S. A., Dies While On Visit

Rev. Patrick F. O'Shea, formerly stationed in Lawrence, Mass., died while on a visit to his mother in up-state Pennsylvania last month. A solemn Mass of Requiem was offered by the Very Rev. Joseph A. Hickey, Assistant General of the Augustinian Order.

Fr. O'Shea, who became well-known for his efforts in behalf of the school children of New York, was educated at Villanova College. His letter to the New York authorities on a school bus problem led to the passing of a new law by New York's Assembly.

Mass Every Tuesday For Boys In Service

Rev. Edwin T. Grimes, O. S. A., College Chaplain, has announced that the following religious program has been set up as Villanova's spiritual offering for the men in the fighting forces of our country.

The Holy Sacrifice of the Mass is offered every Tuesday morning at 7:15 A. M. for Villanova's Boys in the Service, and for the brothers, relatives, and friends of all the students, who are also in some branch of the U. S. Armed Forces. Villanovans who have lost their lives in World War No. 2 are remembered every Friday morning at the 7:15 Mass.

The Thursday evening Night Prayer at Chapel is offered to God and his Blessed Mother under the title of Our Mother of Good Counsel, Patroness of Studies of Villanova, that the world will soon be led back to righteousness, peace and security.

Fr. Grimes urges all students to visit the chapel regularly, and to remember in their prayers their former classmates now serving in distant parts of the world.

Sophomores Order Rings

The Sophomore Ring Committee has announced that it received orders for more than one hundred rings within the brief two weeks span allotted for their sale. This year, difficulty in obtaining stones forced the government to limit the time for purchasing school rings. Because of the short notice given to the students, the company from which the rings were obtained granted a week extension of sales which terminated yesterday.

Members of the committee were John B. Scola, chairman, a science student; James Corrigan, also a science student; Thomas Eaden, C&F, Raymond Baldwin, arts, and Robert Casey engineer.

VILLANOVAN SPORTS

Represent Villanova In Preliminary Court Games

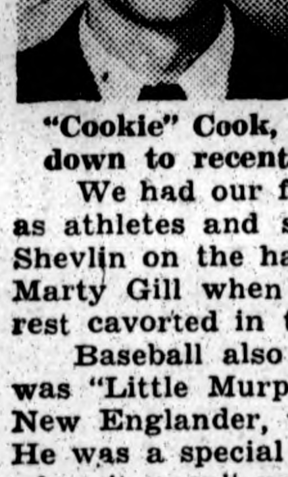
Sportorial

By JACQUES MAUCH, Sports Editor

TIME was when we used to worry about getting this column out in time to beat the deadline. In fact sometimes we wondered if we could ever get these three sports pages filled by Monday afternoon. But we've long since ceased to worry about these things and when —30— is written to this effort all our newspaper worries will be at an end.

But we're going to miss those little worries and the fun that resulted from them. They've left us with a lot of enjoyable memories from our initial efforts as a cub under Phil Dunn to last Saturday in the VILLANOVAN office when he put part of this rag together.

However, the real beginning goes back years before we came to Villanova. Villanova was our Alma Mater long before we had finished grammar school. It was through sports too, that we really became intimate with the Wildcats.



The first football game we ever saw was between the Wildcats and Gettysburg back in 1930. We didn't understand much about the game (that even puzzles the officials) but when Gettysburg kicked a field goal, which later proved to be the winning margin, and the ball almost settled in our lap, we knew that it wasn't good for Villanova. And when Johnny Highfield and Tommy Morgan were carried from the gridiron, injured, we became right mad at those boys in the Orange jerseys.

But we took Temple that year with Biff Gardner leading the way. There was a player—he was our boy. We had a lot of boys—Terry, Kobilis, Geezer, Blanchard, Toby Cavanaugh, "Cookie" Cook, Michaels, Kotys, and numerous others until we come down to recent years, when everyone became "our boy."

We had our favorites in the other sports, too, fellows who stood out as athletes and sportsmen. We recall the feats of Barry, Torpy, and Shevlin on the hardwood and the early days of swimming under coach Marty Gill when Wilmer Booth, Toby Greco, Burkie Coursart and the rest cavorted in the pool.

Baseball also left some vivid impressions and recollections. There was "Little Murph" and Collins, the latter a slouchy, tobacco chewing, New Englander, who looked like Gary Cooper on the pitching mound. He was a special friend of ours because he got us into football games when it wasn't possible for us to sneak through the gate hidden in the middle of the college band.

Villanova sports was an important part of our young life and when we arrived in our freshman year we attempted to make it a more integral part. The last few years have been the most fun and have bestowed upon us experiences that will never be forgotten and ones that we know will benefit us in later years.

We've come in contact with a lot of grand guys—some really great, some that never stopped clowning, others that were always serious—all regular fellows. There was the Axis, composed of Bull Pholeric, Walt Kelley, and ourselves that heckled and were heckled by Bill Hooper and his Rangers . . . the swimmers against the trackmen . . . a continuous feud, but all in fun.

We got to know the swimmers and the runners best because we competed with them. You really learn to know fellows when you work and play on the same team with them. We recall the trips we took to Baltimore, New Brunswick, Trenton, Washington, and Lancaster . . . the dinners we put away after meets . . . the old movie house in Lancaster . . . the train ride home from Rutgers, and Loyola . . . experiences we will never forget.

Saturday afternoons in the VILLANOVAN office are now a thing of the past . . . no more bull sessions in the midst of copy reading or basketball games with a rolled up typewriter cover when anyone walking in the door was liable to collide with one of the Toms—Doyle, Devine or Richard—cutting in for a layup over the doorjamb. The name of Father McKee, the moderator, is synonymous with VILLANOVAN. Always helpful, he must be given credit for a lot of the work.

There were a lot of big things but they are recorded in black and white and are remembered by most everyone. The exploits of Nick Basca and many other proteges of Clipper Smith, basketball coach Al Severance and his miracle teams, and Jumbo Elliott's mile relay quartet of last season will always cause a glow of pride to rise with us when they are mentioned. Our association with all these men has been a wonderful experience and we believe it will be invaluable when we have left Villanova.

Courtmen Defeat Niagara, Geneva In Close Battles

By JOE CARBINE

The importance of being a 40-minute team was very aptly demonstrated by Villanova's varsity basketball five in its games with Niagara and Geneva. In both of these contests, it was the Wildcats' extra stamina and ability to "pour it on" in the last period that enabled them to add two wins to the long victory streak by defeating Niagara, 47-39, and Geneva, 41-38.

The game with the Purple Eagles was a close see-saw battle for three periods, but then Joe Lord and Ray Kodish took things in hand and the Cats easily went ahead to win. In the first half, however, it had been all Niagara as their star sophomore, Paul Yesawich, displayed remarkable ability on difficult pivot shots, thus keeping his team well ahead of the Wildcats.

Niagara Leads at Half

Leading 14-11 at the end of the quarter, the Purple Eagles began to pull away as long Wildcats set shots constantly bounded off the rim. Yesawich and Schwab raised the score to 18-14, but were matched by Drizen's foul and Kodish's lay-up. Then Yesawich and Bill Gasparovic dropped in three points to make the score 21-17 at the half.

The third quarter was full of thrills for the fans as both the Cats and the Eagles attempted to sew up the game. The Villanova sharpshooters, however, finally began to find the range as Wood, Kelley, and Kodish took turns in scoring. Once the Cats were ahead at 22-21, they never relinquished the lead. Scoring honors went to Chuck Drizen and Wood with 11 points each, and Yesawich gained top honors of the game by totaling 14.

Brothers Star

Although the record of the Geneva College players was not too impressive before they invaded the Wildcat lair last Thursday night, they provided one half of the story of the most exciting game of the season. The Blue and White had all it could do to win by 3 points.

Even though Geneva had previously played four games in five nights, they were very strong at the start, and gained a 9-1 lead as their high-scoring forward, Chuck DeVenzio, dropped in three long set shots. They continued a fast pace until the end of the first period, when they were in front at 12-5. The Wildcat co-captains, Bob Kelty and Bill Wood then started the ball

Whips Princeton 54-46 To Remain Undefeated

Lord Leads Winners With 14 Points After McDonnell Sparks First Half Drive; 'Cats 'Switch' Breaks Up Tiger Pivot Plays

By BIILL WALSH

Villanova's high-riding basketball team chalked up its eighth consecutive triumph of the current campaign last Saturday night defeating the Princeton Tigers by the score of 54-46. The unbeaten Wildcats, enjoying their best season in quite some time, found themselves continually on the short end of the score throughout the first ten minutes of the tight contest, but broke through on a field goal by Joe Lord to take the lead at 12-10, and were never headed thereafter.

With both aggregations starting very slowly, the score was still 0-0 at the end of the first three minutes of play, but then the same Mr. Lord dumped in two foul shots for the Main Liners and Villanova led 2-0. From that point on, baskets were as plentiful as snowflakes with the lead changing seven times in the next five minutes.

After Lord's field goal put the Wildcats in the lead, the Severancemen slowly began to forge ahead of their highly-touted Ivy League foes, and led at the half, 27-19.

Villanova Prevails

At a decided disadvantage because of its lack of height, Villanova found the going a little rough immediately after the intermission, as the Princetonians began to try pivot shots from all angles. They were not too successful in this endeavor because the Wildcat defense men gradually began to get the ball off the backboard on most of these occasions and were then successful in scoring a goal on their own hook at the other end of the floor. Princeton was successful in pulling up to within five points of the Villanova total twice during the second half, at 34-29, and 46-41, but as the game progressed and the Wildcat set-shot artists made good on more than half their tries, it was apparent that the Main Liners would be victorious in their eighth endeavor of the season.

Overflow Crowd

Rated very highly after their overwhelming victory over a favored Seton Hall quintet last week, the Tigers drew 1500 fans into the Main Line gym, the largest crowd seen on the Wildcat home court this season. Nor were these spectators disappointed the least bit in the prowess of the Tigertown five, as the eight point margin by which they were defeated did not keep the game from being a very exciting one from start to finish.

Lord Stars

Joe Lord, who played a brilliant floor game for the Wildcats, as did Bob Kelty and Chuck Drizen, was high scorer of the evening with 5 field goals and 4 fouls for a total of fourteen points. Bill Wood, high scorer of the season for the Blue and White, and Kelty, the Co-Captains of the Villanova five, were next for the home team with twelve and eleven markers, respectively. Drizen also contributed

All-Star Cagers Split Two Games

Drop Close One to Malvern Prep 19-17; Beat Penn Naval R. O. T. C. 31-27

By JIM BONNER

Thursday night saw the Intramural All Stars lose to a smooth working Malvern Prep five 19-17 as their rally fell short one field goal. This was the first game played against outside competition for the home lads.

The game started out calmly enough as Art Martin, Austin sharpshooter dropped one from half way out. Seconds later the score was tied up by Don Dougherty who took a pass from Frank O'Hara for a lay up. O'Hara dropped another to put Malvern in the van. Red McFadden, another Hustinite, dropped one of his three of the evening to tie the ball game up at 4-4. As the half ended Dougherty dropped a charity toss to give the preppers a 7-6 edge.

McFadden High

As the second half opened the Malvern quintet began to pull away. They stretched their lead to 12-6 on a foul conversion by O'Hara and two quick field goals by Dougherty. A long shot by McGinnis dropped to cut the score to 12-8. Another foul by Dougherty and a field goal by Ronan gave Malvern a 15-8 advantage with less than eight minutes to go. At this point Dougherty, who was high scorer for the night with 8 points, sprained an ankle and was helped from the floor. The All-Stars woke up seconds later and started to wittle down the advantage held by the preppers. Dorras and McFadden led a surge that fell short by two points O'Neill dropped the clinching points that gave Malvern a 19-17 win.

Red McFadden took top honors in a rather slow moving, low scoring game as he dropped in three for six points. He was closely followed by Dorras with five and Art Martin with four. Charley LaBelle

Intramural Swim League Planned

Although varsity swimming was dropped from the Villanova sports curriculum this year because of present war conditions, an extensive intramural tank program is being planned by the moderators, Fathers McKee and Dunne.

It was customary in former years to hold an open swimming meet for the various dorms and day hop teams. The points earned by the individual teams were added to their totals gained in other mural competition. These points go toward the scoring for the coveted intramural trophy.

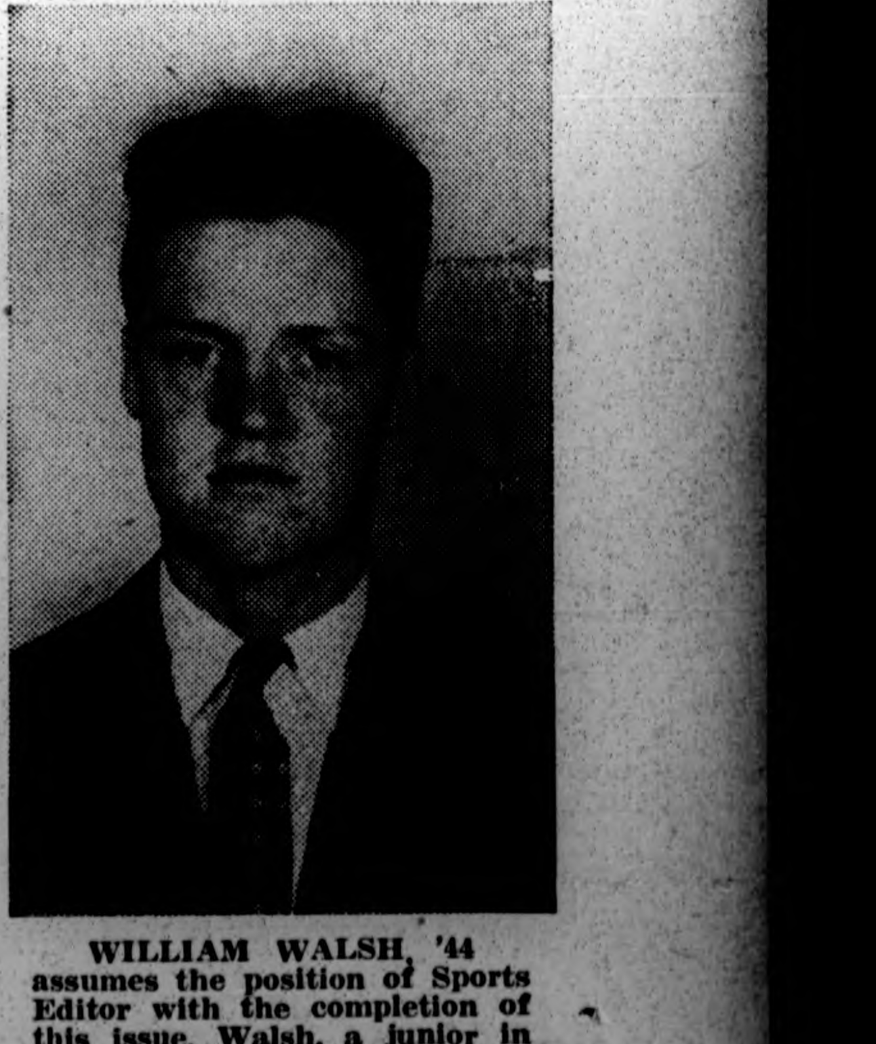
More Competition

According to present plans each hall will form a team, and a schedule of dual meets will be arranged which will last throughout the regular swimming season. The teams will be organized into a league similar to the basketball circuit and the regular point system will be applied to the teams in the final standings at the completion of the season.

The awarding of points for the top places is the same but the boys will have a chance for much more competition. Whereas individuals competed in only one meet formerly, they will be able to exploit their talents in several contests this year and will meet each team in the league individually. An open championship may also be held at the end of the season.

The idea is also expected to help emphasize swimming in conformity with the Navy's wishes.

New Sports Head



WILLIAM WALSH, '44 assumes the position of Sports Editor with the completion of this issue. Walsh, a junior in the Commerce and Finance school, has been a member of the staff for the past two years.

Bill Wood Heads Wildcat Courtmen With 105 Points

Senior Billy Wood, Wildcat co-captain, leads the Blue and White court scorers with a total of 105 points gathered in eight games. This puts him far ahead of his nearest rival, Bob Kelty, the other co-captain. Kelty has scored 66 points while Herm Drizen and Joe Lord trail with 54 and 53 markers respectively.

Wood, former South Philadelphia Catholic High and Brown Prep star, has headed the Villanova point getters for the past two seasons. Last year he finished second in the Philadelphia district with a grand total of 232 points. The stocky guard, possessor of one of the best shooting eyes in the nation, scores most of his points on set shots from beyond the circle and his uncanny ability to sink a large percentage of his foul tries. His 105 point total was accumulated on 33 goals and 39 fouls giving him an average of 13 points a game.

High Average

Kelty also has a dead eye and makes many points from away out. He and Wood are chiefly responsible fo rthe Wildcats' high average on shots attempted and shots made. For all games this season with the exception of the Loyola contest the team has an average of .397, a very high percentage. This means that four out of every ten shots are successful.

Freshman Ray Kodish has the best individual average. Playing in six games he has dropped nine field goals in eighteen attempts for an even .500 percentage. Wood and Kelty are both above the .400 mark.

Chandler Brewer, left guard of the Tiger quintet, and shortest man on the visitors' squad, was high for Villanova's most recent foe with four double deckers and five fouls for a total of 13, while Bob Doar and Captain Munda were both successful in garnering nine points.

rolling and were promptly joined by sophomore Lou Reynolds and freshman Frank Frascella who helped them sweep Villanova to a 23-19 halftime lead.

Kelty Sparks 'Cats

Kelty provided the spark for Villanova throughout the entire second half. DeVenezio and Ross couldn't miss with their shots in the third, and at one time the Blue and White were behind, 31-27. Kelty overcame this advantage, however, to make the score read 33-32 at the end of the period, with the Beaver Falls quintet still leading.

During this second half the score was tied 5 times, and was 36 up with five minutes to play. Then Bill Wood came through at the crucial moment to bank a nice long one, followed by Drizen's foul and Frascella completed the scoring with a 2-pointer to give the Cats their seventh in a row, 41-38. The top scorers were Bill and Chuck DeVenzio for Geneva, and Wood and Kelty for Villanova. The latter played his best game of the season.

All-Star Quint To Play Malvern Prep

The Intramural All-Star quintet will meet Malvern Prep Thursday high at Malvern. This is a return contest with the high school lads. The Malvern five whipped the Villanovans last week 19-17 on the fieldhouse floor.

The moderators of the All-Stars, Fathers McKee and Dunne, are attempting to arrange several games between now and February 4th to keep the boys active until the varsity returns to the home court.

accounted for the All-Stars other twin pointer.

Look Like New Team

Saturday night the All-Stars took the floor an entirely different team. The rough spots in their attack were smoothed out and they had a definite scoring punch. They took the Penn R.O.T.C. combination into camp by a score of 32-27.

Paced by Mike Cheppa, Austin Fireman, and Red McFadden they jumped to an early lead. McFadden was the main factor in the first half surge as he came through with six points, his total for the evening. The R.O.T.C. combination were kept in the game during the first half by the accurate shooting of Dan Caldenwood. The Stars led by an 18-12 count as the whistle went for the intermission. Beside McFadden's six points, Cheppa grabbed four in the first half, and McGuiness, Martin, Dorras and LaBelle came through with a twin pointer apiece.

Second Half Close

The second half was nip and tuck all the way as the two clubs matched each other point for point. Penn took scoring honors in this Stars 15-14.

Scoring honors for the night went to Mike Cheppa of Austin who tossed in three field goals and three fouls for a total of nine points. Close on his heels were Savage and Red McFadden with six apiece.

Albright, Loyola And Coast Guard, Holiday Victims

The Wildcat courtmen added three games to their undefeated total over the holidays, sinking Albright, Loyola of Baltimore, and the Philadelphia Coast Guard fives.

In their third triumph of the season Coach Severence's charges won a hard earned victory over Albright College, of Reading, 45-42. The Blue and White, tying up Albright's fast break, led during the entire first half by a safe margin and left the floor with a 27-20 advantage. The highly-touted Albright five fell short of expectations due to the fact that Villanova completely bottled up Dick Shollenberger, the Lions' scoring threat. The latter, who came here with one of the finest offensive records records of any of our opponents saw little action and was held pointless.

Wood Assures Victory

After the second period got under way Schollenberger found the basket and along with Bob Rhoads and Ken Hopkins soon closed the gap existing between the two teams. With but three minutes to go the two teams stood tied up at 42-42 until a field goal by Wood and a free throw by Lord made it 45-42 just before the final whistle.

Two nights later the same team which scored a surprising upset over Albright journeyed to Baltimore to engage the Loyola Greyhounds. Not unlike the preceding game the Cats took command in the initial period. Billy Wood again paced the attack which gave the Blue a 17-11 halftime lead. The Greyhounds, however, returned with an offensive drive paced by Bock and Goldberg which fell but three points short of Villanova.

Coast Guards Easy

Scoring was held at a minimum in the waning minutes and the Wildcats took their fourth successive victory, 29-26. Billy Wood led with four field goals and three fouls.

After a three day rest made possible by the postponement of the Sicna game, the Wildcats returned to competition the following Monday night against the Philadelphia Coast Guards, a team which the aforementioned Albright team beat by twenty points. This time, however, Villanova forged far ahead and set the stage for an assuring triumph.

Once again, the omnipresent Billy Wood swished the rims until they showed signs of wear. Lou Reynolds, who saw much action, contributed nine points to the Blue and White cause. The second and third teams then retained the wide margin left by the regulars. The lopsided contest which ended at 58-35 was Villanova's easiest victory to date.

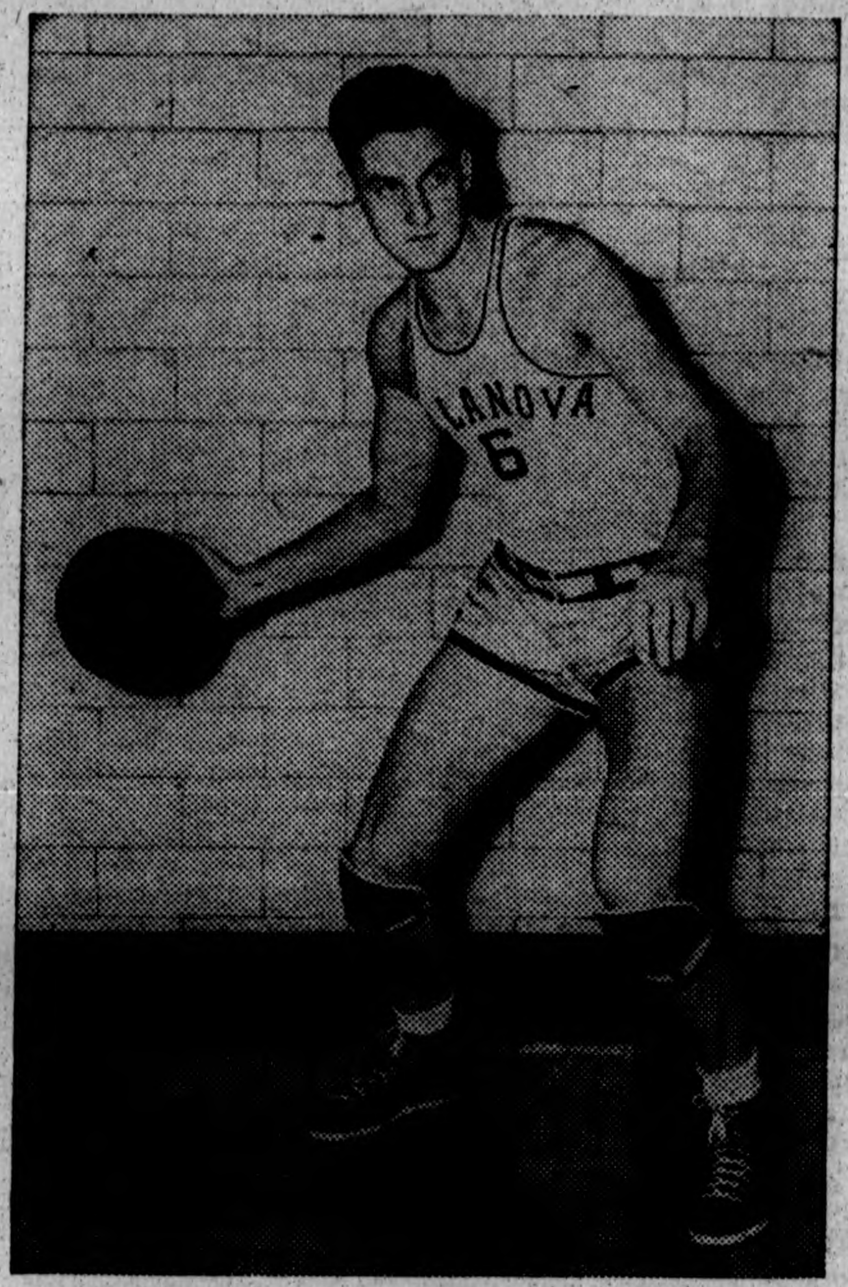
"Defense Important In Basketball"—Bob Kelty

By BILL CAREY

Bringing another Marine in the Sportlight this week we have Robert Patrick Kelty as topic number one. Bob, who came to us from Trenton Catholic after three years of basketball, succeeds his high school teammate Dick Gray as captain of the Villanova courtmen. Bob is co-captain along with Bill Wood, and is leading the Wildcats to one of their most successful seasons to date.

Running wild at Trenton Catholic High, Kelty captained the team there in his last year and along with Gray sparked the squad to the New Jersey State Championship in his junior year. Both he and Gray played through Trenton and Villanova together until last year when Dick graduated. Since coming to Villanova Bob has developed into one of the leading all around players in the East. Gracefully carrying his six foot-two frame around the floor, he has maneuvered equally well in both forward and center positions.



Bob has experienced countless thrills on the court. He considers the one point victory over Washington and Jefferson last year out at Washington, Pa., as his greatest. It was through his brilliant team play over the period of the last three years that Al Severence appointed him to the co-captaincy this season. Coming through time and time again in pinches with a long shot or effective guarding Bob has earned a reputation as a steady and never failing player.

Emphasizes Defense

Of his many theories on basketball Bob emphasizes the all around performance of a man as most important. He says that a man should have defensive ability as well as offensive. To quote him: "Games are made gruelling when the defense collapses, and players become like a hitting outfielder who can't field."

Being unusually quiet and unassuming Kelty hides his natural confidence that he displays on the basketball floor. This is shown by his high ranking in the Education School. Although he never wanted to go to college he listened to his mother, and is now glad that he did. After the war he will attend the Fordham Law School.

After graduation Bob will enter Officer's Candidate School for the Marines, and he is anxious to see active service abroad before the war is over.

With the team's eight consecutive victories as a start, Bob's fervent wish is that the team go undefeated this year as a fitting tribute to the school on its 100th anniversary.

Here and There

By JACK DUDLEY

A natural tendency of a columnist making his final contribution to the collegiate press would be to indulge in a bit of retrospection. In three years of watching the passing sports parade, we've gathered many a memory concerning those of whom we wrote. The present year has brought so many profound changes in our way of living and thinking that we have now decided to leave the past where it has fallen and look to the future which should be bright for all of us.

This is the first bit of news that has leaked out about what we regard as the invention of the century. Deep in the dark interior of Mendel Hall we have been working with some of our Engineering friends on our brainchild a la Brick Bradford, or Alley Oop, a Time Machine. The work was completed shortly before the end of last year, and we spent the Christmas holidays on a maiden voyage into the bright future. Please note, Jack Coleman!

Our most memorable visit was in the year 1965 to Villanova College. It was springtime when we landed on the green turf of the stadium where Coach Johnny DiCarlo, prematurely gray, was putting his track team through its warmup paces. Johnny informed us he expected a great performance that year from his middle distance star, Bill Carey, III.

On our way to Mendel Hall we stopped in Alumni Hall to see our old friend, Father Dunne. While there, we learned that Alumni Hall's basketball team had taken the Intramural Crown, their greatest feat since 1942.

In the VILLANOVAN office we picked up a folder of weeklies for the past year. The paper was once more an eight page affair. An especially good job of sports editing had been turned in that year by Jake Mauch, Jr. We did notice that no HERE AND THERE column graced pages six or seven. That was due, Jake, Jr., said, to an unfortunate experience they had with the column way back in '43.

While we were browsing through old VILLANOVANS, in the newspaper office, we received a television call from the fieldhouse. It was head coach Albert Postus requesting us to remove our contraption from the stadium so his gridders could hold their spring practice that afternoon. We hurried down and taxied over to the student landing field opposite the new super fieldhouse.

Back at the stadium we ran into Ward Guncheon, Villanova's great publicity man. Ward was telling us that it was Al Postus' first year as head coach. The year before, Clipper Smith had turned out the greatest team in Wildcat history. His team was undefeated, untied, and unscored upon. Victims of the Main Liners that year included Notre Dame, Southern California, Oxford, who had been playing the game since "A Yank at Oxford," and Moscow College, whom the Wildcats had defeated in Russia's annual Snow Bowl Game. As a reward for winning the bowl game the team came home by way of the Pacific. On the way home, Clipper received a tempting offer from the University of Hawaii, and the team returned by itself.

We asked Ward Guncheon to show us about the new super fieldhouse. This gigantic indoor stadium had a seating capacity of seventy thousand people. On the bright green turf Villanova gridders could play their home games despite unfavorable weather conditions on the outside. Ward was telling us that on a Saturday afternoon in late December the football team could play host to one of the out of town colleges, and that same evening, Tony would roll out the portable basketball court and the quintet could take on the visitor's cagers.

We had a long trip in front of us so we could tarry no longer in the year nineteen and sixty-five. Outside of the day in 1950, when we stopped to see Villanova hand Temple its ninth consecutive defeat in the series, the journey back was uneventful. We arrived home Monday night in time to start working on this, our final column. Regardless of what happens, it would have been the last one anyway. See you in Trenton on the twentieth.

Alumni Quintet Wins Second Half With 10 Straight

Before the holidays Alumni Hall finished a brilliant second half to beat each opponent in the final week of competition by at least 12 points, adding three hapless teams to their long list in their striving to remain unbeaten. Not once during the long weeks of rivalry were they ever listed as defeated, since they won 10 games in a row in this half plus two more carried over from last half brings their record up to 12 straight games.

On the 15th Austin winners of the first half beat C&F 38 to 26. McFadden and Monteforte paced the winners with 10 points apiece while Reilly had 15 points for the losers. In the night tilts the Mendel D. S. downed the Mendel Residents 28 to 21 as Alumni defeated Fedigan 31 to 23.

McFadden Scores 17

In the preliminary game to the Villanova-Albright contest the Mendel Residents found a winning combination by outscoring the C&F team, 21 to 13. Englehard, Healy, and Miller combined to record 4 points apiece for the winners.

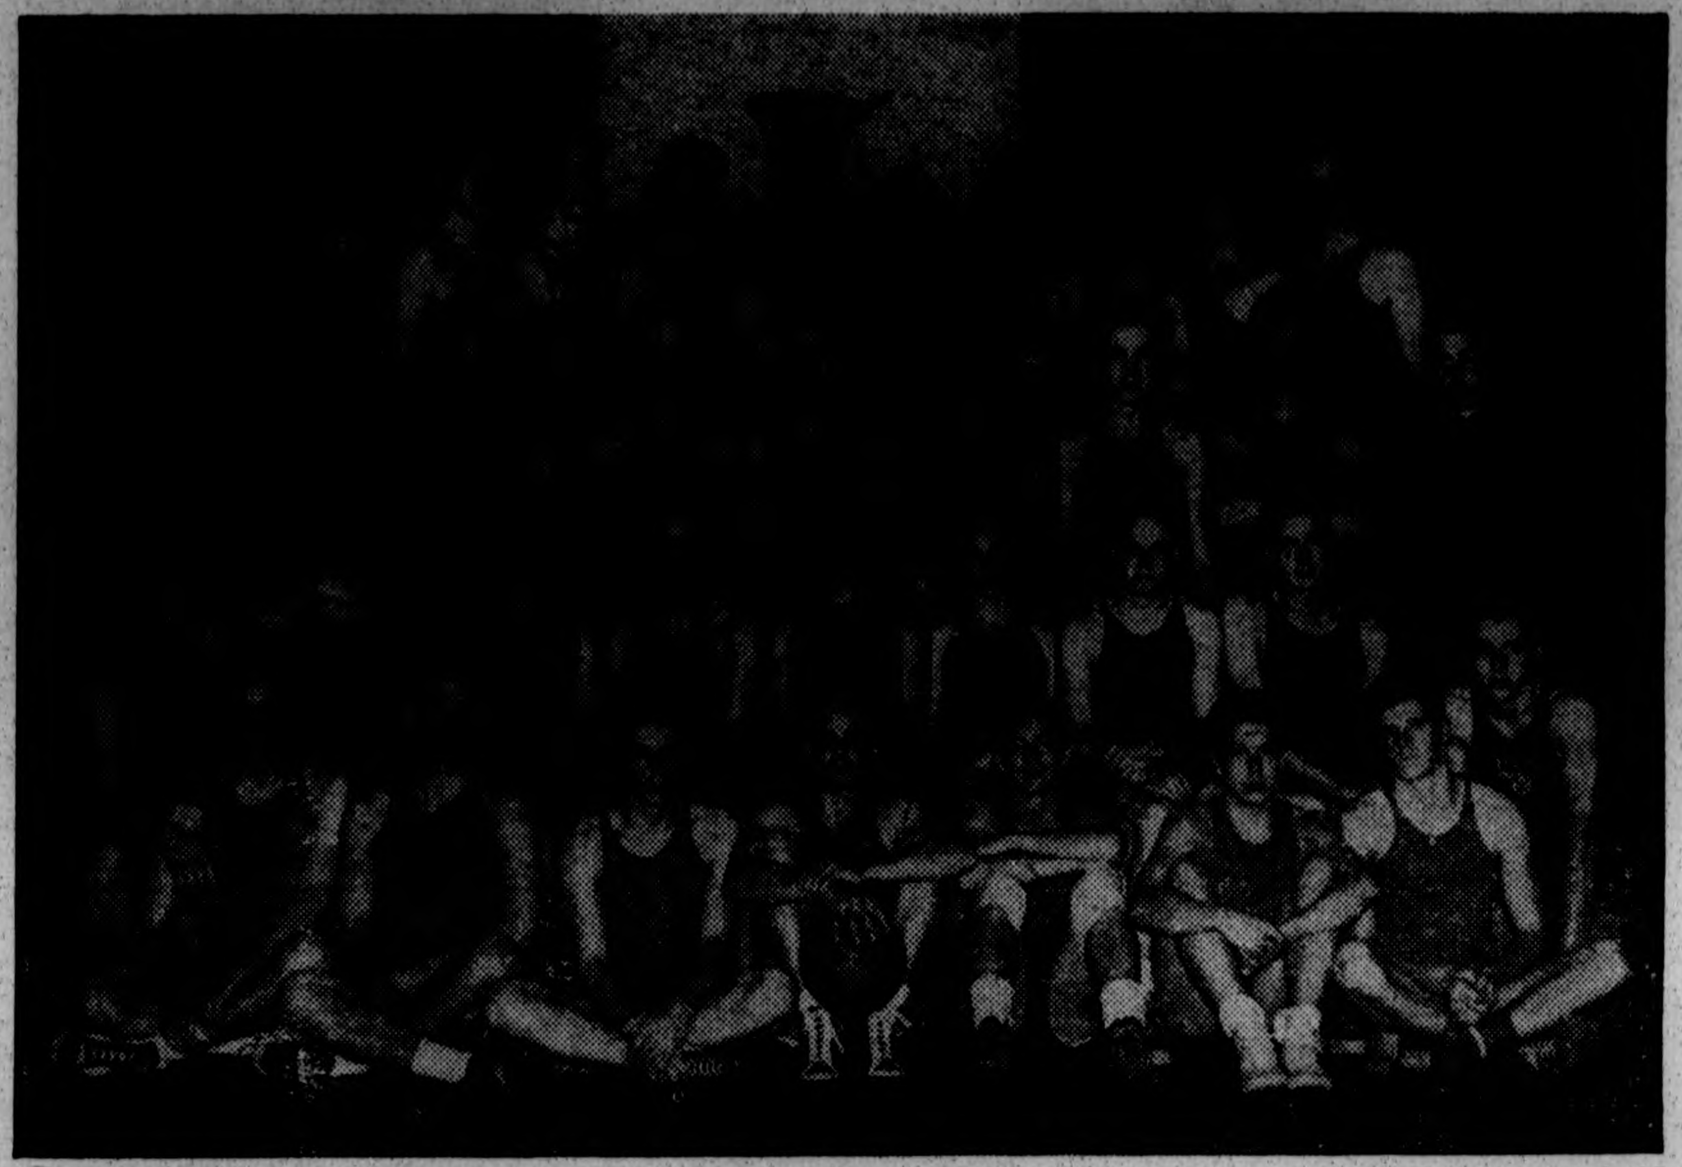
On December 17th Alumni took their second victim of the week into camp by a score of 24 to 7. After acquiring an early lead they breezed through to an easy victory. Tomasco of the C&F team scored his team's only points in the second half with a field goal.

In the other game that night the Mendel Residents came out victorious, 39 to 34 over Fedigan Hall. Noll and Healy led the winners with 8 points apiece while Regan and Hin upheld Fedigan with 8 points apiece.

In the final game of the Intermural League, Alumni Hall in the preliminary contest of the Villanova-Coast Guard game came from behind to nail the Mendel Day Hops five, 23-11. Lowney topped the scoring column with 6 points for Alumni as Graziano was held down to 4 points.

Alumni will meet Austin Hall, the first half titleholders in a three game playoff for the championship. The title games will probably be played sometime next week.

Undefeated Second Half Title Holders



Above are the Alumni Hall basketeers who won ten straight court games to take the second half championship in the Intramural League. They will meet Austin Hall, first period winners, in a three-game playoff for the title.

Bill Wood Heads Wildcat Courtmen With 105 Points

Senior Billy Wood, Wildcat co-captain, leads the Blue and White court scorers with a total of 105 points gathered in eight games. This puts him far ahead of his nearest rival, Bob Kelty, the other co-captain. Kelty has scored 66 points while Herm Drizen and Joe Lord trail with 54 and 53 markers respectively.

Wood, former South Philadelphia Catholic High and Brown Prep star, has headed the Villanova point getters for the past two seasons. Last year he finished second in the Philadelphia district with a grand total of 232 points. The stocky guard, possessor of one of the best shooting eyes in the nation, scores most of his points on set shots from beyond the circle and his uncanny ability to sink a large percentage of his foul tries. His 105 point total was accumulated on 33 goals and 39 fouls giving him an average of 13 points a game.

High Average

Kelty also has a dead eye and makes many points from away out. He and Wood are chiefly responsible fo rthe Wildcats' high average on shots attempted and shots made. For all games this season with the exception of the Loyola contest the team has an average of .397, a very high percentage. This means that four out of every ten shots are successful.

Freshman Ray Kodish has the best individual average. Playing in six games he has dropped nine field goals in eighteen attempts for an even .500 percentage. Wood and Kelty are both above the .400 mark.

Chandler Brewer, left guard of the Tiger quintet, and shortest man on the visitors' squad, was high for Villanova's most recent foe with four double deckers and five fouls for a total of 13, while Bob Doar and Captain Munda were both successful in garnering nine points.

rolling and were promptly joined by sophomore Lou Reynolds and freshman Frank Frascella who helped them sweep Villanova to a 23-19 halftime lead.

Kelty Sparks 'Cats

Kelty provided the spark for Villanova throughout the entire second half. DeVenezio and Ross couldn't miss with their shots in the third, and at one time the Blue and White were behind, 31-27. Kelty overcame this advantage, however, to make the score read 33-32 at the end of the period, with the Beaver Falls quintet still leading.

During this second half the score was tied 5 times, and was 36 up with five minutes to play. Then Bill Wood came through at the crucial moment to bank a nice long one, followed by Drizen's foul and Frascella completed the scoring with a 2-pointer to give the Cats their seventh in a row, 41-38. The top scorers were Bill and Chuck DeVenzio for Geneva, and Wood and Kelty for Villanova. The latter played his best game of the season.

All-Star Quint To Play Malvern Prep

The Intramural All-Star quintet will meet Malvern Prep Thursday high at Malvern. This is a return contest with the high school lads. The Malvern five whipped the Villanovans last week 19-17 on the fieldhouse floor.

The moderators of the All-Stars, Fathers McKee and Dunne, are attempting to arrange several games between now and February 4th to keep the boys active until the varsity returns to the home court.

Look Like New Team

Saturday night the All-Stars took the floor an entirely different team. The rough spots in their attack were smoothed out and they had a definite scoring punch. They took the Penn R.O.T.C. combination into camp by a score of 32-27.

Paced by Mike Cheppa, Austin Fireman, and Red McFadden they jumped to an early lead. McFadden was the main factor in the first half surge as he came through with six points, his total for the evening. The R.O.T.C. combination were kept in the game during the first half by the accurate shooting of Dan Caldenwood. The Stars led by an 18-12 count as the whistle went for the intermission. Beside McFadden's six points Cheppa grabbed four in the first half, and McGuiness, Martin, Dorras and LaBelle came through with a twin pointer apiece.

Second Half Close

The second half was nip and tuck all the way as the two clubs matched each other point for point. Penn took scoring honors in this Stars 15-14.

Scoring honors for the night went to Mike Cheppa of Austin who tossed in three field goals and three fouls for a total of nine points. Close on his heels were Savage and Red McFadden with six apiece.

Albright, Loyola And Coast Guard, Holiday Victims

The Wildcat courtmen added three games to their undefeated total over the holidays, sinking Albright, Loyola of Baltimore, and the Philadelphia Coast Guard fives.

In their third triumph of the season Coach Severence's charges won a hard earned victory over Albright College, of Reading, 45-42. The Blue and White, tying up Albright's fast break, led during the entire first half by a safe margin and left the floor with a 27-20 advantage. The highly-touted Albright five fell short of expectations due to the fact that Villanova completely bottled up Dick Shollenberger, the Lions' scoring threat. The latter, who came here with one of the finest offensive records records of any of our opponents saw little action and was held pointless.

Wood Assures Victory

After the second period got under way Schollenberger found the basket and along with Bob Rhoads and Ken Hopkins soon closed the gap existing between the two teams. With but three minutes to go the two teams stood tied up at 42-42 until a field goal by Wood and a free throw by Lord made it 45-42 just before the final whistle.

Two nights later the same team which scored a surprising upset over Albright journeyed to Baltimore to engage the Loyola Greyhounds. Not unlike the preceding game the Cats took command in the initial period. Billy Wood again paced the attack which gave the Blue a 17-11 halftime lead. The Greyhounds, however, returned with an offensive drive paced by Bock and Goldberg which fell but three points short of Villanova.

Coast Guards Easy

Scoring was held at a minimum in the waning minutes and the Wildcats took their fourth successive victory, 29-26. Billy Wood led with four field goals and three fouls.

After a three day rest made possible by the postponement of the Siena game, the Wildcats returned to competition the following Monday night against the Philadelphia Coast Guards, a team which the aforementioned Albright team beat by twenty points. This time, however, Villanova forged far ahead and set the stage for an assuring triumph.

Once again, the omnipresent Billy Wood swished the rims until they showed signs of wear. Lou Reynolds, who saw much action, contributed nine points to the Blue and White cause. The second and third teams then retained the wide margin left by the regulars. The lopsided contest which ended at 58-35 was Villanova's easiest victory to date.

"Defense Important In Basketball"—Bob Kelty

By BILL CARL

Bringing another Marine in the Sportlight this week we have Robert Patrick Kelty as topic number one. Bob, who came to us from Trenton Catholic after three years of basketball, succeeds his high school teammate Dick Gray as captain of the Villanova courtmen. Bob is co-captain along with Bill Wood, and is leading the Wildcats to one of their most successful seasons to date.

Running wild at Trenton Catholic High, Kelty captained the team there in his last year and along with Gray sparked the squad to the New Jersey State Championship in his junior year. Both he and Gray played through Trenton and Villanova together until last year when Dick graduated. Since coming to Villanova Bob has developed into one of the leading all around players in the East. Gracefully carrying his six foot-two frame around the floor, he has maneuvered equally well in both forward and center positions.

Bob has experienced countless thrills on the court. He considers the one point victory over Washington and Jefferson last year out at Washington, Pa., as his greatest. It was through his brilliant team play over the period of the last three years that Al Severence appointed him to the co-captaincy this season. Coming through time and time again in pinches with a long shot or effective guarding Bob has earned a reputation as a steady and never failing player.

Emphasizes Defense

Of his many theories on basketball Bob emphasizes the all around performance of a man as most important. He says that a man should have defensive ability as well as offensive. To quote him: "Games are made gruelling when the defense collapses, and players become like a hitting outfielder who can't field."

Being unusually quiet and unassuming Kelty hides his natural confidence that he displays on the basketball floor. This is shown by his high ranking in the Education School. Although he never wanted to go to college he listened to his mother, and is now glad that he did. After the war he will attend the Fordham Law School.

After graduation Bob will enter Officer's Candidate School for the Marines, and he is anxious to see active service abroad before the war is over.

With the team's eight consecutive victories as a start, Bob's fervent wish is that the team go undefeated this year as a fitting tribute to the school on its 100th anniversary.

McFadden Scores 17

In the preliminary game to the Villanova-Albright contest the Mendel Residents found a winning combination by outscoring the C&F team, 21 to 13. Englehard, Healy, and Miller combined to record 4 points apiece for the winners.

On December 17th Alumni took their second victim of the week into camp by a score of 24 to 7. After acquiring an early lead they breezed through to an easy victory. Tomasco of the C&F team scored his team's only points in the second half with a field goal.

Alumni will meet Austin Hall, the first half titleholders in a three game playoff for the championship. The title games will probably be played sometime next week.

Eugene Barry and the men working under him on the decorations committee have been working for the past week to transform the Field House into a setting appropriate for the ball.

While all the details of the motif have not yet been revealed, it is known that the traditional blue and white color scheme will be employed. All the decorations will tend to remind the guests that Villanova is celebrating its 100th anniversary.

In particular, the centennial idea will be conveyed by two scenes of the college campus: one representing it as it was at its inception, and the other depicting it as it appears today.

Dudley Wins Post In Business Fraternity

John F. Dudley was elected vice president of Delta Pi Epsilon, Friday at a run-off of the Commerce school fraternity election. Dudley, a senior accounting major, won out over Robert Gretz who tied him in the first balloting. He succeeds William Hayes as vice president of the fraternity.

Those seniors desiring keys must hand in their names by January 15, James Meehan announced Friday. He also stated that William Craven, John McCarthy, William Dywer and Robert Power were appointed to a committee which will consider the excuses of frequent absentee seniors who submit their names for keys.

Orders for fraternity pins will be taken by Joseph Coll, club secretary, beginning this week. All members who do not have pins are urged to purchase them.

Beta Gamma Plans 3 Debates This Week

The Beta Gamma Debating Society continues its present season, with three more debates planned for this week. Thursday, January 14, Wilfred Gagen and Carl Yager, president and secretary respectively of the Beta Gamma, will debate against a team from the University of Pennsylvania. This debate will take place at the weekly luncheon of the Philadelphia Rotary Club. "Resolved: That a World Federal Union Should be Established" is to be the topic, with the Villanova team upholding the affirmative.

On the same day two teams, as yet unnamed will debate each other before the Norristown Business Men's Exchange. The World Union topic will be debated here too.

Fordham Debate

Next Saturday, January 16, Larry Sullivan, and Thomas Sullivan will debate against a team from Fordham University. This time Villanova will take the negative of the World Union question. This debate will take place in Simpson Hall at 3:00 P. M. This debate will be the first decision debate of the season.

back to their respective campuses the topics discussed at the Congress with particular emphasis on the following points:

1. Study without action is futile, but action without previous study is foolhardy.
2. The proper milieu of student activity is the campus. Accordingly, the concrete activities prompted by our studies should be concentrated on our campuses.
3. The essential postulate of all effective student action is the unqualified application of Catholic principles to our personalities.

With these premises in mind seven other resolutions pertaining to definite action were adopted.

Also at the last session the delegates pledged themselves to recite each day for thirty days the Act of Consecration to the Immaculate Heart of Mary, a prayer Pope Pius XII read over the radio when he dedicated the world to the Immaculate Heart of Mary.

Winter

(A Parody)

By THOMAS McFARLAND

When roof-tops are mantled with snow
And Jack Frost his realm doth hold
And winds in all directions blow
And trees are rattling 'gainst the cold,
When birds are gone and Winter reigns,
Then nightly do we hear the strains
Of teedle-de-dum
The fiddler's note,
While warm ale simmers in the bowl.

When drowsy James lies fast in sleep
And clanging pots the cook doth scour
And the cuckoo doth his vigil keep
And quarterly proclaim the hour,
When all inside is snug and warm,
Then music sounds above the storm;
Teedle-de-dum,
The fiddler's note,
While warm ale simmers in the bowl.

VILLANOVAN

Vol. 15—No. 20 N. A. S. Z--660 VILLANOVA COLLEGE, VILLANOVA, PA. TUESDAY, JANUARY 19, 1943

Yearbook Depicts History of School

Centennial Issue To Be Largest Ever Published; Will Feature 2000 Pictures

Alumni of Villanova have been contacted by the business staff of the Belle Air notifying them of the forthcoming publication of the Centennial issue. This issue should be of special interest to all the alumni for the story of Villanova's first century is skillfully and vividly related in the 1943 edition.

Its pages will show the authentic history of Villanova from its earliest days to the present time. It will bring out the difficulties the college faced because of the anti-Catholic Hogan Schism in 1844; the influence of the Civil War; the rapid strides made before the end of the last century; the developement of various courses of study; a record of the first athletic programs of Villanova which included contests with the famous Carlisle Indians and the Ivy League; the era of disastrous fires that razed college buildings on three occasions; and the remarkable expansion of the college during the past twenty-five years.

Model of Excellence

The Belle Air has been recognized by the National Scholastic Press Association as one of the ten best college books in the country, the 1942 edition being acclaimed a "model of excellence." The next will contain more than 2000 pictures, including a beautiful view section of the campus, and eight large illustrations in color. Its binding is deluxe, and it is embossed in three colors.

All seniors who wish to purchase a copy of the Belle Air are reminded that this year it will be necessary to contribute an extra $5.00, besides the usual activities fee. All those who wish to buy a copy are requested to have their orders in before Feb. 28, because of the priorities on the fabricoid material of which the cover is composed.

Spanish Club Plans Cervantes Banquet

Plans for the annual Cervantes Day dinner were presented to members of the Spanish club by its president, William Swan, last Thursday at a meeting held in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium. The most important cultural event of the year will be held on April 23, if war conditions permit.

As in the past, the Columbia University medal and diploma will be awarded to the writer of the best essay on the life of Cervantes, the "Spanish Shakespeare." Rev. Lorenzo Lozano, O. S. A., moderator of the organization, will present a book as prize for the best poem about Cervantes. Both the essay and poem will be read at the dinner and afterwards the prizes will be given to the winners.

Fr. Lozano read a statement of the financial condition of the club to the assembled members. He pointed out that the last event of the club was a success socially and culturally, but it depleted the treasury considerably. He stressed the fact that members must pay their dues in order to finance the Cervantes Day celebration.

Engineering, Science Men Receiving Draft Notices Should See Fr. McQuade

Students in the science school and junior and senior engineers who are not members of the Enlisted Reserve Corps are requested to see Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O. S. A., immediately upon receipt of their notices to report for induction from their local draft boards.
